Miss America October Homecoming Creates Civic, College Excitement

By Deane Wylie

The smiling young lady to the right looking out from her familiar coronation photograph could be identified by the large majority of American people today; rare would be the City College student who couldn't say in an instant who this beauty is and what she represents.

"Luscious Lee" Meriwether, as the Associated Press described her, is now in the fourth week of her reign as Miss America, representing the epitome of young American womanhood. From the first few poignant moments that followed her ascendency to the title, her name and her achievements have been topics of interest to the nation's people, and here have become conversational by-words.

The unbridled enthusiasm released here upon her crowning have continued, heightened by the news that three weeks from today, October 27, a United Airlines plane will bring Lee back to San Francisco for a four-day homecoming celebration.

Although brief, her visit will include a civic welcome that will probably be equal to few in the past. Already planned are ticker-tape parades, official civic receptions and ceremonies at the Cow Palace.

Lee's reception at the college will be no less tumultous, and includes invitations already dispatched inviting her to participate in the annual homecoming festivities November 4, 5, and 6.

At this moment she is deep in South America, nearing the half-way point on a two-week good-will tour. Behind her is a two-week visit in New York City, while quartered at the fabulous Waldorf Astoria. With her entourage that includes business managers, chaperones and secretaries, she has yet to face nearly 11 months of public appearances around the country.

Her expressed desire to make acting her career have already been given a boost. Rapidly becoming a familiar face on the network TV screens, she has earned praise from program producers and ad agencies to video technicians. Scheduled late in the year is a major appearance on the Philco Television Playhouse.

Her grace and charm have captured many. After the evening of her triumph she received a long distance telephone call at 4 a.m. from an elderly couple in Texas, who said that they "just couldn't sleep until they talked to that wonderful girl." Awakened from much needed sleep, Lee chatted in a friendly way for nearly ten minutes.

She received the gratitude of the French ambassador when she remarked on Dior's new "look," saying that it had arrived just in time to save her. In a letter to Lee, the diplomat offered his congratulations and said he looked forward to meeting her.

Almost as scarce as the fellow who couldn't identify the now well-known face is the person here who doesn't relate a favorite Lee Meriwether story: They knew her at Aptos . . . they were good friends at Washington . . . were in her sorority . . . sat next to her in class . . . and the Lee Meriwether who is Miss America of 1955 is the same person who was Lee Meriwether, City College student, 1954.

CAB Presents Club Day Friday

Booths, Exhibits, Feature College Hour Program

Club Day, presented under the sponsorship of the Club Activities Board will be held this Friday, during college hour in the student's lounge located in Building 2, west campus. These booths and exhibits representing various college activities will be located. Refreshments will also be available.

Dick Vega, CAB vice president, has voiced an appeal for all students, especially those entering college, to attend the activities.

It is anticipated that all students visiting the booths will find at least one activity in which they are interested, Vega said.

Religious, dramatics, music, athletic groups and college sororities and fraternities are some organizations which will welcome future participation by students.

The CAB officers are Jan Scoales president, Dick Vega, vice president, Sonia Seebohm, recording secretary, Amy Lee, corresponding secretary.

The following are the meetings scheduled for college hours on the dates set forth: October 15, club meetings; 22, midterms, no college hour; 29, student-faculty coffee hour; November 5, Business Education Day, no college hour; 12, rally; 19, club meetings; 26, Thanksgiving holiday. December 3, midterm examinations, no college hour; 10, club meetings; January 7, election rally; 14, club meetings; 21, intramural championship and faculty soph game.

Traditional Club Carnival Dance Climaxes CAB Activities Friday

Club Carnival theme of this semester's traditional dance climaxing the activities of the Club Activities Board Club Day, will be held in the west campus Auditorium here Friday evening, October 8 from 8:30 p.m. until 12 midnight, Dick Vega, Club Day chairman, announced recently.

Music will be to the tune and tempo of the Gilbert Ray combo, which has had many successful engagements in San Francisco, Las Vegas and Los Angeles.

Admission to the dance is by membership card to members of the Associated Students, he said, and 50 cents for those without AS cards.

Since the dance is a sports affair, campus dress is in order for the occasion, Vega stated.

Committee members working on activities of the d include Mary Daly, Marion Chesdey, Jan Kheman, Douglass Wilson, Sonia Seebom, Amy Lee, George Sweet, and Ed Harer.

Scholarships Named

Letters of application for two women's scholarships, the Florence Louis scholarship and the Theta Tau Alumnae scholarship, must be received by Dean of Women Mary Golding by Monday, October 18.

The Florence Louis scholarship is awarded by Miss Louis, a former graduate of the college, in appreciation of the experience and instruction she received at City College.

IRC Plans International Fair For October 28, 29 In Campus Auditorium

Plans for a "City College International Fair," to be held Thursday and Friday, October 28 and 29, were announced yesterday by Joseph Jacobsen, faculty adviser to the International Relations Club. It will be held in Building 1, west campus.

The fair will also take over Building 2 where exhibits will be displayed and exotic foods may be purchased from members of the IRC.

The program in Building 1 will contain a variety of numbers performed by students from 15 foreign countries. Among the numbers will be a bamboo pole dance performed by 45 Filipino students, and a Siamese boxing match performed by students from Thailand.

Little Theater Opens Drama Season With Broadway Hit, Gaslight

The City College Little Theatre officially opens its Fall season Thursday night October 11, with the presentation of the Broadway hit Gaslight, known to many as Angel Street, by Patrick Hamilton.

Cast in major roles are Warren Smith as Mr. Manningham, Joyce Cody as Mrs. Manningham; Peter Garrett as Rough, Diana Williams as Elizabeth and Jane Lutt as Nancy.

Gaslight is being produced by Carroll Hall and directed by Drama Instructor Michael Griffin.

The play will run through Saturday, October 16. Ticket sales will be announced at a later date, Griffin said.

Griffin stated today that renewed interest has been shown in the Little Theatre program, and a record year is anticipated.

AMS, AWS Battle In Campus AS Card Sales Contest; Men Lead In First Week Returns

To encourage Associated Student card sales on campus a semi-annual competition has been formed between Associated Men and Women Student organizations to determine which group can sell more cards than the other and earn its name on the honor plaque in the student activities office. Last semester's contest was won by the AWS.

In the first week of card sales competition, AMS was reported leading the women 157 to 77. The competition officially started September 20, and cards sold during registration will not be counted. This Friday will end the contest.

Concerning all AS cards sold this semester, Ralph Libby, student card sales chairman said: "A tremendous job has been done by the students to reach the current figure of $9,235 but much work lies ahead to realize the goal of $12,500."

This current mark of $9,235 is below the Fall 1953 total of $9,750. With the larger enrollment this year a greater number of cards must be sold if all student members are to benefit fully in campus activities.

Libby said that it is still not too late for students to back their organization by joining the Associated Students. AS cards can be obtained at the bank in the Science Building in the student activities office on west campus or from student salesmen.

A three-day course in photographic journalism will be offered here next month, Beverly Pasqualetti, director of photography, disclosed today.

City College will co-host the series prepared under the auspices of the National Press Photographer's Association and the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The meetings are scheduled for November 9, 10 and 11 and will convene in downtown San Francisco. A specific location for the sessions has not yet been designated.

Pasqualetti, who will act as chairman for the festivities, stated the course will be open only to professional photographers and photography students.

Comprising the list of instructors are expert photographers, who have extensively traveled the United States.

This series has been designed to increase the professional level of photography as it becomes more demanding and complex.

In recognition of his outstanding work contributing to the success of the 1953 series, George G. Mullan of the journalism department here, was awarded an achievement citation by the NPPA. The citation was made in Atlantic City, June 10, 1954.

Budget, AS Card Sales Problem For Student Council

Student Council's main problems at the opening meetings of this semester turned out to be a low budget to work with and slow sales of Associated Student memberships.

The budget requests made to the council by various groups within the college total an estimated $26,000. At the same time, the AS Finance Committee estimates that it will have approximately $18,000 to allot to the groups, which means that the budgets will have to be cut by quite a considerable amount.

AS card sales have not lived up to expectations, according to the council card sales committee. It was stressed by the committee that card sales would have to increase greatly, although it is expected that all students who are members of groups which are allotted funds by the council will purchase cards.

It was also stressed that card salesmen should remind students of the many benefits which Associated Students membership affords.

The proposal was made that the council accept a "Sports Sampler" booklet which would sell for four dollars to AS card holders. The booklet contains $75 worth of tickets to theaters, sports events, dances, and the like. The booklet was accepted by the council with one reservation.

Elections were held for the filling of two vacancies in the Sophomore Council. Bob Argo and Paul Ortiz won by majority on the first vote, and were immediately sworn into their positions.

The council made plans for the forthcoming regional conference of the Northern California Junior College Student Government Association which will be held here at the college Thursday, October 14.

Student government leaders from many parts of the state will convene here to discuss their common problems and gain more knowledge on student government. The 250 delegates will visit exhibits and workshops which will illustrate the various functions of student associations.

The council meets regularly on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 12 noon throughout the semester.

AS Membership In College Means More For Everyone

WITH THE City College of San Francisco well on the way into its 20th year, we wish to extend slightly belated greetings to the more than 5000 students on behalf of The Guardsman, the faculty and the Associated Students. With the greeting goes a warning.

The new students of the college, some 2000 of them, are starting a new and most enjoyable phase of their lives. Those returning students know this to be true. But college life is enjoyable only if the student himself makes it so. Naturally, most of those who enroll in any college or university are there to learn, but there is another aspect of campus life just as important as the gaining of knowledge.

The social side of college should complement the serious side, the hard studying. The "well-rounded curriculum" is still sought, but some people don't seem to realize that this includes extra-curricular activities. For a normal, happy college life, the student must combine business and pleasure.

At City College, the hub of the social and extra-curricular life is the Associated Students. Perhaps this may sound trite to the poor soul who has run the gauntlet of AS card salesmen, but that little card that sells around the campus for $5 is the greatest bargain that anyone enrolled at the college could find.

The financial benefits to be gained are probably already known to the majority of you. Games, dances, discounts and the like are just a minor part of it. The most important thing to be gained from membership in the AS is the pleasure that the individual will gain from being a part of the college and not just an automatic scholar attending and passing his classes.

The yellow registration card that each student received upon entering officially enrolls him in the college. Membership in the Associated Students makes him part of college life.

Lee Ann Meriwether, Looks, Talent And Miss America Of 1955—Our Girl

EVERYONE at the college, each San Franciscan and, indirectly, every college student in the United States was proud and happy when Lee Meriwether, a student here until her coronation, was crowned Miss America of 1955.

By no stretch of the imagination can Lee be called "the average American college girl," for the talent, poise, personality and, needless to say, beauty which won her the title place her head and shoulders above most. But her sweet and simple disposition and wonderful personality are typical of most co-eds in most colleges in America.

San Franciscans and especially the people here at the college, must be forgiven if they boast and point to Miss America with pride. Lee is a girl of whom anyone would and should be proud, and the only fault that we can find with her accomplishment is that it will deprive our campus of her good looks and personality. Even though her commitments prevent her from returning to the college for awhile, we hope that Lee still thinks of us often and fondly.

We will miss her, but we offer our congratulations, most sincere albeit a bit late, to the lovely Lee Meriwether, City College's Miss America of 1955.

Bill Boldenweck

Marine Vet Tops AS Organization In Active Year

A leader for the most part is a well-rounded person. Bill Boldenweck, Associated Students President for Fall, 1954, is no exception. Prior to his attendance at City College, he was employed by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, followed by a two-year jaunt in the Marines.

The 23 year old AS President has been active in such organizations as Alpha Sigma Delta, holding several positions in that fraternity, and in Associated Student offices he has been Publicity Chairman and Associated Men Student President.

A journalism major, his after-graduation plans are indefinite. As AS President, Boldenweck has many activities planned for this semester, which he stated will be successfully aided by purchase of AS cards.

"Card sales have been excellent to date," he said, "but it will be necessary to increase membership if we are to enjoy a complete semester of activities."

Boldenweck urged students who have any suggestions or complaints concerning the college or the AS cards to consult him in his Building 2 office.

"It's a great honor to be Associated Student President," Boldenweck declared, "and I shall try to live up to it. I am extremely gratified for the cooperation I have received thus far."

Boldenweck also commented on Lee Meriwether's rise to fame, and added that he was "extremely pleased to hold the presidential post in this year of Miss America's rule." He expressed hope that all students would take advantage of Associated Student membership, in order to help make the Miss America homecoming celebration a representative one.

PRESIDING over the Associated Students for the Fall, 1954 semester, veteran Bill Boldenweck lits imperative AS card sales increase as deciding factor for heavy semester activity schedule.

SAM, the college's lately demised ram mascot, was still happy, healthy and alive when he made his debut last fall at the San Mateo game. With the wooly merino are Chuck White, Bobbie Wallace and Sammie the Ram.

College Mourns Beloved Mascot; Ram Chop Heaven For Wooly Guest As Students Hold Requiem

By Don Osborne

One of the most distinguished students to roam the campus in many a year was a four-legged wooly Merino ram that butted his way into the college this time last year.

Active in almost all of the campus functions, Sam became a byword of college spirit. His undaunting faith in the college led the students to believe that Sam should have been voted the most outstanding member of their college.

He not only excelled in almost every sport but was also one of the most intellectual students on campus. His studies led him into the realms of Philosophy, Science, Art, Engineering and Literature. His opinions on these subjects were highly honored by not only students but also by the faculty.

In sports Sam was an invaluable aid to the coaches. Though he could not participate in the sports himself he gave advice that led the team on to many a victory.

Last semester Sam's position on campus became a precarious one. For reasons that no one was able to understand, he suddenly became a menace. Students strolling around the campus became a target for his mighty horns. The usual peace of campus life was suddenly interrupted with the realization that a mad ram was loose. Sam would hide in waiting 'til his target strolled by, then without warning he would strike.

Many reasons were offered for this sudden change in attitude. Most of these reasons centered around the fact that Sam felt that nobody appreciated his efforts to serve the college.

Whatever the reasons, Sam's stay on the campus came to an end.

During the summer months he has found happiness in "ram chop heaven."

The Guardsman Turns Tables On Copy Desk

At the opening of this semester, an addition of five unique tables was made to the furniture in The Guardsman office, which has been moved once again, this time to Room 304 of the Science Building.

The five tables are trapezoidal in shape, this shape being something new in furniture styling. They've been placed together in a horseshoe design to form the office copy desk.

In any newspaper office, the copy desk is used as a sorting place for all stories which appear in the paper. All stories must pass though the copy desk for inspection and correction before they are published.

The copyreaders, who sit in a circle around the outside of the horseshoe desk, correct errors which may appear in the stories, write headlines, and make last-minute changes in story content. The general work of the copyreaders is to make the news as clear, concise and correct as possible.

The trapezodial tables which now mark The Guardsman office are being used to form a copy desk, as far as anyone knows, for the first time although it seems that they were made-to-order for this purpose. Actually, they can be arranged together to form almost any conceivable design, and more of them can be seen used for different purposes around the campus.

Letters to the Editor

Editor's Note: The Guardsman feels that this column is a most important feature of the publication, for it is here that interested students have their only opportunity to see their views in print.

Any student who has any complaints, praise or general information which he believes could be of benefit or enjoyment to the college is urged to submit letters to the editor.

Those letters may be left with the telephone operator in the Science Building or at The Guardsman office, Room 304 in the Science Building. Deadline for contribution is 10 a.m. each Wednesday.

The Beachcomber

Movie Of The Week—Demetrius Wades Through Ankle-Deep Blood, Sweat, Tears

SO THIS guy Demetrius is left over from The Robe see, and now he lives in Rome with the rest of the Christians, who aren't havin' it so good these days. So one day it comes up that the Emperor Caligula wants the robe because he thinks it will make him live forever.

He's about the only one who goes for this idea because everyone else hates his guts. Such a slob! All the time yelling, shouting, insulting people. If you asked the Romans, they'd say, "Caligula should live forever? Hah! He should drop dead this afternoon." The only thing that kept the Romans from taking care of this little detail was the palace guard and they didn't like Caligula so hot either but he paid pretty good so they didn't want to see anything happen to him.

So the soldiers come for the robe and Demetrius makes with the big fist and cools the captain so they drag him off to the jug, but instead of dumping him in the dungeons they give him a break and send him to the gladiator school instead. Such a school. Fight, fight, fight all the time. But Demetrius doesn't go this route because he's a Christian and isn't supposed to go around killing people, Romans or otherwise.

So they dump him in the ring anyway, and he and his buddy try to tank it so they can both get off. The crowd catches on right away though and makes such a fuss that Demetrius has to go and whup his pal.

Caligula signals him to carve up the other guy, but Demetrius asks can he be excused because Christians aren't supposed to, like I said. So Caligula lets the other guy go but Demetrius has to stick around and tussle with the cats. These turn out to be three huge tiger type cats from the neighborhood that they forgot to feed last week. But Demetrius is a pretty big boy so he manages to kill them all with his dagger.

So it comes up that after the cat fight they let him head up at this doll Messalina's house and he gets to be a guard there. But when Messalina tries to get him to try a little different type rassslin he gets her all griped and whup! Back to the gladiator school.

So this old Christian-type girl friend of his comes around to the party they always have the night before the fights, and Messalina fixes it so that Demetrius gets locked up and the rest of the boys treat her so rough that she sort of expires. This gets Demetrius pretty shook up and he sorta quits being a Christian. So they send him in the ring the next day and he wipes out five other guys all by himself, all at once.

This makes the palace guard think he's a pretty rough boy and it might be a good idea to have him on their side, so he comes up a tribune who is a pretty big wheel, I guess. Also he begins to realize that Messalina is sort of a doll so they go off to the beach with a couple squads of maids and dancing girls.

So down to the beach comes this guy Peter who's got a job as some sort of a fisherman and he's got the robe. Messalina sneaks up to town to tell Caligula that Pete's in town with the robe and Cal sends Demetrius out to get it.

When he finds it, it comes up that his old girl friend isn't dead after all, just in a trance. He gets to thinking how he used to like being a Christian pretty good so he takes it up again, but he takes the robe back to Cal to keep him from knocking off a few people just to show he can do it.

So Cal stabs up a slave and waves the robe at him and when the slave doesn't rise up he has quite a little argument with Demetrius back in the ring again which he has been in and out of like a yo-yo all through the movie. But the guards can't see it and since Cal has been giving them a bad time lately anyhow, one of them drops him with a spear.

So it works out that Demetrius can go on being a Christian, Cal's uncle Claudius is emperor, the tigers are dead, and everyone's happy. Pretty good movie. You ought to see it.

Rejuvenated Rams Edge Menlo

Sharper Offense In Second Half Fells Oaks, 20-19

By Bob Chrisman

After being behind 19-7 at half time, a rejuvenated Ram team turned over a new leaf in the second half to fell the Menlo Oaks, 20-19, in the last eight minutes of play last Friday night.

It was the second win in a row for the Rams, who beat Taft September 25, 21-6.

Completely overpowered in the second half, the Menlo Oaks netted only plus four yards passing and a minus four yards rushing.

In addition, the college's offense was much sharper than in the previous half, sparked by the accurate passing of Lee Barros and the hard driving of fullback Shirlee McCormick, who netted 91 yards in 18 tries for a neat five yard average per carry. Rudy Lopez, Al Chatman and Jim Pfenning all turned in several fine runs, breaking away for long gains.

In the first half, Menlo scored as Keith Harris, the Oaks' quarterback, intercepted a Ram fumble in the air on the Ram's 25 and ran down the sidelines for the first touchdown of the game. The conversion attempt was missed, which proved to be the margin of the college's victory.

Al Harrington, the left halfback for Menlo, contributed mainly to Menlo's second touchdown, as he accounted for 55 yards of the Oaks' 74 yard drive, and scored from the Ram 15.

In the second quarter Mike Forette at quarterback completed a 52 yard pass to Don Baroni for a touchdown, and Jerry James' conversion was good.

Menlo's third touchdown was set up by a fumble on the Ram 30. Harris, quarterback, threw a pass to Bill Fitz, who scored.

In the third quarter, after an exchange of punts, the Rams scored on a 66 yard drive, climaxed by Pfenning's one yard shot for the touchdown. James converted, and the score was 19-14 for Menlo.

The final Ram touchdown resulted from a 15 yard pass from Barros to Chatman for the touchdown.

Block SF Re-elects Bagatelos President

Gus Bagatelos, Spring president of the Block S F, has recently been elected to that office for the second straight semester.

Other results in the election were Jerry James, vice president, and Jerry Johnson, sergeant at arms.

The Block S F Society, whose members total 56, held a meeting recently at which the members decided to give a dance during the semester.

Under a new policy, the society has decided to broaden their interests in all of the school activities and social events. Their first move will be to join the Club Activities Board.

The following meetings this semester will have entertainment, refreshments, and movies which will give members a chance to get a look at some of the biggest names in the world of sports.

Vet, Freshman Lead Rams Against Taft

A competitive spirit, football "sense" and ability, and modesty are outstanding characteristics of Gus Bagatelos and Willy Hudson, co-captains of the college's football team for the game with Taft.

Bagatelos, first string center for the Ram eleven, is a veteran of the Rams' 1953 season grid club. He got his first taste of football at Balboa High School where he played guard on the varsity for two seasons. His teamates describe his fine defensive game, which was in good evidence in the Taft tilt, as being steady, inspired football.

For Hudson, the 1954 season will be his first at college, having graduated from Poly High School in Fall of 1953 where he was an All-City guard. "Rock," as his teamates call him, is noted for his smooth work at the guard slot and his fine linebacking.

GUS BAGATELOS, shown blocking in the picture, is the starting center for the Rams; inset is Richard Oliver, first string end for the college. Jerry Dillard, shown with the ball, is no longer with the team. Oliver and Bagatelos are mainstays in a strong line which has Willie Hudson (198) and Stan Keith (185) at guards, Jerry James (215) along with Ken Orsell (219) at tackles, and Dick Fiesta (190) and Oliver (190) at ends. Bagatelos and Hudson were co-captains for the Taft game. Two co-captains are elected for every game by the team.

WAA Activities Offer 5 Sports

Five sports are offered this semester for the activities in the Women's Athletic Association, Esther Phillips, president of the organization, announced at the first WAA meeting.

Fifty women have already signed up and more are expected, Miss Phillips said.

Lene Johnson, women's physical education instruction, new at the college this semester, is WAA sponsor.

Sports offered this semester are badminton on Tuesday at 2:45 p.m., tennis on Tuesday and Thursday at 10 a.m. and during college hour; swimming on Tuesday at the Y. W. C. A. at 3:30 p.m.; volleyball during college hour and basketball on Monday at 3:45 p.m.

Qualifications to participate and earn an award in WAA sports, Miss Phillips said, are an Associated Student card and attendance at nine out of twelve meetings of the sport.

WAA awards are the shield, first semester; the block, second semester, and the star, third semester.

The Brooklyn Bums played a triple-header against the Pirates on June 2, 1903. The boys from Flatbush dropped all three games.

Soccer Team Meets USF For Opener On October 9; Team Working For First Place Bid Against Defenders

Soccer is here again and Coach Roy Diederichsen's soccer squad is working hard for their opening game, October 9, against the University of San Francisco at USF. This is an important game for the Rams as the Dons are defending soccer champions, and they are expected to field their usual strong team.

With veterans like Guillermo Delogadillo, Joe Musat, and Gabe Barros, and such new men as Art Lempke, Fredy Zamora, the Olympic Games star from Peru, and Rodolpho Molina, the team should be ready in making their bid to bring the soccer championship to City College. According to Coach Diederichsen, University of San Francisco and University of California are the teams to beat this year.

The 1954 schedule is as follows, with all home games played at Balboa Park Stadium.

Oct. 16—CCSF at California.
Oct. 23—CCSF at S. F. State.
Oct. 30—Stanford at CCSF.
Nov. 3—Bye.
Nov. 10—CCSF at San Jose.
Nov. 17—Santa Clara at CCSF.

Faculty Rips Sophs 13-7

Sparked by "ringers" imported from the athletic department, the strong faculty softball team ripped the unwary Sophomores, 13-7, in their annual game played at the close of the Spring semester. "Jolting Joe" Garbarino starred for the losers.

College's Coaches Successful In Double Aims

Coaching is not merely producing teams to maintain a college's prestige; the coach must develop favorable character traits in individual participants, and few coaching staffs have attained this dual objective more successfully than this college's coaching staff.

City College's coaches total six. Grover Klemmer is the football coach, and Alex Schwarz is assistant football coach. Ralph Hillsman is the basketball coach and Roy Diederichsen coaches tennis, soccer and boxing. Roy Burkhead coaches track and Bill Fischer is the baseball mentor.

Klemmer, a University of California graduate of '43, was one time record-holder for the 440, and his 440 and 880 records still stand at UC. He also lettered in track and football, coming to coach at the college in 1948, when he was assistant football coach. Since Klemmer became head coach, the college team has won one Big Seven Conference title in '48.

Diederichsen, a San Jose State grad, lettered in basketball, tennis, baseball, boxing and was All-Conference fullback in soccer. Also active in college politics, he was elected freshman, sophomore and junior class president at San Jose.

Hillsman, a former City College athlete who lettered in basketball under President Louis Conlan, then the basketball coach, also made the first string All-Conference basketball team. He then attended UC and lettered in basketball, and after four years in the Navy, came to City College in '46. Last year Hillsman's golf team won the Big Seven Conference championship.

Schwarz, who was a football star at University of San Francisco, joined the college coaching staff in '52. He lettered in football and basketball at USF and played in the Shrine East-West game. He is assistant coach to Klemmer, and coaches the football line.

Bill Fischer, the head baseball coach, was graduated from St. Mary's in 1932, after having made the All-American football team as a guard.

Burkhead, also from USF, lettered in football, basketball and track. In 1951, under Burkhead, who was acting as head football coach in the absence of Coach Klemmer, the college football team won the Big Seven Conference title. Burkhead is now head track coach.

Men of proven athletic prowess, the college coaches realize that more than sheer physical ability is required to make a good athlete. Consensus among the coaches reveals the qualities they considered desirable in an athlete.

Loyalty, in Coach Diederichsen's opinion, is a desirable virtue, encompassing the athlete's loyalty to his team, his coach, and to himself. "The desire to win is a must, as is self-discipline," added Coach Diederichsen.

An essential ingredient in a good athlete is confidence, according to Coach Hillsman.

College Gridders Meet Fast And Experienced Stockton Eleven In 1954 Big Seven Conference Opener

City College's football team, coached by Grover Klemmer and assistant Alex Schwarz, will pit its hard-charging line and fleet backfield against a strong Stockton squad on this Friday, October 8, at Stockton in the Big Seven Conference opener.

Coached by Don Hall, with Amos Alonzo Stagg as advisory coach, Stockton's T formation offense includes a veteran backfield, led by Gene Campbell, who set a rushing record in 1953. Junior Reynoso, an understudy quarterback last year, will take over as first string signal-caller this year. Jimmy Owens and Ben Parks fill out the backfield, which operates behind a line averaging 200 pounds.

The T-formation offense of the Rams, with a front wall averaging 190 pounds, is patterned after the Cleveland Brown's offense.

A tentative opening lineup has Lee Barros, 28, at quarterback; Shirley McCormick, fullback, 47; Kent Scovil, halfback, 44; Jim Frank, halfback, 54; Richard Oliver, end, 81, Dick Fiesta, end, 50; Stan Keith, guard, 70; Willie Hudson, guard, 49; Ken Orzell, tackle, 79; Jerry James, tackle, 88; Gus Bagatelos, center, 72.

An auspicious practice season, culminated by a 21 to 7 drubbing of Taft Junior College, led Coach Klemmer to acknowledge the Ram team as being farther advanced in skills at this time than in the previous two years, though only seven of the squad are veterans of the 1953 season.

According to Klemmer, "there isn't an easy game in the league. Stockton, Modesto, and Contra Costa are especially dangerous." Last year the Rams eased by Stockton's Mustangs, 14-13.

City College's football schedule is as follows:

Oct. 8—Stockton, there, 8 p.m.
Oct. 15—Los Angeles, there, 8 p.m.
Oct. 22—Sacramento, there 2:30 p.m.
Oct. 28—Modesto, there, 8 p.m.
Nov. 5—San Mateo, here, 2:30 p.m.
Nov. 12—Contra Costa West, here.
Nov. 19—Santa Rosa, there, 8 p.m.

All the college's home games will be played at the soccer stadium in Balboa Park, near City College's gymnasiums.

Intramural Sports Sign-Up Announced

Clubs, organizations and individuals who wish to be represented in the college's intramural program should sign up this week at the intramural office in the men's gymnasium, intramural director Alex Schwarz announced yesterday.

Ping-pong, touch football, tennis and basketball competition take place this semester, and will be played during the gymnasium periods. Winner or winners of each gymnasium class compete for first place honors. Schwarz said, and gold bar buckles are awarded for first place winners in every event and silver medals for second place holders.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

THE CENTER theory of baseball has been proved once again by the accession of the Cleveland Indians and New York Giants to the World Series.

According to baseball experts, the strength of a team is down in the middle; i.e., the centerfield, the shortstop and second baseman, the pitching staff and the catcher.

An examination of the Indians and the Giants reveals two very strong centers. In centerfield, the Indians have Larry Doby, an excellent defensive man who batted in 126 runs and hit 33 home runs in the '54 season.

George Strickland, the Cleveland shortstop and Bobby Avila, their second baseman, are a pair of fine glovemen. Strickland, in particular, is adept at the shortstop spot and is one of the finest infielders the Indians have had in five years. Avila did enough hitting for himself and Strickland, winning the batting race by 20 points with a .340 average.

Cleveland's pitching is unmatched by any other team in the majors. Bob Lemon was the bellwether of the staff, with a 23-7 record, along with Early Wynn, who won 22 games. Mike Garcia won 20 and Bob Feller lost only three while winning 13.

In Willie Mays, the Giants have a potential super-player who led the league with a .345 average, hitting 41 homers and batting in 119 runs. Mays' speed and fine arm make him an outstanding center fielder defensively, as well.

Alvin Dark's heavy bat and ability to make the "big" play make him a standout shortstop. A fine defensive man and a consistent .260 hitter, Davy Williams rounds out the keystone combination.

Durocher's pitching staff was the best in the National League, headed by Johnny Antonelli, a 20-game winner, with Reuben Gomez and reliable Sal Maglie rounding out the staff. Maglie's ability to win the big games was a great aid to the Giants, as were Hoyt Wilhelm's fine relief performances and Wes Westrum's journeyman performance of the catching chores.

It was the sagging middle line of the Yankees which led to their downfall this year. Although Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra were standouts in centerfield and behind the plate respectively, the keystone combination was a far cry from the polished combos of the Yankee reign.

Pitching was also shaky, for Superchief Allie Reynolds was consigned by advancing age, to spot pitching roles. The strong bench, a major factor in Yankee success, was lacking in relief pitchers.

Balboa Park New Ball Field For Ram Nine

"One of the best diamonds in San Francisco." That's what Coach Bill Fischer predicts for the new Balboa Park baseball field.

Under the supervision of the Park and Recreation Dept., gardeners recently seeded the field. This is unusual since most diamonds are usually planted in two-foot squares of full grown grass.

The diamond, which won't be ready until June, will have no backstop or overhead screen.

Coach Fischer feels that because of the nearness of the park, ball players and students alike will be encouraged to go out to the games. Meanwhile the team will play most of its games at either Big Rec or Oceanview.

Club Cavalcade: Special Clubs, Sororities And Fraternities March In Review For CAB Day

By Carolyn Fisher

IN KEEPING with Friday's Club Day on campus, this first cavalcade of the semester will be devoted to all campus clubs, fraternities, and sororities; their sponsors and presidents.

In the special interest category there is the Canterbury Club, sponsored by Katherine Pedley; the Chinese Students Club, guided by faculty adviser John Stafford; Collegiate Christian Fellowship, with Howard Schoon as sponsor; the Filipino Club, sponsored by John Faweett; the Hillel Foundation, sponsored by Michael Zarchin; Horticulture Society, with Raymond Peterson as faculty adviser; Latin-American Club, guided by sponsor Benjamin Dryden; the Lutheran Club, with Manfred Mueller as faculty sponsor; the Masonic Club, sponsored by Donald Bryant; Newman Club, advised by John Selig, faculty sponsor; International Relations Club, with Joseph Jacobson as adviser.

Two honor societies on campus are Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, sponsored by Don Jensen; and Alpha Phi Omega, service honor society headed by President Ralph Libby and sponsor Donald Shaw.

The professional groups include Le Cercle Francais, guided by faculty adviser Doris Hernreid; the Drama Club, sponsored by Michael Griffin; the Engineering Society, with Harold Edmison as faculty sponsor; Hotel and Restaurant Society, advised by faculty sponsor Edmund Nielsen; the Merchandising Club for merchandising majors with Virginia Gohn as sponsor; economics society Sigma Tau Sigma, sponsored by Michael Zarchin; Phi Rho Pi for students interested in debate, with Thomas Dutcher as faculty adviser; Pick and Hammer, campus geology club, sponsored by faculty member George Green.

For those athletically inclined students there is the Block SF society for men who have won letters in sports, headed by sponsor Bill Fischer and President Gus Bagatelos; and the Women's Athletic Association, sponsored by Lene Johnson of the women's physical education department, with Esther Phillips as president.

There are nine recognized fraternities and six sororities on campus. The fraternities include Alpha Phi Epsilon with Emmett Thompson as president, George Baffico as sponsor; Alpha Sigma Delta, sponsored by Russell Posner, with Ken Feldin as president of the group; Beta Phi Beta, led by faculty adviser Michael Joseph and President Pete Ruppert; Beta Tau, sponsored by Howard Benninghoff, faculty adviser, and led by President John LoCoco; Gamma Phi, with Fred McFarland as sponsor and Bill Phillips as president; Kappa Rho, led by President Gene Hawkins and sponsor John Carlson; Lambda Phi, with Robin Dunn as faculty adviser; Phi Beta Delta, guided by faculty adviser John Ross and President John Roberts; Tau Chi Sigma, the college veterans' fraternity, headed by sponsor Merritt Beckerman and President Al Neime.

The six sororities include Alpha Lambda Chi, with Carolyn Riedemann as sponsor and Josephine Gandert as president; Delta Psi, guided by faculty adviser Martha Scott and President Pat Smith; Kappa Phi, with Valerie Phillips as adviser and Jackie Mascarelli as president; Phi Beta Rho, led by President Mary Daly and faculty adviser Evelyn Kerkhof; Theta Tau with Diane Tolman, president, and Gertrude Norgard, faculty adviser, and Zeta Chi with Alice St. Louis presiding over meetings and Ruth Inskipp sponsoring the sorority.

November 5, 6 Mark Annual Homecoming

Traditional Homecoming festivities will be held on Thursday and Friday, November 4 and 5, with the college's Homecoming Queen reigning over the activities, Marcia Herst, Associated Women Student president, announced here recently.

Any woman student attending the college may file a petition, providing she files the petition by Wednesday, October 13, at the Associated Students office, Building 2, west campus, Miss Herst stated.

Crowning of the queen will take place at the Homecoming dance, which will be held Saturday, November 6, in the auditorium on the west campus, Miss Herst added.

At the recent AWS meeting, held last Thursday, it was decided that the semi-annual AWS tea would be held on Thursday, November 18, and that the AWS would participate in the Junior College Conference, Thursday, October 14, Miss Herst said.

Until a definite meeting place is established, the AWS board will meet in Building 2, west campus, every Thursday at 1 o'clock. All Associated Women Student members are invited to attend, Miss Herst stressed.

AWS officers elected for the fall semester are as follows: Marcia Herst, president; Karin Walker, vice president; Lee Carol Lombard, secretary, and Jan Weaver, treasurer.

Band And Choir Schedule Events

With most of the troubles and confusion of registration ended, the college band and A Cappella choir have organized and scheduled a few coming events.

Elections were held for the officers of the band, and Henry Boyce was elected director; Douglas W. McEachern became band manager; Patricia Ford won out for secretary-treasurer; Connie Bondoc became the band librarian, and Zoraida Lopez took the post of custodian. Elections for choir officers will be held tomorrow. For the present, Boyce is acting manager of the choir, which now has about 50 members.

The choir plans a concert for the Rotarians at the Palace Hotel, Tuesday, November 9, and also a Christmas concert for St. Francis Episcopal Church, Tuesday, December 7. The choir will continue the annual college Christmas concert which will be held December 8 or 9 in the auditorium. Robert Morton is choir director this semester.

The Men's Glee Club has more than doubled from 12 to 26 members. T. Eric Hansen is club president, and Fred Emhis McQueen is club librarian.

Sweden is nearly twice as large in area as Great Britain.

Hotel Men Win Top Honors In Coast Culinary Exhibit

H&R Spread Cops Grand Prize Plus Two Top Awards

The college hotel and restaurant division walked away with three prizes, including one of three grand prizes offered, at the Pacific Coast Culinary Art Exhibit held at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium, September 26, according to Lawrence Wong, instructor in the hotel division.

The grand prize won by the college was for its overall achievement in the exhibition. As a trophy, the hotel group was awarded a large plaque presented by the Hotel Management magazine.

Sponsored by the Pacific Coast Chefs Association, the purpose of the exhibition was to demonstrate the abilities of cooks and bakers in the various organizations on the Pacific Coast. The college's booth was sponsored by the Northern California Stewards and Caterers Association, Wong said.

Two second place prizes were awarded the division for their efforts in the pastry and cooked foods department. They received a plaque and a war bond for each.

The foods for the exhibit were prepared at the college, Wong said, and then transported to the Civic Auditorium.

Instructors who helped the students to prepare for the exhibition were Fritz Gerstacker and Edmund Nielsen, food preparation instruction, Edward Nylund and George Muller, pastry instruction, and John Dunn and Wong, operational management instruction.

Students who helped were Marvin Alidaffer, Tony Albini, Bill Tessner, Don Giavannoni, Bob Hall, Svend Jacobsen, Ben Graham and Jim Morrison.

Complete Desertion In Store For West Campus; Deans Of Men And Women Soon To Move

By Clark Smith

Since the completion of Cloud Hall last Spring, the west campus, still nestled among the debris from a thousand forgotten student lunches, watches its desertion calmly.

By January 1, 1955, the Deans of Men and Women and all counselling operations now in Building 3 will be moved. The hotel and restaurant department will move in part this Spring. The departments of photography, ceramics and jewelry might move this Christmas, and certainly by next Summer.

The music department is slated to remain in Building 1 until an auditorium is built. The college is also trying to extend the lease on Building 2 as a home for the placement and student activity offices.

The west campus began life in 1943 as a land-locked Navy base. It was a WAVE barracks until 1945, when it was turned into a separation center. It was leased by its owners, the Public Utilities Commission, to the college in 1946. The college has title to the buildings, however, and must continue to use some of them indefinitely.

Probably the most familiar part of the west campus is Building 3, the counselling center, where students are assisted in a variety of personal problems. Upstairs in Building 3 is the testing center and office of the registrar.

The Ramporium, where students can buy anything from textbooks to tennis shoes, the coffee shop and the department of graphic arts are next door in Building 12.

Baker Heads Police Squad Of 15 Men

Fifteen men compose this semester's campus police squad here, including Don Baker, chief of campus police and liaison officer to the Associated Students, and Renzo Panelli, assistant chief of police.

The full roster is as follows: Robert Daglitz, Patrick Davoren, Tom Duff, Rudolph Hoffman, Frank Kindegran, Phillip Moore, Fred Neville, Don Newcomb, Ken Orzell, Panelli, Harry Paretchan, George Piese, William Scott, Mike Sugrue and Baker.

Directing traffic, keeping order at all Associated Student activities, and citing motorists for traffic violations are some of the many duties performed by these students enrolled in criminology courses here. Traffic tickets or other citations given out by the campus police are handled through the City Hall, not payable to the college, Baker noted.

Speed limits around the college and on Phelan Avenue are set at 15 miles per hour, he added.

Permits to park on campus are still available to Associated Student members at 1 o'clock in Building 13, west campus. Faculty permits may be obtained from Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management.

College Floriculture Major Gets Appointment

Two years of college floriculture paid off for Henry Angelo, former student of the college, on September 22. On that date Angelo received a telephone call from the President of Peru notifying him of his appointment to the position of Supervisor of Parks in his native Lima, Peru.

The Peruvian President also offered his congratulations to Angelo on his graduation from college during the summer session here.

Bookstore Sales Rise, Near Record

Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here, stated last week that the campus bookstore, The Ramporium, has increased its sales this year by a total of approximately $1000.00 for a comparable period last year.

This is the fourth semester in a row that The Ramporium has gained in sales, he declared. Last semester The Ramporium jumped in volume sales by 20 per cent as compared with the previous comparable period, according to Dick Main, Ramporium manager.

The peak sales day this semester was not as high as last semester, according to Main, because numerous students purchased their books on registration day instead of waiting until classes had started.

Symphony Concert Tickets Go On Sale

For the eighth consecutive year, the College Symphony Forum will provide students with an opportunity to attend the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra concerts at a reduced price.

Season tickets will be sold at the college bank in the Science Building, for the Thursday evening performances of the 18 concerts of the 43rd orchestra season. They will sell for half the normal price: Orchestra seats will cost $22.50, and balcony seats will cost $17.

Tickets go on sale today, and will remain on sale for two weeks only.

AS Card Admits Student To Home Football Free

As the saying goes, "Five dollars will get you 40 dollars in values and discounts!" The five dollars of course, is for Associated Student membership.

During football season Associated Students may attend all Ram home football games as part of their membership and receive a discount of half-price on admission with AS card in out-of-town games.

Brady And Batmale Assume New Staff Posts

DEAN JACK BRADY

By Bev Swope

Two recent changes in the college's administrative staff mark the beginning of the Fall 1954 semester.

John J. Brady, former dean of semi-professional courses here, has replaced Dr. F. Grant Marsh as coordinator of the division of student welfare. Dr. Marsh retired at the close of last semester after five years of service in that office.

Assistant Dean of Student Activities, Louis F. Batmale, has followed Dean Brady into the office of dean of semi-professional courses. At the present time Dean Batmale is performing double duty, since he has retained his former position in student activities, which he will continue to manage until the administrative vacancy is filled.

A former Ram baseball coach, Dean Brady was also at one time assistant dean in charge of student activities. He assumed the position of dean of semi-professional courses in 1949.

Dean Batmale came to the college in 1947 as a counselior in veteran affairs. Two years later he succeeded Dean Brady in the student activities office.

Formal applications for the vacancy in student activities have not as yet been filed, President Conlan pointed out last week, and the problem of filling the office now lies with Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent of San Francisco public schools.

Gaslight, Little Theater Play, Starts 3 Night Run Tomorrow

Gaslight, a three-act play produced by the college drama group, will begin its three-day run tomorrow evening, October 14, at 8 p.m. in the Little Theatre located on the ground floor of the Science Building. The play will end Saturday evening, October 16, Michael Griffin, drama director said.

Admission to the play is by Associated Student membership cards, or for non-members, the admission is 50 cents.

Leading roles will be played by Joyce Cody as Mrs. Manningham, Warren Smith as Mr. Manningham and Pete Garrett as Mr. Rough. Jane Lutt and Diana Williams, who play the parts of Nancy and Elizabeth respectively, round out the five person cast.

Direction of the play is handled by Griffin and the producing is handled by student Carroll Hall who is assisted by George Sweet. Jann Palmer and Pat Francisco will be in charge of costuming.

Others on the staff include Rich Barulich, in charge of sets; Roy Maffei, lighting; Bob Tucker, furniture props; Marilyn Williamson, programs and tickets, and Esther Palencia and Anne Canelos, publicity.

The plot of the play centers about the attempts of Mr. Manningham to convince his wife that she is going insane and thus drive her to suicide. Suspense is steadily built up as amusing and unusual events lead the play to its intensly dramatic ending.

"Gaslight," Griffin said, "is an ideal vehicle for advanced little theater production, its dramatic composition making it especially suitable for presentation in a small theater."

AS Card Sales Reach $9,590; Goal Is $12,500

Associated Student card sales have increased by a total of $355 over the previous week, bringing the total thus far to $9,590 for this semester's sales, Ralph Libby, Associated Student card sales chairman, stated last week. The goal set for the semester is $12,500.

This goal is one-half of the total enrollment of the college which is near record, Bill Boldenweck, AS president, pointed out.

Boldenweck stated, "If the complete program is to be put into effect by the AS, we are going to have to meet the goal."

Both Libby and Boldenweck pointed out the many values which may be obtained through the AS card. Some of these are west campus parking, savings on gasoline, clothing, entertainment and AS activities.

The 71 cards which were sold last week brought the figure in the Associated Men Student and Associated Women Student contest to 187 for the men and 90 for the women. However, Libby said that these figures were not accurate, because a final count on the week's sales had not been made.

Four Scholarships Offered For Women

Four scholarships are available to women students of the college for the Fall semester, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced here last week.

The Denman scholarship is presented to two women students of the college who carry 15 units of work a semester with a "B" average. The amount is $125 to each winner. Deadline for letters of application for this scholarship is Tuesday, November 1.

Theta Tau and Florence Louis scholarships are awarded to two women students who have a "C" average in 15 units of work for the Fall semester. Letter of application deadline is Monday, October 18, in Dean Golding's office, Building 2, west campus.

Enrollment On Upswing; Total Count Hits 5650

Official enrollment here this semester totals 5,650 students, 869 of them veterans, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced.

The total represents an increase of 770 students over last semester's enrollment figures, he said. Included in this semester's total is the night class enrollment of 1,000 students.

Men outnumber women by more than two to one during the day classes, President Conlan stated, and 100 more Korean War veterans are expected to enroll.

From the 869 veteran students, only 65 remain from World War II, Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of veterans affairs, said.

Veterans who apply for government aid, Dunn said, must file Form 7-1993 with him in his office in Building 3. Form 7-1999 must be filed during the first four days of each month.

Veterans receive government checks on the twentieth day of each month, he said, and the amounts include payment for living expenses, tuition, and books. Single veterans now receive $110 monthly, veterans with one dependent receive $135 per month, and those with two dependents receive $160 a month.

World War II veterans receive small government allowances, plus payment for tuition.

Dunn urged all veteran students in need of help to consult him at his office in Building 3.

Richard II Film Will Show Here

King Richard II, one of television's most widely acclaimed productions, will be presented here in eight special showings starting this morning at 8 o'clock, according to Madison Devlin, Audio-Visual Aids instructor at the college.

All eight projections of the Shakespearean drama will be shown in Room C246, part of the college's new Cloud Hall audio-visual facilities. Admission-free showings, Devlin said, will start at 8 this morning, and will be repeated at 10 a.m. and 12 noon today; on Thursday at 9 a.m. and 12 noon, and on Friday at 8 a.m., 10:30 a.m. (college hour) and 12:20 p.m.

Lent to the college by the National Broadcasting Company in New York, the film is a kinescope reproduction of a live hour-and-a-half NBC network feature presented by the Hallmark Hall of Fame last fall. It stars famed international star Maurice Evans.

Joe Rosenthal, Pulitzer Winner, Will Address Photo Journalism Class

Pulitzer prize winner Joe Rosenthal, San Francisco Chronicle photographer, who photographed perhaps the most famous scene of World War II, the historic flag raising on Mount Suribachi, Iwo Jima, will be one of several expert photographers to address the elementary journalism photography class here during the semester.

Other prominent photographers, all former Guardsman staff photographers, who will appear at intervals, are Fred Matthes, International News Photos; Ken Hilmer, senior photographer, Sixth Army Photo Laboratory, Presidio of San Francisco, and Ken Molino, San Rafael Independent Journal photographer.

Beverly Pasqualetti, director of photography here, stated that these men will discuss with the class the intricacies and detail of photographic journalism.

Students now enrolled in elementary journalism photography will comprise the staff of photographers for The Guardsman next semester.

College Hosts Representatives From 20 Two-Year Colleges At Northern Regional Conference

City College will host the Regional Conference of the Northern Section of the California Junior College Student Government Association, which will be held tomorrow in Buildings 2 and 11 on the west campus.

Approximately 20 northern California two-year colleges will be represented and more than 200 students are expected to participate in the activities.

College President Louis G. Conlan will give the welcome address and Bill Boldenweck, president of NSCJCSGA and Associated Student president here, will give the orientation address.

Each year a northern, southern and central regional conference is held, prior to the state conference, which will be held this year in Asilomar, California, with Monterey Peninsula College acting as host.

Publications, government, student organizations will all be topics of interest and discussion.

The purpose of these conferences is three-fold. First, it provides a means, whereby member colleges may solve and discuss problems. Secondly, it promotes better relationship with other member colleges and most important, according to Boldenweck, helps to establish a state-wide student organization to promote the best interests of the students.

According to the planned schedule released by Jim Brownfield, college information service chairman and state officer, the day's activities will begin at 8:30 a.m. with registration and coffee hour in the student lounge, Building 2. Meetings of workshops and chairmen will follow at 9:30 a.m. in Buildings 2 and 11. A general assembly, beginning at 9:45 a.m. in the student lounge, will continue until 10:45 a.m. From 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. the workshops will meet.

Luncheon will be served in the cafeteria for all participating students from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. Workshops will follow again from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. There will then be another general assembly from 2:45 to 4 p.m. with adjournment at that later time.

General chairman for the conference is Bob Arago, sophomore member of Student Council. Committee members are Lawrence Lowe, luncheon; Marcia Moore and Betty Peterson, registration; Walt Frehe, workshop; Pat Smith, secretary; Don Osborne, publicity; Allie Green, printing; Don Pace, assemblies; Bill Cirimele, entertainment; Don Baker, parking.

Instead of a general recreational period after conference adjournment, Brownfield pointed out, the present plan is to allow the visiting college leaders to go "on the town," since many of the visitors have never before been in San Francisco.

AGS Will Elect Group Officers In Meet Friday

Officers of Alpha Gamma Sigma, college scholastic honor society here, will be elected at the group's initial meeting during college hour Friday, October 15, in Cloud Hall, Rooms 232 and 233, Don Jensen, faculty adviser to the group, said yesterday.

Students who think they have met the following membership requirements are urged to attend the meeting and sign up.

Requirements for membership are as follows: Achievement of 30 grade points in a minimum of 12 units of work in any semester, physical education excluded, with no grade lower than "C" and a 2.0 grade average.

A student who maintains a grade average of 2.3 for three out of four or four out of five semesters is eligible for permanent membership in the society. Gold seal bearers, Jensen said, from high schools are eligible for temporary membership.

Out of 347 students graduated last June, 33 men and women have attained permanent membership in AGS. From the Fall of 1953 class there were eight honor graduates: Mary Baird 2.51, Kenneth Foley 2.60, Richard Gross 2.45, George Hills 2.33, Albert O'Dea 2.14, Carroll Pursell 2.95, Beatrice Sanchez 2.52, and Gladys Wallin 2.71.

Twenty-five students maintained a "B" or better average during their four semesters' work at the college from the Spring 1954 class: Marilyn Angel 2.38, Robert Ash 2.55, Frances Belias 2.61, Roby Blessing 2.58, William Carle 2.56, Claudine Claussen 2.43, Dorothy Collins 2.65, Dorothy Fallon 2.38, Ruby Gaston 2.55, Ruth Gomberg 2.83, Frans Klaver 2.95, Florence Louie 2.57, Manuel Luna 2.48, Kathleen Mogan 2.67, Victor Pacquet 2.53, Shirley Plichcik 2.52, Doris Plummer 2.67, Jan Sewell 2.46, Julia Smith 2.60, Rose Mary Stewart 2.47, Ray Sullivan 2.89, Ray Tankersley 2.52, Roberta Usher 3.00, Nancy Walsh 2.37, and Herman Zeilas 2.37.

Northern California Two-Year Colleges Meet Here Tomorrow

A GROUP of the most outstanding young men and women to be found in Northern California's two-year colleges will be honored guests on the college's campus tomorrow.

The occasion is the Northern California Junior College Student Government Association's regional conference, and the young people are the student leaders from most of the two-year colleges in this half of the state.

These guests of ours are not students playing at politics. They are the people who formulate the policies of their colleges, the Associated Student presidents, members of Student Councils and other student legislators.

The job they do is important, not only to their respective colleges but, and this is perhaps even more important, to the individuals themselves. The planning, budgeting and executing that they do now will hold them in good stead in any profession they may choose in later life.

Too often student governments, such as the Student Council here at the college, are taken lightly.

This group is not a form of entertainment for the members taking part, nor is it a single-minded gathering that "railroads" the legislation of one group through the council and forces it upon the college. It is instead an organized, hard-working body that is the executive, legislative and judicial voice of every student at the college, a body that is an integral part of the college, for it is the student's voice in how his affairs are managed and how his money is spent.

May we urge each student to go to a Student Council meeting and see how this important body works, and may we also suggest that all of you, if given the opportunity, join us in welcoming the leaders from other colleges who will be with us tomorrow.

These people of the NCJCSGA are the student leaders and legislators of today, and in many cases they will be the city, state and national leaders and legislators of tomorrow.

Jazz Strictly American; Cool Cats Here Hit Mood

SAN FRANCISCO'S full to the hilt of the "spots," "cool cats" are loaded with the records, and brave radio disk jockeys have been blasting forth with it for years. That's the music designed with one factor in mind—to put listeners "in the mood." The mood being described most effectively with the music—jazz, of course.

It can be safely said that jazz is strictly American product—as American as chocolate sodas or "small monthly payments."

Jazz was reputedly born in New Orleans, where it became a form of relaxation and entertainment in that vicinity around the 1870's.

Edison, Da Vinci

Courtyard Forms Keep 11-Year Student Vigil

Could Sculptor Fred Oldham have anticipated a benevolent version of George Orwell's famous character, Big Brother, when he designed the two statues behind the Science Building?

As they walk between classes, surely students must be aware of the close but uncritical scrutiny of Thomas Edison and Leonardo Da Vinci, two of the most prolific and versatile geniuses the world has ever produced.

Edison and Da Vinci first came to City College in 1941. They were formally unveiled at Homecoming on April 26 of that year, to the probable disgust of avant-gardists, who might have expected a bomb and a light globe, as symbolic representations of the two men's accomplishments.

Perhaps it was telepathy from the statues that led to the location of Cloud Hall and the eastward migration of students. No doubt these statues became lonely and slighted. Or perhaps they merely got tired of the view.

Edison, though not considered a profound scientist, made many contributions in applied electricity. The phonograph, light bulb, and movie camera were among inventions he helped perfect.

Da Vinci, though known primarily as an artist, was a man of many interests, and invented practically everything before Communists were even heard of.

Since then it has developed into the variated styles heard today.

Blues, Dixieland, Swing, Symphonic, modern progressive, new sounds, Chicago and commercial are familiar terms to jazz musicians and listeners, although it's not too easy to define the differences among these styles of jazz.

On the whole, the only definition that can be given is the fact that jazz is a very free and improvised variation on melody, which results in giving a rolling feeling of momentum.

Unlike other styles of music, jazz places little importance on what music selections are performed. Instead, the importance is placed on the way the piece is performed.

The rhythm, the synchronizations, the improvisations are the valuable factors which make this type of music so unusual.

Armstrong, Goodman, Ellington, Shaw, Dorsey, Kenton, Hampton, Shearing, Brubeck, Herman and Gillespie are just a few of the famous jazz men who do to jazz what their listeners seem to thrive on—completely different styles and variations.

Relaxed exuberance or intense excitement are two terms that could be used to describe the mood, which incidentally, attacks the musician as well as the listeners.

It's apparent that San Francisco has become the jazz mecca of the United States. At one time New York was the place where jazz musicians congregated, but recently the trend has moved into San Francisco, and this town is crammed full of out-of-the-way places where some excellent jazz performances can be heard and seen.

Jazz is by no means a crude type of music as some persons seem to think. Like all good music, jazz has to be understood, and if approached with an open mind, and an ear for the unusual, the listeners can learn to develop a liking for it.

College Players Typical

Aspiring Young Actors Make Little Theatre Second Home

By Rev Swope

Tears and laughter—excitement and near despair—always so closely associated with the theater the world over—are no less a part of the Little Theater group here at the college.

Aspiring young actors, directors, producers, designers and others find welcome and expert instruction in the college's Little Theater, basement level of the Science Building, a second home to most of them, since here they spend numerous hours rehearsing and preparing for their stage productions.

With a patient smile and an untiring spirit, Michael Griffin, adviser to the players, coaches them in stagecraft with keen familiarity based on years of experience. Griffin's background in the theater includes membership in the San Francisco Shakespearean Repertory Company and also in numerous Little Theater groups in the Bay Area.

Currently Griffin is on the board of the Mountain Theater Association, which performs on the dizzy heights of Mt. Tamalpais. Movie star Nancy Coleman once shared stage honors with Griffin in the mountain plays. This versatile instructor also did the make-up work for the first Bob Hope microwave.

From the past and the Green Room Club of Cow Hollow, where he was guest star, to the present and San Francisco Opera Company, where he is assistant to Everett Mason, its make-up artist, Griffin has gained an unlimited variety of theatrical knowledge which he willingly passes on to his students.

Griffin was graduated from the University of California and before coming to the college in 1946 served in the armed forces as Professor of Military Science and Tactics and Assistant Commandante at Clemson A and M—"the West Point of the South." After four years as an instructor in the English department, he succeeded to his present position as adviser to the Little Theater group in 1950.

Among Griffin's most famous proteges is the little girl who is making headlines these days—Miss America of 1955, Lee Meriwether. Another of his more successful students, Deane Cyr recently captured the part of David Wayne in Teahouse of the August Moon at the Honolulu Playhouse only 14 hours after his plane arrived in Hawaii.

This semester the drama department, under Griffin's supervision, was made exactly that—a department. Formerly drama activities were budgeted under the English department. Now the Little Theater stands alone!

The drama colony runs on a busy schedule with rehearsals from 1 to 5 each afternoon and often on Saturdays and Sundays near production dates.

A few of the promising young dramatists this semester are Joyce Cody, talented young star of many Little Theater productions, Pete Garrett, Carol Hall, Jane Lutt, Jann Palmer and Diana Williams. Set designer Rich Barulich and lighting and stage managers Ed Farnsworth and Bob McFarland are indispensable to the group.

A series of one-act plays was produced by the college players in past semesters. Among those productions were Two Cooks and a Lady, Happy Journey, Guest in the House, George Washington Slept Here, Sight Unseen, The Male Animal, Outward Bound, Kind Lady, The Curious Savage, The Torchbearers, Dust of the Road and The Valiant.

The Little Theater colony is a talented group this semester, according to Griffin, and promises the college many superior productions.

Two Ad Art Awards Given Here Annually

Two scholarships are awarded each year for graduating students from the advertising design and commercial art course. Many such students from the course are now continuing their careers through these scholarships.

Chosen directly by advertising design and commercial art instructor William J. Eckert, top students are awarded with one of the two scholarships offered, one to the Academy of Advertising Art, San Francisco, and one to the Art League of San Francisco.

Among the Spring 1954 graduates, Ernest Vasconcelos was awarded a scholarship to the Art League of San Francisco. Also receiving an award was Willie Ito who received a night scholarship to the Chounard Art School, Los Angeles, and a full time art job at Walt Disney's studios.

Shots At RAMdom

STUDENTS new to the college this semester might have wondered last week as they passed the west campus Phelan Avenue exit and noticed a rather distinguished appearing man vigorously directing traffic, trying to clear a late-afternoon snarl . . . It seems that another task has been added to the many and varied duties that occupy Dean of Men-extraordinaire Edwin C. Browne.

• • • •

EXCLAMATIONS of onlookers a few days back were probably right as they watched Asspciated Student President Bill Boidenweck escort an attractive matron about the campus: "Who is she? I know I've seen her before!" More than likely they remembered her from a Saturday evening TV show not so long back when they watched Mrs. Ethyl Meriwether comfort her "snivelling" daughter, Lee.

• • • •

BACK FOR another semester in the newly renamed criminology department is student Jack Webb, joined this semester by a friend, Mickey Spillane. The presence of two names as distinguished as these probably accounts for the dropping of the old "Law Enforcement" department classification and the adoption of the classier moniker.

• • •

THE ALUMNI CORNER: Ex-Associated Student President Joe Garbarino, now attending San Francisco State College, tells of his summer in Northern California's Trinity Alps area, and boasts of his perfect driving record in the small but evidently wide-awake town of Weed . . . Three times he had occasion to drive through the city and three times he was waved down by the local police.

• • •

RAM GRADS MAKE GOOD: Tilian-haired Shirley Murphy, probably the most active girl here in the past couple of years what with being Guardsman Associate Editor and Publicity chairman, now receives regular by-lines in the Daily Californian, a sheet published by a rather large school across the bay.

Her most recent was one over an article about Cal Rep-at-Large Jim Bouick, also an ex-Ram, who served as Student Card Sales Chairman and AS Council member in his time here.

CAMPUS POLICE, after carefully distributing little red college-seal parking permit decalcomanias to AS car owners, have been distressed to find that nine out of ten times the seals have been affixed to windshields through liberal use of scotch tape complete with the water-removable paper backing.

Weekend Fair Set

Colorful Foreign Student Pageant Featured Soon

Brotherhood of nations will be reflected in the forthcoming International Fair to be held at the college auditorium Thursday and Friday nights, October 28 and 29.

The first show will be followed by a display, and food from the countries in the program, will be sold. Represented are Latin American countries, Iran, the Philippines, China, Japan, India, Russia, Siam and the United States.

Taking a major part in the production is Marie Louise Carl, fourth semester student here, whose sparkling personality enhances many activities on campus. "Half a globe" away from her native Denmark, Miss Carl came to the United States on a student visa in 1948.

A graduate of Washington High School, where she attended one year following her arrival from Denmark, Miss Carl first entered the college in 1952 to further her education. Director of the blood donor drive here last year, Miss Carl was awarded the council service key recently.

At the present Miss Carl is concerned with the success of the International Fair. The idea of a fair grew from a college hour show last semester, given by the International Relations Club. Miss Carl along with the other members accepted the idea with enthusiasm.

Students having suggestions were invited yesterday to present them either to Miss Carl or Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor.

Ram Soccer Team Meets UC At Memorial Stadium Saturday

The next game on the Ram soccer schedule is this Saturday, October 16, with a tough and rugged team from the University of California and will be played at Memorial Stadium, Berkeley.

Last year the hard-fighting Rams downed California by the close score of 3-2. California always has one of the better teams in the league, and this year is no exception.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

IN Coach Klemmer's "Football Manual," a mimeographed brochure given to every candidate for the football team, the head football coach has listed the techniques of fundamentals and the characteristics of good T formation personnel.

In order, these characteristics are speed, aggressiveness, intelligence, stamina, strength and spirit.

Speed is essential for a marked success in any sport, although players have been able to compensate for lack of speed by an overabundance of another quality.

Aggressiveness, of course, is essential for any form of athletic competition. Many potentially great athletes have been held back by this lack of competitive spirit.

Intelligence plays a very important role in athletics today. The ability to remember plays and signals is essential in baseball and football. Major league baseball pitchers usually keep a mental "catalogue" on the hitting strengths and weaknesses of every player. To remember at least 100 players or better requires intelligence.

The intelligence of Bobby Riggs, one of the top tennis players of this decade, contributes much to his success for he was always a jump ahead of the other player in anticipation and strategy.

Stamina, of course, is absolutely necessary. Long distance running and boxing rely heavily on the stamina of the participant. In fact, any competitive sport today requires excellent stamina, for the tempo of athletics has increased decidedly. Stamina is one of the cornerstones of Rocky Marciano's success, for, continually wading and swinging, he absorbs many punches and uses a lot of strength; to continue this pace for 15 rounds requires great stamina.

Strength, naturally, is necessary, especially in physical contact sports, such as boxing, football, soccer, and wrestling. Strength in this sense of the word, strength enough to perform the mechanics of the task required.

Ben Hogan is not a powerfully built man, but he has enough strength to handle golf clubs freely and effortlessly.

Spirit is as essential to an athlete as is fuel to a car. The athlete may have all the mechanical ability necessary for success in his sport, but without the motivation and the courage to do what must be done, he will achieve nothing.

The greatest athletic performers of today are also the most spirited performers—Hugh McElhenny, Pancho Gonzales, Ben Hogan, Willie Mays, Roger Bannister. An athlete may be lacking in one of the other five qualities and attain success, but spirit is essential.

With such outstanding California players as Dennis Traison, Joe Hare, member of last year's All-American team as a Ram player, and the Dijohni brothers, this game should prove a thriller and no doubt will be important in the final standings.

Some of the Rams who should give California a bad time are Joe Musat, Art Lempke, Fred Zamora and Rodolpho Molina. Most of this year's team have had experience, as most of the players are entered in the soccer Sunday league.

James, Orzell Lead College Gridders In Ram-Menlo Tilt

Qualities of leadership and football knowhow; head football coach Grover Klemmer's pre-requisites for co-captains, were strongly evident in tackles Jerry James and Ken Orzell, team leaders for the City College-Menlo game, won by the Rams, 20-19, on October 1.

James, the powerful right tackle, was named to the second string All-Big Seven Conference team last year. He started his career at San Francisco's Polytechnic High School, where he was named All-City and All-Northern California as a member of the Poly championship team.

Orzell, also a veteran, fills the gap at the other tackle position in the Ram line. A law enforcement major, he also attended Polytechnic High and starred at the tackle position there.

James and Orzell join center Gus Bagatelos and guard Willie Hudson on the list of co-captains for this year. Bagatelos, a veteran, and Hudson, in his first year with the team, led the squad in the Taft game.

Jim Corbett fought in the ring for 18 years and never had a black eye or a bloody nose.

Rams, Stockton, Deadlock In Big 7 Opener, Face Los Angeles Cubs Next

James Snares Pitchout, Evens Score At 13-13

By Bob Chrisman

In the Big Seven Conference opener last Friday, the Ram football team eked out a 13-13 tie with the Stockton Mustangs at Stockton, as Ram tackle Jerry James intercepted a pitchout to score a touchdown and kick the extra point to even the score.

In the first quarter, the Mustangs received and starting from their own 37-yard line, drove 63 yards down the field for a touchdown. During this drive, marshalled by quarterback Junior Reynoso, the Mustangs showed two very strong running backs in Ben Parks and Gene Campbell. A pass from Reynoso to Campbell from 10 yards out scored the first touchdown, and Parks converted.

After an exchange of punts, the Rams had possession of the ball on the Mustang 43-yard line. Shirlee McCormick lost four yards, but on the next play, Les Barros hit Rudy Lopez with a pass for 22 yards.

With the ball on the Mustang 25-yard line, the Rams ran the ball seven straight times for the score, with Lopez going over from the three-yard line. The conversion try failed, and the score was 7-6 for Stockton.

Neither team scored again in the first half, and the score remained 7-6. In the second half, the Rams received the kickoff, and after advancing the ball to the Stockton 27, lost the ball on a fourth-down play.

Stockton scored their second touchdown on a sudden-death pass play which went from Reynoso to Campbell for 73 yards and a touchdown. The conversion try failed, and the Mustangs led, 13-6.

The score remained 13-7 until the fourth quarter, when James charged into the Mustang backfield and intercepted a pitchout by Reynoso on the Mustang 17 and ran the 17 yards for a touchodwn. He then kicked the conversion, and the final score was 13-13.

The scoring chances of the Rams were severely damaged by penalties; there were few sustained scoring drives by either side in a game which was marred with penalties. The Mustangs lost 90 yards in penalties as compared to 115 yards by the Rams.

The college's team netted 209 yards rushing and 102 yards passing, for a total of 311 yards. Stockton netted 110 yards rushing and 159 passing, for a total of 269 yards.

Team captains for the Stockton game were End Rich Oliver and Halfback Jim Frank.

Southland Hosts Rams In Crucial Game This Friday; Locals Lead In Series Play By 8 To 7 And 1 Tie

After a fine showing thus far, the Ram football team will face the Los Angeles Cubs in Los Angeles this Friday, October 15, at 8 p.m.

Last year, the game between the two teams ended in a 19-19 tie, as the Rams came from behind a 7-19 deficit to tie the visiting Cubs.

Of the 16 games played between the two teams the Rams lead with a total of eight wins to seven and one tie.

The college team features an aggressive, rugged line averaging 190 pounds. This year's backfield, which includes Les Barros, Shirlee McCormick, Al Chatman, Rudy Lopez, Mike Forrette and Kent Scovil, is ranked by some authorities as being better than the Ram backfield of the 1953 team, which finished second in the Big Seven Conference.

Players who will participate for the Los Angeles Cubs this Friday are Charles Brown, Dave Perkins, Bob Menar, Nick Smith, Rudy Ramos, Don Stevens and Bill Steel in the backfield.

Returning linemen include Don Buteher, Dennis Stangleland, Oscar Paloutzian, Tom Caffrey and Don Presby.

The following is the Roster of the Ram team:

24	Chatman, LHB	52	Forrette, QB
25	Calhoun, HB	53	Martucci, G
26	Johnson, OB	54	Frank, RHB

Block SF Meeting Scheduled Friday During College Hour

Members of the Block SF Society will hold a meeting during college hour this Friday, October 15. The purpose of this meeting is to plan the date, time and theme of a forthcoming dance to be held in the coming months, probably in November.

Under the sponsorship of Coach Bill Fischer, the members are really going all out to make the society one of the best on the campus. They have already started by joining the Club Activities Board.

The men have more plans, such as more entertaining and interesting meetings with refreshments and a visit by a famous sports personality. All newcomers are invited to attend.

By going out and putting the Block SF in the spotlight, Fischer is hoping to interest more men in going out for sports, thereby making for bigger and better athletic teams.

Intramural Play Slated To Start; Schwarz At Helm

Geared so that any male student, provided he is an Associated Student, may participate either individually or on a team in the sport of his choice, during physical education hour or out, the college's intramural program begins soon under the direction of Coach Alex Schwarz.

In general, teams are set up during physical education hours with several captains appointed to lead various sections of the classes. However, any club or organization may submit teams for competition.

Each physical activity class competes within itself and later classes or organizations meet after college hours and as a result these series of tournaments determine the champions of the college.

For the college winners in each sport, gold belt buckles are awarded and for second placers brilliant silver belt buckles are presented.

This does not comprise all the awards, however, for gold, silver and bronze buckles are presented to first, second and third placers in each sport of each physical education hour.

Many sports are offered for the interested student such as basketball, football, soccer, tennis, ping pong and badminton in the fall along with a special program for veterans which includes volleyball.

WAA Lists Seven Sports Days Throughout Year

Dates for college sports days were decided at a meeting on October 1, attended by representatives of five colleges, Esther Phillips, president of the Women's Athletic Association, revealed this week.

Colleges represented were West Contra Costa, College of San Mateo, Marin and Oakland.

Miss Phillips released the following Sports Day dates:

November 6: Marin. Volleyball. Coed.

November 20: CCSF. Badminton and archery. Coed.

December 4: College of San Mateo. Badminton. Coed.

January 8: East Contra Costa. Badminton, Coed.

March 5: Santa Rosa. Basketball. Women only.

April 30: Hartnell. Volleyball, softball, tennis and archery.

May 21: Napa College. Swimming. Coed.

President Conlan Is Dean Of PCC Game Officials

By Dick Moore

A little known fact around City College is that the striking, well-chiseled features of President Louis G. Conlan were at one time more likely to be found on the torn up turf of a much abused football field, then behind the impressive, hardwood desk in his Cloud Hall office.

"Dutch," as Dr. Conlan is called by friends and cohorts of his days of athletic competition, has chalked up a succession of notable athletic marks in the fields of coaching, officiating, and recreational leadership as well as in active competitive participation.

The former St. Mary's star quarterback has an officiating name of such great repute that in the words of Bill Fischer, head baseball coach here at the college, "Dutch is generally considered to be the dean of football officials on the Pacific Coast."

Dr. Conlan's initial appearance on the local sports scene was in 1920 when he played basketball and football at Commerce High. After leaving Commerce in 1922 he enrolled at St. Mary's College and quarterbacked the Gaels' grid club from 1923 to 1925. From the time of his graduation from St. Mary's in 1925 and up until 1935 when Conlan came to City College as football and basketball coach, he was busy coaching football, basketball and baseball at Commerce High and St. Mary's.

Dr. Conlan has been officiating in Pacific Coast football since 1932 and is the only man to officiate in the Rose Bowl game on four occasions.

At present his activities in the world of sports include his work as a director of the Cow Palace and as chairman of sporting events held there.

PRESIDENT Louis G. Conlan, "quarterback" of City College, started his sports career as quarterback at St. Mary's.

Extensive Plans For Biggest Homecoming Week In History Include Rally, Dance, Dinner

The Associated Men Students are currently planning the college's most extensive Homecoming Week yet, according to Al Kingston, president of the AMS.

Festivities will be touched off by a student rally in the auditorium, on Thursday, November 4, which will feature a famous local orchestra.

That night there will be an Alumni Association dinner and rally in the college cafeteria. Mrs. Ethyl Merwether will be guest of honor, and will share the spotlight with members of the 49ers football team, Kingston said. Game movies will also be shown.

Among events at the alumni dinner and rally will be the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, Promotion Commissioner Diek Moore disclosed. The contest will begin Thursday, October 21, and applications must be turned in before Thursday, October 28.

On Friday, November 5, the Ram footballers, undefeated to date, will oppose the College of San Mateo on the Balboa Park Stadium at 2 p.m. That night there will be a dance in the auditorium from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight, which will probably feature a big name band.

Among students who have helped AMS President Kingston in the planning of Homecoming Week are Joe Bavaresco, Al Butler, Bill Ciremele, Bob Flanagan, Marcia Herst, John Lo Coco, Ralph Libby, Diek Moore, Paul Ortiz, Don Osborne, Gil Scagua, Emmet Thompson, Dick Vega and Deane Wylie.

Members of the faculty who have advised and assisted the officials of the AMS are Thomas Wilson, AMS sponsor; Edwin Larson, president of the Faculty Association; Dean Louis Batmale, and Joseph A. Amori, placement director.

Tickets for the dinner may be procured from Kingston, at a cost of $2.25.

Council Vetoes Homecoming Bid For Name Band

Last week's meetings of the college's Student Council were primarily concerned with Homecoming Week activities and the Associated Men Student - Associated Women Student homecoming dance.

The homecoming dance definitely presented the greatest problem. A suggested plan to have Ray Anthony's band at a cost of $1700 was submitted to the council. Bids would cost $2.50 for Associated Students and $4.00 to non-members.

Controversy arose as to where the dance should be held, and the possibility that the dance would lose a considerable amount of money, was debated heatily.

The dance committee maintained that the dance would pay for itself if it was held in the college auditorium. Several members of the council thought that not many would pay $4.00 to come to any dance held in the auditorium. Other members expressed the view that if the dance was held off the campus in a private hotel or club, more would come. And still others stated that a hotel room or club would cost too much money.

After much discussion, the council held a vote, and the motion to have the big-name band was defeated by a close 7-6 vote with one abstention.

Homecoming Week plans for an alumni dinner, a student rally, a football game with College of San Mateo, and the AMS-AWS dance without the big-name band were approved.

Five Coeds Seek USMCR Crown

Of the approximately 25 entries in the contest to elect a Miss Marine Corps Reserve, sponsored by the Merchant's Association of Ocean Avenue, West Portal, Lakeside Village and Lakeshore Plaza, the college is well represented by the entrance of one-fifth of the total applieants.

Entered in the contest from the college are Francine Catania, Daralyn Donnelly, Alice Marin, Jann Palmer and Chris Vletor.

The contest is being held in conjunction with a West of Twin Peaks Marine Corps Reserve units recruiting drive which began last Saturday and ends next Saturday.

As a climax to the drive there will be a parade which is scheduled to leave the college campus at 10:30 a.m. and will proceed down Ocean Avenue, through Lakeside Village and down West Portal to the Twin Peaks Tunnel where a ceremony will be held announcing the winner of the contest.

Queens will be selected by votes of the consumers West of Twin Peaks. Ballot boxes will be set up in all of the major shopping centers in the area.

15 Coeds Chosen As Photography Models

Fifteen women students have been chosen to try out as models by the college Photography department, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, disclosed recently. They are requested to see him in Building 4 on the west campus next Monday or Wednesday.

The women selected are Beverly Bardo, Marie Chu, Sheila Ellman, Joy Frazier, Sharon Girrard, Jo Glenchur, Susan Ligda, Sylvia Lim, Melanie Meade, Jessie Palmer, Joan Saar, Beverly Swope, Gayle Tichenor, Helen Wills and Judith Wills.

Graduation Petition Deadline October 15

Deadline for graduation petitions here is this Friday, October 15, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar at the college, warched here yesterday.

Requirements for graduation are as follows: A minimum of 60 units of college work with a "C" average, and completion of all courses required.

Commencement exercises have been held at Riordan High School Auditorium for the past two years. A place for June ceremonies, in which approximately 600 students are expected to receive Assoeiate in Arts degrees has not been decided on yet.

Few Permits For Parking Left As 900 Out To Date

With approximately 900 student parking permits issued to date and 160 faculty permits out as compared with a 680 grand total of last semester, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here, said recently that there are still a limited number of permits available in the office of Dean Edwin C. Browne, Building 2, west campus.

Student parking areas are behind the physical education departments and west campus parking lot. Cloud Circle, the area surrounding Cloud Hall, Fitzgerald noted, is for faculty parking. Allowances will be made for students who, through physical handicap or other difficulty, will require use of this space.

Parking regulations are strictly enforced by campus police for narrow roadways on the west campus, red zones, fire hydrants, and lack of parking permit. Since September 23, when the campus police first began tagging cars, there have been 143 citations issued. These are payable to the City Traffic Fines Bureau in the City Hall, not to the college, Fitzgerald stated.

Red zones indicate no stopping, yellow, stopping only for loading or unloading passengers, white zone, loading and unloading of passengers also, green, parking for 10 minutes only.

Parking fines are as follows: Parking on red zone $5, yellow $5, white $2, green $2, double parking $5, improper parking on a grade $5, parking by a fire hydrant $5, parking in bus zones $5, parking on state, municipal, or county property $2.

The most common student violation on campus, it was noted, is jaywalking at the Gate 1 entrance to west campus parking area. Fitzgerald said that students should remain on the curb until a signal is given by the campus police officer on duty, and then cross in the crosswalks.

Two more student officers added to the campus police list make this semester's group complete at 17 members. The new officers are Lee R. Hargus and Harold M. Hockett.

Music Department Readies Yule Show

Extensive preparations are being made by the Music department here for the Twentieth Annual Christmas Concert to be held December 8 or 9 in the auditorium. The A Cappella choir, the orchestra and the Men's Glee Club will share participation in the program.

The Men's Glee Club is planning to sing two contemporary works, the first of which will be Joseph and the Angel, which is the first part of Scenes From the Holy Nativity by Virgil Thomson, noted music critic. The performance will be among the first ten performances given by United States colleges since the work's publication in 1944.

The other contemporary selection will be Alleluia, by Randall Thompson. This selection has become familiar since its publication in 1940.

The bulk of the program will feature both religious and secular Christmas songs, with several tableaus. The A Cappella Choir, the Glee Club and the orchestra will sing and play the traditional Christmas music. Several choir soloists will be featured in the program.

Potato chips were introduced by a Negro chef about 1865. The first plant constructed for manufacturing them was erected in Albany, New York, in 1925.

European Holiday In Color On Screen Friday

European Holiday is the title of a 40-minute color film to be shown during college hour this Friday, October 15, at 10:30 a.m., in Room 136 of the college's Science Building, Madison Devlin, audio visual instructor, announced here this week.

The film is devoted to breathtaking scenery, historic monuments, and social life of the people in the countries of Western Europe.

Starting this week, and continuing through January, Devlin has scheduled a number of informative films to be shown during future college hours free of charge to all students and instructors who wish to attend.

Hollywood Charm Expert Speaks To AWS Friday

Discussion at the last Associated Women Student meeting centered around four major topics.

Charm expert from Hollywood, Shirley Haddow, will lecture on make-up, reducing, and other topics of special interest to women students of the college, during college hour this Friday, October 15, in the Student Lounge, Building 2, west campus. All women students are invited by Marcia Herst, AWS president.

The Riveria Shop on Ocean Avenue, it was decided, will again provide clothes for modeling in the semi-annual AWS Tea and Fashion Show, Thursday, November 18. There will be 15 women students modeling in the show, Miss Herst said.

A definite place for the tea is expected to be decided on at the next meeting, she added. The tea and fashion show is presented semi-annually by the AWS to interest senior women of Bay Area high schools in the college.

For Homecoming, November 4, through November 6, there will be a night bonfire rally Thursday, November 4, the Homecoming dance Friday, November 5, and a dinner for sorority alumnae. A date has not been decided upon yet for the dinner, Miss Herst said. Each sorority is to get in touch with alumnae personally, she added.

Symphony Ticket Delay Extends Sale One Week

Because of the delay in the arrival of Symphony Forum tickets, the sale of tickets will be extended one week, so that they will be sold for two weeks beginning today.

The Symphony Forum gives students a chance to buy half-price season tickets for the 43rd season of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Tickets for the 18 Thursday evening performances cost $22.50 for orchestra seats, and $17 for balcony seats. They may be purchased at the bank in the Science Building.

Clubs Scheduled To Meet Friday In College Hour

Clubs and organizations are scheduled to meet this Friday, October 15, in college hour, according to the official calendar for college hours for the semester.

The college hour is inserted between 10 and 11 o'clock classes and starts at 10:30 a.m., running to 11:20 a.m. All morning classes are shortened 10 minutes each to provide for the college hour. Afternoon classes run on the regular schedule.

In the Science Building, Drama Society meets in Room 28; Pick and Hammer, 45; Faculty Association, 100; Filipino Club, 111; Masonic Club, 132; Zeta Chi, 133; College Movies Series, 136; Alpha Phi Omega, 140; Alpha Sigma Delta, 190; Phi Beta Delta, 191; Latin American Club, 194; Collegiate Christian Fellowship, 200.

Also in the Science Building are the Engineering Society, 201; Kappa Phi, 205; Folk Dancing Group, 211; Beta Phi Beta, 212; Delta Psi, 215; Newman Club, 252; Phi Rho Pi, 254; United Student Association, 255; Lutheran Club, 256; Women's Athletic Association, 257; Merchandising Club, 258; Chinese Student Club, 311; Le Cercle Francais, 312; and Beta Tau in 346.

Meeting in Cloud Hall will be Alpha Phi Epsilon in 121; Hillel Foundation and Omicron Phi Pi, 201; Tau Chi Sigma, 202; Forum, 222; Alpha Lambda Chi, 223; Kappa Rho, 229; Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 231; Alpha Gamma Sigma 232-233; and International Relations Club in 258-259.

On the west campus, the Band Association will gather in Building 1; Music Council Guild in Building 1B; Inter-Fraternity Council in Building 2A; Lambda Phi in 2B; and the Ram Cam in Building 9D.

Block SF will meet in the men's gymnasium, and the Folk Dancing group will meet in the women's gymnasium. The Horticulture Society will gather in the Greenhouse and the Hotel and Restaurant Society in the west campus cafeteria.

CAB Will Review Charters Of Clubs

Membership committees of all clubs here were asked this week by Jim Needles, Club Activities Board president, to submit to the board their current charters for review and revision. After being rewritten, charters will become effective for the semester, Needles said.

CAB sponsor Robin L. Dunn announced at the CAB meeting recently that all clubs affiliated with the college are required to have 51 per cent membership in the Associated Students as stated in AS and CAB constitutions.

Dunn also urged all clubs, if presently inactive on campus, to file petitions with his office in Building 3, west campus, as soon as possible in order to become activated. Petitions are usually submitted once during each semester to entitle clubs to participate in college activities.

Campus Organizations Begin Fall Activities With Officer Elections

By Carolyn Fisher

WITH the activities of Club Day and registration behind them, clubs on campus have started the ball rolling with election of officers, business meetings and some social get-togethers.

Alpha Lambda Chi had a business meeting at the home of Kay Griffin on October 7. The sorority's second rushing affair "Night in Paris," a French dinner, will be given October 24.

Fall officers of Beta Phi Beta are Pete Ruppert, president; Paul Ortiz, vice president; Ron Kindred, secretary; Jim Niven, treasurer; George Saba, historian; John DeMartini, sergeant-at-arms.

First affair of Delta Psi was held in the Monterey Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. The sorority met jointly with Beta Phi Beta, October 5 at the home of Dottie Sutcliffe.

Alberto Conde is president this semester of the Filipino Club. Other officers are vice president, Jimmy Yack; secretary, Ida Dahoman; treasurer, Josephine Nordo; sergeant-at-arms, Ben Sanchez; entertainment chairman, Chris Medina. Membership in the club is 70 students at the present.

Kappa Phi held its tea at the Forest Lodge October 3.

Ed Dollard's house was the scene of the Phi Delta first rushing affair October 9. Men were served refreshments and introduced to fraternity members.

Phi Beta Rho gave an Italian dinner in the student lounge last night. Members of Beta Phi Beta served. Entertainment was planned by Lois Mantel, President of the sorority this semester is Dorothy Treizise.

United Student Association officers for Fall 1954 are Bob Burmister, president; John Adams, vice president; Luther Distler, treasurer, and Bob McNaught, representative CAB and council meetings.

Zeta Chi held its first rush affair, a tea, at the Bellevue Hotel on October 3.

Hurley Village Reduces Local Housing Problem

Housing problems of many college students are reduced by facilities offered at Hurley Village. Hurley Village is a housing project located mainly between Judson and Marston Streets off Phelan Avenue. Modern, economical accommodations for 290 families are available to married students during the academic year and the following summer for those returning to college.

Legally, the project consists of two projects, Hurley Village and Balboa Park. Hurley Village was the first to be constructed and Balboa Park was later filled in.

According to Teresa Blake, Hurley Village housing clerk, living accommodations are of one and two bedroom units, the two bedroom units being available only to families with one child at least two years old or families with two or more children. Any married college student in the Bay Area is eligible, veterans and City College students having preference. There are no facilities for single individuals.

Rental rates include all utilities plus repair costs for damages that are covered by the housing program. Damages not covered are paid by the tenants at a reduced price.

At present there are no vacancies at the project. To be on the waiting list, an application must be filed out and approved by the Dean of Men, Edwin C. Browne. Applications may be obtained from Mrs. Blake's office in Building 350, the last quonset unit on the north side of Marston Street. Office hours are 10 a.m. to 12 noon, and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

If a unit becomes available and the application has been approved, a lease is signed with the Housing Authority of the City and County of San Francisco. In the event of conceivable inability to uphold a lease, Mrs. Blake advises tenants to notify the credit office of the forementioned organization, located at 440 Turk Street.

Parking in Hurley Village is as much a problem as anywhere. Parking on the project grounds proper is prohibited to everyone, tenants and non-tenants. The only exception is the area located behind four large buildings that are south of Marston and east of Cloud Hall at the bottom of the hill.

Student Government Conference Votes Resolution Opposing Segregation

Supreme Court Ruling Inspires Unanimous Adoption By Assembly

By Dave Baar

Regional Conference of the Northern section of the California Junior College Student Government Association met here last Thursday with large success. Delegates representing 20 colleges worked throughout the day discussing common problems of student-government and finding out how student leaders from different colleges solve these problems.

Most important development of the day was the unanimous passage by the conference general assembly of a resolution advocating common integration of all students.

The resolution was inspired by the recent Supreme Court ruling which abolished racial segregation in U. S. schools, colleges and universities.

The resolution states the decision of the delegates and the students backing them that any segregation of students for a racial or secular cause will be opposed by all students of the colleges represented.

Another resolution of the delegates was that a calendar of student activities of member colleges would be made up and distributed among the colleges.

Both resolutions go on the agenda of the statewide Student Government Conference at Asilomar in November.

At the same time, Napa College was selected to host the next regional conference which will be held in Fall of 1955, and Bob Edington of Vallejo College was elected Parliamentarian of the association.

Conference opened in the morning with registration of delegates and a coffee hour primarily for the benefit of representatives of colleges which are located far away from San Francisco.

The coffee hour was followed by a general assembly of delegates with Bill Boldenweck, president of the association and also the college Associated Student president, presiding. Boldenweck welcomed the delegates on behalf of the college and gave a brief explanation of the location of the campus buildings.

Delegates then went to their respective workshops, where they studied different organizations of Student Government, of Associated Women and Associated Men Students, of student finance, campus organizations, student publications and publicity, rallies, assemblies and athletics.

Two year colleges represented by the 300 delegates were City College of San Francisco, College of Marin, East Contra Costa, West Contra Costa, Grant Technical, Hartnell, Menlo, Modesto, Monterey, Napa, Sierra, Sacramento, San Jose, San Mateo, Santa Rosa, Shasta, Stockton, Vallejo, Yuba and Oakland. This was the first conference for the young Oakland Junior College.

The conference ended with a general assembly where the several resolutions were made.

BILL BOLDENWECK, Associated Student president here, is also President of the Northern California Section of the Junior College Student Government Association.

Denman Petitions Due November 1 In Dean's Office

Letters of application for the Denman Scholarships will be accepted by Mary Golding, dean of women here, until Monday, November 1.

These scholarships, issued annually since 1939, will be awarded to two women students on Prep Day, Dean Golding stated.

To become eligible for consideration, a student must have completed 30 units of work at the college with a grade of "B" or better and she must have been graduated from a San Francisco Public High School. Judgment, Dean Golding said, is based on the student's scholarship, need and leadership.

Superior Court Judge William Denman and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatham, instituted the awards, both in the amount of $125, in commemoration of their father, James Denman, who was Superintendent of the San Francisco Public Schools form 1860 to 1861 and 1868 to 1875.

Recipients of the scholarships last year were Roberta Usher and Frances Bellas.

Counsellors Visit Senior High Classes

Starting in the latter part of October and continuing into November, counsellors here will start visiting Senior Goals classes in all of San Francisco's senior high schools.

The purpose of these visits is to acquaint the graduating senior with the advantages and offerings of attending the college.

Next week Alva McMillan, of the counselling division, will announce the date on which notices will be sent to students requesting them to make appointments with their counsellors and prepare their next semester programs.

Also next week, McMillan will issue a statement explaining the why and the how of the counselling offices.

AS Card Sales Rise To $9825 Mark But Funds Still Low

Associated Student card sales have risen to the $9,825 mark within the last week, Ralph Libby, AS card salesman, said yesterday.

Forty-seven cards were sold last week upping the sales $235, Libby declared. Last week's mark was $9,590. This semester's goal has been set at $12,000.

Because of the Regional Conference of the Northern Section of the California Junior College Student Government Association here last week Libby said a count on the Associated Men Students versus the Associated Women Students card sales contest was not made. The count two weeks ago was 187 for the men and 90 for the women.

"Card sales are still too slow to insure the full AS program planned this semester," according to Libby. Some of the benefits of purchasing an AS card are west campus parking, savings on gasoline, clothing, entertainment and participation in AS activities.

College Hour Bows To Midterm Tests

In order to avoid interference with midterm examinations, no college hour is scheduled for Friday, October 22, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced last week.

College hour will be resumed next week, he said, when the hour will be devoted to the semi-annual student-faculty coffee hour.

Students Fear As Midterms Here

Texts Out In Great Profusion Only Lead To One Conclusion

By Dolores Stoffers

Out come the texts in profusion this week and approximately 5,600 students turn intellectual.

This leads a person to one conclusion—midterm week is drawing near.

Armed with an ample supply of stay-awake pills and borrowed lecture notes, many students prepare earnestly for Monday, October 18, and pray for Friday, October 22, to pass.

Opposed to many notions, mid-term exams do serve a definite purpose, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here. Of foremost importance is the fact that they provide the student with an estimate of the caliber of his classmates.

Although the midterm grades are not entered on the students permanent records, they are kept in his counsellor's records for reference. They can be checked to determine the student's eligibility for participation in extra-curricular activities, most of which require a C average.

While the one-week-scholars study desperately, and rubbing their brows, ask themselves how six weeks pass so rapidly, those who have studied throughout the semester sit back in superiority and gloat at the folly of their work. Knowing this, he can judge the amount of study needed to raise his grades.

Little Theater Auditions Start For December Production Of Kanin Comedy Goodbye, My Fancy

Auditions for parts in the college Little Theater group's next production, Goodbye, My Fancy, by Fay Kanin, will be held at the little theater, Room 28, Science Building, from 1 to 4 p.m., today, tomorrow and Friday, Michael Griffin, director, of drama here, disclosed recently.

Stage crewmen and students interested in behind-the-scenes work are also urged to look into the possibility of working with the drama group, Griffin added.

"Practical experience in all phases of little theater and general theatrical technique, production and management, plus from 1 to 3 units of college credit are offered to students participating in the Little Theater's program," Griffin stated.

The fact that any member of the Associated Students may try out or work on production with the group without being enrolled in a drama course was stressed by Griffin.

The play is to be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, December 9, 10 and 11.

Goodbye, My Fancy is a comedy-drama with a moral. The play deals with the return of a successful graduate of a women's school to the campus of the same institution. Reactions of old friends and teachers to the famous graduate's return furnish most of the interest of the story.

The cast requires 12 women and 8 men.

End Of Semester Is CAB Charter Deadline

Deadline for submission of club charters to the Club Activities Board here is at the end of this semester, Jim Needles, CAB president said recently.

CAB sponsor Robin Dunn also urged at the last group meeting that all clubs presently inactive on campus file petitions with his office in Building 3, west campus, as soon as possible in order to become activated.

Dunn also warned students that all clubs affiliated with the college are required to have 51 per cent membership in the Associated Students.

IRC Completes Plans For Fair October 28, 29

Final plans for a two day City College International Fair were announced by the sponsoring International Relations Club here last week. Featuring both displays and entertainment, the fair will be presented in Building 2 and the auditorium on the west campus, Thursday and Friday, October 28 and 29.

In the auditorium a 12-act show each night will include numbers performed by students from ten countries. Among the numbers will be a Siamese boxing match performed by students from Thailand and a bamboo pole dance presented by 45 Filipino students.

On October 28, exhibits and exotic foods will be displayed in Building 2 after the show, along with color-sound Trans-World Airline travel movies on France, Greece, Italy and Spain.

Students from all Bay Area colleges have been invited to attend the climax of the Fair, a dance to be held in the auditorium here after the Friday show. Admission fee will be 50 cents for students presenting college Associated Student cards or student cards from any local college, and $1 for students and other persons without cards.

Sponsored by The National Press Photographers Association, a contest entitled "The Best Picture I Have Ever Taken," is now getting under way, Beverly Pasqualetti, directer of photography here, announced yesterday.

All students attending the college are invited to engage in the competition and should submit their entries to Pasqualetti in Building 9 on the west campus no later than Monday, November 1.

Photographs to be entered must be 11 by 14 inches faced on 16 by 20 inch salon mount and may be either glossy print or black and white. No color pictures will be accepted.

Members of the National Press Photographers Association, who are scheduled to convene at the Bellevue Hotel in San Francisco, November 9, 10, and 11 for their short course in Photographic journalism, will judge the pictures at that time.

West Campus Parking Troubles Plague Students

By Paul Girard

West campus parking was the problem presented to William Scott, campus police office, a week ago Friday when a distraught student asked the patrolling officer to help figure out how he could drive his car out from between a solid line of parallel parked autos.

It seemed that some thoughtless students had failed to leave an entrance or exit from the dirt parking strip between the old headquarters of the campus police Building 13, and the fence bordering Phelan Avenue.

The unnamed bewildered student had parked his car in the second row of a three row section, and therefore he was able to drive his car both forward and backward for a distance of some hundred feet. The hundred feet in which he was able to drive his auto did him no good at all for he was technically imprisoned.

After many minutes of thinking and surveying the problem, Officer Scott succeeded in freeing the imprisoned student much to the student's relief. Removal of one car was all that was needed to do the trick.

From the window of the Guardsman office, which is located on the third floor of the Science Building, the student's plight resembled the obstacle course which scientists use on rats and mice for psychology research.

Don Baker, chief of the campus police here, said that no parking is allowed between the old headquarters of the campus police and the poles which are set in a line approximately 15 feet from the building. Baker said three parking between these poles is punishable by a fine payable to the City of San Francisco.

Baker said that autos parked between the white poles would be cited.

NEW PARKING PROBLEMS were discovered recently when a student parking in the area near Building 13 was unable to extricate his car from the lot because of the thoughtlessness of other owners. After much manuevering, the student finally freed trapped auto.—Guardsmon photo by Gee.

Juvenile Delinquency Problem Not As Bad As 'Experts' Claim

DR. HERBERT C. CLISH, Superintendent of Public Schools in San Francisco, made a statement recently which the adults of today would do well to heed.

His statement was made to a committee investigating juvenile delinquency in this area, and Dr. Clish definitely refuted the claims of the so-called "experts" who claim that juvenile crime has reached a high level in San Francisco and the East Bay.

Dope addiction, immorality, young gangs and all the rest of the sins that lately seem to be almost restricted to the teen-age group are, according to Dr. Clish, at a surprisingly low level in this area, especially in relation to other parts of the country.

It is gratifying to our age group to find another voice, this one with great authority behind it, joining the all too few that give due credit to the young person of today. Too many persons are content to read the newspaper accounts of juvenile delinquency and condemn "this younger generation" without delving any further into the matter.

If these persons were to see the everyday examples of just how mature and responsible the average young person of today is, they would get quite a different picture. The newspaper stories previously mentioned are a good example in favor of the teen-ager.

The main object of a newspaper is to dispense the news, news being described in part by Webster's Dictionary as: "Surprising intelligence; new knowledge of something strange or significant." If juvenile crime were the rule rather than the exception, it would not be "strange or significant."

Actually the juvenile of today is not nearly as sinful or black-hearted as painted by some vastly uninformed "experts." The average young man or woman is perhaps more a stalwart part of society than his parents and their generation, the same generation which is now doing most of the blackening of today's American youth. Dr. Clish was quick to admit that today's generation is "vastly superior" to his own.

Of course any juvenile delinquency, just as any crime of any sort, is too much. Where the answer to the problem lies is not for discussion here, but we can offer one small step that students here can take in the right direction.

Students of City College are on the spot twice over. Being a college student is in itself a responsibility, and the fact that the college is a part of the San Francisco public school system emphasizes that responsibility.

Dr. Clish and many others who have gone to the root of the trouble have expressed their confidence in the young people of today, and it is up to us to win over the unbelievers and prove to them that the "bad" teen-agers form only a minute fraction of American youth.

Prosaic Pioneers, History Name Old Ghost Towns

EVER WONDER how our pioneering ancestors came up with some of the monickers tagged on to many of California's famous towns and places?

It's evident that they had much more to do with their time than to sit around and dream up weird names for every village or town that sprang up in the course of their home hunting, so let's assume and quite a lively imagination.

Most of the men responsible for naming the famous places in this vicinity were young gold miners looking for a quick way to get rich, hoping to bring their sweethearts or wives and families to the much talked of West.

Towns inadvertently grew — some are still growing today, others have been demolished by age and weather, and a few are partially standing, established as interesting objectives for tourists.

Perhaps the most interesting are the latter—the hundreds of partially standing towns now appropriately labeled "Ghost Towns."

Take for example, Gouge Eye—a delightfully ghastly name given to a small 49er site in the vicinity of Nevada City. The name? History tells of two men lashed together, until one had succeeded in gouging out the other's eye. Appetizing, what?

Shirttail, located in Placer County, has a legend dating back to the pioneer's characteristic resourcefulness. It seems a pioneer, called Turkeyegg because of the abundance of freckles on his face, discovered one of the west's "lost mines."

When he was at his lowest ebb—no money, no food, etc., he went for a trek in a canyon, where a gleam in the rocks caught his attention. After scrutinizing the object, he proceeded to pan his findings—about $200 worth of gold.

Having no buckskin to cart his precious nuggets in, he tore off his shirttail and then made a simulated bag. He toted the stuff to a nearby camp, and the miners there promptly voted the freshly-struck site—"Shirttail."

Tin Cup came from a legend of riches about an abundant gold mining camp that was so fully endowed with nature's precious minerals, that men never mined there without obtaining at least a tin cup full of nuggets.

Whiskeytown, in Shasta County, has a rather sodden history. A pack mule, carrying a barrel of whiskey to a mining camp, slipped and fell on the path leading to the place. The barrel of potent mixture dropped into a creek, after shattering on the rocks. The water drinking habits thereabouts must have increased tremendously! Thus Whiskeytown.

You Bet, located in Nevada County, obtained its name from a chivalrous act of an otherwise rowdy and hard bunch of miners. The town originally had a different name, never mentioned because of its obscenity.

An Eastern lady, traveling to the West, had accidentally stopped over in the town, and the men were afraid she wouldn't approve of the unladylike name the town possessed, so they proceeded to change it to a more suitable one.

After much haggling the miners were still undecided as to the name, so the first stranger that came along was asked if he thought the town should be re-dubbed. His answer—You Bet.

TV, Movies, Studies Got You Down? Good Reading Seems To Be The Answer

Television getting a little stale? Studies got you down? Movies bore you? This column, founded in the interests of bigger and better diversion for all hands, has found the answer in a totally unexpected area—the return to good reading.

English instructors have been predicting a trend of the return to literature type since the beginnings of the TV era. It now appears that good reading will provide the all-purpose cure for a multitude of social problems.

However, the literature of the future will not be of the old fashioned, Shakespeare, Hemingway, Mad Comics type. The literature of the future will be informative, instructional, and like all good things of the future will come from Washington, D.C. Perhaps a little explanation of how this monumental discovery came about would be in order.

Your never-sleeping correspondent has built his far-flung espionage system to the point where he has almost as many spies as Winchell and Pearson combined. Last night, while gathering news and leads in such far flung soda fountains as the Opus 1, the Hungry 1, and the Purple Piano, a small, darkly mysterious man approached him at his table and thrust a large envelope into his hands, said, "In the interest of truth," and disappeared once more into the crowd.

Contents of the envelope turned out to be two documents stamped with large red letters "classified", and "top secret". The contents of these documents, formulated in the U.S. Government printing office, are so startling that they are reproduced here with severe misgivings, but are so revealing as to coming intellectual activities in this country that it was thought that their suppression would be a great disservice to our public. This then, is a preview of the literature of tomorrow.

Deflection Characteristics of Residential Wood-Joist Floor Systems. (Sixty-four pages, illustrated, only 40 cents) Of interest to anyone who has ever seen a house. The floor that you or your chair are standing on may be deflecting at this very minute.

Factors Affecting Time of Planting Soybeans in Southern States. (Thirteen pages, illustrated, 10 cents) History and political science majors should look into this. May have been been one of the hidden causes of the civil war.

Fire Endurance of Open-Web Steel-Joist Floors with Concrete Slabs and Gypsum Ceilings. (Seventeen pages, illustrated, 20 cents) This kind of floor apparently doesn't deflect, but it does burn with an enduring flame. Do you smell smoke?

Propagation and Distribution of Food Fishes for the Southern Years 1951-1952. (Thirty-six pages but no pictures, a steal at 20 cents) Especially valuable to anyone who often attends Friday night dinner parties. All kinds of fascinating tables, charts, graphs, and statistics.

The Southern Cornstalk Borer. (Six pages, loaded with pictures five cents) Learn a trade! Big money in cornstalk boring. Copyrighted home-study course guaranteed to have you boring corn stalks in only 6 months.

Table of Dielectric Constants and Electric Dipole Moments of Substances in the Gaseous State. (Twenty-nine pages with tables, 20 cents) We wonder if this has anything to do with that little blonde, Constants Dipole, that used to sit behind us in the third grade.

Graphs of the Compton Energy-Angle Relationship and the Klein-Nishina Formula from 10 KEV to 500 MEV. (89 pages with graphs, 55 cents) You tell us. Maybe it's the science-fiction version of "From Here to Eternity." Any one here from Compton?

Burt the Turtle Says Duck and Cover. (Fourteen pages, all kinds of pictures, five cents) Light reading for the kiddies.

Things are looking up, friends. With these little gems in your back pocket, no longer will you have to stammer and hang your head when the conversation turns to cornstalk boring, wood-joist floors or the Klein-Nishina formula in every-day conversation. Be the life of the party! Start today! And happy reading.

Shots At RAMdom

LEE MERIWETHER, received last week by Argentine President Juan D. Peron in Buenos Aires, is still being chased by a misquote that has followed her since the Miss America crown was placed upon her head in September. In an early interview back East, she was quoted as saying that she went to City College "because it was the cheapest." What she actually said was that she went to school here because "living at home was cheaper."

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Lovely Lee, who is expected back in San Francisco a week from tonight, was the subject of a recent Drew Pearson column in the local press. The well known writer described a press conference between Lee and the newsmen of Lima, Peru. After the first few standard questions, a Peruvian popped up with "What do you think of love?"

A shocked Lee replied, "I just don't know what to say!" The South Americans followed with "What do you think of love at first sight?". This time a chaperone stepped in and said "Since Miss America has had no experience of this type, she really couldn't be expected to answer such a question."

IF COURTYARD conversation shifts to talk of 6½ foot mauve rabbits, temperatures of 178 degrees in San Rafael, flueglehorns and birdcalls, attribute it all to wacky local disc jock Don Sherwood.

A KSFO headliner after only a year there, mimic Sherwood carries on one man discourses with the likes of Nat Cole, Liberace and Mr. Magoo on his early morning and evening shows . . .

In between reports on the King's River inflow at the Pine Flat dam and the complete Pacific weather synopsis he manages to play a few records, interspersed with miscellaneous sound effects. In an interview, more or less, with the United Press last week he said his life's ambition was "to float to Hawaii in a Martini shaker."

SAD STORY SECTION: Consider the case of the student here who jumped in his car last week to make a fast trip down Ocean Avenue for some supplies. Parking in a metered space, he discovered he had no small change for the curb container.

Across the street was a drug store, so over he dashed for some pennies. Waiting to be helped, he looked up in horror to see a cop preparing to tag his errant auto.

Not wanting to be the holder of a dollar-fine ticket, the upset student bounced back across the street, asserting his innocence all the way. Nodding understandingly, the cop said, "Well, in that case we'll overlook the red flag this time," and roared off—after politely handing the fellow a $2 jaywalking citation.

IN THE MIDST of all the complimentary remarks heard about the colorful and efficient inward design of Cloud Hall, there have been heard a few comments about the rather sterile exterior appearance of the new building. Most candid remark came from the instructor who said he thought the structure "looked like a factory . . . but a nice factory."

Russian Escapees

2 USSR Students Inspire Belief In US Heritage

With the advent of the International Relations Club fair, to be held here Thursday and Friday, October 28 and 29, some different and interesting backgrounds take the spotlight. Claudia Volhontseff and Natalie Litoff are two Russian students whose backgrounds bolster appreciation of the American heritage.

Miss Volhontseff was born in Japan and lived there for eight years. When World War II began, her family moved to Shanghai and there she attended a Russian school for six years. In 1949 the Chinese Reds forced them to evacuate, but the International Refugee Organization aided them and five thousand other White Russians to leave China.

As refuge place, the Philippines offered them the island of Samara. After clearing the jungle island they pitched tents and made these teats their homes for two and a half years.

Canned foods and a rare "vegetable treat" was the extent of their diet. The men installed the water pipes and the electricity. A stage was constructed and they put on their own open air shows and had movies also, despite the tropical rains which came intermittently each day.

After applying for permission to enter the United States the Volhontseff's obtained visas in 1952.

Miss Litoff was also born in China and attended a Russian school. At the outbreak of World War II, she and her family were vacationing. Unaware of the war, they were surprised when the Japanese occupied the territory.

For four years they were confined to Shanghai. Every day there was a

Clara Voskanian

Iranian Student Queen-For-Year Contest Entrant

Clara Voskanian, a pretty exchange student here from Iran, is among entrants in the Queen-for-a-Year contest sponsored by the United Nationalities of San Francisco.

United Nationalities of San Francisco is a civic organization consisting of 24 national groups. It was formed in 1950 to commemorate the birth of the United Nations and to promote Americanism.

The Queen-for-a-Year contest, which began September 22, is to raise funds for a United Nations building in San Francisco. Votes, costing ten cents apiece, may be bought from Miss Voskanian in Counsellor Joseph Jacobsen's office in building 3 from 9 to 10 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and from 1 to 3 p.m. on Monday.

Miss Voskanian is a secretarial major in her fifth semester at the college. Her future plans include studying languages at San Francisco State College. Should she win the contest she will be provided with a new Chevrolet convertible, as well as appearances on radio, television and civic functions.

A drawing will be held when the contest closes on December 12, and lucky ticket holders will be eligible for many prizes, including a $100 merchandise order, a $100 savings bond and a round trip airline ticket to Los Angeles.

James Injured As Gridders Win

Line Stars As Klemmermen Hit Fast For 12-0 Second Half Victory Over Los Angeles

By Gail Allan Moss

Angered by an injury to star tackle Jerry James and by their own inability to score, Coach Grover Klemmer's Ram footballers drove to two second-half touchdowns to whip Los Angeles City College, 12-0, on October 15 at Snyder Field in Los Angeles.

James, an All-Big Seven Conference choice last year and a sparkplug in this year's strong line, suffered a broken leg early in the third quarter and will almost certainly be lost for the season.

For the entire first half and the early minutes of the third period the Rams could not score, although most of the action took place in Los Angeles territory. City College's rugged line, led by James and guards Alex Groswird and Willie Hudson, kept both offensive and defensive pressure on the Cubs, but the Ram attack continually sputtered inside the Southerners' 20 yard line.

On the play immediately following the injury to James, the Rami line broke into the Los Angeles backfield and threw punter Bob Menar for a 25 yard loss.

Then, after an exchange of fumbles and a Cub punt, City College took over on its own 25 yard line and in 14 plays drove 75 yards for a touchdown, hard-working fullback Shirlee McCormick going over center from the one yard line for the score. With James, the unerring conversion kicker out of the game, the Rams missed the try for point.

Midway in the fourth quarter the San Franciscans score again when Los Angeles' quarterback Rudy Ramos, with a fourth down and two yards to go situation on his own 25 yard line, sent fullback Dave Perkins over center. The determined Ram forward wall held for no gain and City College took over.

McCormick galloped 24 yards on the first scrimmage play and, after a backfield-in-motion penalty had put the Rams back on the six, left halfback Al Chatman squirmed through the left side of the line for the six pointer. Groswird's conversion attempt was blocked.

The strength and determination of the City College line was reflected in the statistics. Los Angeles gained 117 yards rushing, but lost 106 yards of it right back to the Ram forwards. San Francisco backs lost only three yards.

McCormick provided the main offensive punch for the Rams, netting 81 yards in 14 carries for a 5.8 average, scoring one touchdown and setting up the other. The other backs did nearly as well, accounting for 204 yards to only 48 for Los Angeles, but the linemen of Coaches Alex Schwarz and Roy Burkhead really stole the show.

Center Gus Bagatelos and Hudson were in on a large part of the tackles from their linebacking slots, in addition to moving the Cub linemen on offense. Groswird was described by one Los Angeles forward as "the roughest man I've ever played against," and tackles Ken Orzell, James and Jack Derian all starred.

James will be sorely missed by the Rams. The big right tackle, in addition to being a terror on offense and defense, was among the team's top scorers. His 28 yard run with an intercepted lateral and his ensuing conversion gave City College a tie with Stockton.

Ram Soccer Team Smashes Unbeaten USF Dons, 5-4

A spirited Ram soccer team outplayed and outscored a strong team from the University of San Francisco by a score of 5-4 on October 9. This win was important to the Rams, as a soccer squad from U.S.F. had not been beaten in 56 games, and also puts City College in first place in the California Inter-Collegiate soccer Conference.

Following the game, Coach Roy Diederichsen said, "This is the greatest squad I ever handled."

Center Half Sito Molina put the winning goal through when he shot a 20-yard free kick. The ball hit the goal post and bounced through the net.

Other scorers were Bob Palma, Antonio Quiteño and Cliff Anderson. Everyone who played did a fine job in helping City College to win this most important game.

The following games remain to be played: October 23, San Francisco State; October 30, Stanford; November 10, San Jose State; November 17, Santa Clara.

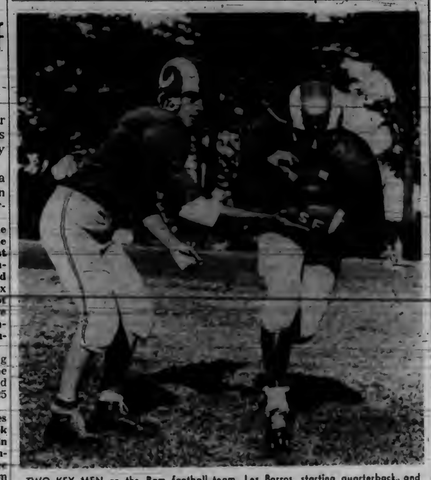
Oliver, Frank Lead Ram, Mustang Tie



In every one of the college's grid tilts this season there has been a distinct honor given to two members of the team. This honor has been well accepted and appreciated by Rich Oliver and Jim Frank who served as co-captains for the Rams in the Stockton encounter.

Doing fine work these men greatly assisted in securing a hard fought 13-13 deadlock from the rugged Stockton eleven.

Both halfback Frank and end Oliver are second-year men at the college. Oliver is an alumnus of Mission High School, where he did outstanding work in his chosen sport.

Frank claims Commerce High as his first high school home, but when the school discontinued operations he transferred to Balboa where he played fine ball in assisting his team to a first division berth.

Frank has had much experience in track also, which has helped enormously in his pigskin game.

Hillsman Enthusiastic Over 1954 Ram Basketball Team

With more than five returning letterman and with three Army veterans coming back, Coach Ralph Hillsman expects his 1954 basketball team to be just as good if not better than his '53 squad which lost to Modesto in the finals after ending the season in a tie for first place.

Three of the reasons why Hillsman expects to take it all this year are, one: Theopolis Dunn, who made second string All-Conference center last year with the Rams; two: returning G.I. Sam Gilepis who played for the great championship team of three years ago and three: Ike Walker, anxious to pick up where he left off only three short years ago.

Add four more names to this list and Hillsman might just have a championship combination. Dave Davis, D. C. Williams, Al Kingston, and Flemen Hardy are all back a year older and wiser.

The Ram basketball squad finished second, in a tie with West Contra Costa, in 1953-54, after a 71-64 loss to the Modesto Pirates, 1953-54's Big Seven Conference Champions.

Although second, with an eight won and four lost record, the Rams were the highest scoring team in the league, netting 810 points in 12 games for an average of 67 points per game. Hillsman's basketball teams have yet to finish lower than second place in the Big Seven Conference standings.

For any man wishing to go out for basketball, there will be a sign-up Thursday, October 28, at 3 p.m. in Room 107 in the men's gymnasium. Practice officially starts November 1, and will continue into December.

Block SF Hosts Sports Speakers

In conjunction with a program of activities now being organized, the college's athletic honor society, Block SF, will, as in the past, have various well known sports personalities act as host and moderator at coming meetings.

Last spring the club was honored with the presence of such sport standouts as Nibs Price, basketball coach, and Clint Evans, baseball coach, of the University of California.

These men preside at the meetings, which take place during college hour on Fridays, and point out highlight action on films which are presented. These coaches and players give tips to the athletes on how to best play their respective sport.

As a part of the business proceedings of the organization, there is a move pending to investigate a new type of block jacket which will set off the college letter holders from the many athletic block owners who often display their awards earned in other institutions. Although it is not the feeling of the Block SF to take away any of the hard earned glory of these athletes, it is felt that there should be something different and unique about a block owner of this college.

threat of bombing so that some would go to work never to return. All lights had to be turned out by 10 p. m., and coupons were required to obtain food. Practically the only food they had was rice. Tea was abundant, but coffee was considered a Sunday delicacy.

In 1949 when the Reds entered China, the Litoffs were waiting for visas to come to the United States. They were fortunate enough to obtain passage on the last boat from Shanghai to the United States. Miss Litoff attended Lowell High School and soon overcame her language difficulties. In 1952 she enrolled here and is a business machine major.

Vets Urged To Form Intramural Teams

Although armed forces veterans are not required to enroll in physical education, they are nevertheless urged to participate in the intramural sports program.

Director Alex Schwarz recently advised all veterans to join together into teams for whatever sport they wish to take part in, and after doing so to sign up at the men's gymnasium with any instructor. Because of his work with the football team, Schwarz must postpone such activities until after the season.

Intramural ping pong will begin Monday in the men's gymnasium, and all students are invited to sign up and be part of the all-round program which is underway here.

Rams, Panthers Meet In Season's First Home Game

City College's Ram gridders, off to a fast start this year, open their home season against a tough Sacramento eleven in a Big Seven Conference game this Friday, October 22, at Balboa Park Stadium at 2:30 p.m.

The Rams will be seeking their first Big Seven victory after gaining a tie with a strong Stockton club two weeks ago. Sacramento drew a bye in the first week of league play, but Coach Jack Mauger's Panthers are expected to field a good, fast club as they have in recent years.

Coach Grover Klemmer's charges edged Sacramento, 19-18, in a thriller last year at Hughes Field in Sacramento, for the first in their string of three narrow-margin victories that carried them to a second place in the Big Seven. Jerry James' conversion proved the margin of victory.

Although the tie with Stockton was not popular with Klemmer or with the Ram players, the squad drew praise from other quarters. Among the admirers was Amos Alonzo Stagg, one of the greatest football coaches of all time and now an advisory coach at Stockton.

Stagg had the highest praise for several of the college's players. Shirlee McCormick, the Ram's hard-running fullback who gained nearly 100 yards against the Mustangs, was the target for many of Stagg's remarks. The former University of Chicago, former College of Pacific Coach thought highly of McCormick's speed and power. The team direction of Les Barros and the rugged play of the Ram line also came in for compliments.

James, incidentally, has yet to miss a conversion this season. He has made good on six straight extra points, with the two misses coming when he did not attempt the kick.

WAA To Elect Officer Friday

Women's Athletic Association members will hold a meeting soon to elect a secretary-treasurer, Esther Phillips, president of the organization here announced recently.

Membership in the WAA now totals 71, Miss Phillips said.

Badminton on Tuesdays at 2:45 p.m. has nine members. They are Joan Anderson, Marilyn Sicotte, Bobbie Elster, Jackie Streiff, Erma Schuetz, Susan Droge, Barbara Bawden, Jenny Owen and Bernice Markee.

Swimming on Tuesdays at 3 p.m. is at the Y.W.C.A. free of charge.

Members are Dolores Mason, Lynn McKown, Mary Jarkich, Mariyn Williamson, Edith VanKlaveren, Jeanette Murphy, Glenda Ortlip, Eden Caramanzana, Nancy Hogan, Carmelita Arroyo, Ida Legan, Adrienne Stender, Barbara Derrigon, Hattie Judkins, Sandra Pillow, Louise Yamaguchi, Katherine Negri, Jean Spencer, Virginia Alton.

Tennis on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 10 a.m. and Friday during college hour has seven members: Diana SooHoo, Honorata Somera, Rose Coussens, Margarta Buxton, Rosetta Kairy, Nabita Shatara, Ann Smith.

Basketball on Wednesdays at 3:45 p.m. has 17 members: Marilyn Sicotte, Pauline Evans, Bertha Thompson, Barbara Jones, Melverdis Lucas, Gayle Tichenor, Jan Digovanni, Violet Dunnings, Yvonne Joubin, Whyorning Robinson, Maxine Branch, Margaret Milburn, Telina Balanon, Carmen Evellano, Peggy de la Torre, Martha Lozar, Irene Vaganas.

Volleyball during college hour on Fridays has 21 members: Mary Dela Rosa; Juanita Hall, Margaret Milburn, Marlon Crandell, Vera Blackburn, Esther Phillips, Beverly Evans, Joanna Gibbons, Marilyn Johnson, Elouise Craig, Geanetta Hardy, Blondell Knichten, Alice Sun, Eloise Marshall, Mildred Williams, Mary Lum, Narcissus Hurst, Gloria Adams, Lue Jean Darton, Joan Warner and Jackie Cooper.

The University of Southern California has lost only two track meets since 1933.

College Activity Pace Slows In Week Of Midterm Exams

By Carolyn Fisher

WITH MEMBERS of campus clubs struggling through midterms this week, activities of organizations seem to be slowing down from the fast pace set off by Club Day last October 8.

Alpha Phi Epsilon is preparing for a dance to be held on November 12. This semester's officers are Emmett Thompson, president, James Lynch, vice-president, Lawrence Lowe, parliamentarian, and Lionel Jackson, treasurer.

Officers of Alpha Phi Omega, Iota Pi chapter of the national service fraternity are Ralph Libby, president; Jack Frost, vice-president; Alex Argo, secretary; Al Tanner, treasurer; Bob Kelleher, historian.

The first affair of Beta Tau was October 17, a picnic at Tilden Park. The Dolphin Club will set the scene for the second ruahf affair, a banquet, with service by the Theta Taus. Officers are John LoCoco, president; Al Batton, vice-president; Phil Gaal, secretary; Vince Camps, corresponding secretary; Oscar Vogel, historian; Ron Fraser, morale builder.

The Beta Tau Orchid award winner will be announced soon. This award is presented to a non-certified woman staff member, chosen by fraternity members for outstanding service to the college and the students.

A skating party on November 5 at the Oakland Skating Rink is being planned by the Chinese Students Club. This semester's officers are: president, Jack Hong; vice-president, Barbara Fong; secretary, Shirley Lum; treasurer, Nancy Wong; social chairman, Tong Lew, and CAB representative, Diane Soo Hoo.

Collegiate Christian Fellowship is tentatively planning a social gathering with State College or the University of California. Burt Brink is CCF president; Victor Medeare, vice-president; Shirley Secrest, secretary, and Amy Lee, CAB representative.

President this semester of Kappa Rho is Dick Vega.

Officers elected in the United Students Association recently are: Bob Burmeister, president; John Adams, vice-president; Bob McNaught, secretary, and Luke Distler, treasurer.

Ramporium, Campus Bookstore, Has All Required Texts Plus A Variety Of College Supplies, Study Helps

Other than the necessary books and supplies, The Ramporioum, student bookstore located in Building 12 on the west campus, carries a complete selection of Barnes and Noble College Outline series, verb wheels, pocket literature, gymnasium gear, locks pens, pencils, official rings and pins of the college and stationery besides hundreds of other items.

Since last semester the Ramporium has added the Anchor pocket books to the already large selection of student aids. The Anchor series, off the presses only this month, will be on the Ramporium shelves within a few weeks, Dick Main, Ramporium manager, said here. This new series, according to Main, will contain 18 books dealing with best literature of our times.

Main said that the Ramporium will try to handle anything that will help to improve student grades or that seems to be helpful in any particular study.

Already the Ramporium carries Vis-Ed vocabulary cards in all the languages taught at the college. The Vis-Ed cards are flash cards with both languages, English on one side and the language that is being studied on the other side. Main said these cards helped many students last semester and should do the same this semester.

Besides academic aids, the Ramporium carries relaxation helps such as magazine subscriptions at a reduced rate to students, and until last Wednesday carried the Sports Sampler which contained $79.50 worth of entertainment for only $4.00, Main stated.

For the convenience of students here, Main added, the Ramporium has for student use a paper cutter and three hole adjustable paper punch besides back issues of some magazines which may be dismantled by students for projects, assignments or just something to do.

Eventually the Ramporium will move to the Student Union, which is now well under construction on the hill next to the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

No-Smoking Regulations Observed By Students

Students, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management, have been for the most part observing the "no smoking" building regulations effective both in the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

"No smoking is the only building regulation of consequence," Anderson observed, "because all students should take it for granted that there is to be no eating in the buildings."

Anderson stressed the fact that students should make more of an effort to keep the court between the Science Building and Cloud Hall free of papers.

Bonfire Rally Sets Off Biggest Homecoming

With a bonfire rally and Alumni Association dinner Thursday, November 4, the "little big game" against San Mateo on Friday, November 5, and the annual AMS-AWS homecoming dance the same night, this year's Homecoming Week promises to be the biggest celebration in the 19-year history of the college, according to Al Kingston, Associated Men Students president here.

The finalists in the Homecoming Queen contest will be chosen today and will be announced Tuesday, October 25. Finalists will ride in the auto caravan welcoming Lee Meriwether, Miss America 1955, back to San Francisco. Judging of finalists will be Thursday, October 28, with the Homecoming Queen crowned at the alumni dinner, Kingston said.

The bonfire rally will take place in the west campus parking lot, near Building 13, from 7 to 8 o'clock, with music provided by a local orchestra, Kingston said.

Following the rally there will be the Alumni Association dinner in the college cafeteria, Building 14. Past presidents of the Associated Students will be honored. President Emeritus Archibald J. Cloud and President Louis G. Conlan will attend the dinner, and guest of honor will be Mrs. Ethyl Meriwether.

Members of the San Francisco 49ers football team will speak, and game movies will be shown. Tickets to the dinner may be purchased from Kingston for $2.25.

At 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, November 5, the Ram will battle the Bulldog, the college's traditional rival at Balboa Park Stadium, to keep the symbol of this rivalry, the perpetual "tom-tom" trophy, and to add another victory to the series which stands at 10-5, with the Ram football team leading. The game is free to members of the Associated Students and 50 cents for non-members.

Following the game at 8 o'clock that night the annual AMS-AWS homecoming dance will be held at the Surf Club. Gilbert Ray combo will provide music for the affair. Tickets to the dance are $1 for AS card holders and $1.50 for those without cards. Tickets may be purchased at the student bank in the Science Building.

DEAN EDWIN BROWNE'S office is graced by the presence of Buffie-scholar, office worker, delivery girl, dog.

Canine Life Not So Bad According To Browne's Dog

By Therese Brychta

A part-time employee in the office of Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, this semester, is a golden-haired toy cocker spaniel named "Buffie."

An able assistant to the Dean, "Buffie" maintains a file drawer in the office which bears her name. No ordinary dog, she has, for three semesters past, carried parking permit cards from the Dean's office to the parking area below and back again, without misplacing a single one.

Being a lady of sound financial circumstance, she seeks, rather than monetary gain, those rare delicacies of dogdom known as dog biscuits for her reward. These are kept in a coffee can also bearing her name.

During her off-duty hours, "Buffie" resides at the home of Dean and Mrs. Browne in Orinda, California, where she spends her time helping around the house. Delivering the paper and mail to her master and mistress and replacing shoes in their proper places are all things which make a dog's life a good life.

Scholastically, she is learning to understand Spanish and if the proper inspiration is offered, she can even comprehend Chinese.

"Buffie's" life, however, was not always so happy and carefree. She mourned once for her former master, who had as his home a Japanese prison camp throughout a large portion of the war.

During this period of near starvation, he was befriended by a Turkish girl who smuggled food to him. At the war's end, they were married and came back to the United States. Not being able to keep a dog at their residence, she was given to his friend, Dean Browne who has obviously taken good care of her.

Publicity Group Sets Deadline

Organizations planning activities and interested in assistance from the Publicity Committee were advised yesterday to inform Don Osborne, chairman of the committee, in Room 345 of the Science Building. Details of the activity, Osborne said, must be submitted at least two weeks prior to the event.

The committee, which has 14 members, was established to publicize internal and external affairs and to handle press releases to the city papers. The committee meets every Tuesday at 11 o'clock in Room 345 in the Science Building.

Artists in commercial art classes work with the committee drawing signs and posters for the coming events sponsored by campus groups and organizations.

Fraternity Cancels Dance On October 22

Cancellation of the Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity dance, originally scheduled for Friday, October 22, was announced here last week by Ken Feldin, the fraternity's president.

Plans had been made to hold the dance after the Sacramento - Ram football game, Feldin said.

College Library Seats 625, Offers Eight Hour Daily Service; Stacks Hold 45,000 Volumes

Considered one of the finest in the state is the college's library with its 45,000 volumes and seating capacity of 625, Clement Skrabak, library staff member stated recently.

Formerly in the Science Building, the new library offers eight and a-half hours of service from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. every college day. As in the past the library subscribes to 350 periodicals and allows students two weeks for the borrowing of books. The reserve books are for one or two hour use and for overnight or weekend use after 2 p.m.

As is not the rule in many libraries, students may and are urged to browse in the stacks behind the loan desk for as is sometimes the case, the necessary book cannot be obtained by reading the material on a reference card in the card catalog.

Pamphlets and college catalogs are filed alphabetically by subject in the reference reading room. Normally the pamphlets may be taken for night use only but in certain cases they may be kept longer.

Unbound magazines, which may be borrowed for overnight use, are shelved alphabetically by title in the periodical room. Bound volumes of magazines are found in the reserve reading room and are for library use only.

For journalism enthusiasts and students who like to keep up to date, newspapers are provided in the periodical room. Current issues are displayed on newspaper racks, while back issues are filed.

In keeping with the many modern facilities which the library offers, there is also a phonograph with earphones and records for student use within the library. It is located in the northeast corner of the reserve reading room.

Fines are imposed on late return of books; five cents a day on two-week books, and five cents an hour or fifty cents a day on reserve overnight books.

The library offers quite a variety of reading matter, a list of new books being posted on the bulletin board at the right of the main desk. This reading material covers wide and varied fields from arts and crafts, machine tools and the atom to surveying, cooking, health and even physical therapy.

AS Publications Need Student Board's Check

Distribution of any printed matter on the campus other than official publications must be approved by the Publications Board, board chairman Gail Allan Moss warned yesterday. This rule also applies to posters put up on the west campus.

Other members, appointed by Moss, are Bill Boldenweck, Associated Student president; Patty Mascarelli, AS vice-president; John Lococo, AS finance chairman, and Deane Wylie, Managing Editor of The Guardsman. Printed matter may be submitted to Moss in The Guardsman office for board approval.

Housing For Men Available Soon

Available for occupancy very soon are six units of housing for men students of the college, located half a mile from the college, according to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men here.

Each unit will have two housekeeping rooms consisting of a living room and kitchen, both complete.

Rent for this housing is $25 a month for one man, and $50 a month for two men. Linen and utensils are not supplied, but furniture and other utilities are included with the rooms.

When available, these apartments will be listed in Dean Browne's office, in Building 2, west campus. Applications must be obtained from him and presented to him in the office.

Office of the Dean of Men is closed from 11 a.m. to 12 noon daily.

Men's Glee Club Sings Friday

Members of the Men's Glee Club will sing for the Richmond division of the Order of De Molay this Friday during the ritual of the conferring of the Chevalier Degree, Director Robert Morton said yesterday.

Meanwhile, officers of the A Cappella Choir were elected on October 7. Elemen Hardy became manager; Ray Murillo was elected assistant manager; Connie Bondoc, secretary-treasurer; T. Eric Hansen and Theodora Laves, librarians; Henry Boyce, concert manager; Esther Johnson and Elijah Hall, property manager; Jo Anne Bedell, publicity manager, and Barbara Jones, Club Activities Board representative.

Ushering Passes Available Now

Students here who are interested in ushering at the many San Francisco Opera House performances are urged to obtain passes one week in advance from Dean Mary F. Golding at her office in Building 2, west campus.

In return for their services, ushers can enjoy the performance which are held at the Opera House, and sometimes at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium and Civic Auditorium, according to Dean Golding.

Ushering passes are by no means limited to women students, she added.

Honor Society Prepares Reception For Alpha Gamma Sigma Initiates

At the initial meeting here last Friday of Omega chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, two-year college honor society, committees were organized to assist in preparations of social activities planned for the remainder of this semester.

Discussion centered mainly around plans for a reception honoring new members. Invitations for the traditional affair will be sent from the office of President Louis G. Conlan, Don Jensen, faculty adviser to the group, said.

A definite date and place for the reception will be decided upon at the next meeting of AGS soon.

Jensen urged at the meeting that all students who thing they have met AGS eligibility requirements to check with him in the Building 3 counseling offices, west campus, as soon as possible.

Honor society requirements are 30 grade points in a minimum of 12 units of work in any semester, physical education excluded, with no grade lower than "C" and a 2.0 grade average. Gold seal bearers from high schools are invited for membership on a temporary basis.

In figuring out grade averages, the number of units a course is valued at is multiplied by the final grade received in the course. A final grade "A" in a three-unit course yields nine grade points, a "B" in the same course six grade points and a "C" would yield three points.

By totaling final grade points from all classes and then dividing this number by the number of units carried in a semester, final grade point average will be found.

Among the many benefits offered to members of the society are low registration numbers for the following semester. Low numbers allow honor students to register ahead of the registration day "rush" before classes are filled.

Lee Lands International Tonight, Due Here For Reception Tomorrow

Beauty Queen Returns For Four-Day Visit

Lee Meriwether, whose name was entered in a local beauty contest last spring before she was aware of it, returns to San Francisco this evening after a rapid climb to fame.

She took titles of Miss San Francisco in May, Miss California at Santa Cruz in June and, in a packed Atlantic City convention hall September 11, topped country-wide competition for the coveted Miss America crown.

The 19-year old beauty, an Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society student here last semester, returns for four days of home-town welcome before departing again on travels which have already taken her to most of the Eastern United States, through many of the countries of South America and which will continue for the remainder of her year's reign as the country's queen of beauty and talent.

In a telephone interview with The Guardsman last week from Detroit Lee expressed her delight at coming home, saying that "it's just wonderful to return," the short period of time since her crowning stretched by constant public pressure and appearances.

Brief as the conversation was, she found time to extend an enthusiastic "Hi!" to all her City College friends and say that she missed them a great deal.

Two weeks of travel in South America she described as "very interesting," and that meeting Argentine President Juan D. Peron "was a great thrill."

Already frequently seen on nation-wide television shows, she says she's "excited over the play that the Philco Television playhouse is writing just for me." As yet untitled, the special presentation will be shown on December 26.

With the large scholarship awarded with the Miss America title, she hopes to work for a Master's degree at the Pasadena Playhouse, but has voiced her wishes to return to City College for an additional year's credit before attending the well known Southern California theater school.

At present the Meriwether home on Portola Drive is filled with hundreds of letters, telegrams and pictures, testimony to the impression she has left with all of beauty, talent, charm and poise. The several thousand students who will gather here tomorrow to honor her will add to the many plaudits she has received wherever she has been, in acceptance of this lovely Miss America of 1955.

PAGEANT PROGRAM SALE

Original programs direct from last month's Miss America pageant in Atlantic City were placed on sale here last Monday, containing a special City College insert with pictures of San Francisco's 1955 Miss America, Lee Meriwether.

Program distribution is being handled by the Associated Students, who said yesterday that a limited number were still available.

Sold at cost price by the AS, copies may be obtained for 50 cents in the AS Building 2 office, at the Ramporium or in the Bank in the Science Building.

Programs will also be sold, AS spokesmen said, at the 9 a.m. rally Thursday in the area immediately east of Cloud Hall.

Special Rally Tomorrow To Introduce Queen Contestants

Contestants for Homecoming Queen will be introduced at a rally tomorrow, held in honor of Lee Meriwether, Al Kingston, Associated Men Students president, announced yesterday.

Judging of the contestants will be held in the west wing of the Cloud Hall library, Kingston said. The winner will be chosen by a three person board including John Palmer, owner of the Riviera Shop, which will supply a complete new outfit for the Homecoming Queen, he commented.

A rally will be held in the west campus auditorium at 2 p.m. Thursday, November 4, according to Kingston. Cal Tjader's mambo band will supply entertainment, and the queen contestants will appear.

One of the following will be crowned at the Alumni Association dinner Thursday, November 4. Dolores Bolton, Anne Canellos, Jessie Dawson, Nina Flood, Jane Lutt, Jann Palmer, Pat Quiek, Bev Swope, Gayle Tichenor, Diana Williams or Judy Wilson.

The dinner will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the college cafeteria in Building 14, Kingston stated, and will honor past presidents of the Associated Students, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, Archibald J. Cloud, president-emeritus and Mrs. Ethyl Meriwether will be present as guests of the college.

Art Michalik and Don Burke, members of the 49ers professional football team will appear, Kingston commented, and professional game movies will be shown.

Tickets to the dinner are $2.25, and may be purchased from Kingston.

Other Homecoming activities include a pre-game pageant before the Rams play San Mateo at Balboa Park Stadium, Friday, November 5.

Following the game will be a Homecoming dance from 9 p.m. to 12 m. at the Surf Club, according to Kingston, which will feature the music of Gilbert Ray. AS members will be admitted free, and non-members will be charged $1.50, he said.

Tickets will be on sale at the student bank, in the AS office and may be bought from designated ticket sellers on campus.

Pre-registration Begins Monday

Because of the probable high number of students returning here next semester, appointments for pre-registration counseling, scheduled to begin on Monday, November 1, should be made as soon as possible, Alva McMillan, counsellor here, announced last week.

Appointments, he added, should be made in the counselling office in Building 3, west campus at any time.

Priority in registration is established by the pre-registration number, stamped on the student's programs, which means that the sooner the appointment is made, the lower the registration number.

Loss of programs will result in higher numbers, McMillan warned, because registration time is stamped by machine.

Members of Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society receive first priority.

'51 Livestock Film Will Show Friday

All students are invited to attend a moving picture to be shown in the Science Building in Room 136, during college hour, Friday, October 29, Madison Devlin, audio-visual-aids instructor here announced yesterday.

The film will be a camera record of the 1951 Junior Grand National Livestock Show, held at the Cow Palace, he said.

Classes Cut For 9 a.m. Rally; Civic Parade, Palace Luncheon Mark Miss America Welcome

By Deane Wylie

Miss America comes home tonight!

Screaming sirens of a City police escort will lead a 30-car caravan to San Francisco's new International Airport this evening to welcome Lee Meriwether as she steps off her special United Airlines plane at 7:40 p. m.

The ex-City College coed will be met at the airfield by a committee headed by San Francisco Supervisor Eugene McAteer, and will include Carl Boller, president of the City's Junior Chamber of Commerce and acting San Francisco Mayor Bryon Arnold.

Representatives from City College will be Bill Boldenweck, Associated Student president; Patty Mascarelli, AS vice president; Al Kingston, Associated Men Student president; Lafayette Jamerson, Lawrence Lowe, Pat Smith and Dean of Student Activities Louis Batmale.

An honor guard of Junior Chamber members will escort Miss America from the plane to the waiting autos, 13 of which will be from the college, San Francisco's municipal band will play.

Tomorrow morning an invitation-only breakfast in the college cafeteria will honor her, followed by a rally at 9 a.m. in the area east of Cloud Hall.

All 9 a.m. classes here will be dismissed, according to Batmale, so that students may attend the ceremony. Scheduled to speak at the rally are Batmale, Boldenweck, McAteer and Lee herself.

A Civic Center reception will be the start of a downtown parade, which will proceed down Market Street and through the financial district and terminate at the Palace Hotel, where a 1000-place luncheon will start at noon.

California Governor Goodwin J. Knight, Arnold, Boller, Bradford Frapart, Lee's business manager and Mrs. Lenora Slaughter, executive director of the Miss America pageant will be honored guests at the banquet, where Lee will receive from the city a diamond-studded gold key on a chain and a gift from the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

From the Palace she'll go to visit at the Shrine Hospital and from there to a Washington High School football game. Friday will find her at Aptos Junior High School and West Portal Elementary School, where her home-town visit will end.

Students, Faculty Meet In Coffee Hour This Friday

Free coffee and cookies will be served during the semi-annual student-faculty coffee hour to be held this Friday in the student lounge of Building 2 during college hour, Henry D. Soule, chairman of the faculty-student relations committee, announced yesterday.

This will be the seventh in a semi-annual series of coffee hours that afford both student and faculty members the opportunity to mix socially outside of the classrooms, Soule said.

Sponsored by the college's Faculty Association, the coffee hour will begin at 10:30 and end 11:20 a.m. Friday. All faculty members and students, Soule said, are invited to attend.

Assisting Soule on the committee are Mary Golding, dean of women; Helen Huffman, counsellor; Donald Jensen, counsellor, and advisor to Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society; Walter McCloud, counsellor; Harold Miller, engineering instructor; William Pietsch, accounting instructor; Anka Perisich, business education instructor, and Thomas Wilson, physical education instructor.

Edward Larson is president of the Faculty Association this year. Other officers of the association are Vice-President, John O. French, business education instructor; Secretary, Lucille Meredith, English instructor; and Treasurer, Elmer Patterson, economics. The executive committee consist of George Gould, botany instructor; George Hutchins, physics instructor; and Valerie Phillips chemistry instructor.

Student Union Completion Due In April; Dedication Planned For Fall '55

Completion of the college's newest building, the sprawling, $700,000 Student Union structure located at the corner of Phelan Avenue at Ocean, to the south of the Science Building, will be realized sometime in April of 1955, the office of the president announced recently.

Plans for the dedication and opening of the building are tentatively set for early in the Fall of next year.

The building, which was described by Dr. Louis G. Conlan as being able to handle the college's entire program of social activities and student meals, the hotel and restaurant division, and student government offices and affairs, will be of single story construction and will be 27,000 square feet in area.

The great necessity of the new addition to the college's campus was stressed by Dr. Conlan, who remarked, "The Student Union will be one of the most extensively used installations on our campus."

In the building will be located the student store, the dean of student activities office, student government offices, the hotel and restaurant division, a large dining room capable of accommodating 350 students at one time and designed to be used also for social activities, a coffee shop and soda fountain which adjoins the main dining room, and a faculty dining room which may also be used for student activities.

The new Student Union will give the hotel and restaurant division a kitchen three times as large as the one that is now used and will provide for the scheduling of four different food preparation laboratories at the same time.

Students Prepare For Lee's Return To Campus Tomorrow

CITY COLLEGE's conquering heroine, Miss America of 1955, returns home today and a large part of San Francisco will be on hand to welcome her.

To go into the Cinderella story of Lee Meriwether who, in a few short months, was changed from a typical and unknown college girl to the most heralded beauty outside of Hollywood, would be repeating a tale that most Americans and certainly all San Franciscans know by heart.

It is sufficient to say, then, that in the short time since Lee left us she has been showered with movie contract offers, been heard and seen on national radio and television, toured most of the Western Hemisphere and been praised, idolized and adored by men and women alike all over the United States.

Now, after too long a period, Lee is finally returning to San Francisco. Her rigid schedule will permit only a few days in the city and only a few hours on the college campus. We're sure that she would like to spend much more time with her friends here, but being Miss America is hard work.

Lovely Lee is as fine a goodwill ambassador as anyone could ask for, not only for San Francisco but for the City College of San Francisco, and deeper that that she is loved by every citizen of the city and more especially by every student on campus.

We're sure that Lee, during her reign, will think of us often, and whenever she's acclaimed, which will be frequently, we of the college will point to her with pardonable pride and cheer the loudest of her vast rooting section. And our next chance will be tomorrow.

Welcome home, Miss America!

James Injury In Los Angeles Game Inspires Further Team Spirit

THE TEAM spirit and loyalty of the City College athletic teams has been obvious to all but the casual observer in the past, but one of the finest and most heartwarming examples of these characteristics occurred during and after the football game in Los Angeles last week.

Jerry James, a star tackle for the Rams both last year and this, suffered a double leg fracture midway in the college's game with Los Angeles City College.

Engaged in a scoreless deadlock until that time, the Ram players drove to two touchdowns and made no secret of the fact that they were angered by the injury and were out to "win it for Jerry."

The aforementioned loyalty did not stop there. For the remainder of the evening and all of the next day the reporter covering the game didn't get any of the customary joking "put my name in the paper" pleas. Instead he was beseeched by almost every player on the squad to "give Jerry a good plug in your story."

It was decided that not all of the players should visit James in the hospital, since 40 men would be too much of a crowd. Asking for volunteers was hopeless, since everyone wanted to go, and the ones who were finally selected were as happy as children with a new toy.

All of the concern was not directed at James, however. The first thing that Jerry wanted to know at the hospital was how the game came out and who filled his right tackle position. He was, of course, pleased with the results, and his reaction to the naming of his replacement, Jack Derian, was "That's swell. He's a good ballplayer."

The final gesture of the day came when Coach Grover Klemmer voiced the opinion of the entire club by nominating James as an honorary co-captain for the season.

One final and lasting tribute is, we're sure, still to come. Each time that the Rams win a game this season, and it will be often, each player will think for a moment "That's another one for Jerry."

Melodramatic as that may sound, we're sure that that's the way it will be, and it is a great tribute to the popularity and spirit of Jerry James and the friendship and loyalty of the team members for one another. We add our fervent hope to that of the football team and the student body that Jerry will be back with us again in the very near future.

The Spectator

Crown Publishers in New York City have, really come up with quite a universal little book—written in hilarious German-American dialect that can be understood by persons who haven't the remotest idea of the German language speaking mechanisms.

The author is a mystery. He signs his name with initials, K.M.S.—no more, no less.

He covers a variety of subjects—anywhere from food to operas, and after reading one of his comically distorted verse-versions of opera, it's doubtful whether you can ever watch another performance with a straight face.

K.M.S. had only one thought in mind when he wrote this humorous book of verses—to make his readers smile, and that he does very effectively. Take for example this little gem:

"Der Meyer plays die Clarinet Bei uns mit in der Band. He's always tooteling around or fooling mit his Shtand. Und v'en our leader lifts his Shtick und we're subbosed to play denn Meyer shpits upon his reed und says Giff me vonce A."

Here's another sample for you to work on—

"'S war der Day after Christmas. All over im Haus gab's papers und boxes—a sign jetzt ist's aus. Und die Mama sagt, 'Papa, 's gibt turkey for lunch.' Und der papa repleit, 'Ja, ich hatt' so a hunch'. Und die Mama sagt 'Papa, da hast du den broom. Tu die frontroom. Unn denn kannst du startch die dishes zu drein wo im dishwasher immer noch aufgestached sein."

That's only a sample of what's in store for you when you pick up this unnusual book of "Hossenfefer" verses.

Oooops—almost forgot—the title is Die Allersbonste Lengevitch.

The book sells for $3. Try reading it—you'll never stop laughing.

Snack Bar Pleasant Student Retreat

As welcome to the college student as it is to the truck driver and office worker is that wonderful American institution, the coffee-break.

On their "off-hours" many of the students visit the combination study hall and snack bar located on the basement level of the Science Building. The snack bar, operated by students in the Hotel Division, is visited daily by hundreds of students who gather there to have lunch, study or just visit their friends.

Students may purchase coffee, sandwiches, doughnuts, pie or cake here at reasonable prices. These items are offered for sale throughout a major part of the day.

The snack bar operates on a cafeteria-style basis, whereby the students form a line to purchase their food, and are responsible for the disposal of their paper cups and dishes when they are through eating.

In Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, the first four notes, three short and one long, are the morse code symbol for "V." People have long associated the composition with man's victory over his struggles.

Betty Arnold Wins Beta Tau Orchid Award

By Bev Swope

Words of praise for her constant, patient smile and her hard-working conscientiousness won Betty Arnold, secretary in the Veterans Affairs office, the Beta Tau Orchid Award today.

No one is more deserving of the award, Robin Dunn, assistant to the coordinator of the Veterans' Affairs Office, remarked recently, since she is an invaluable helper.

Born in Sweden, Miss Arnold came to the United States as a child and entered the Mountain View Grammar School. She was graduated from Burlingame High School and afterwards attended Pacific Union College.

Although she has worked for the city of San Francisco since 1940, Miss Arnold did not enter the public education department until 1951. At this time she became a part-time instructor at the Visitacion Valley School.

After gaining teaching experience in the grammar school, Miss Arnold taught full-time classes at James Denman Junior High School.

As an indispensable member of the Veterans' Affairs office, she helps to solve the major and minor problems of the college's 900 veterans.

The Beta Tau award has been presented twice before by the fraternity. Alice G. Thornton, counter girl in the college's cafeteria, was the first recipient of the purple orchid. The second deserving woman to receive the award was Uriel Furlong, secretary to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men.

The Beta Tau Orchid Award will again be presented next month to another deserving woman of the college's non-certificated (non-teaching) staff, whom the members of the fraternity consider worthy of the award. Recipients are selected on merit of service rendered to the college, and for personality.

Any student or member of the faculty who would like to suggest a nominee may do so by informing a member of the fraternity.

Shots At RAMdom

CITIZENS STEEPED in San Franciscana have been aghast over the announcement from the Sheraton Hotel people that the historic old Palace Hotel will soon be renamed the Sheraton-Palace. As evidence, the history instructor here who remarked that the act would be like calling another famous hostelry the "Swig-Fairmont." No affront to that latter gentleman, who has been causing some comment himself with his plan to top the Top of the Mark.

ABSENT SLIP-APPLICANTS in the Dean of Men's office the other morning wondered at the flustered appearance of Uriel Furlong. Even Edwin C. Browne's usually well-composed secretary. Seems she had jotted an appointment on her desk calendar the week before for the following week, only to find a few days later the same appointment noted on about ten calendar pages.

Deep mystery as to who did the dirty work until the prankster was caught in the act of doctoring the same calendar next day, writing "wedding" in front of a reminder to buy a cake. Name of the calendar culprit shall go untold, so as not to embarrass Dean Browne.

FROM UCLA comes this tale of a coed with a rather bizarre sense of humor: When her sorority sisters decided that on a certain evening recently each house member had to appear at the dinner table wearing a home-made hat, this original miss fashioned an arty array of flowers and ribbon on a small straw hat, and topped it off by coiling around it a boa constrictor, borrowed from a student who must have had an in with Griffith Park.

This unusual creation was received in the dining room with something less than admiring approval. When collective tranquility had returned to the house, a quick straw-hat vote was taken and the members agreed to exempt the girl from the head-piece clause . . . under the table rumors had it that the coed-character was really a boan practical joker.

And the "Shots" contributor who suggested that this whole episode be entitled "She That Her New Bonnet With a Pretty Green Boa" is no longer with the staff.

ADVANCING ALUMNI: Dramatic talent in two graduates was commented on here last week, in one expected and in the other not so. Dean Cyr, star of many Little Theater presentations here in the past few semesters, received top notices for his starring performance in the Honolulu Community Theater's production Teahouse Of The August Moon, landing the part just two weeks after stepping off the plane in Hawaii.

On the distaff, it was revealed here last week that Alberta Cordini, last semester's ebullient AS vice-president, is rising in Berkeley dramatic circles, having cornered the part of a "chanting angel" in a forthcoming Cal epic. Much above the singing kind, no doubt.

SKOSHI Red Riding Hood were a little girl, all time wear red parka so that's how come she catchee name. One day mama-san speakee, "Skoshi Red Riding Hood, granma-san feelee no good. Sampan Stand-In From Nippon Relates Trials, Terror Of Legendary Heroine

Correction

In last week's issue of The Guardsman there appeared a story about two students participating in the International Relation Club's Fair. Both are of Russian parentage.

Claudia Volhontseff and Natalie Titoff were born in Japan and China, respectively. A Guardsman headline was in error in indicating that they were students from the USSR. Both students are of White Russian heritage and have never been in Russia.

Another headline error occurred in the same issue. In a story concerning Clara Voskanian, a contestant in the United Nationalities of San Francisco's Queen-for-a-Year contest, the Guardsman mistakenly referred to her as an Iranian student. Miss Voskanian is of Armenian descent.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

WHILE in the armed services, head football coach Grover Klemmer played service football under the coaching of Paul Brown, the head coach of the Cleveland Browns. Klemmer, who became part of the Ram coaching staff in 1946, bases the college's offense after that of the Cleveland Browns.

Aside from the quarterback, the key man in the backfield is the fullback, in the majority of football teams today, as he usually carries the ball more times and gains more yardage than any other back on the team.

The "bread and butter" play of the Rams is a pitch-out to the fullback on a run through tackle or around end. This particular play has reaped many dividends in terms of yardage for the Rams, for Shirlee McCormick, the fullback for the college grid team, has netted 264 yards in the last three games. A similar play, featuring a pitchout to Marion Motley, their star fullback, is used by the Cleveland Browns.

In a recent issue of "Sports Illustrated," the policy employed by Roger Bannister, the great British miler, in training to run the mile in four minutes or less is revealed. Under the direction of Dr. Cureton, director of the Physical Fitness Laboratory at University of Illinois, Bannister would practice to the point of collapse.

An athlete's success is vitally affected by his circulatory system, which transports oxygen along the blood stream to the body cells. By exercising to the full limit of his powers, an athlete keeps a large quantity of blood in his blood vessels and keeps them from thickening. When the vessels thicken, in a process called artiosclerosis, the flow of blood and vital oxygen to the athlete's cells is lessened, and consequently, the athlete has slower reactions and becomes fatigued more easily.

By continually training to the point of collapse five days a week, Bannister heightened his exhaustion point and developed higher performance peaks, peaks which were surpassed and in the other not so. Dean Cyr, star of many Little Theater presentations here in the past few semesters, received top notices for his starring performance in the Honolulu Community Theater's production Teahouse Of The August Moon, landing the part just two weeks after stepping off the plane in Hawaii.

Bannister's heart, as examined by Dr. Cureton, is 25 per cent larger than normal in relation to his body size and beats 50 times a minute, as compared to the layman's heart, which beats anywhere between 70 and 80 times a minute.

Dr. Cureton's theory of practicing to the point of physical exhaustion may revolutionize athletic training practices, particularly in sports where endurance and stamina are major factors.

With co-captains Alex Groswird and Don Baroni leading the Rams to a 12-0 conquest in the Los Angeles encounter, the college's grid squad again displayed the talents that have brought it into the high ranks of the Big Seven Conference. Groswird and Baroni have shown once more that having capable co-captains is one of the deep-rooted factors in moiding the fortunes of any good team.

Both Groswird and Baroni are veteran team members, Groswird having played his first year of Ram ball in 1950 after which he entered the service.

After graduating from Sacred Heart in 1953 Baroni selected City College to further his higher learning and to exhibit his football prowess. As a defensive halfback and offensive end Baroni fared well as a pigskin performer in his high school days. Not to be outdone by past showings, he has improved much since then, skillfully progressing in his football duties of late and gradually shaping into a fine ball player, Coach Grover Klemmer has noted.

Groswird also played as a tackle for the Irish in high school. Although he has switched to the guard position in college, this has in no way deterred his ability as a footballer since he is considered one of the steadiest and most capable members of the college squad.

Although Groswird is a carpenter at the present time, he is studying industrial arts and physical education here and hopes to teach those subjects when his education is completed.

Powerful Rams Meet Four Time Loser Modesto There This Friday; Loss Of Tackle James May Hurt

Crippled by the loss of star tackle and place kicker Jerry James, the Ram grid team opposes the Modesto Pirates tomorrow night at 8 p.m. at Modesto, in their third Big Seven Conference game.

Modesto's Pirates, which were a strong threat in the Big Seven Conference last year, have yet to show their '53 form this season with four losses and one tie in their first five games. Of these four losses, two have been by one point, to the Long Beach Vikings and the Santa Rosa Bearcubs. Another loss, to El Camino, was by one touchdown.

Head coach Stan Pavko's charges have a record of one loss and one tie, a 14-14 affair with Stockton, in Big Seven Conference play thus far.

Under the field generalship of quarterback Les Barros, the Rams will pit a strong passing attack and potent running game against the Pirates. In return, Modesto will center its offense around the nucleus of their backfield and fullback Gene Peterson who has sparked the Pirates so far.

Last season, the Rams capped a late season drive which landed them in second place by defeating the Modesto Pirates 24-21 to stay in the first division.

In the first four games this season, including the game with Los Angeles City College, the Rams have annexed 1189 yards in total offense. The leader in the rushing department has been Shirlee McCormick, who has netted 1299 yards. Les Barros leads in passing with 289 yards in 58 attempts for an average of 5.1 yards per pass.

Basketball Signup Starts Tomorrow

Basketball tryouts will open tomorrow at 3:15 p.m. in Room 107 when head basketball coach Ralph Hillsman will conduct a signup for students wanting to try out for the college team.

Never at City College has a Hillsman-coached basketball squad finished lower than second place in the Big Seven Conference. Coach Hillsman, when asked about the Ram's chances in the 1954-55 hoop season, replied, "I'm optimistic. We have a good nucleus and a good representative team from what I've seen so far."

This year's basketball conference will include another member, a team from the newly opened Oakland Junior College. Head basketball coach at Oakland is Bill Rockwell, an ex-basketball star from St. Mary's College.

Oakland has yet to select a nickname for its athletic teams.

Sharp Line Play, Improved Attack Top The Panthers

By Bob Chrisman

Once again the Ram football team pulled out a win in the last ten minutes of play as they defeated the Sacramento Panthers 24-19 in a Big Seven Conference game last Friday at Balboa Park Stadium.

Despite the closeness of the score, the Rams were in control throughout the game, after overcoming a six point deficit in the first quarter. Particularly impressive was the tight Ram line play, which held a dangerous band of Sacramento runners, led by Farrell Funston, to 142 yards rushing.

Unlike previous contests, the college squad had less than 50 yards in penalties assessed against them. Alex Groswird, Willie Hudson, Rich Oliver, Bert Mondino, and Jack Derian were outstanding defensively.

Offensively, the Rams reached their scoring high of the season, although Coach Klemmer remarked after the game, "We feel we haven't as yet reached our potential. We'll have to open up with an offensive if we expect to win the next three games."

Sacramento drew first blood in the game with a 67 yard drive to paydirt, as Funston, running ace for the Panthers, punched over from the three yard line. A 37-yard pass play from Lou Feletto to Noble Freeman backboned the drive. The conversion failed and Sacramento led, 6-0.

After failing to score in the first quarter, the Rams unleashed their running attack for a sustained 73-yard drive sparked by Al Chatman, who scored with a nine-yard sweep around right end. Keith's conversion attempt was blocked, and the score was 6-6.

After Willie Hudson recovered a Sacramento fumble on their 32, the Rams scored with two successive passes by Barros, who connected with Piazza for 10 yards and the score.

A 55-yard shot off-tackle by Rudy Lopez in the fourth quarter scored for the Rams. In the same period, Jim Pfenning carried the ball three straight times from the Sacramento 38-yard line, scoring on the third thrust from four yards out.

Behind 24-6 in the last quarter, Sacramento scored twice in a last minute rally, but time ran out on the Panthers.

The Rams netted 252 yards rushing and 93 yards passing, with Les Barros connecting 8 times in 18 attempts. Sacramento netted 142 yards rushing and 127 passing, for a total of 269 yards.

Ram Booters Tie Tough Bears, 0-0

City College's soccer team battled to a scoreless tie with the University of California Bears in their second league game of the season to retain first place in league standings.

Both teams had many scoring opportunities but couldn't put through a winning goal. Art Lempke of City College and All American Joe Hare of the Bears were outstanding as goalies.

The Rams' next game is this Saturday against a strong team from Stanford at Balboa Park Stadium. This game should prove a thriller as both ball clubs are undefeated as of press time. Stanford will feature such stars as Sam Suarez, Dick Koenigsberger, and Bill Wren.

League standings:

C.C.S.F.	1	0	1
California	1	0	1
San Jose	0	2	0

Ram Booters Surprise Experts In Win Over USF

By Emil Portale

Those rambling Ram booters from the hilltop are leading an up and down existence. After clipping USF, once rated as one of the nation's greatest, the college soccer squad faced the University of California footmen and knew, once they had played to a scoreless tie, that they had left their fiery spirit on the Don battlefield.

All things considered, the victory over USF was a sweet one. Up to that time the Dons were riding a high road, leaving 66 crushed foes in their wake. The Rams showed that they could endure the great pressure placed on their shoulders, and they were aware that they had shrugged it off at halftime when the score stood 3-0 in their favor. At the climax the score was 5-4, but the Rams knew that one goal is as good as fifty when there's no more time to play.

Center forward Bob Palma and inside left Antonio Queteno, along with Tony Critelli, Armondo Molina and Fito Molina were the big guns in the Don homicide. Top scorer for the Rams, booting two goals, was Palma who played his pre-college soccer at Balboa High and is now performing also for El Salvador of the Sunday Soccer League.

Sharp passing and alert cool headedness are the hallmarks of Queteno, who played sparkling ball in the Don tilt. An alumnus of Mission High, Queteno played almost as brilliantly then as he does now. He was named to the All-City soccer team while in high school.

Fullback Tony Critelli, originally a New Yorker, strongly bolstered the Ram defense, helping to keep the USF offensive maneuvers at a bare minimum. He also displays his talents for the San Francisco Athletic Club of the Sunday league.

Both Armondo and Fito Molina played heads up defense in the USF and California matches. El Salvador stakes claims on these two sterling soccerites for both men are members of that Sunday league team.

Artful Art Lempke, Ram goalie, was instrumental in keeping California off the scoreboard in the Bear clash. Lempke is quite adept in his chosen sport for one of the honors he gained at Balboa High was a spot on the All-City Soccer Team.

A high mental attitude accounted for that first game win, Coach Roy Diederichsen reflected. Every player wanted to beat the unbeatable. Diederichsen is well qualified in recognizing traits that make or break a good soccer team. He has been at the helm of the Ram soccer craft for five years and has had a fine background for that mentorship, having played for Mission High and later gaining an All-Conference berth in that sport at San Jose State.

As for future prospects of the Ram outfit, they are looking up into the first division in fact, Diederichsen said. "We should make the playoffs," he stated. The Rams are going to have to work and work hard. The material is there, and the spirit is there. If the other teams in the California

ROY DIEDERICHSEN, coach of the undefeated Ram soccer squad.

Inter-Collegiate Conference can be convinced of that the Rams will have no worries.

Best Response In Recent Years For Drama Tryouts

Response to last week's announcement by the college's Little Theater that try-outs were being held for parts in the cast and positions on the production staff of the group's forthcoming presentation, Goodbye, My Fancy, has been one of the most enthusiastic in recent years Jann Palmer, student producer for the group, announced last week.

That the group is still looking for students to fill in vacancies in the cast and on the staff was indicated by Miss Palmer, who also commented that the Little Theater would like to give as many students as possible a chance to work with the group.

The cast of Goodbye, My Fancy has twelve female and eight male roles and so requires an unusually large number of persons to read parts and audition for the diversified roles, she stated.

Students trying out for roles in the cast include Diana Williams, Jane Lutt, Joyce Cody, Warren Smith, Stan Miller, Jim Nichols, George Sweet, Fran Russell, Ron Orselini, Gail Clark, Anne Canelios, and Tania Sokol.

Former members of the Little Theater and newcomers are invited to drop in at the little theater, Room 28 of the Science Building to visit and observe the group at work, Miss Palmer said.

Attendance Rules Reviewed By Dean

Regular attendance of students has been good so far this semester, Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, stated today.

Students absent because of illness are to secure an excuse from the office of the Dean of Men on the second floor of Building 2 on the west campus, immediately upon returning to college. For students under 21, excusing evidence consists of a note from his parent or guardian.

If an excuse is not obtained within one week after the student's return, the absence will be declared an emergency absence. Emergency absences per semester in one class cannot exceed the number of class meetings per week.

If students record more emergency absences that are allowed, the dean warned, they may face suspension from the class.

Sixth Week Of Classes Rolls By With Elections, Dinners

By Carolyn Fisher

AS THE sixth week of back to classes rolls by, clubs and organizations on campus are busy electing officers, holding business meetings, joints, planning dinners and social affairs.

Opening the semester's activities of the Canterbury Club was a turkey dinner at St. Francis of Assisi Episcopal Church, October 19, with club members from San Francisco State College. Last semester's president, Alan Taylor, is presiding over meetings until officers are elected.

Delta Psi will hold its second affair, a spaghetti dinner, at the Forest Lodge on Halloween night, October 31.

The first rushing affair of Kappa Rho was October 23 at the Richelieu Hotel where a buffet dinner for 70 men was served.

Officers of Lambda Phi this semester are Chuck Carlston, president; Walt Frehe, vice-president; Don Acacio, recording secretary; Roy Alder, corresponding secretary; Jack McDounogh, treasurer; John Seponi, sergeant-at-arms; Fritz Scialanel, pledge master. The fraternity's first affair was held recently at Seponi's home, and the men met jointly with the Theta Taus.

Phi Beta Rho had a joint meeting with Gamma Phi recently. Officers of the sorority this semester are President, Dorothy Trezise; Vice-president, Mary Daley; Corresponding Secretary, Dana Christiansen; Recording Secretary, Sylvia Gorman; Treasurer, Betty Petersen; Sergeant-at-Arms, Marcia Blum; Pledge Mistress, Lois Mantel; Historian, Lee Carol Lombard.

Sigma Tau Sigma economics society, officers are Max Yarbrough, president; Leon Bruschera, vice-president; Sam Kuhn, secretary-treasurer.

The Theta Taus held their first rush affair October 10 at Allie Green's home. Second affair will be November 2 at the Dolphin Club with the Beta Taus serving. The sorority met jointly with the Lambda Phis recently at the home of Florence Zanardi.

Alpha Lambda Chi held it second affair, Night in Paris, a French dinner, October 24. The Kappa Rho fraternity served as French waiters.

15 Nations Unite For International Fair

100 Participate In 12-Act IRC Show Tomorrow And Friday

More than 100 foreign students of the college will participate in an International Fair, sponsored by the International Relations Club and scheduled at 8 p.m. tomorrow and Friday nights in the west campus auditorium, Marie Louise Carl, program chairman, said yesterday.

Consisting of 12 acts, the musical program depicts traditional dances of 10 foreign countries. Included in the acts are a Filipina bamboo pole dance, a Russian knife dance and a variety of Latin-American dances, according to Miss Carl.

Students from 14 foreign countries will participate. Those nations represented will be Latin-American countries, China, Denmark, Egypt, Greece, India, Iran, Italy, Japan, Jordan, the Philippines, Russia, Scotland, Syria and the United States. Rehearsals have been under the direction of Pete Garrett and Bob Flanigan, Miss Carl stated, and they have been assisted by Henry Athanasiou and Bill Lee.

Following tomorrow evening's performance a variety of exotic foods representative of some of the foreign countries will be featured in the student lounge, Building 2, on the west campus. Displays of handiwork from many of the countries in the show may be seen and travel movies will be shown. Participants will be in the costume of their respective countries.

Immediately after Friday evening's show there will be a dance in the auditorium, Miss Carl said. Maurice Wolohan's band will provide the music.

All students of the college are invited to attend the fair and bring their families and friends, she added. Admission will be 50 cents for Associated Students and $1 general admission. All proceeds will go to covering the cost of the affair.

The idea for the International Fair grew out of a show put on by the International Relations Club during a college hour last semester.

Five Guest Speakers Will Visit Criminology Classes This Fall

Criminology classes this semester will have five guest speakers from San Francisco and the peninsula lecturing on criminalistics, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

Beginning last Friday, James Bracket, office of the District Attorney and laboratory criminalist from Santa Clara County, is presenting a series of lectures in the crime laboratory here.

On November 15, Dr. Turkel, the coroner of San Francisco, will be the guest speaker to criminology classes.

Inspector James Johnson, in charge of burglary detail of the San Francisco Police Department, will lecture on December 8.

Sometime in November, Lieutenant Ed Combers of the San Francisco Police Department will lecture on police administration.

At present, the director of laboratory criminalistics in San Jose, Lowell Bradford, is conducting a crime laboratory course here.

Instruction to the campus police is being given now at the San Francisco police range at Lake Merced on the use of firearms. After being sworn in Monday, ten new campus police officers received their six-point badge and traffic citation badges as special police officers.

Recently, Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent of public schools, asked men in criminology classes here to fingerprint nursing students at the college for identification purposes. Since a state license is needed for employment in San Francisco hospitals, these women were fingerprinted during a four day period from October 14 to October 19 by the Personal Identification class under Fitzgerald's direction.

Post Office Christmas Jobs Now Open To Vets

Applications for Christmas work may be obtained now by applying at the placement office, Building 2, west campus, Joseph Ameri, placement director pointed out recently.

Veterans interested in Christmas work at the post office should report today, tomorrow or Friday at the San Francisco Post Office, Seventh and Mission streets, in Room 127.

Official discharge papers must be brought to the interview by all interested veterans.

Guardsman Schedule Released By Board

Publication schedule for the Guardsman, official publication of the Associated Students, was released by the Publications Board last week.

Board chairman Gail Allan Moss announced the schedule. The Guardsman will be published on November 3, November 10, November 17, November 24, December 8, January 5, January 12 and January 19.

There will be no issues during Christmas vacation or finals week. A total of 12 issues will be published throughout the semester.

Award Winners Announced Soon

Winners of the Theta Tau Alumnae and Florence Louis scholarship awards will be chosen some time next week, Mary Golding, dean of women and chairman of the judging committee, announced today.

These two scholarships each carry an award of $25 and an Associated Student card.

Women students wishing to apply for the Denman scholarships are reminded that the deadline for filing petitions is Monday, November 1.

To be eligible for consideration a student must have completed 30 units of work at the college with a grade of "B" or better and must have been graduated from the San Francisco public schools. The Denman scholarships are awarded annually to two women students, each of whom will receive $125.

7 Day Notice For Ushering Passes

Students who wish to usher during musical events at the Opera House must apply for passes one week in advance of the performances they wish to attend, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced recently.

Passes may be obtained in Miss Golding's office in Building 2, west campus.

At present, students may usher at performances of A Midsummer Night's Dream, Miss Golding said.

California Civic Music and Arts Foundation will present a series of concerts featuring name solo artists, Miss Golding commented, and will be held at the Opera House from Monday, November 9, through Saturday, June 11. Among the featured artists will be Jasha Heifitz, Rise Stevens, William Warfield, and Roberta Peters. Students are asked to usher at these events, she said.

Ushering passes are also available for the San Francisco Symphony concerts, according to Miss Golding.

Ushers will be required to work for approximately one hour, she commented, after which they may view the performance.

Proper dress, she said, is dark dresses for women and suits and ties for men.

Photo Contest Judging On November 9, 10, 11

Photographs entered in the contest entitled, The Best Picture I Have Ever Taken, will be judged by members of the National Press Photographers Association during their conference at the Bellevue Hotel here scheduled for November 9, 10 and 11.

Students wishing to enter the contest are reminded that the deadline for submitting entries is Monday, November 1. Pictures should be turned in to Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor here, in Building 9, west campus.

Contest rules state that all photographs must be 11 by 14 inches faced on 16 by 20 inch salon mount and may be either glossy print or black and white. No color pictures will be accepted.

The first cable car in the world was developed in San Francisco in 1873 by Andrew S. Hallidie.

Vets' Certificates Due Fourth Of Month

All veterans who are attending college here under public law 550 should remember to sign a certificate of monthly attendance. These forms, 7-1993, are to be signed between the first and fourth of each month that the veteran is in college, according to Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of veterans affairs.

Veterans applying for government aid, Dunn said, receive their checks on the twentieth of each month.

Homecoming Queen And Attendants

Homecoming Queen Crowned Today, Presides Over Weekend Activities

Jann Palmer Tops Fifteen Candidates For Coveted Title

Jann Palmer, personable, brown-eyed pre-legal student at the college, was chosen Homecoming Queen by a board of four judges in a contest held last Wednesday in the college library, officials of the Homecoming Committee announced today.

Miss Palmer, who won out over 15 other candidates in a competition which was described by the judges as being very closely contested, will reign over Homecoming Week held here from November 1 to 5.

The Queen will be attended by her court, which is comprised of the four candidates who were runners-up in the judging, Dolores Bolton, Jan Digiovanni, Bev Swope and Jane Lutt will be the Queen's attendants at the events scheduled for Homecoming Week.

Rounding out the list of candidates who competed for the title were Mary Daley, Jessie Dawson, Nina Flood, Pat Quick, Marilyn Slicotte, Gayle Tichenor, Carol Thompson, Diana Williams, Evelyn Williams and Judy Wilson.

Winners were judged on the basis of beauty, poise, personality, and the amount of typical charm and appeal that they possessed.

The judges, who were Nerice Fugate, from the House of Charm; Beverly Stark, Fashion Co-ordinator at Macy's; Tami Yohanen, managing owner of Tami-Henri Fashion Shop, and John Palmer, owner of the Riviera Shop, called all the candidates back for reconsideration after the regular schedule of interviewing had been completed, because the competition was so close, officials of the judging committee said.

Two Cups Chosen For Photo Contest Awards

Two cups are to be awarded as prizes to the winners of the contest entitled "The Best Picture I Have Ever Taken," Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor here, announced yesterday.

The best professional picture and the best amateur picture each will receive a cup.

Sponsored by the National Press Photographers Association, the contest will be judged during their conference scheduled for November 9, 10 and 14. The winners will be announced at that time.

Counsellors Urge Program App'ts.

Students planning to return to the college next semester are advised by Alva McMillan, counsellor here, to make appointments with their counselors to plan their programs.

Appointments can be made through the counselling office in building 3 on the west campus. Counsellors will be available for appointments through January 21, McMillan said.

Because of the expected high enrollment for the spring semester, students were urged yesterday by McMillan to make their appointments as soon as possible and also to keep the appointments when made. Counsellors are now booked through December, he stated.

All Public Law 16 and 894 (disabled) veteran students should make appointments with their counsellors immediately for pre-programming, according to Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of Veterans Affairs here.

Dance At Surf Club Ends Homecoming

Homecoming activities of 1954 will officially close Friday night with the annual Associated Men Student - Associated Women Student dance, Al Kingston, president of the AMS here, announced last week.

The dance will be held at the Surf Club, located south of the Cliff House, from 8 to 11 p.m., he said. Music will be provided by the band of Gilbert Ray, which played at the Club Day dance here earlier in the semester.

Admission to the dance is by couples. Those with an AS card (one to a couple) will be admitted free of charge; $2.50 will be charged of those couples without an AS card.

Dress is informal, Kingston said.

Businessmen And Faculty Meet On Friday Holiday

Because of Business Education Day, a day set aside for members of the faculty and businessmen to meet and come to a mutual understanding of the problems that confront a student entering the business world, this Friday, November 5, will be a student holiday, according to Edwin Browne, dean of men here.

Members of the college faculty will visit a business concern of their choice, some of the general categories being transportation, banking and finance. After the faculty members are taken on a tour of the business concern, they together with the businessmen will discuss what should be taught in the classroom so that the student may be better qualified to enter the business world, Browne stated.

"It is more valuable for the teachers to know exactly what is needed upon entering the business world, especially when that information comes right from the source—the businessman himself," Browne said.

Rally, Alumni Dinner, Dance And Traditional San Mateo Grid Game Top Homecoming Week Festivities

Homecoming Week gets off to a start with the crowning of the Homecoming Queen at a special rally at 10:40 a.m. today in the men's gymnasium, according to information from Dean Louis Batmale's office. College hour schedule will be employed today for that purpose.

The Queen was selected by a four-person board last Wednesday. The judges were Tami Yohanen, manager of Tami-Henri Fashions; John Palmer, owner of the Riviera Shop; Bev Stark, fashion coordinator of Macy's, and Nerice Fugate of the House of Charm. The Queen's outfit was donated by the Riviera Shop, 1552 Ocean Avenue, and her trophy by Van Wormer and Rodriguez.

The evening gown and crown were displayed Monday in the display case on the first floor of the Science Building.

Sharing the spotlight with the Queen at the rally will be the Cal Tinder combo.

Tomorrow at 2 p.m. the Queen will be present as the Tom-Tom trophy, symbol of the college's traditional football rivalry with College of San Mateo, is hidden until game time 24 hours later.

At 7:30 p.m. the Alumni Association will hold its annual dinner this year, honoring past presidents of the Associated Students. President Emeritus Archibald J. Cloud and President Louis G. Conlan will be present, along with Mrs. Ethyl Meriwether.

Don Burke and Art Michalik of the San Francisco 49ers will speak and professional game movies will be shown. The dinner, which will be served by members of the Hotel and Restaurant Department, will cost $2.25 a plate.

No classes will be held on Friday, but at 2:30 p.m. the college's game with San Mateo will start. Pre-game activities, which will feature the Oakland Naval Air Station drill team and the Sixth Army bagpipe band, will begin at 2 p.m. The game will be free to members of the Associated Students, $1.00 to others.

Collegiate Press Rates Guardsman All-American For 21st Time

The Guardsman last week received the top national rating of All-American in the two-year college newspaper field from the Associated Collegiate Press for the twenty-first time in twenty-six semesters of ACP membership.

The award, given for the Spring 1954 volume, was accompanied by only four others of its kind throughout the nation. The award was also previously given to the Fall 1953 volume.

Notification of the rating was received here last week from ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota. A group of professional newsmen acting as judges thoroughly analyzed each Spring 1954 issue of college newspapers entered in competition from colleges throughout the nation.

In a special note to The Guardsman the judges stated "Your paper has an excellent flavor — warrants very special praise! Congratulations!"

The judges rate publications according to a strict scoring system which rates each and every phase of newspaper writing and printing. These include news sources, balance between sources, treatment of copy, creativeness, news story content, style of writing, lead paragraphs, feature articles, interviews, copy-reading, editorials and editorial page features, sports coverage and writing, page makeup, sports display, headlines and even the nameplate of the newspaper.

Also included are the physical characteristics such as the type face used, typography and the like. These features are judged as either poor, weak, fair, good, very good, excellent or superior on a comparative basis.

The individual scores for each phase are added, and from the sum total of points a newspaper is rated as All-American, First Class, Second Class, Third Class or Fourth Class.

Memory Lingers Of Welcome For Miss America

Miss America is gone, but the memory lingers on—and on and on—of a week of hectic preparation, siren-escorted motor cavalcades, college and civic banquets and receptions that made up San Francisco's enthusiastic and at times tumultuous welcome home for Lee Meriwether.

From the moment she stepped off her plane last Wednesday night into the waiting arms of her mother and about 30 photographers, she was whisked about the city for the many ceremonies jammed into a schedule that scarcely allowed her reunion time with her family and friends.

At the college on Thursday gracious Lee, who remarked at a breakfast prepared and served by Hotel and Restaurant students that "City College food never tasted so good!" was presented with Associated Student card number 1955, the year of her Miss America reign. "Now that I'm making enough money to buy one," she laughingly said, "they give me one free!"

A Student Council commendation was read to her by AS President Bill Boldenweck at the Cloud Circle, rally, who then had some pleasant difficulty in attaching an award medal around the Miss America neck.

After endearing herself to college students by saying that she intends to return to classes here next year, Lee was told by Lon Batmale, dean of student activities here, that she could be sure of getting registration number 1, so that she might enroll in classes without opening week' snafus.

When Lee departed Monday morning for Southern California and points East, she left in her wake comments from press, Junior Chamber of Commerce and all other groups connected with her welcoming festivities that she was easily one of the most poised, benign and cooperative persons they had ever been privileged to work with.

A crowded luncheon at the Palace Hotel Thursday heard her tearful response to the universal congratulations and praise. "I think you're tops," she said. "I love you all."

Fall Scholarships Won By Hoffman And Van Klaveren

Edith Van Klaveren and Dolores Hoffman have been chosen as recipients of the Florence Louis and the Theta Tau Alumnae scholarships, respectively, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced here last week.

Miss Van Klaveren, winner of the Florence Louis scholarship, is an English major. Now in her fourth semester, she hopes to enter Stanford University upon graduation from here.

Miss Hoffman, a dental hygiene major, was awarded the Theta Tau Alumnae scholarship. She plans to attend the University of California School of Dental Hygiene upon completion of her studies here.

Each of the two scholarships carries an award of $25 and an Associated Student card.

Student Participation In Homecoming Everyone's Duty

AS A YOUNG college, only some 20 years old, we have had little time to form many of the traditions which are usually connected with a college or university. We are in the middle of one of those too few traditions, Homecoming Week, right now.

Almost every college has a homecoming celebration of some kind or another, the main idea being to draw the alumni together for just that, a homecoming.

Unfortunately, many of the alumni of City College choose to identify themselves with another institution, usually the one at which they completed their education, and completely ignore the campus where they began their college life.

Far more, however, proudly point to the college as their alma mater, and those are the graduates of whom we can be proud. They are the ones who have done the most for the college and who deserve recognition from us just as they recognize us. It is to these "alums" that the homecoming celebration is directed.

This Homecoming Week is not exclusively for the graduates. Every student here should and must take part, directly or indirectly, if the week is to be a success.

Those working directly on homecoming activities have done a splendid job, but the big test is yet to come. Each individual student of the college must put spirit into the celebration, to show the returning alumni that this is still the "old" City College, with spirit and pride to spare.

One way to support the college is to support the football team in the traditional Homecoming Game with College of San Mateo. The Rams will put a fine season's record on the block and the Bulldogs will be out to take not only the game but the coveted and often-disappearing Tom-Tom Trophy. At present the Rams deserve possession, although just where the Tom-Tom is, is anybody's guess. The way to keep it is to get out and yell our heads off for the home team.

The Homecoming Week has been well planned and the committee has done a grand job, but they cannot do the job alone. Now it is up to "Joe College" and his friends to make alumni and casual observers realize that the "old City College spirit" is still there.

For the majority of us, those of us who have a deep-rooted and full-blossoming pride in our college, the job will be a pleasant and easy one.

Once The Homeless

Homecoming Reminiscent Of Days When Science Building Main Feature

With students still getting used to the "nice factory" on the hill, the Science Building becomes rather taken for granted.

It was not always so.

In the early Pleistocene Age (1935-1940) students could go to classes at any one of 22 locations throughout the city. Most classes were concentrated at Galileo High School, Van Ness and Francisco streets; Samuel Gompers Trade School, 22nd and Bartlett streets; and the University of California Extension, 540 Powell Street.

But in 1937 a new era began for the college. Angelo J. Rossi, late mayor of San Francisco, turned the first shovelful of earth in Balboa Park on April 25, 1937. Early in 1938 tractors took over, and the college's new building was under way.

The Science Building opened for classes for the fall semester, 1940. Instructors developed vocal powers to a maximum to drown out carpenters' hammers. The building was completed October 6, 1940.

Dedication Day was November 10, 1940, with the late Mayor Rossi officially presenting the new building to President Emeritus Archibald J. Cloud. Speakers were C. Harold Caulfield, then president of the Board of Education, and the late Joseph P. Nourse, then superintendent of San Francisco public schools.

Since 1940 alumni have been welcomed back at college during the annual homecoming. The first homecoming lasted only one day and was highlighted by the unveiling of the statues behind the Science Building. A tour of the campus, entertainment and refreshments were included.

With a giant rally, an alumni dinner, the annual homecoming dance and the traditional game against College of San Mateo, this year's homecoming promises to be the biggest in the college's history. The college has come a long way since its homeless days.

AS Painters Help Office New Look

Elbow grease, 20 dollars and an abundance of enthusiasm account for the "new look" that the Associated Student office is currently receiving in Building 2.

The planning of this project was spontaneous, to say the least. In fact, the planning took place at "bull sessions," which frequently occur in the AS office.

After a sufficient number of students had pledged their time and energy to the improvements envisioned, funds were secured from the Associated Student treasury and Dean Louis Batmale and Advisor Robin L. Dunn put their stamp of approval on the suggestions. Then the Associated Students went to work—washing, scraping and painting to give their home an air of distinction.

There is no club to join, no clique to crash and no unforeseen barriers, so if any student has a "way with a paint brush," he is welcome in the student office to volunteer his services.

Shots At RAMdom

ANOTHER DISTINGUISHED name, in a way, has joined the list of famous personalities attending the college. Student Mae West is reciting daily in a French class here, a transplant from the state of Texas, where all things come in large sizes and there must be a tie-in here somewhere.

SUCCESS of the college's soccer team is just being realized by students here. The booters at this writing were undefeated and reeling in first place with the University of California team. For those who have never witnessed the interesting game, matches in Balboa Park Stadium are free and are an opportunity to see a top group in action.

NEWS-HOUND: Laughable was the melee last week between two Guardsman staffers and a narrow-minded Dalmatian dog. Coming out of the Science Building, the cafeteria-bound newsmen were trailed by the black-spotted pooch who must have picked up on the lunch-time conversation.

Coming into a car, the two were joined in the front seat by the dog. Out again came the students and the dog. In a sneaky effort to gain entrance to the car by the far door, the dog got wise and jumped in first. After a combined push-pull, swear-swear effort, the Dalmatian was evicted.

THE 1600 ORCHIDS that Lee Meriwether had draped on her lovely shoulders last week formed one of the largest (and most expensive) capes of that type ever made. Following her around was a Florist Association representative with a basket of replacement blooms, should any of the cape's fall off or be damaged.

Whenever Lee shed the cape, it was rushed back to a florist's refrigerator. Now that she's gone, it will be preserved and presented to Lee's mother to keep in their Portola Drive home. This could pose a problem. Where would a person store 1600 orchids?

11 In H&R From Foreign Countries

Because they prepare all meals served in the college cafeteria, the 120 students who comprise the Hotel and Restaurant Division gain much of their cooking "know how" by experience, according to Lawrence Wong, instructor in charge of restaurant operation.

Of these 120 students, 11 have the distinction of coming here from foreign countries. They are Juliette Furtado, Honolulu; Juan Mahor, Philippines; Ryozo Matsumura, Japan; Isao Motomura, Japan; Anthony Novelo, Ensenada; Akira Sakate, Japan; Orlan Saracoglu, Turkey; Tevie Smith, Canada; Ranoi Solheim, Norway; Tadayasu Tani, Japan, and Masao Vehaha, Okinawa.

Hilda Watson, chairman of this division, has left the college for a year to take the post of supervisor of cafeterias for the board of education. Until Mrs. Watson's return, Wendell Muntz, acting chairman, is responsible for the operation and maintenance of the cafeteria.

STARRY-EYED STUDENTS listen as Louis Berman, astronomy instructor, explains the wonder of the stars. Berman describes the out-of-this world looking instrument he is using as a 12-sided polyhedron planetarium projector.—Photo by Pallinacci.

Long Way To The Stars

Problems In Celestial Flight Deterred By Human Limitations

By Clark Smith

It's a long way to the stars.

But astronomy students at the college can chart their courses to them on the top floor of the Science Building, in the first planetarium to be built in San Francisco.

The mechanism itself consists of five projectors. A star projector pinpoints the position of 1300 stars. The sun-moon-planet-projector shows the position of the sun, the phases of the moon, and the five "naked-eye" planets for any desired date.

A coordinate projector exhibits the various great circles of the astronomical systems of measurement as projected in to the heavens. Other projectors project the observer's median, graduated in degrees of arc, and enable angular distance in the sky to be calculated.

Of special interest to the navigator is a special astronomical triangle projector, permitting easy solution of problems in celestial navigation and spherical trigonometry.

The entire projector assembly is mounted at the center of a 20-foot diameter muslin-covered hemisphere which serves as the sky upon which the images are thrown. This cloth canopy has its zenith 16 feet from the floor and provides space for approximately 50 persons during a demonstration.

In charge of the planetarium is Louis Berman. Berman teaches all courses in all phases of astronomy, including navigation and space travel.

Berman believes other planets can be reached by rocket. A rocket would be sent up to serve as a base, from which other rockets could be launched. Ballestite, the grain type propellant now used in most military rockets, is unusable in space flight. New liquid fuels such as hydrazene and liquid oxygen have been developed.

The greatest deterrent to space travel is human. Only recently have we learned to keep the pilots of modern aircraft from "blacking out" when they pull out of dives. How can humans stand the terrific pressure needed by a missile to clear the earth's gravity?

What would happen when man reaches other planets is unknown. In fiction, visitors from other planets are pictured as far from benevolent.

Perhaps this is a reflection on ourselves.

It is even problematical as to whether there is life on other planets. And if there is, do they have colleges with planetariums, and do they wonder if there is life on earth?

Signs The 'Ruler' Of Conduct On College Campus

Life at the college may seem to some to be ruled with the dictatorial fervor of a totalitarian government. The big difference lies in the fact that signs, not people, "blare" orders to students.

These signs are put up with brutal enthusiasm and are obeyed with the same kind of enthusiasm shown over a plate of two-day old salad.

Each semester's beginning finds a few persons, hammer and nail in hand, striding confidently toward well chosen spots and tacking up their posters with unequalled determination, excepting the determination of sneering, precocious students to disobey them.

By the time several weeks have passed, the word "please" heads some of the signs, lending them a pompous tone. The signs of this type most frequently seen at the college are found in its culinary domains. Every six feet along each wall "PLEASE—Bus Your Own Dishes" greets students' eyes.

Encouragingly, there are many signs obeyed as well as observed. The "No Smoking" signs in Cloud Hall must impress students more than all others, for this side of the signs is perpetual stacks of stamped out cigarettes—but none beyond the signs.

The Beachcomber

HANSOME AND GRISLE were a little boy and girl who lived up around Sausalito way, by the deep woods. As a matter of fact, Hansome was Grisle's brother, which made Grisle Hansome's sister, if you follow me.

They lived in a little house by the deep woods with their mother, who was a professor of 18th century chamber music and anafomy at the Sausalito Conservatory of Fine Arts, and their father, who was a tenor man for Stan Kenton.

Hansome took after his father. He read Metronome every month, listened to KSAN, and was a charter member of the Dave Brubeck fan club.

Grisle was more like her mother. She read Musical America, listened to KEAR, and was a member of the Friends of Good Music. Hansome spent all his time at the Blackhawk, while Grisle could generally be found hanging around the Opera House.

One day they went for a walk in the deep woods in spite of the warning that their mother had given them that very morning. "Don't go in there woods," she said, "they're full of squares who don't know A-flat from A-frame."

As soon as she was gone Hansome said, "Baby, let's you and me go in the woods and tell them squares all about Dizzy and the Duke and stuff."

"Rather," said Grisle, "but wouldn't it be nicer if we told them all about Beethoven and Bartok?"

"Crizzy," said Hans, "you tell them what you want, and I'll do the same." And off they went.

When they got into the woods they didn't find anything at all.

"They must be in pretty far," said Hans. "Rather," said Gris, "but if we go in any farther we'll get lost."

"That's something I've been meaning to suggest to you for a long time," said Hans, "but as long as we're in this together, let's go."

Hansome And Grisle Way Out In Woods Shook By Lombardo Version Of Sh-Boom

So they made a trail of pieces of paper torn from Downbeat and The Music Listener's Guide (by Meyer W. Cahn) and went ahead.

Pretty soon they came to a little house all covered with sheet music. A real pretty-type lady looked out and said, "Come on in, kids. I'm just about to have a session." In they went.

"Crazy," said Hansome. "Rather," said Grisle. So the lady, saying "You ought to like this one, it's my very favorite piece," put on a record.

And what did they hear but a full concert version of Sh-boom by Guy Lombardo. "Stop, stop, kill it," said Hansome. "Oh dear," said Grisle. But the pretty lady had turned into Liberace and was coming after them.

Hans and Gris cut out in overdrive and got away, but they took a wrong turn somewhere in the woods and no one ever saw them again.

MORAL: When Maw says "Don't go near them woods," you better listen.

Poly Grad Is Star Athlete

Fullback McCormick Also Excels In Baseball And Track

By Emil Portale

Out of the fine group of capable athletes Ram sport teams produce each year, there occasionally comes one whose athletic strength and ability turn critics' heads and, because of this, demands closer examination.

Of the many outstanding members of the college's football team, Shirlee McCormick, with his serious heads-up brand of football has shown that he is well worth the praise his teammates unceasingly give him.

As a Ram performer McCormick has shown much promise as a pigskin packer and team leader. Coach Klemmer and the players alike could not praise the 6 ft., 198 pound gridder enough when they were asked about him. Steady dependability, fiery hustle, and fighting spirit are characteristic of him and he is one of the most well liked members of the Ram team. His qualities of leadership were well expressed when he was elected one of the co-captains for the Sacramento struggle in which the Rams emerged victorious, 24-19.

McCormick traces his athletic record back to Polytechnic High where he played for two years on a championship varsity grid squad. His abilities as a pigskinner earned the good looking fullback a third string berth on the All-City team in his senior year of football.

Baseball and track are among McCormick's other sport interests. He played three years of varsity baseball at Poly, and the only reason he was unable to become as well known in track as he is in other sports is that the cinder artists perform during the same season as the horseshiders and a choice had to be made between the two.

McCormick is majoring in engineering at the college and plans some day to become a television technician when he has completed his education at College of the Pacific.

Among his other accomplishments the freshman footballer also leads the Ram grid outfit in yards gained rushing, boasting a six-yard per carry average.

In referring to a fellow footballer for further information, McCormick remarked "Bert Mondino probably knows more about me than I do myself." McCormick's neighborhood pal echoed the feeling of his teammates in praising the bruising fullback.

All this, and McCormick has one more year of varsity football to go.

Ram Booters Down SF State 4-1, Tie For First Place With UC Bears

Determined to remain in top contention for the title, Coach Roy Diederichsen's soccer squad defeated a spirited S. F. State team by the score of 4-1 at the loser's field on October 23.

After 20 minutes of scoreless play, Bob Palma gave the Rams a 1-0 lead by scoring with a well-placed kick from 20 yards out. The remainder of the first half found State pressing hard to even the score but were foiled by the excellent efforts of the entire Ram defense.

In the third quarter Tony Queteno scored twice before State retaliated with its lone tally. Shortly before the end of the third quarter, Rodolpho Molina made good on a 30 yard kick which gave the Rams the 4-1 lead.

After three games of intercollegiate competition, the Rams are deadlocked for first place with UC. Both teams have a record of two victories and one tie. They are followed by USF and Stanford who are tied for second place with two victories and one defeat each.

The junior varsity soccer team, which not too many students know about, is made up of players who do not see much action in varsity play. This league gives them an opportunity to get game experience which is very important in any sport.

So far this year they have beaten San Francisco State, tied with California and dropped one game to the University of San Francisco.

The junior varsity soccer games are usually played an hour before the varsity contest starts.

Some men who are showing a lot of potential on layovers are Mollar and Barros at fullbacks, Quintino and Bronskio at halfs and Vialava who is showing up better in every game.

Intramural Sports Start Initial Play In College Program

The intramural program is well under way with the beginning of ping-pong last Monday. Football, soccer, tennis and badminton have also started the first round of play.

Teams are set up during physical education hours and the classes compete within themselves for class championship. Winner or winners of each class play one another to determine the champions of the college.

In tennis or badminton, a person may play either singles or pick a partner and play doubles. In touch football a team is made up of five men and in basketball a team consists of three players.

Medals are given for winners in each class, and for college winners in each sport a belt buckle is awarded.

Director Alex Schwarz said "Armed Forces veterans also may participate in the intramural program even though they are not required to enroll in physical education."

Rams Face San Mateo Friday In Annual Homecoming Game; Tom-Tom Trophy At Stake

Going into the Big Seven Conference stretch drive in second place, the Ram gridders face San Mateo's Bulldogs in the annual Homecoming Game on Friday at 2:30 in Balboa Park Stadium.

San Mateo has yet to win a Big Seven Conference game, although their front wall averages 198 pounds per man, and their backfield 190 pounds. Head Coach Duane Whitehead's charges lost their first conference game to West Contra Costa, 45-12, and dropped the next two to Stockton, 34-7 and to Santa Rosa, 35-20.

The Rams will defend the traditional Tom-Tom trophy which they won from San Mateo last year, 32-13, as part of the Homecoming Week tradition.

In compiling this record, the college team scored 90 points, yielding 57 points. Statistically, the Ram club has netted 1534 yards in total offense, of which 1100 was garnered by rushing. The Ram passing attack contributed 434 net yards with 33 completions in 78 attempts for a .422 yards per completed pass.

Tentatively, San Mateo's starting team has Jim Maekey and Buck Shore at ends; John Madden and George Gerbing, tackles; Jim Roberts and Del Rotelli, guards; and Tom Sells at center. Louis Marliani is quarterback, and Dick Devenceniz and Glade Williams are halfbacks, with Jim Harrington at fullback.

The tentative starting lineup for the Rams has Rich Oliver and Dick Piazza at ends, Jack Perlan and Ken Orzell at tackles, Willie Hudson and Alex Groswird at guards, and Gus Bagatelos at center. Les Barros will be quarterback, with Shirlee McCormick at full, and Kent Scovil and Jim Frank at halfbacks.

James, Injured Tackle, Honored By Teammates

To commemmorate the athletic feats and leadership of Jerry James, outstanding Ram tackle sidelined for the season with a broken leg, the college football team has voted him team captain for the season and dedicated the Rams' football season of 1954 to him.

In a non-conference game with the Los Angeles Cubs, James suffered a double fracture in the lower section of his leg. All-Conference last season for the Rams, James was destined for similar honors this season.

The popular Ram tackle, who stands 6 ft. 2 in. and weighs 215 pounds, was also a highly reliable place kicker for the Rams, and scored a touchdown after intercepting a lateral to save the Stockton game for the Rams.

Last Minute Ram TD Edges Modesto In 14-13 Thriller

By Bob Chrisman

Les Barros capped a last minute Ram drive with a pair of point-producing passes to give City College a thrilling 14-13 Big Seven Conference win over Modesto last Thursday at Modesto.

Despite the pleading of some 3500 rabid Modesto fans, the Pirates couldn't hold as quarterback Barros mixed up the Rams' strong running game and his own pin-point passing to account for the last gasp victory.

The clincher came with 1:35 left in the game and Modesto leading by 13-7. With time running out, Barros went to the passing game. He hit end Don Baroni for 29 yards, then passed to halfback Al Chatman for 17 yards and the tying score. Then, with Jim Frank in kick formation for the all-important conversion, Barros leaped up from his kneeling position, grabbed the ball and flipped it to Dick Piazza in the end zone for the winning point.

Coach Grover Klemmer's gridders took a first half lead when, in the second period, left halfback Kent Scovil took a handoff on a quick opener and shot three yards for the marker. Jim Frank kicked what later proved to be the important extra point from Barros' hold.

Modesto evened the game in the third period when the Pirates' All-Big Seven fullback, Gene Peterson, rammed his way over tackle from the seven, then kicked the tying point.

The Pirates of Coach Stan Pavko took the lead just into the last quarter when halfback Jim Johnson took a reverse from Peterson and circled his own right end for 17 yards and the six pointer. The conversion attempt was no good and the stage was for the Rams' winning drive.

Barros had his best day of the year in the passing column, hitting on 7 of 13 passes. His accuracy and the potent running attack added up to big yardage, but the Rams' old nemesis, penalties hurt their scoring chances. The college had 100 yards paced off against them for violations.

Fullback Shirlee McCormick, the team's top ground gainer, added to his total by racking up 67 of the squad's 100 net rushing yards. Barros' passing netted 102 yards in the evenly balanced offense.

Klemmer described the win as a team effort and other observers bore out his opinion. As they have done so often this year, the Rams were slow in starting and their strong offense didn't really roll until the second half, but the feeling among the fans was that City College deserved the win despite the narrow margin of victory.

The line was strong, just as they have been all season, and the defensive backfield also came in for some praise. The Pirates could make only 23 yards through the air and hit on only 4 passes in 12 attempts.

Sports Day At Marin Saturday

Volleyball, badminton and archery enthusiasts will be given a chance to exhibit their talents in the forthcoming co-educational sports days sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association, according to Lene Johnson, physical education instructor here.

College of Marin will start the ball rolling on Saturday, November 6 when they host a volleyball sports day at which several Northern California two-year colleges will participate.

All who wish to take part in this day in either the men's division, women's division, or the coed division may sign up in the women's gym. Transportation will be supplied by a Greyhound bus which will leave San Francisco for Kentfield and the College of Marin at 8:45 a.m.

Other sports days at which the colleges will take part include: badminton and archery at City College of San Francisco, November 20; badminton at San Mateo, December 4; and badminton at East Contra Costa College, January 8. All who are interested in participating in any of these events should inform Mrs. Johnson in the women's gymnasium.

Canadian Football Features 'Rouge'

AMONG OTHER differences, one of the features distinguishing Canadian football from that of the United States is the ability to score a single point by punting. This is called "rouge" and is carried over from rugby, the English version of football. (The game, rugby, was named after the school, Rugby, in England, where it was first popularized.)

To score a point punting, one of three things must happen. The punt must go over the end zone or out of bounds in the end zone, which is 25 yards deep in Canadian football, or, the punt may bounce over the sideline or back out of the end zone, or, if an opposing player catches the ball in the end zone, he must be tackled before he can cross his goal line. The last rule is made possible only because there are no fair catches in Canadian football, although the opponents must allow a receiver five yards protection.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

Few changes in the American football rules would be involved by the addition of "rouge," since the fundamentals of Canadian and American football are the same. To make the running back of "rouge" punts more difficult, the American end zone would have to be lengthened, for it is only ten yards deep, as contrasted with the 25 yards of the Canadian field.

Naturally, the fair catch rule would be revised in the event that a punt was caught in the end zone. A runner would be permitted to signal for a fair catch, and after running the ball safely out of the end zone, would be able to claim protection through the fair catch rule.

There would be no danger of the "rouge" being overworked as a means of scoring, for after an unsuccessful "rouge" try, possession goes to the opposing team. The ball must be within the 40 yard line to guarantee a successful rouge.

Punt Affords Extra Method Of Scoring

If the American professional football teams adopted the scoring system of rouge, the function of the now cut and dried conversion, which is to provide a scoring margin other than a touchdown or field goal, would be augmented.

In 1953, the combined totals of the Lion's Doak Walker, Ben Agajanian of the Los Angeles Rams, and Lou Groza of the Browns showed 104 conversions completed as against four failures, which means that 96.4 per cent of their place kicks were completed. For all practical purposes, a touchdown in professional football is seven points.

The safety, which is good for two points, is a rarity in professional football today, a rarity which is fast becoming extinct. The adoption of "rouge" by the professional teams would freshen and vary the scoring of pro football, and scoring would not consist merely of field goals and touchdowns.

Three Named To Lead Rams Against Panthers

Because of a deadlock in the balloting, the Ram's football team went into the Sacramento game on Friday, October 22 with three co-captains.

The captains, who proved a big factor for City College in the winning of the game, 24-19, were Stan Keith, a guard; Les Barros, the quarterback and Shirlee McCormick, fullback.

All three played both offense and defense. Keith, a product of Washington High School, was especially prominent by his hard charging and good offensive blocking, while McCormick was outstanding in the backfield by averaging 5.7 yards for 12 carries.

Completing 8 passes out of 18 attempts, one a TD pass to end Dick Piazza, Barros again proved himself worthy as a signal caller and team captain.

3 Women Students Represent AWS At Annual Meeting At College Of Pacific Saturday

Representing the college in the annual Inter-Collegiate Associated Women Students of Northern California Conference held at the College of the Pacific in Stockton on Saturday, November 6, are Marcia Herst, AWS president; Karin Walker, AWS vice-president; and Barbara Batmale, representative of all women students new to the college, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced yesterday.

Leading one of the discussion groups is Miss Herst, who will raise questions and guide discussion on the role of the off-campus student.

The conference representation includes all four-year institutions, Miss Golding said; from Fresno to Oregon, and all state colleges. This college, she said, is the only two year college invited to the conference because "we have an AWS that operates as any other AWS organization in a four-year college, our problems are the same, and our enrollment is large enough."

Registration for women begins Saturday at 8:30 a.m. after which these topics will be under discussion: the Purpose and Use of the AWS Clearing House; Foreign Women on Campus, and Is AWS the Voice of Women on Your Campus?

A luncheon will be served in the afternoon and three more topics will be talked over at the afternoon session of the conference. These are Student - Faculty relations, Leadership Training, and the Role of the Off-Campus Student (women living off campus, as do women students here). Following afternoon debates, a banquet will be served. The conference will end at 7:30 p.m.

Miss Golding added that Miss Batmale, Miss Herst and Miss Walker will stay in Stockton Saturday night as guests of College of the Pacific.

CAB Elects New Officers Tomorrow

Election of a new Club Activities Board president at the CAB meeting last week here, to replace Jim Needles who has resigned and left the college, ended in a 10-10 tie between candidates Ed Dollard and Bob Moore.

At the next regular meeting, tomorrow, Robin Dunn, faculty advisor to the group, said that the new president will be elected. Another officer to be elected is vice-president, to replace Dick Vega who has also left the college. Nominations and elections for this office are expected to take place at the meeting.

Dunn also stated that the membership committee is currently working on the club petitions and revised charters submitted to him. Immediate submission of the remainder of the petitions and charters is requested so that definite action may be taken as soon as possible. To date 24 petitions have been received and 10 more are due. These revised charters will go into effect for the spring 1955 semester.

CAB Day, held October 8 here, was acclaimed an outstanding success as each club sponsored a display in connection with its specific activity in the Building 2 west campus student lounge.

Activities of the day were terminated by a dance held in the college auditorium where 800 students danced to the music of the Gilbert Ray combo.

Christmas Hiring Well Underway Here

Students who want to work this Christmas holiday season were advised yesterday to get their applications in immediately to Joseph Amori, placement director, because the entire Christmas market is marked by "under-hiring" as compared to previous years.

Department stores have hired many sales persons, particularly women, for the coming holiday season. Working hours are 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Monday and all day Saturday until December 13, when work is full time until Christmas Eve.

United Parcel Company has hired many men for stock, clerking, driving and routing, and veterans are being hired by the Postal Transportation Service.

Work applications are available at the personnel placement office, Building 2, west campus.

Delegates Set For Asilomar Conference Nov. 9

Delegates were selected last week to represent the college at statewide conference of the California Junior Student Government Association to be held November 9, 10 and 11 at Asilomar.

Representing the college will be Associated Student President Bill Boldenweck, also serving as president of the Northern California Section of the association; Jim Brownfield; Bob Arago, John Lo Coco, Pat Smith, Marcia Herst, Al Kingston, and Dean Louis Batmale, faculty advisor to the group and dean of student activities.

At the conference, student government leaders will convene and make decisions on the many resolutions which have come up during the regional conferences of the association throughout the year. Representatives will come from almost all the two-year colleges throughout the state.

Among the resolutions to be voted upon will be the one advocating racial integration of students which was passed at the regional conference of the Northern California Section of the association held here October 14.

General purpose of the association is to enable student government leaders to gain a better understanding of how student government is conducted in colleges other than their own. The delegates will discuss all pertinent parts of student government, including student leadership, Associated Men and Women Students, student finance, student publications, publicity, rallies, assemblies, athletics and campus organizations.

Applications For SF State Due Jan. 3

Applications for admission to San Francisco State College must be on file there by January 3, 1955, to insure entrance this spring, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Materials that must be filed along with application are transcripts from the high school of graduation and each college attended, a petition of evaluation if the applicant has 15 or more units of college credit and photostatic copies of service separation papers.

Applications should be addressed to the Office of Admissions, San Francisco State College, 1600 Holloway Avenue, San Francisco 27, California.

Students are warned that all transcripts will remain in the files of the college, and cannot be returned without written request. Such a request cancels application of the student.

Novelli, Cheader Fill Vacant Council Seats

Rich Novelli was elected to fill the freshman vacancy at last week's Student Council meeting. At the same meeting, the recent election of Marion Cheader as Vice-President of the Sophomore Class was given a vote of approval by the council.

Discussion over the institution of rivalry between the college and West Contra Costa College took up much of the meeting time. A suggestion by the West Contra Costa Associated Student President that a game trophy for the college and West Contra Costa be made was considered by the council and left open for further discussion.

The regular Thursday meeting of the council was cancelled because of Miss America's homecoming.

Homecoming Queen Contestants

Alpha Gamma Sigma Membership Reaches 62; Election Of Officers Postponed To November 12 Meet

Members of the planning committee of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, met October 27 for the discussion of future activities, although election of officers has not yet taken place.

Officer elections are expected in the Friday, November 12, College Hour meeting.

AGS is open to all students who have maintained with a minimum of 12 units, 30 grade points. A 2.0 average is required with no grade lower than a "C," physical education excluded. Those who are gold seal bearers from high school are entitled to a temporary membership.

Don Jensen, AGS sponsor, stated: "An important advantage of the society is that the first hour of registration for the new semester is open exclusively to AGS members."

There are currently 62 members, 26 of whom are new: Josephine Becerio, Stephen Bilstrian, Albert Brown, Rena Cutrufo, Phil Fuller, Joseph Garbarino, Donald Garrett, Peter Garrett, George Gemignani, Edward Hannon, Jessie Hawks, Dolores Hoffman, Paul Hohansson, Althanette Johnson, Virginia Keen, Mintha Lozar, Cathleen Lynch, Douglas MeEachern, Joseph Montecillo, Elizabeth Poncetta, Ardath Perkins, Jeanne Roberage, Eva Russel, Maurice Sharpe, Stephen Spelman, and Barbara Terstegge.

Members for the second semester are Emile Bourdet, Barbara Briggs, Luther Distler, Kuey Fong, Albert Gee, Harry Gee, Allan Goldfinger, Maurice Hernandez, Fernando Herrera, Jim Kanihan, Robert Kelleher, Wing Lee, Noel Marsh, Norman McHugh, Frank McNitt, Gail Allan Moss, Phillip Mottini, Norbert Nizze, Dorothy Rader, Joseph Schauer, Marian Spiczka, Grace Sueniro, Gerritt Van Roam, George Voronoff, William Wallace, Bert Walsh and Dick Young.

Those in their third semester of membership are Charles Dean, Garnet Hung, Alice Kau, Thyra Schroeder, Margaret Shaur and James Wong.

Fourth time members of AGS include Ray Melendez and Fred Steinberg.

AGS meets every club meeting college hour in Cloud Hall.

More On Homecoming

sioner Diek Moore in planning the Homecoming Week are Diek Arey, Joe Bavaresco, Al Butler, Bill Ciremele, Bob Flanikan, Marcia Herst, John Lo Coco, Ralph Libby, Raul Ortiz, Don Osborne, Gil Scianna, Ernest Thompson, Diek Vega and Deane Wylie.

Members of the faculty who advised and assisted AMS officials on the Homecoming Week program include Thomas Wilson, sponsor; Edwin Larson, president of the Faculty Association; Dean Louis Batmale and Joseph Amori, college placement director.

Taking over the spot held by Lee Ann Meriwether last year, Winnie Wooster, a student new to the college, has been chosen as the top model to work with the advertising photography class this semester, Emmett Smith, photography instructor here, announced last week.

A tentative list of models selected in addition to Miss Wooster include Bev Bardo, Sheila Ellman, Susan Ligda, Sylvia Lim and Bev Swope. Several students have yet to be considered, Smith said, and a complete list of names will be made available soon.

Smith, who photographed all students for identification purposes during registration week, noticed the girls at that time. Facial projection of personality, photogenic quality and interesting facial bone structure were determining factors in the selection of the models.

In exchange for their co-operation with the advertising photography class, the students will receive the photographic studies made of them. Smith also stated that the experience, poise and self-assurance gained from this work can be compared with that of a modeling course.

New Registration System May Be In Effect In Spring

A new system of registration might come into effect this spring, according to John J. Brady, new coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

Students will be allowed to sign up for courses some time before finals week if the new system becomes operative this spring. The purpose of early registration is to give students more time to decide what program to follow, as courses can be changed any time before classes start.

Brady first came to the college in 1940 as athletic instructor and head baseball coach. While an athletic instructor he organized an extensive after class intramural program—one in which 60 per cent of men students participated. Thirty-eight teams were organized in basketball alone.

In 1946 Brady became assistant dean of men. In this capacity he was instrumental in reorganizing student government and in the establishment of the Ramporium.

In 1949 he became dean of semi-professional courses, the position he held until he succeeded Dr. F. Grant Marsh as student welfare coordinator this year.

Brady describes his job briefly as "what happens to the student outside of class." At present he is primarily concerned with registration plans, late admissions and program changes.

After graduation from the University of San Francisco, where he lettered in baseball, Brady did graduate work at both the University of California and Stanford. Before coming to the college he taught at Washington Union High School in Centerville, California.

Organizations Back On Feet Again With Meetings, Rushing Affairs

By Carolyn Fisher

WITH MIDTERM week just behind and homecoming festivities starting tomorrow, rushing affairs, joint and business meetings of clubs on campus seem to be caught in the middle of all the excitement, so organizations are just beginning to get back on their feet again.

Beta Tau met jointly with Delta Psi on October 26. The sorority held its second rushing affair at the Forest Lodge Halloween night. An Italian dinner was served for 45 with the Gamma Phis serving. A now inactive member, Lee Meriwether, joined in on the fun.

Officers this semester of the Newman Club are Vic Bacigalupi, president; Mike Meyer, vice-president; Ed Schonistein, treasurer; Cathy Lynch, recording secretary; Marilyn Sicotte, secretary; Ed Dollard, Club Activities Board representative. A successful joint meeting with the Newman Club of San Francisco State College was held recently at Riordan High School.

Sponsor Jack Ross' home in the east bay was the scene of the Phi Delts' second rushing affair. Lasting all day, October 31, with swimming and refreshments, each potential pledge brought his own date to the affair.

Getting off to a great start is the newly organized Sailing Club. The club, which grew from Club Day October 8, had its first meeting on October 19 and elected Bob McNaught and Larry Harris as co-commanders. No sponsor has been found yet, but it is predicted that the club, with 71 members already, will be a splashing success.

Abe Virdeh, Emily Hardy Winners In AS Card Sales Competition

EMILY HARDY: Three-time Associated Women Student winner.

AMS Wins Trophy In Semi-Annual AMS-AWS Contest

Winners in the semi-annual Associated Men Student-Associated Women Student AS card sales contest are Abe Virdeh, with 63 cards sold, and Emily Hardy for the women, with 19 sales to her record, according to a final tally made recently by Al Kingston, AMS president here.

Since the contest was first initiated in Fall 1953, the AWS has won the perpetual trophy presented to the individual association sales winner. In both previous AWS victories, Miss Hardy topped all other contestants with sales. Her name appears on the plaque in recognition of her achievement. This semester, Virdeh's name will be added to the plaque. His sales topped all others in both associations.

Among students entered in the contest were Don Baker, Joe Bavaresco, Walt Freche, Miss Hardy, Marcia Herst, AWS president; Stan Lee, John LoCoco, Adele Mallinger, Patty Mascarelli, AS vice-president; Bob McNaught, Bob Moore, Al Nieme, Connie Panagakis, Betty Peterson, Pat Quick, Pat Smith, Alice St. Louis, Dottie Sutcliffe, Carol Thompson and Virdeh.

Recently added to the already large list of merchants giving discounts to AS card holders is the Rosing Auto Supply, 4735 Mission Street. Discounts of 20 per cent are given on nationally advertised automobile products, according to Ralph Libby, AS card sales chairman here.

At present, AS card holders receive 10 to 30 per cent discount rates on gasoline, clothing, entertainment, appliances, theater tickets and flowers. Increased patronage by students of the college of merchants who offer these discounts enables the Associated Students to offer even greater advantages to the AS card.

In addition to discount rates, many other benefits are given to members of the Associated Students. Drama events, sports events, west campus parking, dances, rallies, active part in student government, voting privileges in semi-annual elections and commencement equipment are offered to card holders.

AS cards may still be purchased for $5 at the student bank, located in the main floor of the Science Building, and the Ramporium, student bookstore, Building 12, west campus.

ABE VIRDEH: High man for Associated Men Students, with 63 cards.

LA Writer Gives Rams Jr. Rose Bowl Chance

City College's undefeated Ram footballers are still well up in the running for the western bid to the Junior Rose Bowl, according to well known Los Angeles sportswriter Rube Samuelsen.

In his column concerning the Los Angeles sport scene last week, which appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle, Samuelsen said, "Best bets for the western bid (to the Junior Rose Bowl) are Compton, Bakersfield, San Bernardino and City College of San Francisco."

The Junior Rose Bowl is played in Pasadena midway in December.

Japanese Eligible For Scholarships Offered By CINO

Students of Japanese descent may become eligible for scholarships offered by the California Intercollegiate Nisei Organization, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced yesterday.

Applications for the scholarships may be obtained from the office of the dean of women and must be submitted to the CINO scholarship committee, 3031 Fourth Avenue, Los Angeles 18, California. The deadline for letters of application is Friday, November 19, 1954.

Presiding officers of CINO and students who have already won a scholarship this year are not eligible for the award, Dean Golding said.

Students who apply must have a C plus average, and judgment of the entries will be based on the applicant's scholarship need and participation in extra-curricular activities. Two letters of recommendation must also accompany the application.

Professional Press Photography Course Co-Sponsored By College

Now under way and in its second day of activity is a short course in photographic journalism being conducted at the Bellevue Hotel in downtown San Francisco. The course, sponsored by the National Press Photographers Association and the Encyclopedia Britannica, is being offered in collaboration with the college.

Some of the talks to be presented today by top journalism photographers will include "Photo-Journalism as a Profession," and "Shooting for the Picture Story," by Arthur L. Witman, president, NPPA and staff photographer, St. Louis Post-Dispatch; and "Changing Your Thinking to Color," by Joseph Costa, photo supervisor, King Features and chairman of the board, NPPA.

Speakers scheduled to address the classes tomorrow include J. Winton Lemen, manager, photo press division, Eastman Kodak Company, who will give a talk entitled "You Can't Rewrite a Photograph," and Mark Kauffman, staff photographer, Sports Illustrated who will speak on "Illustrating Sports."

Editors and picture editors from local publications will offer a panel discussion on pictures. "TV Newsreels," a film presentation prepared by Harry Krause, WFIL-TV, Philadelphia, will also be shown.

During the conference, members of the NPPA will also judge entries submitted to the contest entitled "The Best Picture I Have Ever Taken," which was open to all City College students.

Two gold cups donated through the courtesy of Brooks Camera Co., 45 Kearny Street, will be awarded to the best professional picture and to the best amateur picture. The awards are tentatively scheduled to be made tomorrow night, Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor here stated.

Upon adjournment of the conference here, the "flying faculty" will travel to Los Angeles where they will present their short course, November 11, 12 and 13.

Exchange Rally Preludes Grid Contest Friday

As a prelude to the college football game with West Contra Costa this Friday, November 12, a rally will be held during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., in Building 1 on the west campus.

It will be an exchange rally providing student talent from both colleges. As yet the talent is unchosen, but Emmett Thompson, Rally Committee chairman here, said yesterday, "it looks promising."

The committee, which meets every Monday and Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Student Activities building on the west campus, has 29 members.

Included are Glenn Allen, Bev Bardo, Barbara Batmale, Joe Bavaresco, Diane Clay, Lois Fishman, Bob Frick, Barbara Gock, Dorothy Goldman and Kay Griffen.

Also on the committee are Vic Herbert, Carl Kieper, Bee Klien, Ralph Libby, Bob McNaught, Kirk Mabney, Bob Moore, Jessie Olney, Joan Rettus, John Roberts, Sue Rosenthal, Marilyn Sicotte, Diane Stratford, Gloria Temkin, Rosella Thurman, Rosa Lee Turch, Jean Vachon, Joyce Weaver and Thompson.

AGS Elections Held At Meeting Friday

Nine more applications for the college chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide honor scholastic society, have been accepted, causing the membership to reach a total of 71.

The next meeting of AGS is scheduled for Friday, November 12, in Room 232 in Cloud Hall during college hour. The election of officers is expected to be accomplished, AGS sponsor, Don Jensen, said.

The recently accepted students include Betty Moriguchi, Thomas O'Hara and William Tregoning, who are AGS members for the first time.

Returning AGS members include Charles Gallagher, George Herman, Glenn Johnson and Marvin Mercer who are back for a second semester. William Doyce is a member for the third time and Thomas Guzzette is in his fourth semester of AGS membership.

Boldenweck Heads Delegates To CJCSGA Asilomar Meet; Nine Workshops On Program

Delegates from the college left here yesterday morning for the three-day statewide conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association, held this semester at Asilomar. The conference will continue until tomorrow night.

Bill Boldenweck, president of the Northern California section of the association; Jim Brownfield, association information service chairman; Bob Arago, John Lo-Coco, Pat Smith, Marcia Herst and Al Kingston are representing the college. Louis Batmale, acting dean of student activities here, is accompanying the group as faculty adviser.

Student government leaders, convening from two-year colleges from all parts of the state, are trying during the three days of the conference to gain a better understanding of how student government is conducted in colleges other than their own.

Many resolutions which have come up during regional conferences of the association throughout the year, including one advocating racial integration of all students passed at the Northern California Section regional conference held here October 14, are being voted upon by the delegates.

Workshops are being held for delegate exchange of views on organization and activities of student leadership, Associated Women Student and Associated Men Student organization, student finance, publications and publicity, athletics, rallies and assemblies and campus organizations.

The college Student Council spent last week organizing and preparing material which the delegates are using at the conference. The council also set up a committee to decide whether or not courtesy cards, which would admit holders to activities of the college free, should be sent to two-year colleges throughout the state. The cards would be good until June, 1955, and five cards would be sent to each college.

Homecoming week activities were discussed by the council, and a report from the Alumni Association stated that all tickets for the alumni dinner were sold and that it was proving a success. At the same council meeting, Bob Moore's resignation as Alumni Association Liaison Officer and his election to the club activities board presidency were accepted by the council.

Deans Move To Science Building

Further evacuation of the west campus took place last week when three offices were moved from Building 2 into the Science Building.

Now located on the main floor of the Science Building are the offices of Mary Golding, dean of women, Room 150; Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, Room 148; and Uriel Furlong, attendance office secretary, Room 149.

One of the advantages of the move will be the proximity of the attendance offices and the classrooms. Since absence excuses must be secured from the dean's offices, a considerable time saving effect is anticipated for the students, Dean Browne stated.

Scheduled to occupy the rooms vacated on the second floor of Building 2 are the placement office and the office of the dean of student activities. Although indefinite, it is expected that the third office will be occupied by Associated Student officers pending completion of the Student Union Building in April, 1955.

Selective Service Exams

Any student who is registered in the 11-A classification for the Selective Service and who has not previously taken a Selective Service Qualification Test is eligible to file an application for the coming test, to be held December 9. Applications may be obtained from Mr. Brady's office in Building 3, West Campus or from any local Selective Service board. The return applications must be postmarked not later than midnight, November 23.

Council Endorses UN Return To SF For Anniversary

Adoption of a resolution endorsing the return of the United Nations to San Francisco in 1955 was voted by the college Student Council at a meeting last week. Similar resolutions have been adopted by many civic, educational and social groups throughout the city.

Submitted to the council by Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, the resolution reads as follows:

"Resolved, that its historic importance and the expressed desires of many of its charter signatories call for the United Nations to come to its birthplace in 1955 to commemorate the tenth anniversary of the San Francisco Conference and the signing of the United Nations Charter.

"Associated Students—City College of San Francisco, strongly endorse the proposal (of the Press & Union League Club of San Francisco) that the United Nations be officially invited to convene its General Assembly in 1955, in the city of San Francisco, and we give our support and offer our cooperation in bringing about the success of this undertaking.

"And be it further resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to Dag Hammrskjold, Secretary General of the United Nations, at New York; to the Hon. Elmer E. Robinson, Mayor of San Francisco; to the Press & Union League Club, 555 Post Street, San Francisco, and to the press."

Bill Boldenweck, Associated Student president, signed the resolution and the signature was attested by Louis F. Batmale, acting dean of student activities.

Alpha Psi Epsilon Dance This Friday

The annual Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity dance will be held in the west campus auditorium, Friday, November 12, from 9 p.m. to midnight, fraternity president Emmett Thompson announced yesterday. The dance will follow the Ram football game that afternoon with West Contra Costa.

Tickets may be obtained at $1.25 per couple or 75 cents stag, from any of the following committee members: Rudy Buffin, Ray Dangerfield, Lionel Jackson, Lawrence Lowe or James Lynch.

A Cappella Choir Sings At AVA Program Dec. 6

Following an invitation by Charles Dennis, San Francisco Public Schools director of music, the college's A Capella Choir will sing at an American Vocational Association program which will feature Herbert Hoover as guest speaker, choir director Robert Morton said yesterday.

The program will be held at Nourse Auditorium, Hayes and Franklin streets, Monday, December 6.

Scheduled for presentation by the choir, Morton said, are The Battle Hymn of the Republic, I Love a Parade and Alleluia, the last being a famous contemporary work by Randall Thompson.

New Perpetual Trophy May Liven Up 'Battle Of Giants'

ESTABLISHMENT of a trophy to be presented to the winner of the City College-West Contra Costa football game each year was recently suggested by the West Contra Costa student president; and we must give credit to a rival in this case.

Immediately some are going to say that the Rams have too many grid rivalries already. The Tom-Tom Trophy is up for grabs each year in our traditional game with College of San Mateo, and there is a trophy awarded to the winner of the college's game with Los Angeles City College, our oldest rival.

No one wishes to end our relations with these friendly enemies, but the addition of another football rivalry certainly wouldn't do any harm and might easily do a lot of good for both colleges.

There is no limit to the amount of spirited competition that a team can and should have, and this same sense of competition should carry through to students of the colleges concerned. If a trophy or an established "on-paper" rivalry can boast student interest and support, it is well worth while.

The proposed series with West Contra Costa came at an opportune time for both parties concerned. All of us are acquainted with the Rams' fine record, and West Contra Costa is the only team in the Big Seven that can match the mark. The Richmond Comets are undefeated and currently hold first place in the league, although that may change when the two teams meet at Balboa Park this Friday.

Both teams have been mentioned prominently for the western bid to the Junior Rose Bowl in many quarters, and no less an authority than Rube Samuelsen, nationally-known Los Angeles sportswriter, has ranked Coach Grover Klemmer's Ram footballers as one of the top four teams in contention.

Whether or not the proposed trophy is adopted, the teams will always come up with a little something extra when they meet each other. This year's "battle of the giants" will make this week's game especially interesting.

To enjoy a good football game, and to support the idea of a perpetual trophy between the two colleges, may we suggest that you go out and support the Rams this Friday as they battle the Comets for the Big Seven championship and a chance to start a real friendly rivalry with the Richmond neighbors.

City College Students Can Afford To 'Give Once' For The United Crusade

WE'RE AFRAID many students here at the college will read no farther, for this concerns the giving of money.

College students everywhere are often pictured as poverty-stricken youths in rags, working 19 hours a day to gain an education. Too often this is almost true, and the average university or college student believes whole-heartedly that "charity begins at home."

"A donation to a worthy cause" is an overused expression that has been connected with almost every charity, whether really worthy or not, but with the number of charity movements under way now, anyone who wishes to donate to all of them, even the legitimate ones, is hard-pressed for funds. Such benevolence is way out of reach for the average student.

The answer is the United Crusade, a movement which combines many of the good financial help movements into one charity with only one donation asked. This takes the pressure of the continual stream of donations off the donor.

United Crusade's motto of "Give Once" is the answer. If the some 5,000 students of City College were to give one dollar each, an amount certainly within even the limited means of college students, it would add up to quite a sum. At just ten cents per head, the $500 plus still would help the United Crusade a great deal.

The appeal of the organization is to everyone, but the students of this college, and every college, can help put the Crusade over its goal by giving just that little amount that is within the financial power of any of us.

College Library Had Modest Beginning

Cloud Hall Library Offers Open Stacks, 50,000 Volumes Of Study, Reference And Reading Materials

Stemming from modest beginnings in 1935, the college library has blossomed into one of the finest in the state. Marked by comfortable lighting and pleasant study atmosphere, the new Cloud Hall library is a gem to those who like plenty of room when concentrating, as it is almost five times as large in area as the old one.

The students seem to value the serenity and agreeable study conditions which the modern library affords, and enjoy maintaining them; library staff member Clement Skrabak mentioned recently. Because the new study place is so large, more than three times as many students can be seated, many more college members may take advantage of the excellent facilities and privileges which the library affords. One feature which very few libraries offer is the practice of allowing students to browse in the stack sections behind the main desk.

Almost 50,000 volumes of good reading and reference material are provided, and space for 50,000 more is available; a far cry from the 17,000 volumes which the Science Building offered at its outset in 1940.

To be exact, the story of the college's book lending life cannot technically begin with the Science Building's offerings, for in its infancy the college had no library of its own at all. In fact, it had no campus of its own, but carried on classes in San Francisco high schools. The nucleus of the college library must be considered the one donated by the University of California. The volumes were located in the Galileo High School building where for want of a better place for the library, balconies at either end of the women's gymnasium were closed off and used for this purpose.

Since, from 1935 to 1940, afternoon classes were held at Galileo and morning classes took place at the University of California Extension building, a small library was set up in the latter place for student use. A third principal library was established by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in 1939, a year before the library was to have its own section in a building on campus.

Still, during those five years when the college was without a library, it was not the most pleasant of tasks for some students to travel halfway across town to use their library, for at one time the college held classes in 22 different locations.

Shots At RAMdom

BOUNDLESS ENTHUSIASM of the International Relations Club in producing the International Fair here two weeks back was noted when after the show's first night the producers quickly applied scissors to a Debra Paget-type Arabian dance number performed with much verve by club members.

"Had it gone on the second night, the act would have played to a "Standing room only" crowd.

BARBARA WILSON and the City College News Bureau evidently did a thorough job in pushing Gaslight, the drama department's last production here. After glowing reviews praising the production appeared in the San Francisco Progress, an SF Stater wrote to the editor demanding to know why the 19th Avenue school hadn't received any note for its Richard III effort which ran concurrently.

The Progress editor replied by observing that he had been bombarded with information about Gaslight, weeks in advance of the show while nary a news release came from State and Richard III . . . he said he'd even been paid a pleasant visit by Miss Wilson, insisting that he come here and review the performance.

A SNAPPY black-striped model is the latest addition to Associated Student President Bill Boidenweck's collection of colorful waistcoats. It's a rather special one, made of soft South American wool and tailored in the southern continent.

Brought to him as a gift, it was buttoned on him with a "I hope it fits" by a young lady friend who dropped in on the City for a visit some days back after a two-week jaunt in several south-of-the-border countries. He had a gift for her, too, but didn't fasten a gold chain around her neck nearly as smoothly as she had clothed him in the vest. But then, he had 2000 people watching.

Postmarked Reno, a letter to The Guardsman last week told of the loss of one of the paper's assistant managing editors, Yvonne Feibelman, with the publication for over a year, became Mrs. Edward Cotton over the week end and retired from her newspaper duties.

WEST CAMPUS fountain attendants are still wondering who the joker was that loaded the never-silent juke box with a pocketful of change and played "This Ol' House" 16 times, by earsplitting count on an otherwise pleasant morning last week. Alright, so it has a few leaks.

The Spectator

AMONG THE VAST number of luxuries in this modern life, few are as distracting as the paper-backed selection of books on display in local drug stores and cigar stores.

Hours may be idled away just appraising the racks upon racks of gaudily colored books. Art, in all of its varied forms, has a proverbial hey-day, as the artist presents his interpretation of the author's interpretation of some phase of earthly or unearthly life.

Whether or not the contents of the book are accurately depicted seems to have little, if any, effect on the artist. Art for art's sake reigns supreme. The author of the book huddles in the trunk as his literature takes a back seat.

A rocket ship can be seen zooming diagonally across a field of blue as it picks its way through a mess of stars in search of planet X.

Spheres, triangles and odd lines hang suspended in space and form a very effective background for that eminent scientist Albert Einstein.

Some feline female stretches a long shapely limb and beckons to the poor unsuspecting onlooker.

A man and woman stand with a hangman's noose about each neck on a huge granite block in an area that looks like a devastated city of the future.

Danger, love intrigue, mystery, excitement, sin and adventure are hinted on all covers even though the book may be a manual for the American housewife to help her with her daily household duties.

The question arises whether or not it is ethically right for an artist to take the spotlight from the author of the book.

An argument presented by the artist may be that these pocket books have finally opened a lucrative field for him, and one where he was express himself freely. Unfortunately, this is very true. The same painting on a cover of a book sells, but there is doubt as to whether anyone would want it hanging on his wall at home.

The author, on the other hand, may argue that even though the cover may sell the book, the contents are forced to take a back seat.

There is, however, a solution to the problem. Wherever pocket books are sold there should be two sections set up. One with racks for books that have plain covers and 250 pages of good literature. Another for books that have fancy covers and 250 pages of blank paper.

Vandalism Hits Dante's 'Comedy'

Dante's Divine Comedy has become the target of vandalism in the college library of late as copies were discovered with ripped-out pages, supposedly done by one or more "pranksters." On discovery of this misuse, a memo was issued to instructors for a seemingly much-needed lecture on the "use and care of the library."

This pranksterism has caused a marked "thinning-out" of reference copies available to students and was described by one English instructor as being "childish" and out of place for college students.

One instructor reminisced of "grammar school days"-when stories would be told to the children about how books were "real" and that when their pages were torn or turned back, it "hurt" them.

Surely, the instructor asked, should it be necessary to go to such extremes in college? With that thought the lecture ended, but the Divine Comedy still remains a tragedy.

Rams Overwhelm San Mateo 37-0

Soccer Team Routs Stanford Indians; Tied With Cal For First Place; Playoffs Nov. 27

By Walter Zoschke

What was expected to be a close contest turned out to be a rout as the Ram soccer team overwhelmed the Stanford Indians 7-1 at Balboa Park Stadium, October 30.

The Rams took an early lead in the first quarter when Bob Palma outran the Indian defense and scored by placing the ball within inches of the goal post. Only minutes later, Bill Wren, Stanford's center forward, broke through the Ram defense to tie the score. From then on, Coach Roy Diederichsen's booters took complete control of the game.

FREDDY ZAMORA is the standout dribbler and ball control artist for the Ram soccer team, which is tied for first place with UC.—Guardsman photo by Sherry.

Assisted by the accurate passing of Fred Zamora, Palma and Tony Quiteno, both tallied once to give the Rams a 3-1 lead. Shortly before half-time Zamora increased the lead to 4-1, when his powerful shot eluded both the goal keeper and fullback, who in an attempt to block the kick only succeeded in deflecting the ball into the net.

In the second half, the Rams foiled all efforts of Coach Fred Prittle's Indians by continuing the flawless and co-ordinated team play that had also characterized the first half. Quiteno scored twice and Palma once to make the score a convincing 7-1.

Quiteno and Palma, who scored three goals each in addition to their tallies in previous games, are among the top scorers in the league. Both players took quick advantage of all scoring opportunities provided by their own speed and alertness and by the accurate passes of their team mates. The Ram defense, headed by goalie Art Lembke and fullbacks Fito Mpalma and Ben Schweizer, was instrumental in controlling the Stanford offense, led by All-American Sam Suarez.

This Saturday the heavily favored Rams will travel to San Jose, and on November 20 they host Santa Clara to wind up regular league play.

Play-offs among the first four teams will be held the following week, probably on Balbon Field.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

WITH THE RISE of college football to national prominence has come the development of a problem of equal magnitude. The problem is: What constitutes an amateur athlete? Webster has defined an amateur as "one who cultivates an art or study for amusement or personal gratification."

However, in modern athletics today, the ideal of the amateur in college athletics has been lessened with the influence of professionalism. Thusly, a good athlete has offers of scholarships and inducements from various colleges to play on their teams.

The quantitative attitude toward college athletics cannot be corrected nor can it be pinpointed as resulting from any particular source. The entire economic and social structures of any country are interdependent influences; one cannot exist without the other.

In an aristocratic society, the wealth is controlled by a few, and thusly, the social pattern is established by this esoteric group. The theoretically equal social status afforded in Communist countries provides a similar economic equality.

In the United States, the entire economic system hinges on the process of "mass-production," assembly lines, and the ability of machines to do labor incredibly fast. The emphasis is on the quantitative aspect, economically, socially, and culturally; e.g., the end justifies the means. A business man's standard of economics success is how much money he can make.

Whether such a society is good or bad, constructive or destructive, is immaterial; it is both, and exists as a logical conclusion to a series of developments of enormous stature.

However, the influence of quantitative values spreads into institutions and ideals which are essentially qualitative, such as athletics, art, and public opinion.

Thusly, the development of big-time amateur athletics into a highly specialized, semi-professionalized business is not surprising or evil; it is merely a portion of an overall pattern which has developed; an exemplification of a way of life.

Balanced Attack Featured In Easy Team Victory

By Bob Chrisman

The Ram football team displayed a shattering offense to defeat San Mateo's Bulldogs, 37-0 last Friday at Balboa Park Stadium in the traditional Homecoming game.

By far their strongest offensive effort of the season, the Rams racked up six touchdowns and 457 total yards to top the hapless Bulldogs, who gained only 59 yards net for the entire game, and never advanced past the Ram 45 yard line.

Once more the college team displayed the two forces which have been responsible for much of their success; the powerful running game, which netted 239 yards, and the stonewall line, which yielded only 11 yards rushing to the Bulldogs in the entire game, and was highlighted by the defensive brilliance of Willie Hudson and Gus Bagatelos, game co-captains.

Les Barros marshalled the Rams in the first scoring drive of 88 yards, as he skillfully blended the running attack with timely passes to Leon Bronson and Dick Piazza to set up the score, which came on a one yard quarterback sneak by Barros.

The college scored again in the second quarter when fullback Dick Mannini intercepted a Butch Marliani pass on the Ram 45 and returned the ball to the San Mateo 22 yard line. Manell Calhoun and Mannini advanced the ball to the 12; where Rudy Lopez shot through tackle for the score.

In the second half, Kent Scovil started the scoring landslide by blasting through the San Mateo line for a 56 yard jaunt and a touchdown.

After an exchange of punts, the Rams drove 96 yards from their own two yard line, only to fumble on the San Mateo two. With the Bulldogs in a punting situation, guard John Mansfield charged into the backfield and blocked Bob Nelson's punt. Rich Oliver recovered the ball in the end zone and the Rams led, 25-0.

Mike Forrette threw two touchdown passes in the last minutes of play, a 25 yarder to Roy Barsanti and a 67 yard toss to Don Wilson for the final tally.

WAA Elections Will Be Held This Friday

Open to all women students who wish to join, the Women's Athletic Association plans to hold a meeting at which elections for a vice-president and a secretary-treasurer will be held in Room 257 of the Science Building, Friday, November 12.

Lena Johnson, WAA adviser, stressed the fact that any woman student who possesses an Associated Student card, has a C average, spends an extra half hour at the sport which she is taking as her physical education course, and attends 9 out of the 12 WAA meetings is eligible to receive a WAA award.

Burkhead To Sign Track Men Nov. 19

Official signup for all track team candidates is scheduled for Friday, November 19, during college hour in Annex A, men's gymnasium, Track Coach Roy Burkhead announced yesterday.

Many men who competed for City College last year have graduated, so this year's team will be made up mostly of freshmen. There are many former high school track stars enrolled here at the college who should help the team considerably this season.

Intra-Mural Athletic Program In Final Week

The present intramural athletic program winds up this week with the final games of the round-robin schedule, Alex Schwarz, director of the intramural program, announced last week.

When the champions have been decided, the classes will change places. Teams which have been playing touch football and other outdoor sports will move into the men's gymnasium, and classes that have been competing in various indoor sports will take over the outdoor facilities, Schwarz stated.

Schwarz advised students interested in entering the ping-pong tournament to sign up immediately with him in the men's gymnasium.

Rams Collide With WCC Comets At Balboa Park Stadium Friday To Determine Big Seven Grid Lead

Riding the crest of a six-game undefeated streak, the Rams will host the Big Seven Conference kingpin, West Contra Costa at Balboa Park Stadium at 2:30 p.m. Friday for a game which will determine first place in the Big Seven Conference.

This contest, which is the most crucial on the Ram schedule, will be won or lost in the line play, for both the Ram line and the West Contra Costa Comet line average over 190 pounds. The Comets have yielded an average of but nine points per game as contrasted with 12 per game for the Rams. Particularly interesting will be the clash of Willie Hudson and Severn Hayes at the guard spot. Hayes, a little All-American choice for the Comets last season, and Hudson are top candidates for All-Conference selection in the guard slots.

Offensively, the Rams have scored an average of 17 points per game in contrast to the 19 points of the Comets. Led by Shirlee McCormick, the running workhorse of the Rams, and Kent Scovil, Al Chatman, top scorer for the team, Jim Pfenning and Rudy Lopez, the Rams have netted 1209 yards rushing, with 536 net yards passing, for a total yardage sum of 1745.

Credell Green, a veteran from the undefeated Comet champions of '53, is the ace running back in a backfield marshalled by Kent McDonald, first string Comet quarterback.

The Ram squad is a "second half" team; that is, they play their best ball and annex their wins in the second half. According to Coach Grover Klemmer, the Rams must open up their offense for both halves if they are to beat West Contra Costa.

After three weeks of play, and going into the fourth week, the Big Seven Conference standings are as follow:

Team	W	L	T
West Contra Costa	4	0	0
Santa Rosa	2	1	0
Stockton	1	0	2
Modesto	0	2	1
Sacramento	0	3	0
San Mateo	0	3	0

Wandering Tom Tom Returns For Big Game

History again repeated itself as the Tom-Tom trophy that has been annually exchanged between City College and College of San Mateo, mysteriously disappeared on Tuesday of last week and, just as mysteriously, showed up for the Big Little Game.

A trait peculiar to the one and a half foot tall, red, white and blue tom-tom is this sudden urge to leave its natural habitat just before the annual rivalry game between the Rams and San Mateo, when it is turned over to the winner to keep for the year.

The experts have forwarded their opinions as to the why of the disappearance, some saying that the tom-tom is overcome with stage fright before its debut and others that it's not happy with its present home.

Chatman, Scovil, Derian Co-Captains In Modesto Tilt

Three hard charging co-captains, Kent Scovil, Al Chatman and Jack Derian, sparked the Rams to a sardine tight 14-13 victory against a stubborn Modesto grid outfit recently.

Both Scovil and Chatman scored go ahead points, Scovil in the second quarter from three yards out, and Chatman with 1:35 remaining in the fourth period on a 17-yard aerial.

Just beginning to show the form that was expected of him earlier, Scovil played his best game to date in the Modesto tilt. A product of Lowell High, this first year man is considered by Coach Grover Klemmer to be rapidly coming into his own as a ballplayer.

Fleetfooted Chatman, who does his best running in the open field, brought home the big six pointer in the Modesto clash. Formerly of Polytechnic High, the speedy halfback plays a steady hand at of ball.

Jack Derian, also a Polytechnic product, fills injured Jerry James' vacated position quite favorably. Not given much of a chance to show his worth in the past, the ex-Polyite is steadily improving to the point where, as Coach Klemmer said, he should be a valuable addition to the rising Ram outfit next year.

Cage Lineup Shows Good Height, All-Around Skill As Season Nears

Although the college cage team has no nine footers, its overall height greatly exceeds that of last year's squad. Theopolis Dunn, Dave Davis, D. C. Williams and Mike Siegel all hit the bar at six feet four inches or over, and are quite artistic in the bucket game.

With these factors in mind, Coach Ralph Hillsman has repeatedly commented optimistically on his hopes for a championship contender this year. The interest in the team is especially heartening as 65 enthusiasts turned out for the first team meeting on October 28. The only sad fact is that it is impossible to keep more than 20 of these men on the squad because of a league ruling.

"There will be many standouts from last year returning to the team. The aforementioned Dunn, Davis and Williams are included in a group which also contains Ike Walker, Flemen Hardy, a six foot three incher from Mission, and Sam Gilepis from Pittsburgh.

Many first year men have been turned into the fold, among them are three-year All-City star Doug Horn from Galileo; towering Mike Siegel, a six foot four inch Washington Eagle; John Rudometkin from Galileo; Ed Atkins, a Berkeleyite, and Don DeMeyer, a six foot one incher.

Men like Warren Cafarelli, Odis Hightower, Bob Perry, William Pfister and many more talented bucketeers round out the huge squad.

If all these casabans can jell into a workable group there might be big things in store for the Rams this year, observers have noted.

Only time can tell the story and that story will begin at Menlo, December 1, when the Rams play their first game of the season. Two days later the college cagers will pit their strength against the Cal Frosh on City College hardwood at 8 p.m.

Vital Office Of MAC Still Vacant

Although not a widely known one, the post of Men's Athletic Commissioner is and has been a vital cog in the coordination of athletic activities here.

Thus far this semester, this position has not been filled because most of the likely candidates are engaged in football competition, according to Al Kingston, last year's MAC. This doesn't allow them time enough to carry out the duties of the office. These duties consist of deciding the qualifications for the awarding of blocks and certificates, coordinating all outside athletics by students within the college, and acting as somewhat of a liaison man between the athlete and his instructors, making sure that all academic requirements are met.

In order to be eligible for the office, one must be a member of the Block S.F., and as such be athletically inclined, must be an Associated Student member and have a 1.0 scholastic average.

Kingston will interview applicants in Building 2.

December 1 Meeting For Future Baseballers

Because the college is in the midst of a wild scramble for honors in football and soccer, it is difficult to begin thinking about baseball, which is a long way off. Nevertheless, Coach Bill Fischer, in keeping with a policy of futural thinking, has tentatively announced a meeting of all diamond enthusiasts for December 1 at 3:15 p.m. in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium.

Three main objectives are planned in discussions during the meeting besides the desire of the coach and players to get acquainted. Eligibility factors will be gone over along with orientation on the college's game procedures and the all important scheduling of physical education programs for baseball practice.

Armistice Day 'Ends' After 35 Years

Holiday Now Will Be Veterans Day

By Therese Brychta

Tiny first-graders who daily recite, faithfully if not always solemnly, "I pledge allegiance to the flag . . .," represent one of many age groups who will tomorrow observe what for 35 years was known as Armistice Day.

An armistice as defined means a temporary cessation of hostilities, to provide an interlude in battle so that both sides can discuss terms of peace. Ever since the historic signing of the armistice which brought to a close the great European conflict remembered as World War I, on November 11, 1918, that date has been set aside as a national holiday.

For the first time this year Armistice Day will be officially known as Veterans Day.

To today's slightly older youth, most of whom have already felt the brunt of war, the newly named Veterans Day will be a time for reflection and meditation on more recent truces.

In many homes tomorrow, prayers too, will be offered. Prayers that children will always sleep without fear in a land free from war. Prayers that one day there will be no need for armistices, that one day the world will be free from strife and that there will be everlasting peace.

Veterans Day will mean a holiday, a day of no school, a day when they can sleep late and a day for just enjoying life in general.

Schools, many shops and offices will close their doors and millions of Americans throughout the country will set aside their tools of labor, be it the book or the hammer, and celebrate this day.

Some Americans, those who can personally remember November 11, 1918, will perhaps relive the joy felt that day when they received the news that the armistice was signed, that the war was over.

To the children of America, Veterans Day will mean a holiday, a day of no school, a day when they can sleep late and a day for just enjoying life in general.

AWS Hosts Tea, Fashion Show November 18

Invitations are out now to 20 senior women of all San Francisco public high schools to the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show to be given in the student lounge Thursday, November 18, Mary Golding, dean of women here, said recently.

Personal invitations will also be sent to each AWS member, and a general invitation will be extended to women of the college who are not members of the Associated Students.

Starting at 2:30 p.m., the tea will honor senior women of Bay Area public high schools interested in attending the college. Tea, punch, and cookies will be served by sorority pledges. The fashion show will begin at 3:30 p.m. and will feature fashions from John Palmer of the Riviera Shop on Ocean Avenue. Twelve to fifteen women students will model clothes provided for the affair by the shop, it is said.

Mistress of ceremonies for the tea and fashion show is Marcia Herst, AWS president, who will introduce models, Miss Golding said.

Committees in charge of hostessing, modeling, food, publicity, set-up, entertainment, and clean-up will be chosen by Karin Walker, AWS vice-president, soon. Members of sororities on campus, Miss Golding added, will hostess the affair and heels and cotton dress are in order for the occasion.

New Sites For Student Parking In Consideration

Plans are now being formulated by the administration of the college for the problem of handling student parking when the time comes to abandon the college's west campus parking lot, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of education management here, stated last week.

Suitable sights for the installation of parking facilities for students are now being considered and likely locations for the new parking areas will be either on the east side of the women's gymnasium or in the area now occupied by Hurley Village, Anderson added.

Possibilities of retaining some part of the west campus area, which is tentatively scheduled to be completely abandoned by the end of next year, for parking by students, are good, Anderson noted.

Indications that the parking problem may become serious because of the expected large increase in enrollments in the future make it necessary for definite action to be taken on the matter so as to assure students convenient parking facilties.

Steady removal of various divisions of the college will meanwhile continue to take place, Anderson declared, as these departments move from the west campus to new sights in the Science Building or Cloud Hall.

Dance Planned For Sophomore Week

The Sophomore Ball, to be presented January 21, will be the highlight of the semi-annual Sophomore Week, Brad Owens, sophomore class president, stated yesterday.

One of the features of the dance will be the election of a sophomore king and queen by Associated Student members.

Plans for the location of the dance have not been set yet, but there is hope of reserving the Colonial Room of the Palace Hotel.

Dress for the affair is semi-formal, Owens said, adding that admission is free to Associated Students.

Another highlight of Sophomore Week will be the soph-prof game in which the sophomores challenge the professors. The type of event has not been decided yet, but it may be baseball or basketball.

Working on the plans for Sophomore Week are Owens, and class Vice-President Marian Cheader.

First police uniforms were authorized by the Common Council of New York, July 8, 1693.

Christmas Hiring Heavy, Calls For Santa Clauses

With Christmas several weeks away, employers in the San Francisco area have commenced building up their holiday staffs staffs at a rapid pace, and all indications point to a huge Christmas sales season, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

All students desiring work during the holidays, which start here Saturday, December 11, should file immediately for jobs with Amori in Building 2, west campus. Employers are interested in interviewing applicants now.

Starting slowly and gaining momentum as the Christmas season approaches, the demand for sales, stock, transportation, and clerical personnel from all indications should set a new record in San Francisco, Amori said. Increased population, more housing facilities, coupled with increases in employment, setting free more money for spending, all point toward a big Christmas season, he added.

The demand is for saleswomen, salesmen, cashiers, wrappers, stock clerks, post office clerks and carriers, truck drivers and allied jobs. Experience is preferred in all categories, Amori stressed, but applicants possessing basic qualities will be given an opportunity to learn on the job.

Post office personnel must be veterans, and tomorrow, which is a college holiday, has been set aside for signup of all non-veterans, both men and women. All applications must have a referral card from the college placement director in order to gain entry to the interviewing office.

Applicants with special fitness to act as Santa Claus in department stores are needed, according to Amori. These positions pay well, but applicants must be highly qualified. In addition, attractive women students to act as Santa Claus helpers are also much in demand. Applications are now being processed for these positions.

230 Participate In Nursing Program Here

Two programs are open at the college for young women who want to enter the nursing profession, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

Approximately 230 students are registered in the Nursing Hospital Training Program, conducted with the cooperation of seven San Francisco hospitals. They usually elect general college courses with emphasis in science. After one year at the college they begin a three-year course at the hospital of their choice, leading to the RN certificate.

11 College Coeds Named Models For Photography Class

Models who have been definitely selected to work with the advertising photography class here this semester have been named by Emmett Smith, photography instructor, and include Beverly Bardo, Sheila Ellman, Sue Ligda, Sylvia Lim, Jann Palmer, Beverly Swope, Marilyn Tice, Gayle Tichenor, Mary Lou Williams, Judy Wills and Winnie Wooster.

It is anticipated that additional names will be added to the list since many different types are used for different photographic studies, Smith stated.

Women students who wish to be considered for modeling work may consult Smith in Building 9, west campus, for an interview. It being noted that with some exceptions most of the work is done in the afternoons between 2 and 5 p.m.

In addition to the modeling experience gained, students are given the photographs taken of them.

The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World are "The Pyramids of Egypt," "The Hanging Gardens of Babylon," Phidias' "Statue of Zeus," "The Temple of Ephesus," "The Tomb of Mausolus," "The Colossus of Rhodes," and "The Pharos of Alexandria."

Homecoming Queen's Reign Successful

TWO LOVELY QUEENS, Lee Meriwether, Miss America of 1955, and Jann Palmer, college Homecoming Queen, admire the gold trophy which was presented to Miss Palmer last Thursday night at the Alumni Association dinner. Approximately 131 persons attended the affair.—Guardsman photo by Ruppert.

Little Theater Redecorates Stage, Rehearses For Goodbye, My Fancy

With an accent on more efficient and larger scale production methods and an eye toward reaching an audience of steady little theater followers, the Little Theater group has swung into its third week of an eight-week rehearsal schedule for its coming presentation of Goodbye, My Fancy, Jann Palmer, student producer here with the group, declared recently.

The Group is currently occupied in redecorating the interior of the Little Theater, starting up a mailing list, building a movable box office, and making plans for a special performance of Goodbye, My Fancy to be put on for the benefit of those persons especially interested in little theater from the technical point of view, Miss Palmer remarked.

The cast for the play has been set, and the following students have prominent roles: Diana Williams as Agatha Reed; Edwina Moquin as Grace Woods (Woody); Frank Anderson as Matt Cole; Henry Schlachter as Claude Griswold; Ron Boultz as James Merrill; Stan Miller as Dr. Pitt, and Annie Cancilos as Susan.

Dolores Bolton, Gail Clark, and Jan Sobieski are new to the group and have positions on the production staff as do others new to the group who have expressed a desire to help out and work with the group.

Signups Held For Variety Show

Students who would like to participate in the college's Variety Show of 1955 should sign up at Room 127 in the Science Building or with any member of the Varieties staff, Bob Flanigan, student co-director of the show, announced here recently. The varieties will be presented at the college sometime in late December or early January of this semester.

Staff members for the show include Pete Garrett and Flanigan, co-directors; Jann Palmer and Dick Moore, co-producers; Don Osborne and Anne Canellos, publicity; Roy Maffei, master electrician, and Eddie Farnsworth, head carpenter.

The Varieties will present talent from the college in acts that are staged, costumed, and directed by the student staff members of the show.

Display Space Available To Campus Organizations

Showcases, placed in the more strategic locations throughout the college for the purpose of displaying items of interest to all, may be used by any clubs or organizations on campus at any time with the permission of William J. Eckert, head of the advertising art department here, he announced last week.

As this phase of the art curriculum is scheduled for Mondays and Wednesdays, Eckert declares that those persons interested in using these showcases should do so with this schedule in mind and make arrangements accordingly.

One of the more recent arrangements displayed in the main showcase in the Science Building was a gold trophy and dress for presentation to the Homecoming Queen Jann Palmer.

MC Recruiters On Campus Today

A Marine Corp officer procurement team landed on the west campus yesterday and started a recruiting drive that will last until 4 p.m. today.

Here to give information to both men and women students interested in applying for commissions in the Marine Corp Reserve through either the Platoon Leader Class Program or the Women Officers Training Program, they can be located on the walk adjacent to the Ramporium. Both class programs lead to commissions upon graduation from a four-year college.

A participant in the Platoon Leader Class Program attends a six-week training session each summer during the time he is attending college and upon graduation from college he is commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corp Reserve.

Two-year college students are eligible for both programs if they signify their intentions to go on to a four-year college.

Fraternities And Sororities Ready Pledges For Hell Week

By Carolyn Fisher

ALL FRATERNITY and sorority pledges will receive instructions this Sunday for Hell Week, a five-day reincarnation of Dante's Inferno, to be held from Monday, November 15, to Friday, November 19.

Alpha Lambda Chi held a business meeting at member Joan Rettus' home recently where three sisters, Dodie Stoffers, Kay Griffin and Sharlene Johnson were initiated. The sorority's pledge instruction will be held this Sunday at Joan Anderson's home.

Annual Communion Breakfast of the Newman Club is Sunday also, at the Saint Emydius Church. Guest speaker at the event will be Municipal Judge Raymond Arata who is a graduate of St. Mary's College and Hastings College of Law. Rich Courtway was recently elected to the group position of parliamentarian.

Another new club being formed on campus is the Chess Club and Team. Students interested in joining the group are invited to the club meeting during this Friday's college hour in Room 310 of the Science Building.

Interrogation for Beta Tau fraternity is Sunday, November 14, in a joint meeting with Theta Tau pledges. The men are scouting around for their November Orchid Award winner.

The sorority held its second rushing affair November 2 at the Dolphin Club. An Hawaiian dinner for 70 guests was served with Beta Taus wearing muus.

• Gamma Phi Epsilon met jointly recently with Delta Psi at Lee Thompson's home. The fraternity will hold its interrogation this Sunday at President Bill Phillips' home. Marcia Herst will have pledges meet at her home Sunday for instruction.

A Bohemian dinner for 27 guests was the second affair for Zeta Chi sorority which will hold pledge instruction Sunday, November 14. The sorority had a joint meeting recently with the Phi Beta Delta.

President of the Inter-Sorority Council this semester is Jackie Mascarelli. Other sorority presidents comprise the council.

Officers this semester of the International Relations Club are Marie Carl, president; Abdul Hamid, vice-president; Natalie Titoff, secretary, and Goodarz Bakhtiari, treasurer.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon. News may be delivered to The Guardsman office in Room 304 of the Science Building.

Alumni Dinner, Dance Feature Week's Events

Homecoming Week, the college's annual alumni-student event sponsored by the Associated Men Students, was brought to a close by the Homecoming Dance, held at the Surf Club, at midnight last Friday.

The recorded words of Lee Meriwether, which had officially opened the homecoming celebration at the Homecoming Rally last Wednesday, also served as an appropriate finale to the event when heard by those at the dance. Music for the dance was provided by the Gil Ray band.

Homecoming Week was highlighted by an alumni dinner, which took place last Thursday evening in the college dining room. Mrs. Ethyl Meriwether, mother of Lee Meriwether, Miss America of 1955, was guest of honor at the dinner, which also was attended by Dr. Archibald Cloud, president emeritus of the college and the college's president, Dr. Louis G. Conlan. Bill Boldenweck, president of the Associated Students, and former Associated Student presidents of the college were also present as were members of the Alumni Association and members of the homecoming committee. Don Burke and Art Michalik of the San Francisco 49ers football team, spoke and presented motion pictures of the games.

"One of the most outstanding and successful events of its kind held at the college in recent semesters," were the words of Paul Ortiz and Bob Moore, homecoming committee officials, in describing the Alumni Dinner.

"Attendance, entertainment, enthusiasm and the presentation of the event as a whole were the qualities which guests of the dinner particularly remarked about as being the reason for the dinner's success," they added.

Al Kingston, AMS president and chairman of the homecoming committee, was master of ceremonies for the evening. Jann Palmer, Homecoming Queen who reigned over the week's activities which included the rally, the Alumni Dinner, the Big Game with San Mateo, and the dance, was introdpced to the guests of the dinner by Kingston.

Vets Day Tomorrow; Classes Resume Friday

Veterans Day, formerly Armistice Day, calls for a holiday here tomorrow, according to the college calendar. Armistice Day originally commemorated the end of World War I, and was changed this year in name.

Associated Women Students Hold Tea And Fashion Show Tomorrow

Air World Travel Fantasy Semi-Annual Show Theme

The Associated Women Students will present Air World Travel Fantasy, theme of their semi-annual tea and fashion show tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. in the Building 2 lounge, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced last week.

Twenty students from each high school in the city, their assistant principals, head counselors and senior class sponsors have been invited to attend as guests of the college. All women students of the college are also invited, Miss Golding said, and invitations have been sent to members of the AWS.

Tea will be served from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., according to Miss Golding, and Virginia Gohn and Lucille McGovern, instructors here, will pour. A buffet will be set up in the east portion of the student lounge, and refreshments will be provided by the college's hotel and restaurant division. All pledges from the college's sororities will also serve, she added.

The fashion show will start immediately after the tea, Miss Golding stated. Fashions will be supplied by the Riviera Shop, as they have been for the past three semesters. Commentary on the fashions will be done by Miss Mary Gordon of Trans-World Airlines. Miss Gordon flew up from Hollywood especially for the occasion.

Models for the fashion show include Dolores Bolton, Carol Goodwin, Jan Digiovanni, Mildred Kaish, Lillie Lee, Esther Phillips, Connie Quaranta, Tookie Radillo, Sandra Smailan, Lenore Thompson, Mary Lou Williams and Winnie Wooster.

Jann Palmer, this semester's Homecoming Queen, will appear briefly to model the dress awarded her by the Riviera Shop, according to Miss Golding.

Background music for the show will be played by a combo from the college's band.

General chairman for the affair is Marcia Herst, AWS president. Miss Golding added. Heading the various committees are Dorothy Trezise and Lee Carol Lombard, invitations; Tookie Radillo, decorations; Alice St. Louis, set up; Kay Griffin, programs; Marion Cheader, publicity; Amy Lee, registrations; Karin Walker, entertainment; Janet Weaver, refreshments; Janet Frazier, serving; and Joan Rettus, hostess.

Official hostesses for the tea and fashion show are Miss Rettus, Peggy Alexander, Francine Catania, Gerrie Kink, Kay Griffin, Antoinette Mannina, Louis Mantei, Barbara Redford, Dorothy Sutcliffe, Carol Thompson, Mary Walker, Marilyn Williamson and Joanne Yarnell.

Hayloft Hop IFC Dance Title This Saturday

Hayloft Hop, theme of the traditional Inter-Fraternity Council dance climaxing Joint Hell Week, will be held this Saturday, November 20, in the college auditorium, Building 1, west campus, according to John Roberts, IFC vice-president and dance chairman.

Bids to the affair are $1 per couple and may be purchased from Al Nieme, council member in charge of tickets; members of the dance committee and fraternity presidents. Music will be provided by Walt Toleson and his dance band. As in the past, Roberts said, fraternity pledges will provide entertainment for the dance which is scheduled from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. Casual dress is in order for the affair.

Fraternity members helping to make the semi-annual dance a success are Joe Canepa, IFC president, Beta Phi Beta; John LoCoco, Beta Tau; Al Nieme, IFC treasurer, Tau Chi Sigma; Bill Phillips, Gamma Phi Ypsilon; Pete Ruppert, Beta Phi Beta; Chuck Carlson, Lambda Phi; Dick Vega, Kappa Rho; Roberts, Phi Beta Delta; Dou Pace, Alpha Sigma Delta, and Paul Ortiz, Beta Phi Beta.

Publicity arrangements for the dance are under the direction of Canepa. Heading the decoration committee is Bill Shoaf. Decprations for the dance will be of western motif, Roberts said.

1000 Issued Dates For Registration

More than 1000 students have been issued registration numbers for next semester, according to Alva McMillan, counsellor here.

Appointments are filled to Christmas vacation and some counsellors are booked through January, he said. Students who have not made their appointments as yet should make them as soon as possible, McMillan stated.

"I suggest that students check their appointments to remind themselves of the date," McMillan said. Failure to show up results only in having a later date which is a disadvantage both to the student and the counsellor, he added.

Another suggestion by McMillan is that students who have a free period might drop by their counsellor's office and, if their counsellor is free, have their program interview then. But, he warned, if students are programmed in, this way they should check with the counselling office and have their original appointment cancelled.

Al Nieme Named Alumni Liaison Officer

The vacancy of Alumni Association Liaison Officer was filled yesterday when council voted to approve the appointment of Al Nieme to succeed former liaison officer Bob Moore.

Moore resigned the office to become the new Club Activities Board president and fill the vacancy left by Jim Needles.

The Alumni Association is a non-profit organization run by a board of directors. Members of the board are Ed Frediani, president, and Gloria Dunn, secretary.

Membership in the association is open to anyone who has attended the college for one or more semesters and has left in good standing.

Track Meeting Called

Official sign-up for all track team candidates will be held this Friday during college hour in Annex A of the men's gymnasium. A film of Roger Bannister's four-minute mile will be shown at the meeting, head track coach Roy Burkhead announced.

Clubs Meet During College Hour Friday

Meetings of all organizations on campus are scheduled during this week's college hour, Friday, from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m.

A motion picture is also scheduled for this week's college hour, Madison Devlin, of the audio-visual aids department, announced last week. The movie is titled Wings to Viking Land, and will be shown in Room 136 of the Science Building.

College hour schedule is as follows: 8 o'clock classes, 8:10, to 8:50 a.m.; 9 o'clock classes, 9 to 9:40 a.m.; 10 o'clock classes, 9:50 to 10:30 a.m; college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m.; 11 o'clock classes, 11:30 a.m. to 12:10 p.m., and 12 o'clock classes, 12:20 to 1 p.m. Regular class schedule follows throughout the rest of the day.

BOB MOORE—new Club Activities Board president.

CAB Installs New Officers

Three new officers of the Club Activities Board, Bob Moore, president; Ed Dollard, vice-president, and Marion Cheader, secretary, were installed at last week's meeting of the board.

As his first official duty, Moore announced that all campus clubs must submit their petitions for active campus status to Robin L. Dunn, CAB adviser. Only six clubs are presently delinquent in the submission of their charters, but such tardiness, Moore said, means delay for the entire CAB.

Twenty-eight clubs have heeded requests for submission of their charters and what action possible is being taken on these, but without the additional data required from the remaining clubs, the extent of progress is limited.

Because of a meeting of CAB delegates at Monterey last week, a temporary suspension of activities ensued. Regardless of this, Dunn and Moore appealed strongly to the delinquent clubs and stressed once more that the full cooperation of all clubs must be attained if each organization is to continue its present active status.

CAB meetings are held twice a week on Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in Room 2A of Building 2 on the west campus. Moore urged that all clubs send a representative to the meetings. Anyone who is interested is also invited to attend, he added.

Conference At Asilomar Adopts 10 Resolutions

Adoption of several resolutions voted by the General Assembly of the California Junior College Student Government Association terminated the 18th Biannual Conference of the association, held November 9, 10 and 11 at Asilomar.

In order of their adoption by the assembly, the resolutions are as follows:

1. Considering the need for a permanent extra-class activities record in many colleges, Santa Monica City College was delegated to compile information on the subject and submit it to the next CJCSGA conference.

2. The CJCSGA president will select a member from each section of the organization to investigate the possibility of a discount plan enabling member college AS card holders to discount in authorized agencies.

3. The association will aid member colleges which do not have specific college time set aside for assemblies or rallies by compiling information on the subject and suggesting times to each member college.

4. The association is on record as recommending to member athletic conferences of the association to approve and sanction intercollegiate rallies after athletic contests.

5. Members of the association are recommended to give equal privileges to AS card holders of both colleges opposing each other in athletic events.

6. The CJCSGA will recommend to the State Athletic Committee of the California J. C. Association that a playoff be held each year to determine the State Junior College Football champion.

7. The association will advise the administration of individual colleges that students participating regularly in journalistic duties receive unit credit.

Other resolutions were adopted advocating cigarette advertising in student newspapers, exemption of all student publications from state sales tax and racial integration.

Increased AS Card Sales Approach Goal For Fall '54

In comparison to the Associated Student card sales of last Fall, this semester's sales are higher and more profitable to students here, Ralph Libby, AS card sales chairman here, pointed out recently.

The goal set by the AS for card sales last Fall was 2000 in comparison to the goal set for this semester of 2500 cards or $12,500. To date 2036 cards have been sold totaling $10,180.

For the Fall semester of 1953 the AWS won the traditional AMS-AWS card sales contest by a margin of 22 cards. This semester the tide was turned and the Associated Men Students took the crown from the Associated Women Students. Emily Hardy, three time winner for the AWS, was defeated in the contest by Abe Virdeh who sold 44 more cards than Miss Hardy, giving the AMS the crown.

Last Spring the goal set by the AS was 1300 cards of which half were sold during the first week of instruction. Miss Hardy again was the victor for the women. The women topped the men in the sales contest by $460.

This semester's sales are 464 cards away from the goal of 2500, according to tabulations made at the student bank in the Science Building.

Bill Boldenweck, AS president, has stated that if the full AS program is to be put into effect, the full goal of card sales must be reached. The 464 cards that are missing from the 2500 goal account for $2320.

Manners Of Few At Rallies 'Spoil The Barrel' For College

THE OLD SAYING "a few bad apples spoil the barrel" has held true in at least two recent cases here at the college, and the few students who acted with extreme rudeness in these examples have put a smear on the college that might be hard to erase.

Bad manners and poor public relations went hand in hand at two rallies this semester, the Orientation Rally at the opening of the semester and the Homecoming Rally on November 3.

During the entertainment so thoughtfully provided by the rally committee and other arranging groups, too many students simply got up and walked out, and rather noisily at that. Aside from the fact that they missed some excellent entertainment, they made enough noise to ruin the performance for those who stayed and they were also unthinkingly rude.

Rudeness is uncalled for in any instance, and when a performer is willing to donate time to entertain students, the least the students can do is show some amount of courtesy.

The poor public relations involved were even more apparent in the second case at the Homecoming Rally. Here the entertainers were not from the college, but were professionals who came from outside to help make the rally a success. If they ever return to the college, or have anything nice to say about us here, we will be greatly surprised. No one likes to be walked out on.

Students here must remember that each of them is a part of the college, and anything they do, either good or bad, reflects on the college. Bad manners are neither funny nor smart.

Those who care nothing about the rallies and the college should stay away from the events in the first place. Their noisy rudeness disrupts the proceedings and destroys the pleasure of others. And let any student who does attend a rally, or any other event, remember that courtesy and diplomacy cost nothing and reflect favorably on himself and his college.

Seldom-Praised Campus Police Force Deserves Credit For Job Well Done

A GROUP WHICH has been doing an excellent job on campus and getting very little credit is the campus police force, and we think that they deserve a little praise.

Contrary to the jokes about the police force which say that "the customer is always wrong," policing the campus and at the same time keeping a smile on the face and the temper under control is a difficult job. Sometimes it's hard to keep even a straight face.

The college's campus police are often called "students playing at being cops" by those who don't think or just don't know any better. Actually, Chief Don Baker's group is a well-trained and organized force of student officers, all of whom belong to the San Francisco Police Department.

They have done a grand job this year, as in the past, in controlling traffic on the perennially-jammed west campus, in keeping order at the college's social and athletic functions and in just generally performing what is asked of them.

Enforcing the law is hard work, whether the offender is a gun-wielding killer, a sneering drunkard, or a trouble-making student. Our campus police deserve a vote of thanks and hearty congratulations for the job they have done so well.

Civic Duties Fulfilled

Sororities Active In Voluntary Community Welfare Projects

Each of the seven sororities on campus, in addition to their social functions, participates in a community welfare project.

Some of these projects are voluntary help in the college library, entertaining crippled children at Shriners' Hospital, entertaining wounded veterans at Letterman General Hospital, visiting the aged at the various old peoples' homes throughout the area, taking part in many of the Goodwill Industries projects and making up baskets and collecting clothes for needy persons.

A trophy and plaque is given each year to the sorority showing the best scholastic achievement. The award is in honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women here, and bears her name.

Women students wishing to be considered for invitation to one of the sororities must carry at least 12 units with a C average. All invitations for membership this semester have already been given, but women students may leave their name at the office of Mary Golding, dean of women, for consideration next semester.

The sororities and their sponsors are Alpha Lambda Chi, Carolyn Riedeman; Delta Psi, Martha Scott; Kappa Phi, Valerie Phillips; Phi Beta Rho, Evelyn Kerkof; Theta Tau, Gertrude Norgard; Zeta Chi, Ruth Inskipp, and Delta Sigma Tau, Olga Perkins.

Wanderlust Gets Under Skin Of Tom Tom Again

The case of the wandering Tom-Tom has picked up some new and complex innovations. After mysteriously turning up for the Little Big Game with San Mateo two weeks ago, wanderlust got under its skin once more, and with victory still ringing in the air, it disintegrated.

Possibly feeling a sense of loyalty to College of San Mateo who first introduced it, the Tom-Tom may have gone into hiding until it feels that the devastating defeat dealt the Bulldogs is forgotten.

Regardless of the reasons, if anyone sees a red-skinned Tom-Tom speckled with blue and white, hiding in some corner, please report it to a puzzled and distraught Rally committee.

Echoes Resound In Deserted Areas; Man Is Then Mere Pin-Point Speck On Mural

THERE IS a stillness that covers a deserted area, once teeming with people, that almost speaks for itself, conveying to the viewer mute evidence of noise still hovering over what he sees like a heat haze.

Ruins of past civilizations almost blare forth their declaration that they too once breathed, sang, laughed, dined and drank.

Pyramids in Egypt mutely whisper in the ear of a tourist that what he sees was not always wrapped in a stately silence. The ruins of Rome still ring with the words of Cicero, Caesar and Anthony, just as the wisdom of Socrates, Plato and Aristotle lurks in the corners of Athens.

This type of speaking silence even exists in modern cities where ruins are declared public hazards and yesterday is ripped from the floors of the city by the jaws of a modern, man-made dinosaur.

Montgomery Street, on a warm Sunday morning almost screams to the lone visitor whose steel-plated heels clip through the silent noise, that tomorrow he would look like an ant in a whirlpool of beetles. He walks down a street where, in 24 hours, he would be pushed and swept along by the crowds as they wind their way through towering products of their activity.

Closer to the student is the noisy quiet that hovers over the campus on Sunday morning.

Standing in the middle of the parking lot, he can look across Phelan Avenue towards the Science Building, and the only thing disturbing the serenity is a possible car passing or a piece of yesterday's newspaper lazily rolling and twisting in the wind.

But something else exists besides that car and newspaper. That something can't be seen or heard, but it is sensed. The noise caused by crowds of students, cars and stray dogs still seems to hang in the air like a dream that is forgotten but tantalizingly dances just outside of memory's reach.

One feels an overpowering sense of lonely belonging as he stands in the middle of the parking lot, or walks down Montgomery Street, or looks at the pyramids, or inspects the ruins of Athens and Rome. For here, with the noise intangibly covering everything, he realizes that he is no bigger than a pin-point speck on a mural depicting the history of mankind.

But one thing is outstanding among all the other weaknesses and strong points of mankind, that wherever he treads, the silent sound of his footstep remains.

Floriculture Students On The Hunt

Garden Pests Are Object Of Bush Beating Hunters Armed With Nets And Knowledge Of Harmful Bugs

By Emil Portale

Armed with butterfly nets and a knowledge of insects which harm many of America's flowering plants, this week several of the college's floriculture students will be found chasing many garden pests in an effort to study their characteristics and therefore prevent the wasteful destruction which they create.

Pest control plays an important part in floriculture courses at the college and by endeavoring to capture insects first hand, students in this class learn practical ways to prevent destruction of flowering plants. Recently members of this group did their insect hunting in Golden Gate Park where various interesting species were found and subsequently studied.

Although pest control is important there are many aspects of floriculture which a student maintains. From perpetuating the species by cutting of mature plants and sowing these parts into the earth, to nursing the seedlings into beautiful ferns and vines, the floriculturist is well rewarded in the creation of a veritable prehistoric land in miniature.

Of course nature plays a large part in the growing of plants, but it is not a necessary factor in some cases. Plants need a sufficient amount of moisture and sunlight to survive but, as students learn, these can be artificially produced if necessary by careful watering and the use of special sun lamps.

Another phase of floriculture includes artistic flower arranging, which is essential in the desire to create a certain atmosphere wherever flowers and plants are used. So important is this tangent of floriculture that a one-day-a-week course has been offered especially for this purpose.

Many floriculture students plan to continue this work as gardeners, florists and plant breeders. Steve Bistran, Gus Brouceret, Don McMichael and Kenneth MacLean recently passed the civil service test in this field. Out of a total of 150 who took the test, these four were among the 57 who passed. Bistran placing first in his group.

Throughout the spring the college floriculture department enters many flower shows. The most prominent of these is the Oakland Spring Garden Show in April.

In this competition the college's entrants have won top honors in their category sihce 1948.

• Time Error

Editor, The Guardsman:

I was sadly disappointed last Friday night as a result of an error published in The Guardsman. The error stated that the Homecoming Dance was to be held from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. at the Surf Club in San Francisco. My date and I arrived there at 9 p.m. under the supposition that the dance started at 8 p.m. We were the second couple there. We then left and never returned to the dance.

May I suggest that in the future, copy be more thoroughly edited by you to avoid future embarrassment to Associated Student card holders.

James Hoolan

P.S. I toured Europe (via "slides") instead. Nevertheless I was still disappointed and embarrassed.

(Editor's Note: The Guardsman sincerely sympathizes with James Hoolan in the distress he suffered last Friday evening because of the time error which was printed in last week's issue. However, the scheduled time for the Homecoming Dance was 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. at the time The Guardsman went to press and was changed too late for a correction to be made.)

Shots At RAMdom

OUR SLIP is Showing: In a story about homecoming two weeks ago, a Guardsman article traced a bit of college history, and contained this interesting statement:

"In 1937 a new era began for the college. Angelo J. Rossi, late mayor of San Francisco, turned the first shovelful of earth in Balboa Park on April 25, 1937. Early in 1938 tractors took over, and the college's new building was under way."

The mayor must have been really bushed by then.

PROBABLY LEAST impressed by the shiny stainless steel milk dispenser recently installed in the cafeteria was a girl in a raglan-sleeved coat, who took a strangle hold on a glass and hesitantly shoved it at the machine. Out came a stream of fresh, cold milk—over the edge of the glass and up the sleeve of her coat.

That incident proved one of the few exceptions, however, for the H & R reports that most students get a kick out of using the dispenser and after a few starts master the art of pouring.

AS ONE INSTRUCTOR pointed out, The Guardsman has not been neglecting general reader education Small "fillers," type used at printers' discretion to fill short column gaps, have in the past few weeks told students of the sad plight of Jim Thorpe, who had to give all his medals back, of potato chips and how they originated; of a statue, no less, commemorating the sea gull, and about a victory signal hidden in Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Of note last week was an exciting bit about Old World Wonders and coming up soon (don't miss it) is ah item concerning candleabras.

CROWDS THAT usually surround a Jaguar XK120 coupe in the west campus parking lot are always heard to wonder of the owner's identity. Rams Meet Bear Cubs In Big Seven Finale At Santa Rosa Friday

Coach Grover Klemmer's Ram football team will wind up their Big Seven Conference season when they meet the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs at Santa Rosa this Friday at 8 p.m.

In seven games, the Bear Cubs have lost but one contest, a 34-20 affair with West Contra Costa. They have averaged 24 points per game with a high scoring offense that features a strong rushing crew, quarterbacked by Gary Modrell.

The Rams have averaged 20 points per game and yielded a scant 10 points per contest, as contrasted with the 12 point average allowed by Santa Rosa.

Whether or not Santa Rosa's front wall can stand the pressure exerted by the Ram offense will decide the game. The college squad netted 2202 yards in total offense in the first seven games, which is 311 yards per game.

Sparked by Shirlee McCormick, Kent Scovil, Al Chatman, Rudy Lopez and Jim Frank, the Ram running attack will pit itself against the Cub line, while Les Barros, top Ram quarterback, will perform the aerial chores.

In the recent San Mateo game, Klemmer's team revealed a strong reserve force which accounted for four of the six Ram touchdowns. Mike Forrette netted 117 yards with four passes which were good for two touchdowns, to ends Don Wilson and Roy Barsanti.

Santa Rosa's probable starting lineup will have Terry Cummings and Mel Powell at ends, William Mullahey and Marven Mays at tackles, Dan Shaughnessy and John Hilfiker at guards, and Eugene Fletcher will be the center. In the backfield will be Gary Modrell, quarterback; Don Bossert, fullback, and Charles Brooks and William Rankin at halfbacks.

Tentatively, the Rams will start with Rich Oliver and Diek Piazza at ends, Jaek Derian and Ken Orzell as tackles, Alex Groswird and Willie Hudson, guards, and Gus Bagatelos will be center. Barros will be quarterback, McCormiek, fullback, and Scovil and Frank, halfbacks.

WAA Volleyball Team Tops At Sportsday

Sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association, the volleyball sports day held at the College of Marin on November 6, saw City College victorious in the women's tournament.

Among the 80 participants, those from City College included Shelley Bolanos, Elsiuse Cicuz, Marion Crandell, Beverly Evans, Jeanette Hardy, Susan Herrington, Edward Milburn, Margaret Milburn, Wyoming Robinson and William Taylor.

Hartnell Junior College won the men's and coed division.

More men students are invited by Lene Johnson, women's physical education instructor, to participate in the coed sports days. A list of these are in the women's gymnasium.

Because it is Big Game Day, the sportsday scheduled for November 20 here was cancelled until April 2.

Rams Top Comets In 24-13 Conquest To Lead Big Seven

Determination and a potent passing attack led the Rams to a 24-13 victory over West Contra Costa and the lead in the Big Seven Conference last Friday at Balboa Park Stadium.

The two year reign of terror by the formerly undefeated Comets was halted when the Rams overhauled them after a 7-0 deficit in the first quarter, and with their passing attack connecting 13 times in 25 attempts for three touchdowns, the Rams played David and toppled the Goliath of the Big Seven.

"It was a real team effort," commented head coach Grover Klemmer after the game. The college team clearly outclassed the Comets in the second half, as their line play crackled with its sharpness, reaching its peak of the season in the second half.

Willie Hudson, left guard for the Rams, limited top running threat Al West Contra Costa, Creddel Green to 38 yards in the second half, and Alex Groswird, Ken Orzell, and Jaek Derain overwhelmed the Comet line, limiting their offense to 84 yards rushing and 38 yards passing in this period.

Individually, every performer on the squad seemed to reach his peak, defensively and offensively. Kent Scovil, Rudy Lopez, Al Chatman, and Jim Frank, carried the rushing load for the Rams, as the crackerjack fullback for the Rams, Shirlee McCormiek, was hamstrung with an injured leg.

Although the rushing of the Rams netted but 93 yards, Barros took up the slack and turned in his finest game of the season, with his crisp marksmanship, which sustained every scoring drive.

In the second quarter, the Rams drove 61 yards in four plays for the tally, a 45 yard toss from Barros to Oliver. After intercepting a pass by the Comets, Lopez ran for 30 yards and a touchdown for the Rams.

Barros, after recovering a Comet fumble, marshalled the team in a 50 yard drive for another tally, scored on an 8 yard pass to Oliver, which made the score 18-7.

In the fourth quarter, the final score for the Rams came on a pass from Barros to Scovil from 23 yards out, and the Rams were victorious, 24-13.

Team Statistics Show Ram Power

By Bob Chrisman

A LOOK at the statistics compiled by the Ram grid team in their first seven games indicates the power of this squad, which has won six games and tied one, with Stockton, in the '54 season.

The strongest part of the Rams' offense is their rushing game, which has all the ingredients essential for a strong running attack. Hard-driving Shirlee McCormick is the workhorse runner at fullback, and Kent Scovil, Rudy Lopez, Al Chatman and Jim Frank are breakaway threats. Scovil, who has been weakened this season by tonsilitis, has the seasonal team record for the longest run, a jaunt of 66 yards for a touchdown in the San Mateo game. Previously, Rudy Lopez had the longest run, which was for 55 yards and a tally.

The ground game has racked up 1448 yards in seven games for an average of 206.5 net yards per game.

Led by quarterback Les Barros, the Ram passing attack has rolled up 754 yards in seven games, for an average of 107.6 yards per game. Barros' chief targets are Rich Oliver, Dick Piazza and Don Baroni. Baroni exercises shrewd judgment in marshalling the team's offense and gauging the opponent's defense, for his gambles usually pay off.

Defensively, the Rams have yielded 1123 total yards in seven games, which is 160.5 yards per game. Rushing attacks have netted only 83.9 yards through the college's line. Passing, the opposition has 76.6 yards each game.

The line coach for the Rams is Roy Burkhead, who lettered in football as a guard at USF. Alex Schwarz, also a star USF end, coaches the college wingmen.

Although editorial comment is not part of The Guardsman's policy here, we would venture to say that we saw the smallest football player in the Big Seven Conference at the San Mateo game. His name is Walter Smith and he plays for the college as halfback. Smith is not more than 5 feet 3 inches in football cleats and weighs a little over 150 pounds.

Good Line Is Vital Factor For Grid Power

Ram Forward Wall, One Of League's Best, Sparks Footballers To Fine Season Record

One of the outstanding controversies in football is the argument over which is more important, a strong line or a good backfield. There are many supporters for both sides, but no one can argue against the fact that a good line is a vital factor in the building of a grid power, and a large measure of the success of this year's Ram squad has been due to the line, one of the best in the Big Seven Conference.

Coached by Alex Schwarz and Roy Burkhead, the Ram forward wall has starred in game after game this year. The linemen usually come in for very little praise, but the City College forwards should rate highly when individual honors are passed out for the season.

The most heralded of the linemen usually are the ends, the passcatchers who have more of a chance for scoring and statistical honors than the rest of the front line. The Rams are well-stocked at end this season with a pair of veterans and a newcomer showing the way.

Don Baroni, the 6 ft. 1 in., 180 pound All-City star from Sacred Heart High School, is back for his second year with Coach Grover Klemmer. Baroni was one of the top flankmen on last year's eleven and was equally adept on defense.

Rich Oliver, the other veteran, is another six-footer and also an All-City man. His efforts at Mission High were a good background for the top play that he has displayed at the college.

Diek Piazza, still another wingman who earned All-City honors for his high school play at Polytechnic, has forced the veterans to share the starting roles with him. Short for an end, at 5ft. 11in., Piazza puts his 180 pounds to good use as a sharp blocker and tackler as well as a top receiver.

A serious injury to Jerry James, a letterman and All-Big Seven Conference choice last year, hurt the tackle spot, but the Rams have good men able to carry the burden in admirable fashion.

Ken Orzell, the only other returning letterman, holds down the left side of the line. A law enforcement major, the 6 ft. 2 in., 219 pound Orzell is one reason that the City College runners have so much success through the left side of the forward wall.

Jack Derian, a Polytechnic graduate, has done a fine job of replacing James. Rated on a par with the veterans since season's start, the rangy 215 pounder has showed well on both offense and defense.

Willie Hudson, a freshman, has done an outstanding job both on offense and as a defensive linebacker. A 6 ft., 185 pounder, he was an All-City center at Polytechnic. Hudson has been named to co-captain the Rams twice this season and is a strong contender for All-Conference honors as a guard.

Alex Groswird is the lone returning letterman at right guard. An ex-Marine, he first played for the Rams in 1950. The 6 ft. 2 in., 200 pound Sacred Heart graduate was described by one opposing lineman as the "roughest man I ever played against."

Stan Keith, another newcomer to the squad, played his high school ball at Washington. Standing 6 feet tall and weighing 185, Keith is a place kicker of some note besides being a top blocker and tackler.

The center spot is held down capably by another veteran, Gus Bagatelos, a first-stringer last year before he was injured, has returned to give the Rams one of the top pivotmen in the league. Hailing from Balboa High, the 6 ft. ½ in., 196-pound sophomore is two-time president of the Block SF in addition to starring for the Rams.

These are just a few of the many fine linemen that grace the City College roster. Others, like ends Roy Barsanti, Don Wilson and Leon Bronson, receive the credit due them when the statistics show, in part, their value to the squad. Others, like tackles Bert Mondino, Paul Morgan and John Timosal; guards Norton Chambliss, John Mansfield, Dick Martucci and Jim Hicky, and center Bill Canihan, must be seen to be appreciated.

Cage Practice Moving Smoothly; Hillsman Begins Cutting To Limit

By Emil Portale

With the December 1 opening game drawing near, Coach Ralph Hillsman last week began the difficult task of cutting his basketball squad down to the 20-member limit.

Although the Ram cagers have been trying for top spots on the team for three weeks, it is still not too late for men to try out for the sport. Hillsman urges any interested casaban to see him during practice sessions on Monday and Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the men's gymnasium for further information.

Since there are so many bucket men going out for the sport, they cannot all perform for the varsity. The junior varsity exists as an outlet for cage interests for these remaining basketballers while serving to smoothen performance and build for next season. Any interested player may sign up directly for the junior varsity through Hillsman.

Last year the college was well represented by a Ram varsity that bumped its way to a second place tie in Big Seven Conference warfare. Modesto's Pirates found themselves on top of the heap at the climax of the 1953-54 season after they had pilfered a 71-64 victory from the Rams in the finale. This year seems to have as much promise as last, Hillsman has noted, with five returning lettermen and three army veterans being turned into the fold.

Ram Booters Move Into First Place

City College's soccer team, in first place in the California Inter-Collegiate Soccer Conference, will play Santa Clara in their last game, Saturday, November 20.

The Rams moved into first place last week by virtue of University of San Francisco's win over California. Second and third place teams will meet in a play-off game for the right to play the number one club in the league. A big advantage for the number one team is that whoever plays them will have to defeat them twice in order to take the title. Winner of the conference will win a trip back east to play for the national title.

Block SF Holds Meeting Friday

Next meeting of the Block SF Society will be held this Friday, November 19, in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium during college hour, Gus Bagatelos, president of the group, announced yesterday.

Baseball and track are 100 per cent in membership, while basketball, soccer, tennis and football are rapidly reaching their 100 per cent mark.

At this meeting, moving pictures of Bannister's four-minute mile and of major league baseball games will be shown. Refreshments are to be served following the meeting.

Sponsor of the society, Bill Fischer, added that anyone who has won a letter in one or more of the college's many athletic fields is eligible to join.

Little Theater Group Expansion Credited To Additional Interest

Methods and efforts that go into the production of the college Little Theater group's dramatic presentations will be carried out on a larger basis in the future, because of the added interest that has been taken in the group's work lately, Jann Palmer, student producer for the little theater, announced recently.

"Circumstances which have affected the little theater most appreciably in the past month have made it necessary to unfold and carry out plans for building up the group, by making use of production and promotional ideas and operations that are proportional to the amount of interest taken in us," Miss Palmer stated.

JANN PALMER

The Little Theater group is already at work on plans for complete redecoration of the theater and has recently assigned a committee to handle the large job of arranging a proper program and evening for the guests of the group's special performance to be given on Sunday, December 12, for the benefit of faculty and guests from other schools and Little Theater groups in the Bay Area.

Building up of the mailing list is also being accomplished, Miss Palmer added. Enthusiasm of the group this year is the chief reason for the Little Theater's sudden rise to notice.

The little theater's next production, Goodbye, My Fancy, which will be presented on the nights of December 9, 10 and 11, will be one of the longest rehearsed plays that the group has ever presented, eight weeks having been devoted to it by the time of presentation next month.

Hotel, Restaurant Division Receives $125 Scholarships

At a recent Hotel and Restaurant convention held in Coronado, California, the college division received two scholarships totaling $125.

Representing the college were Wendell Muntz, chairman of the college's hotel and restaurant division, and students James Blaine, Peter Lieman, Alfred Shepherd and William Tessner.

Mrs. Harvey M. Toy, wife of the late hotel owner who left a $25,000 trust fund to the college hotel and restaurant division, donated a $75 scholarship, while Ed Hafter, currently with the Schenley Distributing Company, offered another for $50.

The scholarships were not offered for any specifically outstanding work, but were donated in the interest of helping the college's hotel and restaurant division.

Applications For Deferment Tests Due November 23

Applications for the Selective Service college qualifications test, slated Thursday, December 9, must be in the mail no later than midnight Tuesday, November 23, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

Selective Service registrants who are full time college students and have not taken the test before, are eligible. A passing grade of 70 does not automatically defer the student, but provides evidence for the local draft boards in considering college deferments.

Bulletins of information and mailing envelopes may be picked up with applications in Brady's office in Building 3 or at any local draft board.

The test, three hours in length, will be given at all colleges and universities in the Bay Area. Results will be sent to the student's draft board.

Another test will be given April 21. Deadline for applications for this test is midnight, March 7.

For further information interested applicants may consult their local draft boards who will explain any and all questions concerning possible draft deferment.

Pan American Day, April 14, was established by the Governments of the 21 American Republics as a symbol of their sovereignty and their voluntary union in one continental community.

Club Cavalcade

Hell Week Activities Dominate Campus Life As Initiates Get The Customary Run Around

DOMINATING THIS week's club scene is Hell Week, with pledges of fraternities and sororities on campus running around with little boxes of goodies for members. Picnics, meetings, joints and social affairs keep other campus organizations busy.

The red and white car at the homecoming game against San Mateo appeared through the efforts of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, whose members painted it the day before the game to instill spirit in rooters. A joint late in November is being planned with Gamma Sigma, service sorority at the University of California.

New officers of the Masonic Club, chosen in a recent election, are Mike Strain, president; Rich Klein, men's vice-president; Sylvia Harles, secretary; Bobbie Tolland, women's vice-president; Wayne MacFadden, treasurer; Shirley Spinner, social chairman. The club's 35 members attended a beach party given recently.

The Filipino Club will hold a meeting soon to put forth ideas for an affair to be given soon, possibly in the Mark Hopkins Hotel.

Lambda Phi held its second affair recently at Warren Lubieh's home. Sponsor Robin Dunn and Mrs. Dunn were guests of honor. The evening included daneing and refreshments for 50 guests. The men held their interrogation for pledges recently at Fritz Seinanea's home.

The regular meeting of Newman Club will be held tomorrow at the Saint Emydius Hall. Following the meeting a dance will be held. Last Sunday the club held a successful communion breakfast at the church.

Phi Beta Rho recently had an orientation of pledges at the home of Judy Loorya. Tonight the sorority will have its traditional pledge week joint with Beta Phi Beta fraternity.

The United Students Association is awaiting action on proposals which will provide associate membership in the organization for clubs on campus, so that they may discuss student government, nominate candidates for Associated Students offices, and determine platforms in accordance with their interests, and ideas. With approval of these proposals, the quota will be increased to handle the new responsibilities. Ending the second mid-term week examination period will be the traditional USA dance, Friday, December 3.

Tau Chi Sigma had its second affair at the Armenian Hall recently for approximately 40 couples.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon. All items to appear in the following week's Guardsman should be submitted to The Guardsman office in the Science Building, Room 304.

Membership In Alpha Gamma Sigma Totals 80

New members in Alpha Gamma Sigma bring this semester's total membership in the statewide scholastic honor society to 80 students, Don Jensen, faculty adviser to the group, said yesterday.

The organization's nine new members are Joan Billantoni, Nancy Ehritt, George Gemignani, Richard Gnile, Kenneth Kloong, Richard Lim, Martha Lozar, Irene Schwaggerl and Gail Ziegler.

Jensen said that there are probably many new students here who are unaware that they qualify for AGS membership.

Students who are gold seal bearers from high schools, he said, are admitted to the society on a temporary membership basis. To retain membership in the society a student must maintain a 2.0 or "B" grade average, 30 grade points in a minimum of 12 units of work in any semester, physical education excluded, with no grade lower than "C".

In determining grade averages, the number of units at which a course is valued, is multiplied by the final grade received in the course. A final grade "A" in a three-unit course yields nine points, a "B" in the same course, six grade points, and a "C" would yield three points.

By totalling final grade points from all classes and then dividing this number by the number of units carried in a semester, final grade point averages will be determined.

Any student who thinks he meets these requirements was urged by Jensen to consult him in the Building 3 counselling offices, west campus.

A Cappella Choir Will Sing For PTA Group November 23

Before the speeches of the meeting of the Congress of the Second District of the Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday, November 23, the college's A Cappella Choir will sing a 10 minute selection of songs, according to Robert Morton, choir director here.

The meeting, which is held once a year in the college's auditorium, will begin at 8 p.m. and the members of the administration will attend.

Preparations are being made by the Emporium downtown store Thursday, December 2, Morton said. The concert is scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. and is expected to last from one-half to one hour.

Traditional Christmas songs will make up the program, and also possibly one of the two contemporary works which the choir plans to sing at the Twentieth Annual Christmas Concert to be held here Wednesday, December 8, in the auditorium.

All members of the music department will participate in the Twentieth Annual Concert, following in the usual tradition, Morton said. The program will feature the choir in religious and secular Christmas songs with other music by the college orchestra, and several tableaus.

Ramporium Unique Among Colleges In Publishing Syllabi

Unique among college bookstores is the college Ramporium, located in Building 12 on the west campus and managed by Dick Main. In the nine semesters the Ramporium has been in operation, Main and his staff have published, through time, labor and effort, approximately 30 completely different syllabi ranging in size from 75 pages to the newest one of 425 pages.

What makes the bookstore unique is the fact that the mimeographing, stencil cutting, assembling and everything else connected with the publication is done by the store, at the store. Usually syllabi are published by the school or school district and sold to the bookstore for resale, according to Main.

At present Main and his staff are at work on a syllabus for Theoretical Chemistry by Milton J. Polissar, of the college's chemistry department. The syllabus is 425 pages and contains problems, examples, charts and reference material, Main pointed out. Because the syllabus is printed on only one side of a sheet of paper, the other is left free for working out problems, Main said. He also said that very rarely are the syllabi resold because most are designed as workbooks and should be marked with answers.

This is the second printing of Polissar's syllabus, Main pointed out. He said the first printing, of 500 books, ran out within two semesters. This printing will have 2000 copies and is expected to last at least three years.

Ordinarily the syllabi are sold at approximately one cent per sheet, but because the chemistry syllabus is so large, it is expected to sell for $3, according to Main.

Two thousand reams, each ream containing 500 sheets of paper, have gone into this publication of the chemistry syllabus. Approximate cost, Main said, is in the neighborhood of $4000. Syllabi, Main declared, are sold at a 20 per cent mark-up, which of course increases Associated Student funds by adding to the profit of the store.

The syllabi which are published by the bookstore are required in the courses, Main said. Some of the departments and courses that use syllabi are chemistry, hotel and restaurant, baking, economics, psychology, business, art, architecture, floriculture, engineering, physiology and photography.

Two and one-half months of work by four persons working five hours a day have gone into the present syllabus which is due to be sold next semester, Main said.

Board Announces Publication Rules Governing Posters

Regulations governing the distribution of printed matter other than official or recognized publications, and posters on and about the campus were announced yesterday by Gail Allan Moss, Publications Board chairman here.

All printed matter which is to be distributed on the campus must be submitted to the publications board for approval before distribution, in accordance with the regulations which are as follow:

1. Any organization or campus group which intends to publish any material for distribution to any students of the college must have the master copy approved by the board chairman, and a copy of the distributed material must be sent to the chairman. If this rule is not followed, the publication will be cancelled by the board.

2. All posters which are to be put on campus must be approved by the chairman before posting. Violation of this rule will mean immediate tearing down of the posters.

Moss stressed the fact that these rules were instituted for the protection of the good name of the college, as well as for the protection of any individual organizations concerned. He also pointed out that material should be carefully written and reread, so that it may be approved at the first submission, thus saving time and effort for all parties concerned.

Persons wishing to submit material for approval may find Moss in The Guardsman office, located in Room 304 of the Science Building.

The Guardsman is the only official publication on campus and Forum magazine the only recognized publication.

Student Banking System Provides Ease, Protection

One major feature of the college's system to provide protection and guidance for students is the student bank, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, in a statement made here last week.

The student bank works closely with all student committees at the college and handles more than 100 accounts which are taken care of for the student organizations by the two-person staff that runs the bank, Anderson said. Roberta Frederick, cashier, and Carl Anderson, bookkeeper, are the two employees who do the business of helping keep student budgets and accounts straight.

Anderson stressed the fact that the bank was not set-up or equipped to do regular banking business. Checks cannot be cashed at the bank by students unless a special circumstance arises.

The bank is run with a minimum of red tape, Anderson said, and every effort is taken to expedite student business matters.

"If the proper channels are gone through and rules are observed by students and various committees then the bank, which is there primarily for student benefit, can do its best job," Anderson declared.

Regulations for students using the Science Building-Cloud Hall area were also outlined by Anderson. Students using class rooms, and, especially any equipment, while not being supervised are breaking a rule of the City Board of Education.

Anderson complimented students for observing the "no smoking" rule and keeping the campus clean, but he feels there is still room for improvement in both instances.

Lack Of Space Slows West Campus Shift To Science Building

Administrative offices at the college are at present mainly concerned with the problem of finding space to accommodate the installations and offices now located on the west campus and expected to move to new locations in the Science Building in the near future, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here, announced last week.

Offices of the Dean of Men and Dean of Women, first to be moved this semester, are expected to be completely installed in their new Science Building locations by the end of this week. Room S-148 will be the new quarters of the Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, while the office of Dean of Women Mary Golding will be established in Room S-150, Anderson said.

Graphic Arts, now in Building 9, and the testing division, at present in Building 3, are tentatively scheduled for moving as soon as possible.

Photography, counselling, and ceramics will follow when the problem of finding space, which will be a particularly difficult obstacle to overcome in their cases, is settled, Anderson remarked.

Student activities, placement and student government offices will remain in Building 2 until the west campus is ready to be completely abandoned.

Entitled "A Tiger in the House," a photographic study of a cat by Pete Ruppert, Guardsman photographer, won top amateur honors in the photography contest judged November 10, at the Bellvue Hotel.

Eighteen amateur pictures were submitted and members of the National Press Photographers Association, which sponsored the contest, "The Best Picture I Have Ever Taken," judged the pictures during their short course in photographic journalism.

Ruppert, a photography major at the college now in his fourth semester of study, plans to enter the newspaper photography profession upon graduation. He hopes eventually to open a studio of his own. Ruppert received a gold cup donated through the courtesy of Brooks Camera Co., 45 Kearny Street, for his prize-winning photograph.

Promoting the professional level of journalistic photography served as the theme for the short course which was attended by students of the photography department here in addition to 220 professional photographers.

One of the high points of the series, according to Beverly Pasquaietti, photography instructor here, was the talk given by J. Winton Lemen, Photo Press Division, Eastman Kodak Co., entitled "Your Can't Rewrite a Photograph" which stressed the importance of getting the photograph correct the first time. That the press photographer is the newspaper's public relations man was another point brought out in the lectures, Pasqualetti added.

Presented in collaboration with the college, the series proved to be highly successful, both well received and well conducted.

Students Return To Exams After Turkey

No classes will be held Thursday, November 25, and Friday, November 26, because of the Thanksgiving holiday.

Regular class schedule will be resumed Monday, November 29, which begins the week for midterm examinations. Midterm examinations will be held throughout the week.

Because the examinations will be in progress, no college hour is scheduled for Friday, December 3.

Showing of the weekly pictures by the audio-visual aids department will be curtailed on that date, but will be resumed on Friday, December 10, along with a college hour program.

Thanksgiving holiday will interrupt publication of The Guardsman until Wednesday, December 8.

College Choir Presents Annual Yuletide Concert

For the twentieth successive year, the college's music department will present its annual Christmas Concert in Building 1 at 8:15 p.m., Wednesday, December 8. Robert M. Morton, A Cappella Choir director, said yesterday. This concert will highlight a schedule of concerts for presentation this year.

Co-sponsored by the Faculty Association and the Associated Students, the program will include a prelude of Christmas Carols by an Instrumental Ensemble, Meyer M. Cahn directing; a Recitative from Messiah, featuring William Haber, tenor; a balanced group of Christmas songs by the A Cappella Choir; a series of songs by the Men's Glee Club; and solos by soprano Jo Anne Bedell and bass Raymond Murillo. A floating tableau depicting the birth of Christ with accompanying music will also be included on the program.

Totaling approximately 125 participants, the program will be directed by Morton. Ushering will be performed by members of the Associated Women Students, and Patricia Qulek will provide the piano accompaniment during solo numbers.

Prior to the Christmas Concert, the A Cappella Choir will appear Monday, December 6, to sing during an American Vocational Association program in which the featured speaker is to be Herbert Hoover, Morton said.

The Battle Hymn of the Republic, I Love a Parade and Alleluia are to be presented. The program will be held at Nourse Auditorium located at Franklin and Hayes streets in San Francisco.

The choir sang last night before a meeting of the Congress of the Second District of the Parent-Teacher Association held in the college auditorium. The program consisted of ten minutes of selected songs.

The coming concert on campus is expected to last about one hour and a half.

Faculty Members Attend Fairmont Convention Of AVA

Six faculty members of the college will participate in the 48th annual American Vocational Association convention to be held between December 3 and 7. Headquarters for the convention will be the Fairmont Hotel.

Members of the administrative staff participating are Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction here, who will act as chairman of the Speakers Bureau, and John J. Brady, coordinator of student welfare, who will be chairman of the special tours committee.

Joseph Amori, placement director for the college, will head a workshop concerned with the problems and procedures of transportation. The workshop will meet on December 6 at Macy's Department Store in San Francisco.

Chairman of the Art workshop for the convention is William J. Eekert, who heads the advertising design and commercial art department here.

Hilda Watson, now on leave, who is head of the hotel and restaurant division at the college, is co-chairman of the banquet committee.

Photography instructor Beverly Pasquaietti will head the photography workshop for the convention.

The American Vocational Association was originally organized in an attempt to promote interest in and training for vocational and industrial arts in the United States. The association also looks after the interests of professional people engaged in teaching those particular fields of education.

Other local organizations participating in the convention are the Academy of Advertising Art, the California Schools of Arts and Crafts, the Art League and San Francisco State and San Jose State Colleges. Many of the participants represent across-section of local and national leaders in the fields of vocational and industrial arts.

Council Out For Tea

Because the Associated Women Students' semi-annual tea was being held in the student lounge in Building 2, last Tuesday's meeting of the Student Council was forced out and over to the steps of the auditorium.

Since a quorum was not raised, the open-air meeting was restricted to announcements by committee representatives.

Unless special activities interfere, the council will meet regularly on Tuesdays and Thursdays at noon each week throughout the semester.

Administrators Select Scholarship Winners Next Week

Winners of the Denman scholarships will be selected at a meeting of the award committee which will be held here sometime next week, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced today.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, Dr. A. J. Cloud, president emeritus, Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, and Dean Golding make up the award judging committee.

These awards have been issued annually to two women students since 1939. They were instituted by Superior Court Judge William Denman and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatham, in commemoration of their father James Denman who was superintendent of San Francisco Public schools from 1860 to 1861 and from 1868 to 1875.

Presentation of the awards, both in the amount of $125, will be made on Prep Day, Wednesday, December 8, Dean Golding said.

High School Student Leaders Visit Campus For Reception In Third Prep Day December 9

Student leaders and administrators of the seven San Francisco Public High Schools will be hosted here on Thursday, December 9 in the third semi-annual Prep Day to be held at the college.

Designed for high school students who are thinking of attending the college, Prep Day was first initiated at the college in the Fall semester of 1953 under the guidance of ex-Associated Student President George Effenberger and President Louis G. Conlan.

As in the past two events, the Prep Day program will open with registration from 9 a.m. to 9:30 a.m., proceeding to a coffee hour, a tour of the buildings on campus, group picture of all representatives from high schools and students here participating, luncheon and entertainment and a tour of classes from 11 a.m. to 12 noon.

In charge of Prep Day plans is Patty Mascarelli, AS vice-president. Committee heads chosen by Miss Mascarelli are as follows: registration, Marcia Moore and Ralph Libby; coffee hour, Associated Women Students; guides, Bob Arago; entertainment, Jann Palmer; decorations, Karin Walker and Betty Peterson; place cards, Allie Green; luncheon, Marion Cheader.

There will be several guest speakers at the luncheon, one being a former student of the college as principal speaker. Other administrative leaders and AS officers will deliver brief messages.

In all, Miss Mascarelli said, about 70 student leaders and administrative representatives are expected to come for the day. High schools represented are Abraham Lincoln, Balboa, Galileo, George Washington, Lowell, Mission, and Polytechnic. Usually attending are the principal and vice-principal of each public secondary school and student officers of each high school.

Last semester's Prep Day, in which 70 leaders were present, was termed a "huge success" by Miss Mascarelli.

UC Applications Due January 15

Students who are planning to attend the University of California next semester should have their applications and transcripts on file in the Admissions Office of the University by Saturday, January 15, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, announced this week.

Requests for transcripts, Miss Learnard said, can be obtained in the registrar's office located in Building 3 on the west campus.

Transcripts should be sent in before the end of the fall semester in order that they be evaluated by the Board of Admissions.

'Fancy' Ticket Advance Sales Expected Heavy

Advance ticket sales for the college Little Theater's performance of Goodbye, My Fancy, Thursday through Saturday, December 9, 10 and 11, are expected by Jann Palmer, producer of the group's presentations, to be unusually heavy because of more effective means of ticket dispersement, and an all out campaign on the part of members of the group to have all tickets sold by the time of the play's presentation, Miss Palmer stated last Thursday.

Tickets went on sale to students last week at the student bank and will also be sold by most of the Little Theater staff on and off the campus. Admission will be free to members of the Associated Students and 50 cents to students not having AS cards. General admission will be $1.00. All students interested in attending the play, a three-act comedy by Fay Kanin, are advised by Miss Palmer to secure their tickets as soon as possible in order to insure having seats for the performances.

Goodbye, My Fancy will be the Little Theater's last production of the Fall semester because of a change in the social calendar which provides that the Variety Show take place on the dates of the Little Theater's originally scheduled performance of its third and last play of the semester, Black Chiffon, Michael Griffin, faculty adviser of the Little Theater here, announced.

Sets for the play and wardrobe are expected to be completed by the end of this week, Miss Palmer added. Also soon to be completed is the redecoration and revamping of the group's playhouse, Room 28 of the Science Building.

Mom Gets The Bird

All Make Hay Thanksgiving Day

By Dolores Stoffers

Ah, Thanksgiving — no classes, sleep in late — so one thinks. The lady of the house has different ideas, though.

She has to cook a banquet size meal for a few dozen starved relatives, and if she can't sleep later, no one else is going to have a chance to.

By 10 a.m., the storm warnings go up, and she commences to outsergeant a marine sergeant. Everybody, but everybody is put to work while Mom runs in circles barking commands and tearing at her hair. Once in a while she inspects the turkey, and by the time it's clean, everyone swears that she has a special and innate capacity for discovering patches of pinfeathers.

Then comes her big scene of the day. With dexterous fingers she stuffs the dressing into the turkey, stepping back, every once in a while, to admire her handiwork.

Soon the relatives arrive and swarm toward the dinner table like a colony of famished locusts.

Good old Dad now is ready for his biggest show of the year. All day he has been rehearsing the carving ceremony, and improving his showmanship with new and original movements of the knife.

He strides to the table, picks up the knife, and proceeds to butcher the turkey with long, flowing slashes. He ruins it, all right, but is he happy!

As soon as dinner's over, the relatives nudge each other, and all swarm out more quickly than they did in, because soon the subject of conversation would have changed to dishes.

President's Atoms-For-Peace Plan Vital To College Students

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has made a decision which will vitally affect perhaps most of the world's population and which, in many ways, is of importance to today's college students more than to any other group.

The President has proposed the "Atoms-For-Peace" plan to the United Nations and it is at present still up for debate. Along with the plan goes an offer of some 22th pounds of fissionable material to serve as fuel in the experimental reactors' program in the plan.

It is perhaps significant that this 22th pounds of fissionable material is the amount normally used in just one atomic bomb, yet in the words of Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., the United States' delegate to the United Nations, "... This amount of fissionable material is enough to activate a considerable number of these reactors throughout the world."

We're sorry to say that the world atom-war editors were preparing to leave for its war-end, is not, is pretty one. Despite the numerous peaceful channels possible for atomic power, most of the world's atomic power has previously been directed primarily to war machines and such.

The college student of today is the scientist, doctor and just average citizen of ten years hence. In those ten years education in atomic energy should progress rapidly.

The question in everyone's mind now is: Will it progress along the road to peace and better living, or will it "progress" towards more and more terrible weapons of war?

We of the present college generation will be the most vitally affected by the answer to this question. Naturally, we, with the rest of the world, want to answer "atomic research will be used to make this a better and completely peaceful world." For this to be the final answer, everyone must work together, toward that aim.

President Eisenhower's "Atoms-For-Peace" plan is a big step in the right direction. Regardless of political connotations everyone must support it to make this the free and peaceful world that we all want.

Up-To-Date Library Literature Keeps Students Well Informed

By Antoinette Mannino

More than 100 magazines covering many contemporary arts available in the library to students of the college, with subscriptions covering many fields such as politics, women, science, architecture, art, education, the theater, music and photography.

The latest national and international developments may be found in Newsweek, United Nations Bulletin, and U. S. News World Report.

Sports enthusiasts will find a variety of athletic magazines such as Amateur Athlete, Sports Illustrated, and Athletic Journal. Valuable scientific information is contained in the Science Digest, Popular Scientific Monthly, and Scientific American.

The latest architectural developments are featured in Architectural Record, Arts and Architecture, and Progressive Architecture.

In the field of art, the library subscribes to Art News and American Artist, among others.

News of the theatrical world may be found in Variety, The Listener, and Radio and Television News.

Music fans find good reading in Opera News and Musical America.

Vital information on education is available in Education and Journal of General Education.

Some new fads in photography may be found in American Photography.

Aside from the magazines and periodicals subscribed to by the library, donations have also been received. Esquire was donated by Robert S. Atkins & Co., and C. V. Griegle of Sacramento has donated Arizona Highway Focus, Appalachian Trailways, and the Living Wilderness.

Two new additions to the college library give students an opportunity to study the cultures of many countries.

An edition of Phedias by the late John Galen Howard, distinguished architect, was presented to the library by Mrs. Howard. The book gives a vivid description of the Greek sculptor.

Most outstanding of Howard's accomplishments was the planning of The University of California, including the Campanile, Sather Gate, the Greek Theater, and California Hall.

The other donation, consisting of 100 books, 1800 mounted photographs, and 5,000 picture postcards and miscellaneous magazines was given by Mrs. Andrew Burton Talbot in memory of the late Mr. Talbot, also a distinguished architect.

The material covers Cathedral Greek, and Oriental types of architecture. Outstanding of these is a handsome set of French encyclopedias on architecture.

Some Get Money From Government— And One Quarter Of Students Here Do

Were people on GI money from the Government?

And one fourth of students here do.

Before the aid program was discontinued last February, all an interested young man or woman had to do was walk down to a certain building off Van Ness Avenue, where smiling recruiters took them by the hand. They were assisted in the signing of many papers, and after a period of military service they became eligible for the GI Bill.

All but 20 of the college's 1050 veterans receive benefits from Public Law 550, according to Betty Arnold, secretary in the Veterans Affairs office. There are five more Korean veterans under Public Law 894, a special provision for disabled veterans. Thirty-one students here saw service in the second World War. Six of these are studying under Public Law 16, the remainder under Public Law 346. There are 17 students under a special state program.

The government dispenses a handy booklet titled imaginatively DA Pamphlet 21-4 or Navpers 15855 or AF Pamphlet 34-4-2 or Navmc 1072 of CG142 to newly-minted veterans. This booklet explains that one and a half days of education is allowed for each day in the service, with a maximum of 36 months, under Public Law 550. An unmarried student gets $110 a month, with higher rates for married men.

Shots At RAMdom

A FEW weeks back the Guardsman mixed its half-tones and labeled a picture of Counsellor Walter E. McCloud's cocker dog as being one of Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne's female sienna spaniel, Buddy.

This act of shoddy journalism evidently irked Miss Brown no end, for last week The Guardsman received a letter from her (SURE it was) indicating that she was "contemplating litigation" against the paper claiming a libel suit as general damages and the editor's pet dipper in pain-like damages.

Also last week the Guardsman was sent a communication from two examinee examiners citing certain cases of precedent to the use of "Brown vs. CCSF et al."

Contacted by reporters, Miss Brown's only comment was that she felt the whole case could well be cow-tailed.

GRIN REMINDER: A tragic incident at the City College Stadium are two Mule signs advising students to quit "Taking Five" and "Wasting Out for Cars" recently erected on the fences by the west campus street car line.

During last registration week another incident occurred when a student, trying to enter the college entrance gate, collided with the incident out to the parking lot where she stopped to speak to a friend. Five minutes later while crossing the home plate track, she was struck down and killed by a streetcar approaching "K" car.

AFTER MANY YEARS of being confined with San Francisco State, it seems as if returning to a change to be involved with someone else. November releases from the Associated Collegiate Press tell of Lee Mortensen's tape recorded messages to Homecoming dance crowds, saying that Miss America's crown figured in USF Homecoming plans.

IN A LECTURE on corporate structure last week, an economics instructor was listing the ways a firm could advocate incorporation in the name "In the United States the name is followed by 'Inc' or 'Corp'; in England by 'Ltd' and in Germany, 'Gmbh.' It is important to be sure to get this by Gesellschaft mit beschrankter Haftung."

The awed silence that followed, interrupted only by falling pencils, was broken by the instructor's laughter as he strode out the door.

By Therese Brychta

With the exception of the ceramics and jewelry classes which are still located on the west campus, design and art classes, under the direction of Evans Ecke, are now located on the third floor of the Science Building. These classes are being conducted in rooms which were previously occupied by the library, now a predominant part of Cloud Hall.

Students interested in advanced study in specialized art fields are offered a specially planned program to provide the fundamentals required. Some specialty fields include theatre, book illustration, interior and animation.

Professional achievement, according to Ecke, depends on the student's ability to think, feel and act in accordance with his problems.

To describe "feel" from the art point of view, the student learns to react sympathetically to moods, qualities and experiences observed around himself.

That the student must be able to "act" is his ability to put thought and feeling into coherent form through control of materials, tools and processes.

Resolving relationships of space, two and three dimensions, color and surface into effective wholes determines the student's ability to "think."

At the college the visual fundamentals involving thought, feeling and action are offered in a two-year program of closely allied courses.

During the first year students study basic design, approaches to art and exploratory techniques. In the second year the students are offered courses in advanced design, oil painting, art history, ceramics and jewelry.

Each year the advanced design class works on a project which calls for the participation of each student enrolled in the course. This year the group is working on an imaginary hotel in India, with some students working on the menus, others on the brochures and emblems, which all will go toward the finished project near the end of the semester.

Impersonation Pays

Santa Claus Goes To Work Again

There will always be a Santa Claus and ambitious students can make more than $100 a week impersonating him this Christmas season.

Santa Claus must be rather large in stature, according to Joesph A Amori, placement director here. He must have an abundance of energy and be able to work under pressure. He must have confidence in himself and be able to generate enthusiasm among others.

Above all, he must love and understand children of all ages and nationalities.

Pay usually runs between $100 and $200 a week in department stores. Hours are usually from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. For private showings in business or in homes, Santa Claus usually gets $25 for each appearance.

Women have an opportunity to work as helpers for Santa Claus. They should have the same personality qualifications. Their jobs will be to bring the children to Santa Claus.

Dean Digests Student Excuses For Absences

Among the reasons for absences because of illness submitted to the attendance office throughout the semester are many humorous ones, according to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men.

One student presented a note from his parents stating that the student was absent because of an "indigestible" stomach. Dean Browne also cited cases where veterans have claimed illness because they have just become fathers. Stomach flu, "stomick flew" and "stomack flue" have all been received as excuses for absences because of illness.

When asked to comment on his new surroundings in the Science Building, Dean Browne said his feelings could be likened to that of a camper who has spent several weeks in the great outdoors and was glad to get home.

Little Theater Has Face Lifted

Brushes And Hammers Change Theater Looks

Turning an abandoned, run-down rifle range into a facility suitable for the presentation of dramatic productions is not necessarily the highly improbable and difficult feat that it would seem to be, nor does the idea lack its fair share of congruity. This is providing, of course, that the group intending to make use of said unlikely location is a little theater company.

In order to obtain an idea of what can come of such circumstances an interested party might pay a visit to the college's little theater in the basement of the Science Building. There one may receive proof that not only is it possible to stage a production, prepare sets and props and house an audience in a cracker-box playhouse but, indeed, that it might even be considered an ideal setup for a little theater from an audience's point of view.

The group has recently embarked on the latest and, according to Michael Griffin, director of the group, most extensive of a series of campaigns to provide their playhouse with as many of the desired and necessary accoutrements peculiar to little theater as is possible.

Actresses and actors have set down their lines and have taken up paintbrush and hammer and joined the production staff in applying a face-lifting to their little cubbyhole of a theater.

Orders from Jann Palmer, producer for the Little Theater here, to repaint anything repaintable and to revamp anything revampable have been cause of a gradual change which is likely, as is usual with this type of thing, to possess the tendency and power of exuding the very feelings and emotions, the heartaches and exaltations —in short the spirit of the little theater folk.

An addition to the playhouse theater soon will be a newly constructed box office. Photographs of previous Little Theater productions will adorn the walls of the lounge, which has a new color scheme of blue and coral.

The outside of the theater has taken on a more lively appearance with the installation of a bulletin board.

The doorway into the theater now features a sign denoting the home of the Little Theater and the well known symbol of drama, the masks portraying comedy and tragedy, greets the play-goer from the glazed glass door.

All of these efforts will, according to the Little Theater group, fall into place by the time of the presentation of the group's next play, Goodbye, My Fancy, December 9, 10, and 11.

Bear Cubs Hand College First Loss

McCormick Grounds Comet

RAM FULLBACK Shirlee McCormick makes a desperation grab to prevent a West Contra Costa touchdown in the Ram-Comet game on November 19. Sherry's camera catches McCormick as he grabs Richmond halfback Emmett Kirtman as the little Comet speedster tries an end run. Kirtman had virtually a clear field in front of him before McCormick made his jersey-grab from behind. Kirtman's dazzling open-field running and the power and speed of his running mates couldn't overcome City College's strong defense as the Rams whipped previously unbeaten West Contra Costa, 24-13.

Undefeated College Booters Oppose Winner Of USF-UC Soccer Playoff In Game For League Championship

By Walter Zoschke

Convincing victories over the soccer squads of Santa Clara and San Jose, have earned the Rams a distinct advantae in the coming championship game to be played this Saturday, November 27, at 2 p.m. at Balboa Park Stadium.

The undefeated Rams will meet the winner of the playoff game between second place USF and third place UC. Having captured first place in the regular season, the Rams need only a tie to cinch the title, while the winner of the USF-Cal game will have to defeat Coach Roy Diederichsen's bootcers twice to gain the championship.

USF is favored to defeat UC, and in Saturday's game will go all out to avenge the setback they suffered at the hands of the Rams earlier in the season, although the college's booters will be favored over the Dons.

The Rams had little difficulty in defeating fourth place Santa Clara 6-1 at Balboa Park Stadium last Saturday. After ten minutes of scoreless play, inside right Fred Zamora broke the ice when he scored on a powerful 40-yard boot. Right wing Ron Viscaya and inside left Tony Quiteno each tallied in the second quarter to give the Rams a comfortable 3-0 half time lead.

In the second half, left wing Joe Muscat, center forward Bob Palma and Tony Quiteno scored one goal each for the 6-0 score before the Bronco registered with their lone tally.

As expected the Rams also defeated winless San Jose State, 7-3, October 13 at the loser's field. Determined to upset the Rams, San Jose scored five minutes after the opening whistle.

No less determined to maintain their top spot, the Rams bounced back to even the score when inside left Tony Quiteno scored with a well-placed boot from ten yards out.

Center forward Bob Palma and inside right Fred Zamora both tallied once to give the team the 3-1 first quarter lead. In the second quarter both teams scored once for a 4-2 half time score.

Coming to life in the second half, the Ram offense began to show the form which makes them top contenders for the title. Palma tallied twice and outside left Guillermo Delgadillo once to give the college a 7-2 lead. In the closing minutes San Jose made good on a disputed penalty kick to make the final score 7-3.

As demonstrated by the San Jose and other games, the Rams have one of the most balanced and co-ordinated teams in the conference. The speed, ball control and alertness displayed by both the defense and offense during the past games makes them the favorite for the title.

RAMBLINGS

By Bob Chrisman

WHETHER or not the college's football team, which defeated West Contra Costa two weeks ago in an upset victory to take first place in the Big Seven, receives a bid to the Little Rose Bowl game in Pasadena hinges on the Pasadena Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Although there have been several standout championship teams from Northern California in the past few years, only one has received a Bowl bid, Hartnell.

From a financial viewpoint, it is more auspicious to have a team from the Pasadena area where the Rose Bowl contest is played, competing in the post-season classic.

However, the Rams cannot be ignored on the basis of athletic performance, for the college team upset West Contra Costa, which was ranked fifth in the nation among two year college teams. By defeating the Comets, the Rams moved from sixteenth place in the nation to the top five.

Statistic wise, the college team has scored an average of 21 points in their eight games, yielding a mere 10 points defensively per game.

The social status and the box office attraction of the college as a participant in a bowl game would be enhanced by the fact that Miss America was a student here.

From any angle, the Rams deserve a Junior Rose Bowl bid.

* * *

The college's soccer team, which has already clinched a spot in the Intercollegiate Soccer Conference playoffs, came into national prominence by defeating the USF squad, previously undefeated in 56 games.

Instrumental in the team's success this season has been forward Freddy Zamora, who starred in the Central American Olympic Games. Zamora, in addition to being a scoring threat, is an excellent control artist and dribbler, and has been touted by several soccer critics as a candidate for the All-American soccer team.

14-12 Santa Rosa Win Drops Rams Into Third Place

By Bob Chrisman

Santa Rosa's Bear Cubs defeated the Rams 14-12 in the season finale at Santa Rosa last Friday to take over first place and knock the college team into third place in the Big Seven.

The Bear Cub victory was the first loss suffered by the Klemmermen this season and places West Contra Costa and the Santa Rosans in a tie for first place in the final league standings with five wins and one loss apiece, while the Rams are in second place with four wins, one tie, and one loss.

Neither team scored in the first half, as there were no sustained drives over 20 yards long in a period featuring fine defensive play.

City College scored in a minute and a half of the second period, however, when Ram guard Stan Keith blasted through the Cub line on their attempted quick kick and blocked Don Bossert's punt. Ken Orzell recovered the rolling ball in the Santa Rosa end zone and the Rams went ahead, 6-0, after the conversion attempt failed.

Fullback Bossert, top running back for Santa Rosa, sparked a Cub scoring drive immediately following the Rams' kickoff, accounting for 23 yards of the 62 yard scoring drive which was climaxed by Del Mobley's 8 yard sprint around end, Bossert converted, and Santa Rosa led, 7-6.

Bossert, who was a thorn in the Rams' side all evening, recovered a bobbled handoff on the college's 32 yard line to set up the winning touchdown. Santa Rosa's running backs took over, and the Cubs scored again in nine plays, as halfback Bill Rankin boomed over from the one yard line for the tally. Bossert's place-kick connected once more and the score was 14-6.

Les Barros engineered the second Ram scoring drive, which went 85 yards in 10 plays, mixing passes to Don Barnett and Dick Plazza with thrusts by halfbacks Kent Scovil and Jim Frank to set up the scoring play, a line smash by Frank from the one yard line. The conversion was blocked, and the Rams did not get another scoring opportunity.

The Cubs outplayed the college team at their own game, exploiting a strong running game to full advantage behind their line, which yielded the Rams only 95 yards rushing in the entire game. Bossert, the outstanding individual performer on the field, carried the rushing load for the Santa Rosans, netting 89 yards from scrimmage.

Penalties at crucial times decided the tide of the game, which, as Coach Bill Archer of Santa Rosa said, "could have gone either way, with a few breaks."

Klemmer's team, which has been termed a precision squad, did not click as well as in previous games, such as the West Contra Costa tilt or the San Mateo game, for there were few sustained drives by the Rams, who punted more last Friday than in any other game this season.

Schedules Drawn For Intra Playoffs

Schedules are now being drawn up for the playoff of various intramural sports here, Alex Schwarz, college program director, stated last week.

The first part of the intramural program finished last week when class championships were decided, and now each class champion will vie against other physical education classes at different hours during the week.

Schwarz said the teams will battle until two clubs in various sports meet for the college championship.

A second part of the intramural program has now started. Classes which have been playing touch-football and other outdoor sports will move into the men's gymnasium and classes which have been competing in various indoor sports will now take over the outdoor facilities.

Aerial Attack Grounded

A NEAR-TOUCHDOWN for the Rams is averted as West Contra Costa's Cradell Green goes high to bat away a pass. Chief Guardsman photographer John Sherry catches the action as Green, the Comets' top running back, makes use of his speed to break up Les Barros' aerial while halfback Jim Frank waits expectantly with arms outstretched. The play, occurring near the goal line of the Richmanders, brought the crowd to its feet as they envisioned another City College touchdown. Barros' passing was the eventual margin as he completed 13 of 25 for three touchdowns.

Baseball Meeting Scheduled Dec. 1

Head baseball coach Bill Fischer will hold a meeting for candidates interested in the college baseball team on Wednesday, December 1, in the men's gymnasium.

At the meeting, the coach and his prospective players will become acquainted, and the potential horsehiders will be informed of the scholastic requirements for eligibility. Athletes must have enrolled in and passed 10½ units in the previous semester and must be residents of the local county or from one where no two year college is located.

Last year the Rams dropped 11 out of 12 games in Big Seven Conference play to finish in the conference cellar, but according to Fischer, there is "a rich crop of high school stars on the campus now. If these men all turn out for the club, we stand to have a good squad next season," he said.

3 New Officers Elected By WAA

Elections of Women's Athletic Association officers were held during college hour November 12, and Jean Spencer won the position of vice-president with Yvonne McFarlin taking over secretarial duties and Esperanza Bernal in charge of finances.

They will assist President Esther Phillips in plans for the free swim day to be held at the YMCA on Thursday, December 9. The activities will give ample opportunity for much pleasure and enjoyment for the beginners, the intermediates and the advanced sports enthusiasts.

Any student who has an Associated Student card, has a C average, spends an extra half hour at the sport which she is taking and attends 9 out of 12 WAA meetings is eligible to receive a WAA award, Miss Johnson emphasized.

Spring Track Signup Continued For Men

Any men who are interested in turning out for track next spring and who did not attend the track meeting November 19, should sign-up immediately in the men's gymnasium, Roy Burkhead, head Ram track coach, announced last week.

Most of the team's title chances will depend on the caliber of former high school trackmen who sign up, Burkhead said, since he expects the Rams to have very few veterans returning for next season.

Basketball Team Prepares For 1st Game Next Week

With the season's opener a scant week away, Coach Ralph Hillsman's basketballers are diligently preparing for the beginning of their 21 game march through the wilds of the Big Eight Conference.

Of late, Hillsman has carefully observed the performances of his casabans in practice and through that attention has slowly cut the original 65 man outfit down to a number which is easier to work with and will do the most good for the team. These remaining 18 hoopsters, who are being selected, show the most potential in Hillsman's eyes and will serve as members of this year's squad. Hillsman said he is attempting to bring the group down to 15 in the future in order to create a more closely knit outfit.

Especially impressive have been the veteran Ram cagers, Hillsman mentioned. Theopolis Dunn, Ike Walker and Dave Davis have shown brilliantly in practice, Davis being a "pleasant surprise" over last year's performance.

Ed Atkins, Sam Gilepis, Doug Horn, Rich Russel and Mike Siegal have all stood out in early basketball practice sessions.

Good height and excellent potential have heightened Hillsman's hopes for a successful season. These qualities will be put to the acid test when the college bucket men face such teams as Stockton, San Mateo and Sacramento which, he said, are loaded this season.

As Hillsman coached teams have yet to finish lower than second place in Big Seven (now Big Eight) Conference basketball standings that old pressure nemesis will be placed on his capable shoulders. Even so, Hillsman is having relatively few worries thus far as the team is shaping into a well rounded, highly talented group.

Oakland Junior College is the newest addition to the conference, necessitating the change in name from the Big Seven Conference to the Big Eight. The Oakland college, which did not field a football team this season, will thus enter its first athletic competition under cage coach and athletic director Bill Rockwell, the highly regarded mentor from Fremont High School. Oakland has no team nickname as yet, and the new college's colors will be Blue and Gold. Although definitely an unknown quantity, Rockwell's prowess and the amount of high school talent in the Oakland area are expected to make the team a strong one.

January 20, 21 Cleared For '55 Varieties

Varieties of 1955, the college's third annual all-student produced and directed variety show, has been set for presentation on Thursday and Friday, January 20 and 21, 1955, a Varieties spokesman announced last week after the date had been cleared by the college's Social Committee.

The date had been previously set aside as the time of the last production of the college Little Theater. Michael Griffin, faculty adviser to both the Little Theater and the Variety Show, decided last week to agree to requests by producers of the show that the Little Theater production be replaced by the Varieties on the Social Calendar.

Students working with the drama department have also agreed to help with the Variety Show and a number of production committee heads for the show have been tentatively set.

Additions, tryouts and interviews for the cast and production staff will be held tonight at 7:15 p.m. in the Building 1 Auditorium, on the west campus. All students who desire to be in the cast or who want to work on the production of the show are asked to sign-up at the bulletin board outside of the Little Theater, and to be present at tonight's tryouts.

Jann Palmer, also producer for the Little Theater, will co-produce the show. Miss Palmer will handle the talent, staging, technical, and financial part of the show, while promotion, publicity, and over-all organization will be done by Dick Moore, the variety show's other co-producer.

Pete Garrett, co-director of the show in charge of staging the acts, will also do scripts and control the artistic side of the Varieties in a director's capacity.

Bob Flanigan, co-director in charge of the technical aspects of the production, will take care of lighting and sets and will supply all technical advice on the show.

Jim Glasson, who put on last year's Varieties, will act as an adviser to the production staff. The following students are now working with the production of the show: Frank Anderson, Ron Bolt, Anne Canellos, Ken Conragen, Roy Maffei, George Sweet and Bob Tucker.

Testing Site Moves To Science Building

Room 142 in the Science Building is the new site of the testing office, Thomas D. Nesbitt, in charge of testing, announced this week.

The new office was open for business yesterday. All students taking special tests should report to Room 142, Nesbitt said.

Types of tests offered to the students are intelligence, general scholastic ability, aptitude, interests, achievement, and personality, plus many specific field tests.

The tests are helpful in job positions, positions of success in the student's field, and to substantiate the expressed desire for a particular field, Nesbitt said.

Inspection Of Student Union Proves New Structure Will Be Adequate For Every Need

Inspection of the college's new Student Union Building last week by President Emeritus of the college, Dr. Archibald Cloud, and two representatives of the Hotel and Restaurant Division's Advisory Committee serves to reassure all concerned that the structure will be one of the finest installations of its kind in the country, a spokesman for President Louis Conlan's office here said last week.

Richard Flambert, a consultant to many such hotel and restaurant facilities throughout the country, and Tremain Loud, operator of the Hotel Californian here in the city, were the two members of the advisory committee who, with Dr. Cloud, considered the progress of the Student Union and its suitability for handling the meals of a large institution.

The building's use as a laboratory for the training of the college's hotel and restaurant division students was also described by the inspectng advisers as being fully adequate.

Both Flambert, who also assisted in the planning of the building, and Loud were impressed with the way the Student Union was shaping up with sufficient facilities to take the place of a number of soon to be abandoned college installations, President Conlan said.

The Student Union's use to the students of the college and its importance to the carrying on of vital college work can not be underestimated, according to Dr. Conlan.

The need for the building has long been realized and, especially considering the expected large increase in student enrollment, the necessity of having a building of such diversified faelities as the Student Union is easily understood, he added.

The new installations are expected to have such varied functions that it will take care of any emergency activities that may arise.

Draft Test Given Here December 9

Selective service college qualification tests will be given Thursday, December 9 at 8:30 a.m. in Room 100 in the Science Building, according to Thomas D. Nesbitt, testing director here

Bulletins of information may be picked up in the office of Student Welfare coordinator John J. Brady in Building 3 or from any local draft board.

Any selective service registrant who is a full time college student and has never taken the test before is eligible. A passing grade of 70 does not automatically defer the student, but provides evidence for local draft boards in considering college deferments.

The test, which is three hours in length, will be given at all colleges and universities in the bay area. Results will be sent to the student's draft board.

For further information, interested students may consult their local draft boards who will explain all questions concerning deferments.

Niagara Falls is rapidly losing face at the rate of two and a half feet a year. By the year 2,000 A.D., honeymooners will have to go elsewhere.

Interest Grows In Floriculture

Department Offers Three Fields

For students with an artistic sense and a love of growing things, the college offers a variety of outlets for their interests, one of which is floriculture. This course is taught along similar lines of the art and business of floriculture, that of growing and marketing ornamental plants and flowers.

Three major fields of training are offered by the department, garden maintenance, nursery practice, and greenhouse work. Completion of two years in any one or combination of these courses will prepare the student for employment in many of the various phases of horticultural industries to be found in this region.

Students may take part in many floriculture activities such as practical and laboratory work experience for advanced enthusiasts. Courses in identification and uses of ornamental plants for landscape effects, care and maintenance of established gardens, watering, fertilization, pruning, and other gardening techniques are also given to assist the student in further study.

Pest control must be maintained, and in an effort to find the most effieient ways of controlling plant destruction, students capture insects here at the college and observe their effect on plants. A special course in the department is given for the express purpose of combatting the harmful effects of ordinary plant insects.

Floral decoration has become quite prominent of late in the floriculture department. So much so, that recently a one-day-a-week course was begun in an endeavor to teach the principles of this division of that field.

The floriculture department also offers several courses in landscaping which by correct execution adds to the value of property where it is used, and so is valuable in real estate aspects as well as teaching the student proficiency in careful plant arrangement.

Winnie Wooster, Top Model

TOP PHOTOGRAPHY model for this semester is pretty Winnie Wooster, secretarial major here. She takes over Lee Meriwether's former spot here.

Coed Poses For Camera Closeups

Working with the advertising photography class this semester as the top model, taking over Lee Meriwether's position of last year, is Winnie Wooster, a new student at the college, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, said last week.

A graduate of Washington High School, Miss Wooster is a secretarial major. As the top photography model for this semester, she is taking two courses in photography, 92A and 92B, which is a photography workshop meeting Mondays and Wednesdays from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

In exchange for her co-operation with the advertising photography class, Miss Wooster will receive copies of each photographic study made of her.

Cal-Vet Program Offers State Vets Educational Aid

Veterans here who entered military service from California are entitled to state aid as well as federal for educational pursuits: This aid is provided by the Cal-Vet program, an organization developed by the State of California.

Benefits provided by this program are not as liberal as those available from federal aid, nor can they be used at the same time federal aid is in force for the veteran.

Although less liberal, the usefulness of the Cal-Vet program is not nullified. Assistance is available that could be important and utilized to a high degree of advantage by many veterans. Following are probable applications of these benefits as outlined in a news bulletin release from Sacramento:

1. Advantage may be taken of the Cal-Vet program during summer sessions, thus holding in reserve federal entitlements for regular college sessions when aid will be appreciated in larger sums and for a longer period of time.

2. If there is any interruption in federal entitlements, it may be covered by the program.

3. If federal aid entitlements terminate prior to a semester's end and cannot be extended, the program is appleable. This may be the least applicable of the benefits as federal aid is provided for one and one-half days educational allowances for each day of service.

Veterans of Korea are allowed a maximum period of 36 months in benefits, but those veterans who saw service in both World War II and the Korean emergency have a maximum period of 48 months minus the time spent in academic endeavor under benefits provided by the original World War II program.

Just which interruptions in federal entitlements are covered by the Cal-Vet program was not stated in the bulletin. This and other specific information about the program may be obtained from the veterans affairs office here, Building 3, or from the state representative, located at 515 Van Ness avenue.

Traditional USA Dance Climaxes Midterm Week

As a climax to the second midterm period here, the traditional United Student Association dance is scheduled Friday, December 3, Bob Burmeister, president of USA, announced last week.

This will be the third semi-annual dance given by the organization, and it will be held in the college's auditorium from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

The USA in Club Activities Board meeting last Thursday decided to turn the profits from the dance to a charitable organization which has not yet been named.

In the past the dance has been held in the student lounge with records supplying the music. This semester, Burmeister stated, a band will supply the music. However, the social committee of the USA has not yet decided upon the band to play for the dance.

Admission to the dance will be 50 cents per person with an Associated Student card and $1.00 per person without an AS card, according to Burmeister. Tickets will be available at the door on the night of the dance.

Purpose of the dance is not only to provide an evening of enjoyment for everyone, but also to give students an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the USA and its members.

Club Cavalcade

Peace Reigns Once Again As Hell Week Finally Ends Here

By Carolyn Fisher

HELL WEEK is over for this semester and new members of sororities and fraternities on campus are resting now after their thorough going over. Almost 200 new members are receiving pins and women pledges will be presented at the Inter-Sorority Council's joint presentations Saturday, December 4.

New members of Tau Chi Sigma are Bert Mondino, Bob Bliss, Dave Guest, Lars Pearson, Paul Moreau, Gregg Sautos, Ron Botso, and Carroll Hall, pledge captain. A joint meeting with Zeta Chi was held recently. The fraternity claims the pledge record for size this semester with average height and weight 6 ft. 2 in, and 200 pounds respectively.

Phi Beta Rho pledges are Pat Baroni, pledge captain; Joyce Dragoman, Ann Erskine, Sharon Johnston, Bobbie Leboff, Cathy Lyneh, Marilyn Mallon, Carol Morian, Dottie Pfleiger, Janice Rhuland, Sharon Southard, Elie Veder, Janice Willis, and Judy Wilson.

The pledging Lambda Phi are Bill Moeller, Steve Cano, Frank Collins, Tony Criteili, Walt Garry, Merideth Hoover, Larry Murphy, Pete Nielsen, Joe O'Shea, Buzz Quinting, and Larry Wolf.

Pledges of Alpha Lambda Chi are Rose Thurman, pledge captain; Bobbie Elster, Jeannie Fahy, Lois Fishman, Patsy Grey, Susan Herrington, Joan Knanishu, Fran Russell, Jean Spencer, and Jackie Sterift.

Members and pledges of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, aided their brothers at the University of California by assisting them with the Annual Big Game Parade, held at the UC campus on November 19.

The newly formed Chess Club and Team holds its meetings during college hour in S310. Students interested may attend the meetings. The club plans to meet with other college chess teams.

New members of Theta Tau are Dolores Hoffman, pledge captain; Millie Harmon, Sandy Stiegerwald, Mary Henderson, Nita Bailey, Carol Aardal, Loretta Crawford, Diane Stratford, Joan Warner, JoAnna Banks.

Alpha Sigma Delta pledges have been doing their bit by painting the Redwood Ram, which thoughtful San Mateo students blued up two weeks ago, and painting the Associated Student office. Men doing the work are Bob Mackesey, Forrest Griswell, Bob Kimball, Mike Gann, Dick Kramer, Juan Alcalde, Jim Orr.

Zeta Chi held a joint meeting with Tau Chi Sigma last Wednesday. New sorority pledges are Shirley Scougall, Joyce Weaver, Ruth Messersmith, Diane Lundin, Janet Clark, Peggy Lydon.

Gamma Phi pledges are Warren Jucklvfe, pledge captain; Brent Street, Bill Williams, Russ Thompson, Ron Kruger, Lou Kruger, Roger Carver, John Nevin, Ray Marcotte, Gerry Roth, Sonny Hansen, John Bates, Bob DiMarta, Abe Virden, Herb Ragle, Jim Nelson, Ken Turner, Ron Ferrario, George Leastrom.

Delta Psi pledges are Chris Vietor, Dodie Mason, Nancy Gommeringer, Ann Smith, Shelia Elliman, pledge captain; Pauline Wright, Carol Bean, Emily Archilla, Diane Culbertson, Marilyn Euler, Marilyn Sibell, Judy Kino, Donna Gilbert, Randi Solhiem, Muriel Andrade. The sorority met jointly with Phi Beta Delta last Wednesday night.

New members of Kappa Phi are Carmen Arellano, Bev Bardo, Barbara Bartmale, Ann Canellos, Jan Digiovanni, Betty Fletcher, Pat Ferrari, Yvonne Laboure, Peggy De La Torre, Ona Luchessi, Gwen Malin, Ginger Malabey, Jann Palmer, Marilyn Sicotte, Roberta Singer, Gayle Tichenor, Ann Vargo, Jean Vachon, Rosina Zanca, Myrna Lieberman.

Beta Tau pledges are Nort Chambliss, Ralph Kirk, Ron Boltz, Mel Batsel, Arleigh Greenblat, Vie Hebert, Phil Braverman, Don Koss, Dan Dukelow, Chueh Sharp, Tom Sharmon.

Phi Phi Beta members now to the fraternity are Gill Seiaqua, pledge captain; Rich Novelli, Al Filipelli, Dave Repko, Ken Johnston, Ron Chamberlain, Phil Minetti. The fraternity will hold a joint meeting with Alpha Lambda Chi tonight.

Men new to Phi Beta Delta this semester are Bob Swensen, Rolf Jensen, Cliff Soward, Ron Hillman, Wayne McFadden, Sid Bernstein, Bob George, Carl Nordberg, Ed Farnsworth, Joe Bacci.

Main Heads Panel At Store Convention

"What To Do To Get Those Plus Sales" will be the title of a panel discussion which Dick Main, Rampolium manager and director for the Northern Section of the California Association of College Stores, will head at the association's convention Friday and Saturday, December 3 and 4, at Visalia.

The convention, which will be hosted by the College of the Sequolas, will use the Hotel Johnson in Visalia as headquarters during the two day meet of managers of some 32 member stores. The CACS is composed mainly of bookstores which are located on two-year college campuses but a few four-year colleges are also members.

One purpose of CACS is to protect the interest of college students in their books by finding the best ways for a student to get the most out of his books through resale. This is accomplished through the interchange of book lists with other colleges.

Libby Checks AS Card Discounts For Validity

Discounts which are available to student card holders through local merchants are investigated by Ralph Libby, Associated Student card sales chairman here, before the Associated Students are notified of the new discount which has been made available to them.

In some cases discounts which were available to students the preceding semester are checked to see if the discounts are still available.

At the present time AS card holders may obtain discounts ranging from 10 to 30 per cent; 2 cents on a gallon of gasoline, and special rates from 30 local merchants.

The only new discount that has been added to the list of discount merchants this semester is the Auto Supply company located at 4735 Mission Street here.

College Greets Student Leaders

66 Representatives Of Seven Public High Schools Here Tomorrow For Semi-Annual Prep Day Activities

by Carolyn Fisher

Sixty-six student leaders and administrators of the seven San Francisco Public High Schools will participate in the third semi-annual Prep Day here tomorrow.

Designed for high school seniors interested in attending the college, Prep Day ceremonies were initiated in the Fall semester of 1953 under the direction of ex-Associated Student President George Effenberger and College President Louis G. Conlan.

KEN MOLINO

Registration of visitors for the day will begin at 9 a.m. under the direction of Marcia Moore and Ralph Libby. Following registration, coffee will be served. At 9:30 a.m. there will be an orientation with AS President Bill Boidenweck and AS Vice-President Patty Masserelli speaking to the group. Group pictures will be taken at 9:45 a.m.

From 10 to 11:45 a.m., student guides from the college will take high school leaders on a complete tour of the campus which will include visits to the following departments: Business, Science, Engineering and Electronics, Criminology, Physical Education, Art, Drama, Psychology, and Journalism.

A principals' meeting for administrators of the high schools will be held at 10 a.m. From 10:15 to 10:45 a.m., movies of Miss America's homecoming will be shown.

Luncheon and entertainment will be from 12 noon to 2 p.m. in the faculty dining room. Speakers at the luncheon will be Conlan, Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent of public schools, and Ken Molino, a former student of the college.

One of three commencement speakers in 1953 graduation exercises, Molino was a scholastic cup winner with a 2.97 grade point average. He was president of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide scholastic honor society, and Assistant Managing Editor of The Guardsman while attending the college.

After working as a photographer-reporter on the Mill Valley Record, Molino went to the San Rafael Independent-Journal where he is now a photographer.

Students participating in Prep Day activities from senior high schools are as follows:

Abraham Lincoln: Milt Bowen, Marvin Cohen, Dave Gehringer, Ralph Johnson, Bruce Lubarsky, Dave Osborne, Barbara Ramsey and Charles Trabert.

Balboa: June Anderson, Tom Faenzi, Larry Hall, Linda Hammond, Joyce Hively, Gloria Jiminez, Marilyn Johnson, Susan Martinsen, Henry Nagle, Karl Pierson and Robert Stables.

George Washington: LeRoy Brouillen, Walter Chung, Joan Couture, Harry Lee, John Leipsic, John Panagakis and Milvin Yee.

Galileo: Mario Alleto, Jean Barilla, Shirley Childers, George DeLong, Barbara Firpo, Judy Pool, Robert Lippi, Ted Russo and Barbara Tarantino.

Lowell: Frederic Addison, Diann David, Carol Karstensen, Martha Lendaris, Bob Loehuertos, Roland Peracca, James Piro, George Vlahos and Hall Wong.

Mission: Richard Gay, Leo Marantan, Mary Odegard, Frank Rogers, James Soto, Ted Wong, and Harry Yerondopoulos.

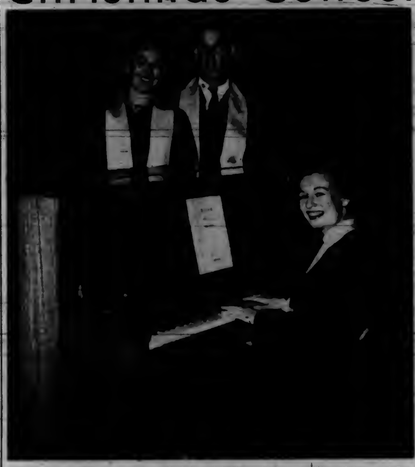
Shour, Speetzen Are Winners Of Denman Awards

Margaret Shour and Claudia Speetzen, two nineteen year old co-eds here, were named winners of the Denman scholarships at a meeting of the award committee held December 1, Mary Golding, dean of women, disclosed today.

Miss Shour, a third semester student, attended Commerce High School and is a graduate of Polytechnic High. A member of Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society and the Lutheran Club, she has been active in the Rainbow Girls and has participated in folk dancing groups. She is majoring in Letters and Science and plans to attend the University of California upon completion of her studies here.



Miss Speetzen, also a member of Alpha Gmma Sigma, is a graduate of Abraham Lincoln High School. She has been active in presentations of fashion shows both in high school and here at the college. She is a home economics major now in her third semester of study, and plans to enter the teaching profession as a home economics instructor.

Since 1939 the two Denman scholarships have been issued annually to two women students of the college. The awards, both in the amount of $125, were instituted by Superior Court Judge William Denman and his sister Mrs. Mary Cheatham in commemoration of their father, James Denman. The senior Denman was Superintendent of San Francisco public schools from 1860 to 1861 and from 1868 to 1875.

Decisions on the applications submitted were based on the student's qualifications of scholarship, need and leadership, Dean Golding said.

Acting as the award committee were Jack Brady, Coordinater of Student Welfare and chairman; Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; A. J. Cloud, president emeritus; Lloyd D. Luekmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, and Dean Golding.

Christmas Concert Tonight

THIS TALENTED trio, Jo Anne Bedell and William Heber, concert soloists, and Pat Quick at the piano will be among the 125 participants in the college A Cappella Choir's Twentieth Annual Christmas Concert, which will be presented tonight at 8:15 p.m. in the west compus auditorium.—Guardsman photo by Gee.

125 Participate In Feature Program Of Yuletide Season

by Dave Baar

Christmas spirit and yuletide carols will ring through the auditorium tonight as the college A Cappella Choir presents its Twentieth Annual Christmas Concert, the feature presentation by the department for the 1954-1955 season. The concert, admission free to all students, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium in building 1 west campus.

Almost 125 participants will be featured in the program, co-sponsored by the Associated Students and the Faculty Association.

Opening with a prelude of Christmas Carols by an instrumental ensemble with Meyer M. Cohn directing, the concert will follow with a selection from the Messiah by William Haber, tenor, after which will come the processional, featuring the A Cappella Choir singing Adeste Fideles, with Robert Norton directing. The choir will then sing "Joy to the World," "I Hear Along Our Street," "Christmas Pie," and "Christmas Hymn."

Schubert's famed "Ave Maria" will be featured by Jo Ann Bedell, soprano. Pat Quick will accompany both featured soloists.

Two contemporary works have been prepared by the A Cappella Choir. They are "Alleluia," by Randall Thompson, and "Joseph and the Angel," taken from "Scenes of the Holy Infancy," by Virgil Thomson, noted New York music critic.

Several works dating back to medieval times will be performed by the Men's Glee Club, with Norton directing. The Glee Club will sing "Adoramus Te Christe," "God Rest You Merry Gentlemen," "Willie Take Your Drum," "O Come, O Come Immanuel," and the old Welsh tune "Deck the Hall."

Depicting the Nativity, tableaux will be presented with Michael Griffin directing. They will feature Frances Russell, Joseph Bavaresco, Warren Smith, Edwina Moquin, Barbara Raffelli, Warren Jackovick, Pete Cook, Al Allen, Michael Jervel, Ann Flood and Lee Jensen, Raymond Murillo, accompanied by Miss Quick, will sing Adam's "O Holy Night."

Concluding the program, the choir will sing "Jingle Bells," "Silent Night" and "We Wish You A Merry Christmas." Ushering at the program will be handled by members of the Associated Women Students, under the direction of Marcia Herst, AWS president.

Two Fraternities Improve Basement Snack Bar Condition

As a joint project Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity on campus, and Tau Chi Sigma are working to improve the condition of the Snack Bar located in the basement of the Science Building. Both fraternities have recognized the need of improved conditions at the request of O. E. Anderson, controller here.

Ralph Libby, president of Alpha Phi Omega, and Al Niemi, president of Tau Chi Sigma, are heading the campaign to put the snack bar in orderly condition. The Snack Bar will be closed, according to Anderson, if an improvement in the cleanliness and general conditions are not noted immediately.

Tau Chi Sigma, under Niemi's direction, has obtained several additional trash containers to be placed in the snack bar for student use. At present there are not sufficient containers to hold the amount of refuse littering the area.

During Hell Week, Tau Chi Sigma pledges painted the trash recepticals located in the area between Cloud Hall and the Science Building an outstanding red.

Libby, speaking for both groups, pointed out that the Snack Bar is presently being used as a store room for link trainers, lathes and lockers.

Counselling Office Completes Move

Counsellors and the counselling office have completed the move from the west campus to the Science Building. The new offiecs were open Monday. The counselling office is now located in S160. In that location are the offiees of Don Jensen, Thomas Humiston, Howard Schoon and Alva MacMillan.

Counsellors in S143 are Adolph Stoll, Olga Perkins, Helen Huffman, Waddington Blair, Mary Perry and James Gilmore.

Joseph Jacobsen, counsellor for foreign students, is located in S155.

Registration for next semester will take place in the basement of the Science Building, MacMillan said. Students will enter the building on the South side and continue down the hall to the snack bar in the North side where registration will begin.

Registration for old students will take place on Wednesday, February 2 and Thursday, February 3. The times and student numbers follow.

Wednesday, February 2: 8 a.m.—1 to 199; 9 a.m.—200 to 599; 10 a.m.—600 to 999; 11 a.m.—1000-1399; 1 p.m.—1400 to 1799; 2 p.m.—1800 to 2199.

Thursday, February 3: 8 a.m.—2200 to 2599; 9 a.m.—2600 to 2999; 10 a.m.—3000 to 3399; 11 a.m.—3400 to 3799; 1 p.m.—3800 plus.

New students will register on Friday, February 4, MacMillan said.

Election Petition Deadline Dec. 30

Petition deadline for students planning to run for Associated Student elective offices is Thursday, December 30 at 12 noon, Anthony Frost, election commissioner here, said last week.

Students planning to run for office must have a minimum of 12 units by the end of the second semester period and a 1.00 grade point average.

Posters for candidates will be approved from Monday, January 3, to Tuesday, January 11, he said. Because of limited space, posters will have to be smaller than in previous campaigns. Speeific content and size of poster requirements will be announced later, Frost said.

An election rally introducing candidates will be held on Friday, January 7, during college hour.

Elections will follow on Wednesday, January 12, and Thursday, January 13. Students may run on the Inter-Fraternity Counell ticket, the United Students Association ticket, or as Independent candidates.

The counell is composed of fourteen members, seven of whom are representatives of the freshman class and seven of the sophomore class.

Members of the Election committee at present are Ed Emig, Frost, Ken Henry, Ralph Libby, Bob Moore and Lance Thurston. Students interested in working on the election committee are requested to notify Frost.

Beta Tau Depicts White Christmas In Annual Mistletoe Mingle Dance

White Christmas trees and real snow will decorate the college for the annual Mistletoe Mingle dance, Friday, December 10, starting at 9 p.m. in the auditorium. The dance is sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity.

Gary Evans and his six piece orchestra will provide music for the affair which is to last until midnight. Dress for the occasion is semi-formal, and admission is $1.50 per couple. Tickets are now on sale in the college bank located on the main floor of the Science Building.

Highlighting the fall semester, the Mistletoe Mingle will be the last big dance to be presented at the college before the Sophomore Ball.

Prep Day Visitors Must Be Shown Advantages Of College

WE WILL have as honored guests on our campus tomorrow some 70 student leaders from public high schools all over the city. Many of them plan to attend City College in the very near future and it is our job to make them welcome and to give them a view of the college that they will remember long and pleasantly.

Each of us here at the college now knows the many benefits and the wonderful education open to us, but to many of the visitors the college is nothing but an "over-grown high school." This is of course a false impression and it must be corrected.

The enrollment here has surpassed expectations and facilities this semester and is expected to run even higher in the Spring session. Obviously more and more high school graduates are learning what we already know—that the City College of San Francisco is highly-recommended scholastically and offers courses equal to those of a university.

Not only is the college sound academically, but the social program is one of the best examples of student control in the state. We are fortunate in having a minimum of faculty control over our activities. The finances, social calendar, campus organizations and so many others are all handled by students with only advice from the sponsors and instructors. Luckily, that advice is usually sound, for we have an exceptionally fine administrative and faculty group.

Thus the college is able to offer anyone who desires a college education and is willing to work at being a student a chance for a well-rounded program. One need only take advantage of it.

We all know just how much the college has given us. Now we must pass on what we know to our visitors. The high school seniors who visit the campus tomorrow are the college freshmen who will be with us next year.

Let's send them away tomorrow as a well-satisfied and very enlightened group, a group that will realize how great the City College of San Francisco is and will be proud to be a part of it in the future.

The Spectator

The Bum, The Artist, The Family—And Christmas

WIND PUSHED the fog that slowly covers the city like bedcovers and the static cacophony becomes muffled and finally comes to an abrupt halt.

Lights fluttering in tall office buildings on Montgomery Street are turned off, and annual Christmas party celebrants file out of the buildings on their way home to a big dinner.

Coat collars are turned up, and bandana's protect heads from the chilling wind that sweeps up the street, pushing the fog before it.

In suburban districts, laughter of families, brought together for the big Christmas dinner, floats down streets cutting into the thickening fog. The sounds of clinking glasses, laughing kids and knives being sharpened for the turkey carving can be heard everywhere.

Montgomery Street is left alone with the street lights, the fog and the wind.

A bum dressed in ragged clothes disturbs the street, clutching his worn coat collar closer in near the neck as he probes through a garbage can for his Christmas dinner. Finding nothing, he haltingly makes his way up the street to stand looking through a cafeteria window at lonely people eating.

Somewhere on Columbus Avenue, in a room above a bar, an artist prepares his Christmas dinner of crackers and sardines with a special dessert of stolen sugar cubes in hot water.

Market Street carries flocks of lonely servicemen wandering up and down, looking in store windows and trying to dissipate their loneliness with false, high-pitched laughter.

Slowly the city turns off its lights and goes to bed.

In the suburban areas, kids are fast asleep and their parents sigh in relief and settle themselves in warm, soft beds.

Returning after a fair night of 50 cent portrait paintings, the artist wearily climbs into bed while outside of the city, buses carry sleeping servicemen back to their bases.

The bum curls up in a doorway, covers himself with old newspapers and lies sleeplessly shivering in the cold.

Fog horns greet the morning as happy families climb out of bed and start opening Christmas packages.

Dumbly opening his eyes, the artist stares at the cracked and discolored wall thinking that today is Christmas.

Chow lines are formed by servicemen in all the different bases, and sleepy men clutch their trays and cups waiting for the Christmas breakfast.

Still clutching his coat collar close around his neck, the bum stands on a street corner, expectantly waiting for the Salvation Army Temple to open, for today there is to be a special "Merry Christmas" meal for him.

William Henry Harrison, elected President of the United States in 1840, was the first president to die while in office. His death occurred 31 days after his inauguration and John Tyler took over the presidency.

Talented Terrier

Sedgewick Joins Theater Group

Sedgewick, a wirehair terrier, is the latest addition to the east of Goodbye, My Fancy, which opens in the little theatre here tomorrow night.

Sedgewick might sound like an unusual name for a dog, but he is different from most other dogs. Sedgewick is an Actor!

In the process of revamping and redecorating the little theater, Ed Banderob, the college electrician, installed some new electric circuits. Because in recent months Sedgewick had gotten lonely at home, Banderob decided to bring his "talented" pet to the little theater.

As the actors rehearsed their lines Sedgewick appeared on the scene and became engulfed in the action of the play.

As production time neared Sedgewick proved to be a successor to Rin Tin Tin and he made the rest of the actors feel inferior. So out of his love for the theater he handed in his resignation, nevertheless retaining his position as mascot.

If Sedgewick had remained a permanent member of the east he just might have stolen the show.

And To All A Good Night!

Real Santa Gives Faker A Fright

'Twas a fortnight 'till Christmas and all o'er the college
The students were taking a sojourn from knowledge.
A ski trip or loafing would be in its stead,
And visions of Christmas cheer danced in each head.

While in one student's house there arose such a clatter,
It wouldn't take Einstein to guess what's the matter.
"'Tis vacation," said Mom with such morbid enjoyment,
"Now get thyself into a state of employment."

"But incessantly," said he, "have I begged Amor!"
"Ah, I knew you would try to pull that old story.
So I went out myself and for you obtained work.
Now you can give good presents this year, Jerk."

"Who do you think I am," he said, "Santa Claus?"
"Exactly," said she after dramatic pause.
"Now get thee to yon store. They're in a tight pinch.
With your natural padding the job is a cinch."

Oh, the kiddies they came just to sit on his lap;
They'd punch and they'd scream and they'd kick and they'd slap.
But he kept his chin up, and sometimes, it is known,
He was able to get in a few kicks of his own.

His eyes, how they wrinkled; they bagged profusely.
By the end of the two weeks his suit sagged so loosely.
His cheeks were so pale, and his nose was so red—
Some materialistic brat had given him a cold in the head.

Loaded with presents (paid for with his toil),
He reached home, and what he saw made his blood boil.
Who is that? Oh no! But this just can't be!
Just who is that little fat slob 'neath the tree?

Short, Fat and Stocky went on with his work
And filled all the stockings and turned, the big Jerk.
And a voice was heard as student fainted from sight:
"Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good night!"

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

(Editor's Note: Letters to the Ram's Horn may be left with the telephone operator in the Science Building or in The Guardsman office, Room 304, Science Building. Deadlines are 10 a.m. each Wednesday. If so desired the author's name will be withheld, but the identity of the author must be known to the editor.)

● Good And Bad

Editor, The Guardsman:

You may consider this letter an encouragement that there are those who do read The Guardsman critically-intelligently. I would voice two criticisms both good and bad of the November 17 issue.

1. BAD—May I suggest that in any future columns about the Ramporium that Mr. Main's name be used a few less times. I counted four "Main said's"; two "according to Main" and also "Main pointed out"; and a total of 12 mentions of his name. . . . We are anxious to give credit to Mr. Main but not through such writing, where the only thing the reader reads is the name of the manager of the Ramporium. A mention of his name twice or thrice would have been sufficient or if the author had a commitment with Mr. Main, once in each paragraph would have been good but three times in one paragraph (3rd) is somewhat overwhelming.

2. GOOD—This compliment is directed toward the same issue and the very fine writing of The Spectator. It is writing of this calibre that is a pleasure to read. . . .

May I suggest that the next time Mr. Osborne is moved to speculate, he stand atop the hill at the top of Brighton Avenue and look out over the City College of San Francisco and the surrounding area. He will be overwhelmed with the view and the ideas for future patriotic writings.

● Circulation Problem

Editor, The Guardsman:

Upon purchasing Associated Student Card No. 14, I was told by the seller that being a holder of the card I am entitled to a weekly issue of The Guardsman. Am I correct?

In the last few weeks I have had to scour the campus thoroughly for my copy of your All American publication. The Guardsman. Am I correct in assuming that the title bestowed The Guardsman has increased circulation among students here? If so why aren't more funds available to print additional copies so that more of us Associated Student card holders who read and enjoy your publication may receive a weekly issue.

It seems to me that the official publication of the Associated Students should be for the Associated Students not in name, but in fact. Just another suggestion from an AS card holder, either increase circulation or demand AS card be presented by those who wish to read and receive the current issue.

Note: I am an ardent fan of the columnists who write for your prize winning publication.

I hope you will not take this letter to be "crackpot" but my views voice the opinions of other AS card holders.

Goldilocks Reborn As Liberace; Esquire Petty Calendar Returns; Happy New Year!

NOTED WITH pleasure during absence that Mr. Petty has returned to Esquire with his usual attractive calendar. Happy New Year!

Tracked down a hot tip about an elderly Hindu gentleman who claimed his research proved that Liberace is the reincarnation of Goldilocks, but the story fell apart when he failed to produce three bears as proof.

Met a fascinating girl. Love at first sight. Awful fat, rather homely, no personality, but she has every issue ever printed of Mad comics, all but one issue of Panic magazine, a stereoptican with 374 pictures and a lifetime pass on the Grass Valley stage lines.

Tried to run down a rumor that M-G-M is making Hamlet as a musical, starring Jerry Lewis in the title role, with Dean Martin as Horatio and Janet Leigh as Ophelia, but no success as yet. Incidentally, my friend, the elderly Hindu, also claims that Bacon's essays were really written by Shakespeare, but it doesn't look as though his theory will hold water.

While riding home on the bus one night, found the "G" volume of an old encyclopedia. Turned out to be fascinating reading. Did you know that female gypsy moths have wings that grow as big as two inches or more, but never fly? Or that the Guelphs and Ghibellines were two great political factions in thirteenth century Italy?

It might further interest you to know that the Glede is a bird of prey belonging to the falcon family, and that George Washington Glick was governor of Kansas from 1882 to 1885, or that Geraniums are really species of Pelargonium, native to South Africa and Australia, which should not have standing water around their roots.

Probably the most vital information in this erudite volume is that, though the Gila Monster has poison glands in its lower jaw, the effect of its bite is a matter of dispute, now supposed to be non-injurious to a healthy person, although probably fatal to small mammals.

Had a call from a record distributor, who says that his company is going to follow the current trend to Afro-Cuban music with a new album to wit "Mambo Through the Years," including "When You and I Were Young Maggie Mambo," "Stars and Stripes Forever Mambo," "Silver Threads Among the Gold Mambo," "Silent Night Mambo," "Clair de Lune Mambo," "Take Me Out to the Ball Game Mambo," and "Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in C Sharp Major Mambo."

TUBERCULOSIS Christmas Seal letters, sent out by the San Francisco TB Association, this year tell the story of "Michael," who was cured of the disease after an eight month stay in a tuberculosis hospital.

It was revealed last week that the Michael in the letter is a City College student, whose case was discovered during a visit of mobile X-Ray truck to the college last year. His identity concealed at his own request, Michael, now completely cured, is an example of the value of the Association's free X-Ray service available here through the mobile unit's semesterly visits.

GOOD FRIENDS when they graduated here in June of last year, Helen Haynie and Pat Nelson, whose father is a floriculture instructor at the college, are still closely united, flying as hostesses with the airline of the same name. Helen is presently working out of New York on cross country flights, while Pat is flying from Chicago.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE: Bob Tarzia, a student here, will probably be more careful in the future while being funny with police handcuffs. Goofing with a pair last week, of course he snapped the lock and had no key to free himself.

After a few frantic moments he remembered a policeman friend up the street, and off he went in search of a key to get himself freed. Curious stares were bad enough, but the hard part was trying to convince the cop it was all a mistake. He was released from the shackles on the stroke of midnight, which should be significant of something.

BAD PRECEDENT: The Science Building elevator, well known for its playful nature, maltreated a chemistry instructor a few days ago. Entering on the second floor, he pushed the third floor button and the lift promptly carried him to the first floor. Trying again, he poked the third floor button and this time the elevator rose to that level, but before he could get the doors open, it sank without help of buttons to the basement.

Giving up and exiting at the underground level in quite a flap, the shaken instructor must have read of the Tokyo department store manager who, when an overloaded elevator crashed eight floors to the basement, presented the juggled but unhurt occupants free presents. They should give MZ. gifts," the chemist was heard to murmur.

SEASON CO-CAPTAINS Willie Hudson (49) and Gus Bagatelos (72)—Guardsman photo by Sherry

Hudson, Bagatelos Elected Team Co-Captains For Football Season

Guard Willie Hudson and Center Gus Bagatelos, recently elected season co-captains of the college football team, epitomize the ability, aggressiveness and hustle responsible for the Rams' success this year.

Both Hudson and Bagatelos play linebacker defensively, with Bagatelos in the left linebacker spot and Hudson backing up the middle. Bagatelos, who stands 6 foot and ½ inch and weighs 196, is a sparkplug on defense as well as offense, augmenting his vicious tackling with heads-up play and several intercepted passes.

Hudson, unlike veteran Bagatelos, performed in his first year of college competition this season. The ex-Polytechnic All-City star, who is relatively light for a guard, 6 foot and 185 pounds, resembles a running back more than a lineman, but his speed and deceptiveness on the forward wall more than cancel out this disadvantage.

Head Coach Grover Klemmer and line coaches Alex Schwarz and Roy Burkhead stress fundamentals; hard blocking, hard tackling and hard running, as evidenced by the Ram team, which had one tie in nine games this year, scoring 177 points, while yielding only 97.

City College's team launched their '54 campaign with a 21-6 victory over Taft of Southern California, displaying the solid defense which contributed so much to their success.

The team play which gave the Rams a 20-19 win over Menlo's Oaks in their second practice game was evident through the Big Seven Conference, for during crucial periods, the college's team would lift itself and rise to the occasion.

Star tackle Jerry James' 28-yard scoring run with an intercepted pitchout and subsequent conversion to tie Stockton 13-13 is an example of such play. This same quality was evidenced in the 14-13 victory over Modesto in the last minute and a half of play, as the Rams rallied around a passing attack and a 60 yard drive to tie Modesto 13-13 and then score on a conversion pass play to triumph, 14-13.

When the college's team toppled West Contra Costa 24-13 three weeks ago, the ability of every man to contribute his best in a united team effort was manifested once more.

Klemmer's epigrammatic eulogy, "It was a team effort," which punctuated standout performances of the Rams throughout the season, is thusly the highest form of praise for his team.

El Camino, Hinds In Junior Rose Bowl

El Camino Junior College of California and Hinds Junior College of Mississippi will meet in the Junior Rose Bowl game to be played this Saturday, Dec. 11, at Pasadena.

The Pasadena Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the game, announced the selection of the two teams last week. El Camino topped their undefeated season by whipping Bakersfield, ranked number one among the nation's two-year college teams, 30-19. Hinds also finished their regular season undefeated, winning nine straight games.

Block SF Dinner Scene For Athletic Awards

The Block S.F. society will hold their semi-annual athletic awards banquet on Wednesday, December 29. Block S.F. sponsor Bill Fischer announced yesterday.

This banquet will be for the presentation of letters and trophies to members of the '54 football team and the '54 soccer team. Trophies will be presented in honor of the Most Valuable Football Player and the Most Valuable Soccer Player, as selected by the coaches of these two sports.

Members of the Block SF society will receive invitations to the banquet, as will the lettermen who are to be honored.

Newcomers Spot Track Team; 7 Lettermen Return

With seven returning lettermen and a host of prominent newcomers, the Ram tracksters have their preliminary workouts underway and are looking forward to a successful season.

The returnees are Ray MacIntyre, Jaek Connell, Henry Stroughter, Medford Todd, Al Amador, Bill Rumford and Bill Canihan.

MacIntyre and Connell will probably see action this year in the 100, 220, and 440 yard runs, while Stroughter and Canihan are experienced in distance running and hurdles respectively.

Some of the top ex-prepsters are Clint Redus, a two year All-City hurdle champ from Washington; Benny Moorehead, a middle distance runner and also a Washington High product; and Jack Egan, 1953-54 San Francisco high school discus champion from Balboa.

Redus, who lead his school to its fifth straight title last year, broke the city record in the 120 yard high hurdles by running :14.7. He also scored victories in the 220 yard dash and low hurdles.

Egan, who has thrown the college discus 160 ft. and shot put over 50 ft., just missed breaking the national high school record last year in the discus throw. Moorehead, who placed first in the quarter mile city finals, is a consistently good half miler.

Ram Cagers Edged By UC Frosh 64-62 After Opening Win

by Bob Chrisman

Earl Robinson tanked a jump shot in the last five seconds of play to give the University of California Frosh basketball team a 64 to 62 victory over the Ram cagers last Friday in the college's men's gymnasium.

The contest was a wide open offensive game the entire route, with U.C. guard Robinson leading both teams in scoring with 20 points, and Ike Walker of the Rams following with 18 points.

Playing their first home game and their second game of the season, the college hoopsters were impressive in their defeat, showing strength on the boards with veterans Walker and Theopolis Dunn, and a versatile scoring threat in Doug Hom, the five foot seven inch guard who won All-City honors at Galileo last year.

At halftime, the Rams had a nine point lead over the Cubs, 36-27, sparked by the marksmanship of Hom, who connected with several 20 foot jump shots to score 11 points in the initial half.

The Cubs bounced back in the second half with Bob Tealer and Robinson setting the pace, and pulled ahead 62 to 60 in the last 15 seconds.

Ram forward Dave Davis tied the score with a 25 foot set shot, but Robinson's jump shot clinched the game for the Cubs.

Last Wednesday, the college's basketball squad topped Menlo's Oaks, 61-53 in the first game of the season for both teams at Menlo. Coach Ralph Hillsman's charges were never behind in the game, with the superior rebounding strength of the Rams featuring in their triumph. Dunn bucketed 17 points to pace both teams in scoring.

As Hillsman mentioned earlier, the club is centered around a good nucleus in which Walker and Dunn are vital cogs, as both men are returning veterans.

Hillsman has cut his squad and these are the players remaining on the team: Atkins, forward; Sam Gillepes, forward; Davis, forward; Hom, forward; Flemen Hardy, forward; Dunn, center; Desha Williams, center; Walker, forward; John Rudometkin, guard; Wally Papke, guard; and Mike Siegel, forward.

Statistically, the team has scored 123 points in their two games, with Forward Walker leading the team with 30 points, for an average of 15 per game. Dunn is second with 27 points, forward Hom is third, having scored 22 points in two games and Ed Atkins has 18.

Five December Cage Tilts Slated

Two conference games and three non-league contests are slated for the college basketball squad during the ensuing weeks, with three of these games to be played on City College hardwood.

East Contra Costa travels to San Francisco for a game with the Rams this Friday at 8 p.m. The non-league clash should prove a tight one although little is known about the Coast Conference team. The Vikings lost all-conference center Bob Borghesani by graduation.

Santa Rosa will be in the men's gymnasium here next Tuesday at 8 p.m. battling the Rams in the latter team's first Big Eight encounter. Although the game is not rated as an easy one for the hometowners, coaches have observed little in the Bear Cub attack that would rank that outfit as a power in the conference.

Those old rivals, San Mateo, will host the college easabans in the Bulldogs' kennel on December 17. This game is going to be a rugged one for both squads as San Mateo is reputed by coaches to be an up-and-comer in the Big Eight.

The Rams play two successive games, on December 29 and 30, against San Jose and Marin. Both are non-conference tangles. San Jose plays here at 3:30 p.m. on December 29 and the Rams invade Marin at 3:30 p.m. on December 30.

USF Soccer Team Nips Rams 2-1 To Win Championship; College Finishes Second

By Walter Zoschke

University of San Francisco's soccer team won the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference championship last Wednesday by edging the Rams 2-1 in the last 4 minutes of play at rain-drenched Balboa Park stadium.

The few fans who braved the driving rain were treated to a hard fought contest that showed the Rams outplaying the Dons during most of the game. The Dons only occasionally penetrated the closely guarding Ram defense, while Coach Roy Diederichsen's squad dominated USF territory.

After 10 minutes of scoreless play, during which All-American Don goalie George Durchslag made several spectacular saves, the college's inside left, Tony Quiteno scored from four yards out to put the Rams in front 1-0.

With ten minutes left in the game Abe Mordokowicz, Don center forward, took a shot which was deflected by one of his team mates, Art Lembke, Ram goalie, taken by surprise, was unable, despite a desperate dive, to prevent the tally which evened the score 1-1.

Encouraged by the unexpected comeback, the Dons broke the tie when Mordokowicz scored from 30 yards out with four minutes remaining to play. Somewhat surprised and shaken by the fast Don comeback, the Rams pressed hard in the closing minutes to even the score and thereby force the game into overtime, but all their efforts were foiled as the Dons pulled back most of their players to defend the slim 2-1 margin.

This game ended the Rams' season which Diederichsen terms as "highly successful" despite the setback in the final game. USF is the only team to defeat the Rams this season and by virtue of last Wednesday's victory they have won the title for the sixth consecutive year.

Earlier in the season, the college's soccer squad had defeated the Don team, which had been undefeated in 56 games previously, and through this win had ended the round-robin competition of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference in first place.

USF defeated UC in conference play to finish second place with the Golden Bears in third, and toppled the Rams twice in the playoffs for the championship.

Five Ram Soccer Players Named All Conference

City College's highly rated soccer team placed five men on the University of San Francisco-dominated All-Northern California Inter-collegiate Soccer League team announced by the coaches last week.

The USF Dons placed five men on the first eleven and another pair on the second team. Two men from Stanford, two from California and one from Santa Clara rounded out the first string, with the California Bears' inside left, Dennis Trason, the only unanimous choice.

The team was chosen by the coaches of the league colleges. The conference consists of CCSF, USF, Stanford, California, San Francisco State, San Jose State and Santa Clara. The teams:

Teammates Elect Injured Tackle James Honorary Co-Captain Of Year

By Mike Berger

Anyone who is held in such high regard by his teammates as to be unanimously elected team co-captain for the year, besides having the season dedicated to him, must have a rare combination of talent, leadership, and popularity.

The value of Jerry James to the college's football squad both last year and for these brief games this season cannot be overestimated.

In addition to being the outstanding lineman on the team, James was the place-kicker, and his record of conversions stood at six straight before his leg injury in the game with Los Angeles City College. The importance of the kicker can be best demonstrated by glancing at the two big points that separated City College from Santa Rosa in the final game of the season, 14-12.

Football games are won and lost in the line, and tackle James was the key player in the team's forward wall. His speed and agility in blocking were big factors in the success of the Rams' running game; Defensively, the big tackle had the size and strength to bottle up most of the opposition's attack down the middle.

All linemen are eager to get into the scoring column, and in the Stockton game this season James really got into the act in this regard. With the Rams trailing, 13-6, late in the contest, James broke into the Stockton backfield, stole a pitchout, and raced 28 yards to score the tying touchdown. He then kept the college in the running for the Junior Rose Bowl bid by booting the extra point that retained the Rams' unbeaten mark until the final game of the year.

HONORARY co-captain Jerry James

After suffering his broken leg in the game down south, James was forced to stay there for a week before returning home and eventually had to drop out of college for this semester because the heavy cast on his leg made it impossible for him to move around freely.

Polytechnic, always a power in San Francisco high school football, produced James, and as a senior he made the All-City team at tackle. He went on to become an All-Conference lineman at the same position in his first season at the college.

Sororities Hold Formal Presents At Century Club

By Carolyn Fisher

Sponsored by the Inter-Sorority Council, the formal presentation of new members of sororities was held last Saturday at the Century Club on Franklin and Sutter Streets.

Prior to 1953, presents were held by each sorority separately and last Saturday's fete marked the second consecutive joint ISC presents. Pledges were escorted to the affair by a fraternity member and were presented by the sorority presidents.

The sororities represented, their presidents and their guests were Theta Tau, Diane Tolman, president, accompanied by her parents Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Tolman; Zeta Chi, Alice St. Louis, president, and her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank St. Louis; Alpha Lambda Chi, Josephine Gandert, president, her parents Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gandert; Delta Psi, Pat Smith, president, and Mr. and Mrs. Karl D. Smith; Kappa Phi, Jackie Mascarelli, president, her parents Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mascarelli; and Phi Beta Rho, Dorothy Trezise, president, and her father Ray P. Trezise.

The United Students Association, under the direction of President Bob Burmeister, will hold its semi-annual election convention on Tuesday, December 28, at 2 p.m. in the Building 2 student lounge.

Plans are underway now for a Christmas Party on December 18 for all members of the Chinese Students Club. The club's recent Turkey Hop had a successful turnout.

The Newman Club is having a Christmas Party tonight at Sigmund Stern Grove starting at 7:30 p.m.

Zeta Chi Plans Yule Cheer For Canon Kip

Christmas cheer for underprivileged children at Canon Kip Community House, 8th and Natoma Streets in San Francisco, will be the aim of Zeta Chi sorority here, when the members give their Christmas Party one week before the holiday, according to Tookie Radillo, sorority treasurer.

As part of their service to the college, the sorority also gives an Easter Party for the children of Canon Kip.

The group, which is sponsored by Catherine Shorb, has modeled fashion shows during the open house of the Goodwill Industries. President of the sorority is Alice St. Louis.

'Super Inch' Film Runs College Hour

Super Inch is the title of the motion picture which will be shown this Friday, December 10 during college hour in Room 136 of the Science Building, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here, announced last week.

The construction and planning of the giant pipe line which pipes natural gas from the oil fields of Texas to California is the subject of the picture.

American Foreign Policy Subject Of Semi-Annual Speech Contest

When the Christmas Holidays are over, the debate team will return to college to hold their semi-annual Alumni Speech Award Contest. The subject is to be American Foreign Policy and anyone can enter this contest. The winner will have his name engraved on a gold cup.

Winner of last year's contest was Grant Barnes, who was a prominent figure here in debating.

After taking second place at Santa Clara, November 20, the college debate team went to San Jose State last Monday for a roundtable discussion of American Education.

Members of Phi Rho Pi honor debate society who participated in the San Jose debate are Bob Arago, Klaus Arons, Vic Hebert and Noel Marsh. The team has competed in Bay Area debates and has traveled all over California and out of the state.

Norman McLeod won a trophy at Stockton's Pi Kappa Delta sponsored debate on one of the trips the society took last year. His trophy was won for discussion in the Pi Kappa Delta contest.

Officers of the team are President Jim Mullins, Vice-President, Joel Marsh; Secretary, Louis Rogers; and Club Activities Board Representative, Rose Thurman.

Job Office Open Extra Week; Demands Heavy

To meet the needs of both students and employers, the college placement service will remain open during the first week of Christmas vacation, beginning Monday, December 13. Joseph A. Amori, placement director, will maintain office hours from 8 a.m. through 4:30 p.m. daily.

Students who have not been hired should not only file their applications immediately but should keep in close touch with the placement service office in Building 2, Amori said. Many employers do late hiring. These include confectionery firms, nurseries, floral shops, and the like.

Miss America Wishes The College 'Merry Christmas' Via Telephone

Lee Ann Meriwether, the college's most famous ex-coed, telephoned the college December 1, to wish students and faculty a Merry Christmas.

Miss America phoned from Scranton, Pennsylvania, where she was stopping en route to New York City from Florida. The call was received here at 12:45 p.m. and Brad Owens, sophomore class president and Bob McNaught, students who were in the Associated Student's office at the time, spoke to her. Owens stated that Miss America's voice was barely audible and he suspected that the faulty connection was due to the "listening in" of cross-country operators.

After Lee spoke to Owens and McNaught, the call was transferred to the office of Louis F. Batmale, dean of semi-professional courses, where Betty Scholzen, the dean's secretary, took the call in his absence.

Miss America stated that the telephone company offered her a free call to "anyplace" and consequently she made the call to the college. Since the call was put through at a time when many persons are out to luneh, she was unable to speak to many student friends and members of the faculty.

Among the persons asked for by Miss Meriwether were Joseph A. Amori, placement director here; Edwin C. Browne, dean of men; Mary Golding, dean of women; and Uriel Furlong, secretary to deans Golding and Browne, and Lee's two closest friends, Pat Smith and Pat Quick.

Aside from extending holiday wishes to everyone, Miss America sent students a verbal invitation to view her performance on the Philco Television Playhouse, Sunday, December 26. She will be the star of an hour-long comedy especially written for her.

Rally And Club Meetings Friday

Club meetings and a rally will be held during college hour 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. this Friday, Dean Louis Batmale announced this week.

The rally, planned by Emmett Thompson, chairman of the Rally Committee, will honor the college basketball team. Another purpose of the rally is to collect clothing for the underprivileged children of Korea.

To secure the clothing, Thompson said, admission for each person attending the rally will be one article of clothing.

High on Thompson's list of prospective performers for the rally is George Shearing, who appeared at the college once before. Thompson stressed the fact that the date is only tentative because Shearing might be out of town on Friday.

Basketball veterans and newcomers will be introduced by the coach of the squad, Ralph Hillsman.

Students who don't have club meetings were urged by Thompson to attend the rally.

Students Assist In Library Work

Valuable work experience is gained by those students aiding the members of the college library staff in correspondence, typing, filing of books, cards, pamphlets and magazines, processing and shelving of books, and the keeping of the library in a neat and orderly condition, Clement Skrabak, library staff member, stated yesterday.

Students enrolled in Business 85A or 85B gain from 1 to 3 office practice credits, depending upon the number of hours spent in the library.

They are Eugene Ashby, George Berkeley, Nannette Bonniei, Evaline Chang, Charles Delec, Gonsalves Del Rio, Augustine Garnett, Henry Gierahn, Wilbur Hercules, Ray Jew, Robert Johnson, Stanley Lee, Lew Long, Virginia Lujan, Dorris McCall, Ray MacIntyre, Lois Mantle, Eva Russell, Carrie Sanders, Milton Schroeder, Rupert Shinn, Richard Townsteer, Mildred Williams and Austin Woosley.

In addition to these students, the library receives much assistance from Delta Psi Sorority, Skrabak added. As a part of their pledge duties, pledges to Delta Psi must spend 18 hours working in the library. Irene Mensing, Delta Psi coordinator, briefs the pledges on the fundamentals of library procedure and grades them on their work.

Overflow Crowd Anticipated For First Performance Tomorrow Night In College's Little Theater

With the anticipation of an overflow house for their opening night, the college's Little Theater group begins its three day run of Fay Kanin's three act comedy, Goodbye, My Fancy, tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the little theater of the Science Building.

The production will be staged at the same curtain time on Friday and Saturday evenings, December 10 and 11, Joyce Cody, student director of the play, said yesterday.

Tickets for Goodbye, My Fancy have been on sale since the middle of last month and all performances are expected to draw crowds that will fill the group's playhouse, Jann Palmer, producer of the play, commented.

In order to make tickets to the production more easily obtained by students, the group has set up a table in the hall of the Science Building on the first floor. Students desiring tickets may acquire them from representatives at the table or from members of the Little Theater group who are selling them around the campus.

Admission is free to Associated Students and 50 cents to students not having AS cards. General admission is $1.00.

Goodbye, My Fancy is the story of the return of a liberal congresswoman, Agatha Reed, to the campus of her old college for the purpose of receiving an honorary degree during homecoming ceremonies.

Frank Anderson, Diana Williams and Ron Boltz play the leading roles of Matt Cole, a Life Magazine photographer, Agatha Reed, and Dr. Merrill, president of the college in the production. Jan Sobieski as Ginny Merrill, and Edwina Moguin as Woody, Miss Reed's wisecracking secretary, are featured in the cast.

The rest of the cast includes Joan Meckie as Ellen, Anne Canellos as Susan, Gail Clark as Miss Shackleford, Lee Jensen as Jo, Bob Johnson as the telephone man, Antoinette Mannina as Miss Birdshaw, Stan Miller as Dr. Pitt, Barbara Raffaelli as Amelia, Henry Schlachter as Claude Griswold, Warren Smith as Professor Dingly, and Carol Waugh as Carol.

The production staff for the production is Miss Palmer, producer; Pat Francisco and George Sweet, assistant produeers; Miss Cody, assistant director; Miss Canellos, wardrobe; Bill Conkle, props; Eddie Farnsworth, head carpenter; Bill Keller, sound; Jane Lutt, wardrobe; Roy Maffei, master electrician; Diek Moore, publicity director; Marilyn Williamson, tickets; and Carol Winternitz, in charge of the house.

Royalty Petitions For Sophomore Ball Readied

Applicants for King and Queen of the Sophomore Ball, to be presented Saturday, January 22, will be able to obtain their petitions early in January, Brad Owens, sophomore class president, stated last week.

Any sophomore man or woman is eligible to run, and in the past each candidate has been backed by a sorority, fraternity, or club, although this is not necessary, Owens said.

Voting will take place about two days before the ball and all Associated Students will have the privilege of voting.

The Colonial room of the St. Francis hotel has been chosen for the site of the dance, and all AS members will be admitted without charge. Charge for non-members is $2.50 per couple.

Examiner Promotion Editor Lectures Journalism Class Here On Techniques

Gray Creveling, promotion editor of the San Francisco Examiner, addressed the newswriting class here November 24, on the functions and techniques of the newspaper's promotion department.

Aimed at keeping circulation at the highest possible level and encouraging new subscriptions, the promotion department's work ranges from sponsoring contests and events of public participation to carefully constructing thought-provoking and eye-appealing ads.

Radio, television, outdoor advertising, mail and handbills are some media employed to carry advertising to the public.

In an informal question and answer type lecture, Creveling explained the reasoning behind a series of colorful ads which he exhibited to the class.

Much of today's promotion work is directed toward the youthful citizenry since they become the newspaper's advertisers of tomorrow.

In his closing remarks Creveling offered this thought to the student aspiring to become a news reporter: "The city editor seeks first and foremost an inquiring mind."

9 Clubs' Active Status Petitions Still Outstanding

Twenty-nine organizations have submitted their petitions for active campus status to the Club Activities Board, while nine organizations are still outstanding, Ed Dollard, in charge of CAB memberships, reported yesterday.

Those clubs that have submitted petitions are United Students Association, Alpha Phi Omega, Beta Tau, Phi Beta Rho, Chinese Students Club, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Tau Chi Sigma, Delta Psi, Beta Phi Beta, Zeta Chi, Collegiate Christian Fellowship, Le Cercle Francais, Theta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Masonic Club, Alpha Lambda Chi, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Men's Glee Club, Engineering Society, International Relations Club, Lambda Phi, A Cappella Choir, Canterbury Club, Phi Rho Pi, Kappa Phi, Newman Club, Band Association, Lutheran Club, and Filipino Club.

Those clubs which have not submitted their charters include Block SF, Women's Athletic Association, Horticulture Society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Pick and Hammer Society, Alpha Sigma Delta, Phi Beta Delta, Delta Sigma Tau, and Drama Club.

Dollard urged all clubs to submit their charters as soon as possible. Progress of CAB is delayed because of this and, therefore, he asked all outstanding clubs to co-operate.

Conlan Honors AGS At Reception

Members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, were the guests of Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, and other college administrators, at a president's reception last Sunday afternoon in the student lounge.

The event, which takes place each semester, is designed to enable the president of the college to meet and converse with the honor students.

Next event listed on the AGS activity calendar is the semi-annual AGS dinner, which will be tomorrow evening beginning at 5:30 p.m. in the faculty dining room.

Administrators of the college have been invited to attend and as a new feature of AGS banquets, invitations have also been extended to high school honor society presidents and their sponsors.

Following the dinner and presentation of awards, the AGS members, their sponsor Don Jensen, and their guests will adjourn to the little theater, Room 28, to see the drama production, Goodbye, My Fancy.

IFC Nominates Candidates For AS Elections; USA Backs Independents

Spring Scholarship Petition Deadline Set For April 12; Dean Announces Availability Of Five Scholarships

Five scholarships will be awarded at intervals during the Spring semester, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced today.

Petitions for the Florence Louis scholarship must be in the office of Dean Golding no later than February 23, 1955.

This scholarship, in the amount of $25 and an Associated Student card, is made available to one woman student each semester who has completed 15 units of work with a "C" average or better. The decision of the award committee is based on the student's scholarship, need and leadership, Dean Golding said.

Other scholarships to be awarded later in the semester include the Dr. A. J. Cloud scholarships, which will be available to one man and one woman student; the Chinese Students Association scholarship, available to one man and one woman student, and the Graduating Class of 1954 scholarship to be awarded to two men and two women students.

Recipients of these awards will receive $50. Letters of application will be received by Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, Room S148 and Dean Golding, Room S150, until April 12, 1955.

Scholarships are expected to be given out at a special scholarship rally to be held some time in June.

Conlan and Wilson Referee Bowl Game

President Louis G. Conlan and Tom Wilson, hygiene instructor at the college, were officials for the Rose Bowl game in Pasadena on January 1.

President Conlan, who has worked such classics as the East-West Shrine game and last year's Big Game between California and Stanford, served as field judge, and Wilson, another well-known Pacific Coast Conference official, was head linesman for the game.

Pacific Coast Conference Commissioner Victor Schmidt officially announced the Rose Bowl officials on December 14, 1954. President Conlan and Wilson left college on December 29 for the game.

Independent Candidates May Give Two-Party System Competition

By Bev Swope

Well known among California's two-year colleges for its "unique two-party system of government," City College might possibly see much competition from independent candidates in Associated Student elections for spring 1955.

The Inter-Fraternity council and the United Students Association have been in recent years the only two politically-interested groups on campus. Since their inauguration in the spring of 1948 and 1952 respectively, these two major parties have controlled student government. With few exceptions their candidates have ultimately come out on top in election results.

This semester the USA reports that it intends to support independent candidates. The IFC is running a full ticket of nominees for AS offices.

The lack of USA candidates for student offices apparently will not mean a lack of competition for the IFC for spring 1955, since reports have it that this election will see many independent candidates in the running. Or perhaps a few new parties?

Because of an extension of the deadline for election petitions from the original date of December 30 to December 31, and the possibility of still another extension at press time, no one seems to be sure of who is running and who is not—except, of course, the already-nominated IFC candidates.

But the possibility of independent competition seems great. According to reports, the IFC might have much competition from within its own party for some of the higher AS offices.

To date at least four persons have expressed willingness to run independently for president of the AS. And if indications prove true, the other AS offices will not go uncontested from independent candidates.

In former elections an independent candidate was considered to have less chance of success than a nominee from one of the two political parties—IFC and USA.

Might this election be a turning point in AS politieal ideas and practices?

USA Reorganizes, Promises Strong Ticket For Spring

No United Students Association candidates will run for office this fall, delegates decided at the USA convention last Thursday. The party plans to endorse independent candidates this election, as it is in the process of reorganization and promises a strong ticket this spring.

The USA had planned to nominate candidates for Student Council seats in this election, but, according to party leaders, the field of competition from independent candidates was so great that the organization decided to support those candidates.

Before the birth of the USA in 1952, the Student League was the equivalent organization and nominated candidates until 1949.

A strong showing was made by the USA in its first year on campus. They won one executive position, the presidency of the AMS, and five council seats. Since that time the USA has failed to win an elective office.

Last year USA sponsor Mervin Slosberg said, "It rests with you people to provide strong competition to the IFC candidates in order that the political party system may continue here." Observers now say that only the future will tell whether the college's unique two-party political system, in operation since 1948, will remain.

Total Veteran Enrollment Here Tops State, USF

Of the three major non-specialized colleges located in San Francisco, City College has the highest total of veterans enrolled for the present semester, followed by San Francisco State College and USF.

Veterans now enrolled here total 1127 which may be roughly computed to be about one-third of the 3718 male students who registered during the first of the fall semester.

The total number of veterans attending college here at the termination of last semester totaled 849 or about 278 under the present enrollment, as revealed by the Veterans Affairs office, which is now located in Room 134 in the Science Building.

Enrollment of veterans at San Francisco State College comprises close to one sixth or 928 of the 7367 male students registered there for the first six weeks of this semester.

This attendance surpasses the total number of veterans by 320 for a total of 608 who were in attendance last semester as based on information obtained from Kay Krause, military affairs secretary, and John Bergstresser, dean of students at State College.

Former servicemen attending the University of San Francisco for the fall semester total 528, making up about one-fifth of the total male students.

This is the only institution of the three that had a drop in veteran attendance from the spring semester at which time veterans there totaled 636, according to information related by William J. Dillon, registrar at the University of San Francisco.

Except for any student who may have dropped attendance, the foregoing figures include all male students in college at the first of the fall semester; full time, limited, day and evening class attendance and veterans of both contemporary wars, excluding San Francisco State College, from which the number of veterans attending there under World War II benefits was unobtainable.

Candidates Speak At Rally Friday

All candidates for Associated Student offices will be introduced at an election rally during college hour Friday, January 7, with elections to follow on Wednesday, January 12 and Thursday, January 13, Anthony Frost, Election Commissioner, announced recently.

Election posters will be approved through this Friday by the Election Committee. No standard has been set for the size of the posters. Because of space limitations, the Election Committee will permit only two posters in the Science Building and three in Cloud Hall per candidate.

Beta Phi Beta Presents Slipper Dance This Friday

Beta Phi Beta fraternity's Golden Slipper Dance, the only off campus event of its kind sponsored by a fraternity at the college this semester, will be held in the Gold Room of the Fairmont Hotel this Friday night, January 7, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, Paul Ortiz, Beta Phi Beta vice-president in charge of the dance, announced recently.

Gil Ray and his nine-piece dance band, who provided the music for this semester's Homecoming Dance, will furnish the melody for the occasion. Semi-formal attire will be the dress for the evening, which will be unique in its presentation, according to Ortiz.

Admission to the affair is $2.00 per couple, and tickets may now be obtained from members of the fraternity or from the student bank in the Science Building.

Decorations for the dance will be taken care of by Bill Cirimele. Pete Ruppert, president of the fraternity, will be in charge of publicity arrangements, and Al Kingston will be the official host for the evening. Ortiz and Al Caredeo are handling other plans for the event.

Tallies in the shape of miniature golden slippers will be awarded to all women as they enter the dance and the holder of a certain tally will be presented with a door prize.

Presented annually by the Beta Phi Beta fraternity the dance will initiate the social activities of the new year.

Parking Foreseen On Reservoir Roof

College students may be able to park over water in the future, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of the division of student welfare here.

Underground reservoirs are to be built by the Public Utilities Commission where the west campus now is, and the commission may agree to build them strong enough for parking. The new parking area will depend on extra funds to be voted by the Board of Education.

College administration officials are now concentrated in one wing of the Science Building, Brady said. Only the placement and student activities offices remain on the west campus. Student activities will move into the new Student Union and Cafeteria in September, while the placement office will move into the space now occupied by the bank.

Work has begun on a photography lab in Cloud Hall, while the ceramics department will move into a quonset hut in Hurley Village. The custodians have already deserted the west campus for Cloud Hall.

Al Niemi Receives Fraternity Backing For Presidency

By a simple majority vote on the third ballot, Al Niemi captured the Inter-Fraternity council nomination for Associated Student president during the eight-hour IFC convention December 29.

Niemi defeated Phil Gaal and Al Kingston in a closely-contested race for the highest AS office.

The IFC nomination for AS vice-president was given to Marcia Herst, after her victory on the fourth ballot over Marion Cheader and Betty Peterson.

Bob Johnson received the IFC candidacy for Associated Men Student president. His political opponent, Bob Arago, lost on the third ballot.

In close competition with Karin Walker for the Associated Women Student president vote, Tookie Radillo triumphed and became the IFC nominee.

Joe Graham gained the nomination for sophomore president over John Roberts, while Arthur Handy defeated Marilyn Sicotte, Mel Patsel and Glen Allen for freshman president nominee.

Successful candidates for nomination to sophomore seats in student council were Lawrence Lowe, Esther Phillips, Gerrie Fink, Jim Nichols, Carol Thompson, Marcia Norstrom and Connie Panagakis.

Vie Hebert, Phil Braverman, Barbara Batmale, Judy Wilson, Joyce Weaver, Bob Bliss and Jessie Dawson won in competition for IFC support as freshman nominees to council.

Council Ponders Student Finance, Voting Structure

Organization of the upcoming elections and problems in student finance were the main concern of the Student Council in the past few meetings,

Reports from the Election Commissioner and several committees were considered, and the location of polling places, filing of petitions and registration of candidates were discussed. Final votes were not held on any matters facing the council at the last meeting because of the lack of a quorum among the members.

A committee of the whole was formed, and the decisions of the meeting were written in the form of minutes, to be accepted or rejected by the council whenever a quorum could be formed.

Several transfers of student funds were made by the finance committee because of unexpected expenditures by several organizations. The choir, band and glee club budgets were frozen by the committee for a short while until lists of the members of the organizations were submitted to the committee.

Appropriation of funds for the purchase of outstanding service awards and council keys, awards given to council members, was considered by the council, to be voted upon at a later date. Nominations for the recipient of the Outstanding Student Award will be submitted to the council on January 11 and 13. A vote will be held on January 13 and the winner will be announced at the council dinner, to be held Tuesday, January 18, at the California Hotel, according to Bill Boldenweek, Associated Student president.

All campus organizations subsidized by the Associated Students are represented at the council meetings, held each Tuesday and Thursday in Building 2.

Only Students Can Remedy Serious Snack Bar Situation; Shut-Down Hard On Everyone

A worthy project to correct one of the worst maintenance problems of the college is currently being ruined by a completely careless lack of good sense and good manners on the part of a group of students here. The result is likely to be to the detriment and dissatisfaction of the very ones who are bringing it about.

The basement snack bar in the Science Building has been operated strictly as a service to students here by the hotel and restaurant division of the college. The profit ranges from little to nothing, and the only gain is in experience for the H & R people who are behind the counter.

Now the snack bar is in definite danger of being closed permanently. Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management, has extended his patience to the limit and far beyond in an effort to give the students who rely on the snack bar for their quick noon meal every break. Unless the basement is cleaned up, in a hurry, the only alternative will be to close it down.

If the snack bar is closed, it will deprive many students here of their only chance for a noon meal. There are many who have only a short time between classes and rely on the "coffee-and-doughnut" break that the snack bar affords.

The trouble can be traced to a particular group. Unfortunately, the group is a relatively large one. Many of the students who use the snack bar show good sense and manners, but too many completely forget themselves in their hurried break between classes.

Two of the fraternities on campus have made a vain attempt to improve conditions. However, their efforts have been met with derision — signs have been ignored, members of the groups have been pelted, and the clutter of paper cups and garbage in general continues to find its way away from the refuse cans and onto the floor.

Because of their failures in the most basic aspect of the problem, the fraternities have temporarily stopped work, and their plans to remove the empty lockers, link trainers and other assorted junk that litters the snack bar have been shelved.

Naturally the ones who do the most damage — throw the most garbage carelessly on the floor and pay least attention to simple rules of courtesy — are going to be the ones who cry the loudest when the snack bar is closed. But they are forcing the administration to take this course, the only one left open to them.

The mess in the snack bar is caused by plain and simple carelessness. We're sure that these same people would never dream of throwing papers and dishes on the floor of a downtown restaurant or the dining room of a large hotel. Yet they seem to forget that the basement snack bar is also an eating place, and one which must be kept just as neat and sanitary as any other restaurant.

Students who take advantage of these facilities have two alternatives open to them. They may continue to act like poorly-disciplined and rude children, and suffer the consequences for their thoughtlessness. Or they may act like mature college students and, in doing so, retain use of the snack bar.

For the sake of all concerned, we hope the latter course is the one followed.

Shots At RAMdom

TRANSPORTATION problems seem to have been solved by some of the more ingenious students on campus. This would definitely explain the Flexy Racer, trimmed in bright purple and undoubtedly something Santa Claus left, parked at the south entrance to the Science Building last Monday.

The horse feeding blissfully in the field behind the cafeteria is one of another color, and opinions range from the ridiculous to the sublime. Anyway, it beats walking.

A TARGET for more than ridicule recently was Ralph Libby, president of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity. His group, along with Tau Chi Sigma, undertook the worthy enterprise of trying to clean up the basement snack bar in the Science Building.

The efforts of Libby and his compatriots to post some well-worded signs were met with a barrage of uncomplimentary remarks and a shower of empty paper cups, both injurious to the pride.

Bloody but unbowed, they got all the signs up, but the college's janitorial staff promptly added insult to injury by cleaning the refuse cans and then replacing them in strategic spots, being careful not to place a single one in its original position under the signs.

RESIGNED TO their half-empty classrooms last week were several instructors who put off scheduled tests and important lectures to allow for all of the after-Christmas illness suffered by students. After all, frostbite from the extra-curricular ski trips and exhaustion (spelled lazy) suffered by students who just could not bear to give up all that loot from holiday jobs are legitimate sicknesses.

One instructor made it sound cheery when she pointed out that City College had the distinction of being the only college in the country to hold classes last week.

Past Civilizations Tried To Do What Is Done Today

THROUGHOUT the history of the world, every civilization has left behind some trace of its existence which declares that long ago it strived to do what has been accomplished today.

One of the most prevalent traces left is an obsession of mankind which drives him to building monuments higher and higher in the air.

The American civilization is not immune to this obsession. Its architects have built their moments higher than any previous civilization and have probably built more than the earlier minds could conceive.

Defying comprehension, the American skyscrapers fill the individual with a profound respect for his race. Standing at the bottom of one of these massive blocks of concrete and steel, a feeling of awed insignificance overcomes him, but once he stands on the roof and looks down at the swirling mass of humanity he realizes that combined they are capable of almost anything.

American cities are like a series of huge concrete canyons where the sun seldom touches the narrow trails between the mortared cliffs. Crowded but hygenic, they are our unique method of living and the skyscraper stands above everything in monumental splendor.

America is rightly proud of these great architectural achievements which will live in the future as final proof of a once great civilization and men of the future will look upon the results of this age with wonder and remark to each other, "How could they have accomplished such magnificent architecture when they were so limited in technique and materials?"

Camera Replaces Bow, Arrow

Cousin Of Queen Of Iran Starts Royal Romance Through Pictures

By Don Osborne

The marriage between the beautiful Soraya Bakhtiari and the Shah of Iran, who recently visited San Francisco, might never have taken place if it hadn't been for the mild camera mania of an Iranian photography student, Goodarz Khan Bakhtiari, who is now enrolled at the college.

Goodarz and Soraya, who are first cousins, studied languages together at Davis College in London. A camera fan even then, Goodarz used to practice his hobby of photography by using the lovely Soraya as his model. It was these photographs which Goodarz sent back to his aunt in Iran and which she showed to the recently divorced Shah that started the romance.

He sent her an invitation to return to her homeland, and in the presence of both families Soraya met the Shah of Iran. Five days later a formal engagement was announced, and within five months the royal pair were wed.

Of royal lineage himself, Goodarz is the immediate successor of the Khan of the Bakhtiari tribe in Iran. The Bakhtiaris, numbering some 500,000 people, are reputed to be the most powerful tribe in the country and have a history that extends back to almost 1,000 BC.

Born in the town of Esfahan, Goodarz received both his primary and secondary education there. Later, while studying at the University of Teheran, he met Dr. Boris, an American missionary, who influenced him into coming to the United States. On his way he stopped off at Switzerland and again at London.

Finally arriving in this country in 1952, he studied at the University of California and received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Political Science. Now in his second semester, he plans to finish a full two year course in photography at the college.

Goodarz, who is 31 years old, sums up his plans for the future by saying, "I have in mind to go back and put both political science and photography to the service of my country and to introduce her Iran mere adequately to the world."

Unique Politics

Semiannual Vote Checks Council

The college's unique two party political system insures inspired and contested semi-annual elections and provides checks and balances to guard against possible onesidedness in the Student Council.

First party to challenge the Inter-Fraternity Council was the Student League. In the 1948 Spring elections the Student League won four council seats, the IFC nine, with one independent.

In the next fall elections, positions were reversed, with the league winning nine seats to the IFC's five. Spring 1949 saw the return to power of the IFC and the death of the Student League.

In 1949 a Committee for Better Student Government was formed which lasted until election time. An organization called Affiliated Students was formed out of the wreckage, which gained enough strength to win four council spots by the next June.

1951 saw the reincarnation of the Student League. The league won three of the top six elective offices as well as eleven out of fourteen council seats that year.

Election interest waned in 1952. Twenty of twenty-one elective offices were uncontested, and the fraternity party won all offices. That summer the United Students Association was formed, which has competed with the IFC ever since.

The USA made a strong showing in its first election, but the IFC dominated again that spring.

Last year's elections saw continuing victories by the IFC and pessimism about the future of the USA, but president Bob Burmister plans a newer and more powerful party for election time this January.

Registrar's Survey Shows Origin Of Student Body

College Enrollment From City, Private Schools On The Increase

By Dolores Stoffers

Increased daytime enrollment, percentagewise, of students from San Francisco public and private schools is shown here in this semester in comparison with figures compiled in 1952.

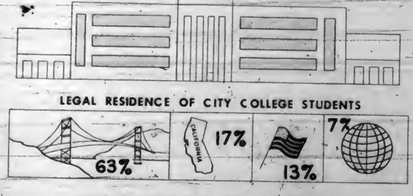
Students from private schools have shown the greatest increase total. Percentages were compiled in a survey taken from the files of the registrar's office and conducted by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, here. Figures include students enrolled in day classes only.

Enrollment of graduates of private schools here was recorded at 12 per cent of the attendance of students from San Francisco schools. Compared with the 1952 figure of 9.1 per cent, a 3.9 per cent increase is shown.

Attendance of students here from San Francisco public high schools has increased slightly, this semester's percentage of 45 rising over that of 1952, which was 44.5. A total of the figures shows that San Francisco students comprise 58 per cent of the total student body.

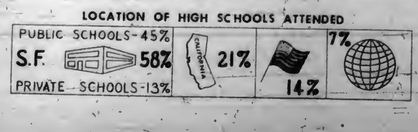
Students who graduated from high schools in counties other than San Francisco compose 21 per cent of the enrollment, a drop of 6 per cent from the 27 per cent of 1952.

Increase of students from states outside California rose from 12 per cent in 1952 to 14 per cent this semester. Foreign students comprise 7 per cent of the enrollment, a 5 per cent increase over 1952.



The survey showed the following enrollment from San Francisco high schools: Balboa, 277; Galileo, 213; Girls, 8; Gompers and O'Connell, 13; Lincoln, 223; Lowell, 254; Mission, 239; Polytechnic, 256; Washington, 432; San Francisco private schools, 535.

The survey further showed a sharp increase of students claiming legal residence in states other than California. This semester 13 per cent of the students at the college claim family residence outside the state, compared with 4.9 percent in 1952.



Foreign countries are the legal residences of 7 per cent of the students, while two years ago the percentage was 4.1.

3 Ram Linemen, 2 Backs Named To Big Seven All-Conference Team

Five members of Coach Grover Klemmer's strong 1954 Ram football team were named to the Big Seven All-Conference team released recently by the coaches of the member colleges.

Quarterback Les Barros, guard Willie Hudson and tackle Ken Orzell were named to the first squad and fullback Shirlee McCormick and center Gus Bagatelos received second team honors.

West Contra Costa, Big Seven co-champion, topped the list selected. The Comets, beaten only by the Rams, placed four men on the first team, headed by halfback Credell Green, who was also named second team Junior College All-American. The three City College stars and two each from league co-champion Santa Rosa and Sacramento rounded out the first string.

Barros, the engineer of the powerful Ram attack, was one of the steadiest quarterbacks in the league, and his pin-point passing, ball-handling and play-calling were directly responsible for many of the San Francisco wins. Barros was playing his first year for the college.

Hudson, the freshman guard and season co-captain, was continually brilliant as a linebacker in addition to being a fine offensive blocker. Many considered him the superior of Sevvern Hayes, stocky West Contra Costa guard who was his mate on the All-Conference and who made both All-Big Seven and All-American last year.

The other first team selection, veteran tackle Orzell, came into his own this year after playing behind the All-Conference duo of Ram tackles, Jerry Landi and Jerry James, last year. Orzell was another whose steady but colorless brilliance sparked the Rams.

Fullback McCormick, the team's leading ground-gainer, was always in serious contention for a first team berth, but a knee injury late in the season hurt him in his competition with the host of other fine running backs in the league.

Bagatelos, the veteran center and co-captain, was one of the sparkplugs of the team. Bagatelos called defensive signals, turned in a good season as offensive center and was one of the top linebackers in the Big Seven.

The All-Conference team was chosen by the coaches of the seven members. Each coach nominated five from his own team for consideration. This list of 35 players was then sent out to each mentor and he chose an all-opponent team from the list. The players receiving the most votes were named to the official league all-star team.

The All-Conference teams:

First Team:
ENDS: Mel Powell (Santa Rosa) and Noble Freeman (Sacramento).
TACKLES: Orzell (CCSF) and Mike Mullahey (Santa Rosa).
GUARDS: Hudson (CCSF) and Severn Hayes (W. Contra Costa).
CENTER: Ben Hammond (W. Contra Costa).
QUARTERBACK: Barros (CCSF).
BACKS: Credell Green (W. Contra Costa); Farrell Funston (Sacramento) and Emmett Kirtman (W. Contra Costa).

Second Team:
ENDS: Duane Shore (San Mateo) and Don Miller (Stockton).
TACKLES: Malcolm McDonald (W. Contra Costa) and Harold Robinson (Sacramento).
GUARDS: Dan Shaughnessy (Santa Rosa) and Nat Davis (W. Contra Costa).
CENTER: Bagatelos (CCSF).
QUARTERBACK: Gary Modrell (Santa Rosa).
BACKS: Don Bossert (Santa Rosa); Gene Peterson (Modesto) and McCormick (CCSF).

College Athletes Receive Awards At Block SF Banquet

City College athletes participating in fall sports received their Block SF awards last Wednesday night at a banquet held in the college cafeteria.

Bob Bronzan, head football coach at San Jose State and recently selected as Coach-of-the-Year by the Northern California Football Writers Association, was the guest speaker at the dinner honoring 58 members of the Ram football and soccer teams.

Soccer: Cliff Anderson, Gabe Barras, Joe Congi, Tony Critelli, Guilermo Delgadillo, Mike Klevchikoff, Art Lembke, Nick Melnick, William Moeller, Armando Molima, Fito Molina, Joe Muscat, Robert Palma, Roberto Orozsco, Antonio Quiteno, Charles Quinting, Ben Schweizer, Ed Tchaklian, Francisco Viacava, Fred Zamora, Walt Zoschke, William Nigh as well as eleven out of fourteen council seats that year.

Bagatelos, the popular Ram center who is also Block SF president, was elected the Most Valuable Player on the football team. A Balboa high grad, Bagatelos finished his second and final season with the Ram football team this year and was named second team All-Conference.

Critelli was voted the Most Valuable Player on the soccer team in view of his fine defensive work at left fullback. A veteran from last season, Critelli was on the second string All-Conference squad this year.

Boxing Tourney January 12 For College Novices

A novice boxing tournament will be held in the men's gymnasium on Wednesday, January 12, at 6 p. m. prior to the City College-Sacramento basketball game, Roy Diederichsen, head boxing instructor here, announced last week.

Any male student at the college is eligible and may sign up with Diederichsen in the men's gymnasium. Managers and seconds, all of whom have past varsity or other ring experience, will be assigned to each boxer, Diederichsen said, and they will train and handle the fighters during the coming week and in the tournament.

The fighters will be classified in nine weight divisions, according to Diederichsen. They are bantamweight—119 pounds; featherweight—125 pounds; lightweight—132 pounds; light welterweight — 139 pounds; welterweight — 147 pounds; light heavyweight — 158 pounds; and heavyweight—over 178 pounds.

Diederichsen stressed the importance of good condition and offered the gymnasium to participants at any time where adequate facilities are maintained.

Winners of the bouts will receive bronze medals and become eligible for the San Jose Boxing Tourney on February 25 and 26. Winning managers will receive small trophies.

55 Freshmen Start Baseball Round Robin At Ocean View Ballpark Today

Five teams made up of 55 freshmen who signed up at the baseball meeting December 1 are beginning a baseball round robin today which will continue until each team has played four games at Ocean View ballpark.

Coach Bill Fischer, who declared the meeting a success, said that these games are just a tryout and are not any indication of his future starting line-up.

When asked of the team's potential based on the strength of returning veterans and the high-school performances of the newcomers, Fischer flatly stated, "Most encouraging."

A few of the returnees are Nolan Wilson, a centerfielder, who made second string All-Conference last year; shortstop Jerry Johnson, Rich Bandittini, a first baseman who made All-City at Sacred Heart; and Jim Koeppen, another outfielder.

A few of the high schools represented are Balboa, Lincoln, Galileo, Mission, Saint Ignatius and Riordan.

There will be no doubleheaders this season, because of the addition of Oakland to the Big Seven. Instead, two teams will play the first game while two other teams will play in the finale.

16 Colleges Compete In 17th Annual Basketball Tournament; Rams Meet College Of Sequoia Tomorrow Night

The Ram basketball team encounters College of Sequoias at 6 p.m. in their first round of the 17th Annual Modesto State Basketball Tournament which starts tomorrow at Modesto.

Fifteen other colleges will compete in this tournament for two year colleges: Long Beach, Oakland, Fresno, Santa Rosa, Los Angeles, Stockton, Grant, San Mateo, El Camino, Sacramento, Sequoias, Ventura, Modesto, Pasadena, and West Contra Costa. The tournament, which ends this Saturday, is an elimination affair in which the losers of the first round compete in a consolation tournament which is run simultaneously with the official tourney.

Last year, the powerful Ram quintet which finished second in Big Seven Conference standings failed to place in the Modesto tourney, won by Long Beach, although the high-scoring college boopmen set a new tournament record for the highest losing score with 83 points against Long Beach, who won the game, 88-83.

This year the Rams enter Modesto with a trio of their starting five squalling six feet four inches or better. Forward Dave Davis is the runt at 6 ft. 4 in., Ike Walker at guard is 6 ft. 4½ in., and Center Theopolis Dunn is 6 ft. 5½ in. in height. Rounding out the starting lineup are forward Ed Atkins, who is 5 ft. 9 in., and Doug Hom, a 5 ft. 7 in. guard.

This manifest rebound strength has been influential in the college's record of four wins and two losses, one loss to the California Blues by two points, 64-62, in the last five seconds of play, and the other to San Mateo's Bulldogs in a Big Eight Conference game.

Evidence of the scoring potential of the Ram five is in the even distribution of scoring. Walker leads the Rams with 28 field goals and 29 free throws for 85 points, Dunn is second with 28 field goals and 19 free throws for 75 points, Davis follows with 29 field goals and 10 free throws scoring 68 points, Atkins is fourth with 17 field goals and 19 free throws for 63 points, and Doug Hom, who missed two games with a twisted ankle, is fifth with 21 field goals and 10 free throws to tally 52 points.

Basketball Team Splits In Two Big Eight Games

By Emil Portale

Spearheaded by Ed Atkins' 20 point splurge, the City College cagers captured their fourth win of the season, a 65-55 effort, at the hands of a badly outclassed Santa Rosa outfit on December 14 on the college hardwood in the squad's Big Eight opener.

After pulling away from a 3-2 deficit in the early moments of the first conference clash for both colleges, the Rams pulled out all stops and never were in danger the rest of the game. The 27-20 half time score served as a good example of how the game progressed in its entirety.

Tight defensive work in the Ram forecourt spelled the downfall of the desperate Bearcubs during the course of the game. With this wall of hustling casabans facing them the Santa Rosans were forced to shoot via the long set shot route for their scoring.

Atkins with his sparkling play highlighted an otherwise run of the mill game. His 20 scoreboard notches topped all scorers.

Santa Rosa's Jim Guinn and Fred Giannini potted 13 counters each to lead their team. But still, those two hoopsters each could not top another Ram, Theopolis Dunn, who tanked 15 and was also instrumental in creating his team's 10 point victory margin.

With a six foot eight inch 200 pound giant, Jack Allain, leading the way, San Mateo's highly rated bucket squad barrel-housed to a 68-58 win over the Rams in the second Big Eight encounter for both teams on December 17 in San Mateo.

Allain outshone his adversaries with a 26 point game total made almost in its entirety from a combination of short sets and charity attempts. His nine field goals and eight free throws broke the back of the Rams.

San Mateo's massive center used all his physical means to secure a Bulldog triumph with his expert board work. He was ably backed up by teammates Doyle Coates and Tom Hansen who netted 15 and 11 points respectively.

Although the Rams could get no closer than 55-61 in the waning moments of play they outdid themselves even though hampered by injuries to Ed Atkins and Doug Hom.

Theopolis Dunn played his usual brilliant game coming away with 14 points to his credit. Captain Ike Walker and Dave Davis both helped the Ram cause with 13 counters each.

Proficiency at the free throw stripe might have told the story in the Ram loss. San Mateo potted 20 of 30 to the college's 12 hits in 25 charity attempts.

The National Museum of Baseball and Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., was erected in 1939 during the game's centennial year.

WAA Elections And Tea January 10, 11 And 12

Election of new officers of the Women's Athletic Association will be held on Monday, January 10 and Tuesday, January 11, Lene Johnson, WAA adviser, announced here last week.

Women students seeking an office must have a C average and be AS members. Spring semester officers will be announced at an Awards Tea on Wednesday, January 12, at 3 p.m. Women are cordially invited to the affair by Wyoming Robinson, head of the tea committee. Fall athletic awards will be presented.

Stars And Subs Both Deserve Awards

By Bob Chrisman

A BLOCK is awarded to an athlete by a college on the basis of his service in the field of athletics to the college. Last Wednesday, 55 men received Block SF awards from the college at the semi-annual Block SF dinner.

Every man receiving a letter at that dinner deserved his award as much as any other player there. The purpose of this column is to refute the term "charity block" on the basis that no such thing exists.

Charity implies the giving away of something, but no athlete ever went out for a sport and stayed with it through the season that didn't deserve an award, from the most valuable player on the team to the substitutes.

In fact, it is more difficult for a player to work out every day for several hours, drill with the team for an entire season, and observe training rules when he is aware that he will play little during one game or the entire season. It is much more encouraging for the athlete to practice when he is sure of playing in every game.

The man who sticks with his team and trains when there is no glory or personal gain to reward his diligence deserves a letter as much as the man who starts in every game.

It is only through the unselfish interest of these many that turn out for a sport that good teams are formed. No coach would be able to develop a good team if he did not have an interested majority of players from which to choose the minority which plays the most.

If block awards were based on conscientious effort, practice and improvement, some diligent third and second string performers would receive awards before a few of the top athletes on the team whose greater experience and natural talent make outstanding performances easier for them.

The devotion of time and interest to the team by these players who have nothing to gain for it is "college spirit" in the true sense and is the heart of any team.

Special Meeting Called For College Hour To Discuss Plans For Varieties, January 20, 21

Plans for a campus Variety Show scheduled for Thursday and Friday, January 20 and 21, will be discussed at a special meeting to be held in the Little Theater during college hour this Friday. Since the show is an all student production, anyone is welcome to attend the meeting, Jann Palmer, co-producer of the show, said yesterday.

There is a big demand for a large production and publicity staff which will concentrate on making the show a success, Miss Palmer said. In addition, electricians, stage hands, ushers, and makeup people will be in demand.

Already busy at their respective jobs are Pete Garrett and Frank Anderson, co-directors, Bob Flanigan and Warren Smith, co-technical directors, Miss Palmer and Dick Moore, co-producers. Lending assistance are Dolores Bolton, Anne Canellos, Antoinette Mannina, Eva Russel, Carol Waugh and Marilyn Williamson.

Initial auditions and rehearsals for the cast have been held on Wednesday evenings in the Building 1 auditorium on the west campus. Several acts have been selected by co-director Garrett, in charge of staging and talent for the show, and are being rehearsed with music and scripts. Auditions and rehearsals are scheduled for most of the Wednesday and Thursday evenings in January up to the date of the show's opening on January 20, Miss Palmer added.

The co-directors' plans for the show incorporate original, technically and artistically complex staging that will provide fresh approach to typical varieties format.

Imaginative lighting as well as the use of original music, scripts and talent will make for entertainment that will assure the show a profitable run.

Dramatic reading, enhanced by costuming and lighting, comedy routines of varied nature, short skits and musical selections of vocalists and orchestra will make up the proposed 12-act program which is, according to co-director Garrett, "very well balanced."

Business, Social Activities Start New Year Whirl

By Carolyn Fisher

WITH the beginning of a new year, clubs on campus are going through a whirl of social activities, business meetings, and social projects.

Phi Beta Delta pledges received their fraternity pins on December 30 at the Treasure Island Officers Club. The fraternity is having a business meeting tonight.

Kappa Phi will hold a business meeting January 11.

As one of its services, Phi Beta Rho gathered individual Christmas presents consisting of personal articles for men and women at the Laguna Honda Home. The sorority recently met jointly with Beta Tau.

Delta Psi will hold a Mother-Daughter Tea for members and their mothers this Friday.

The Canterbury Club announces that a corporate communion is held on the first Friday of each month at the St. Francis Episcopal Church for Canterbury Club members of State College. Joint meetings are also held each month with members of the club here.

Theta Tau will hold its pledge dinner and initiation on Saturday, January 15, at the El Nido Rancho. Initiation will be at the home of Diane Stratford beforehand. The sorority had a business meeting last night. A Christmas party was given for children at the San Francisco County Hospital December 22 as part of the sorority's welfare project. The women brought presents and entertained the children.

CAB Devises New Charter System

Tentative plans for an extensive master charter system were drawn up at the last regular meeting of the Club Activities Board here last Thursday, Ed Dollard, CAB vice-president, said that the charter will go into effect next semester and will have listed on it each duly recognized organization on campus.

Robin Dunn, CAB sponsor, said that delinquent charters will not appear on the master list, and that there is thought now of having every club charter validated each semester. He said that the charter could be printed in the student handbook which is given out every semester to students new to the college.

At all CAB meetings to date, Dunn said, there has been a quorum, which is composed of 50 per cent representation at meetings. This means that one half of the clubs here are represented at semi-weekly meetings. He added, though, that some persons at meetings represent two or more organizations.

In regard to petition qualifications, there are still two clubs here which have not handed in petitions as yet, the Block SF and Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide honor society.

At present there are approximately 45 active organizations on campus. Of this number, 30 groups were not represented at the meeting. With the new charter system and concurrent movement into the new Student Union and Cafeteria late next semester, sponsor Dunn hopes to have more individual representation at meetings.

The board meets every Tuesday and Thursday at 1 p.m. in building 2, west campus. Each CAB representative elected by his club is automatically a member of the board and is required to attend all CAB meetings.

Student Enters Reading Contest

Ardene Anderson, student here, will represent the college at the first annual Interpretative Reading Contest sponsored by the Speech Arts Association of California and Scheduled this Saturday, January 8, 1:30 p.m. in the Mirror Room of the Bellevue Hotel, 505 Geary, according to Ruth Somers, English instructor here.

Miss Anderson won a preliminary local contest, reading the epilogue to Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan, Mrs. Somers said.

Other students competing were James Hoolan, reading a scene from The Patriots; Kenneth Ott, reading a scene from Maxwell Anderson's Elizabeth the Queen, and Donald Warto reading a scene from Shakespeare's Hamlet.

All four students are enrolled in the Interpretative Reading class (Speech 2 A-B) here.

Judges for the preliminary contest were Luellie Meredith, James Billwiller and Anthony Paciotti, English instructors at the college.

Students and faculty members interested in attending the contest Saturday should notify Mrs. Somers in Room C366D.

Mexican College Director Ends US Campus Tour Here

Oscar Peart Perez, director general, Institute of Teehnology, Saltillo Coahuila, Mexico, visited City College recently climaxing a tour of technical institutions throughout the country.

In this country under the International Educational Exchange Program, Dr. Perez participated in the recent convention of the American Vocational Association held in San Francisco.

Dr. Perez visited colleges in Washington, D.C., New York City, Buffalo, Albany and Denver, Colorado, in addition to the University of California at Berkeley and Stanford University.

Student Union Under Construction

THE COLLEGE'S partially completed Student Union and Cafeteria, as seen here from the south and of the Science Building, is one of the new buildings planned to centralize the campus. The structure will house the hotel and restaurant department and the new student lounge and will probably include space for the Associated Student offices. Although construction is now slightly behind schedule, it should be ready for occupancy by September and may be dedicated as part of the ceremonies celebrating the college's twentieth anniversary. — Guardsman Photo by Sherry.

Snack Bar Plight Unchanged; Officials Threaten Shut Down

Alpha Phi Omega, National Service Fraternity on campus, and Tau Chi Sigma are not overly impressed with the condition of the basement snack bar which they jointly are endeavoring to improve, according to Ralph Libby, spokesman for the fraternities.

Tau Chi Sigma, under the direction of Al Niemi, placed approximately six additional trash containers in the snack bar area at their own expense.

These additional containers were placed under neatly printed signs which demand students to keep the area clean. Apparently, Libby said, they have and are being ignored by some of the students here.

When the joint project was undertaken, Oscar E. Anderson, controller here, stated that if the condition of the snack bar did not improve greatly, the well-patronized area would be closed indefinitely. This week Dr. Anderson still was not pleased with the conditions.

The main complaint with the area is that trash and garbage litter the area in general. Paper coffee cups, napkins, luneh bags and the like are left on the tables and eventually find their way to the floor of the usually crowded area.

Closing of the area, Libby pointed out, would deprive students of an eating place other than the hotel and restaurant division's cafeteria on the west campus.

50 Per Cent In Semi-Pro Courses

Forty to fifty per cent of the students at the college are enrolled in some 33 different semiprofessional courses that are offered here.

Dean Louis Batmale, in charge of the semiprofessional division, stated these are regular semiprofessional courses of a two year college, and are designed for students who do not wish to go to college for four years, but who are interested in going into the business world of today.

The college tries to develop new programs as needed in conjunction with business and industry, he said.

The areas in which the college provides employment-training programs are:

Advertising and commercial art, accounting, punched-card account., ing, advertising, business machines, cooperative merchandising, general business, general merchandising management, insurance, real estate, secretarial training, traffic and transportation, chemical technology, architectural drafting, building and contracting, electrical technology, engineering, drafting, mechanical technology, radio, television, and electronics, refrigeration, air conditioning and operating engineering, surveying and map drafting, flower shop, garden maintenance, greenhouse management, nursery practice, graphic Arts, hotel and restaurant, law enforcement, paint technology, photography, radio and television broadcasting, and recreational leadership.

The Alean Highway stretches a total of 1,523 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, Canada to Fairbanks, Alaska. Cost was $138,000,000.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Holds Banquet For Pin Presentation December 9

At their initial semi-annual banquet held in the faculty dining room, December 9, deserving Alpha Gamma Sigma members were presented with pins and Omega guards to attach to pins.

To obtain a silver pin, it is necessary to be an active AGS member for two semesters and to be a holder of an Associated Student card. A guard is granted to a student who holds an AS card and has three semesters of active AGS membership to his credit.

Students named as two semester members were Ibeen Birgers, Spence Fillerman, Fernando Herrera, Jim Kanihan, Bob Kelleher, Ronald Kettle, Wing Lee, Noel Marsh, Frank McNitt, Gail Allan Moss, Dorothy Rader, Phil Mottini, Fred Steinberg, Bert Walsh and George Voronoff.

Receivers of Omega guards included Ralph McGill; Thyra Schroeder and Margaret Shour.

The awards were presented by Don Jensen, AGS sponsor, following the dinner, and a speech that was given by Noel Marsh on the history and purpose of AGS. Following was an introduction of members to guests by Albert Brown. Guests included San Francisco Public High School honor society presidents and their sponsors.

The entertainment for the evening was the Little Theater play, Goodbye My Fancy.

Ramporium Gives Semester Profits Of $5,250 To AS

In the four years that the Ramporium, student book store located on the west campus, has been in operation, it has turned over to the Associated Students of City College a total of $42,000 on an average of $5,250 per semester.

These figures add to the reasons that students should patronize the local bookstore on campus, Dick Main, manager of the store, said recently.

Although the bookstore is a few steps out of the way of most students since the abandonment of the west campus, it has been pointed out that a large per cent of the total purchases made at the Ramporium are turned over to student activities.

Aside from the fact that the Ramporium adds greatly to the student funds, which are desperately sought by student organizations semi-annually, the store has been commented upon for the large variety of good literature which it carries in stock, Main pointed out.

The Ramporium not only carries text books but also has a large stock of supplies, besides study helps such as the College Outline Series, and also numerous graphically illustrated books for anatomy, art and several other courses.

Booming publication business also takes place in the back room of the bookshop where Main's staff has published several syllabi for instructors here. The most recent compendium of study, which is on Analytical Chemistry, is nearing completion and will be on sale when classes resume for the spring semester.

Counselling Deadline Jan. 21 For Returnees

Counselling appointments should be completed by Friday, January 21, according to Alva McMillan, counsellor here. No appointments will be scheduled during final examination week because counsellors will be interviewing new students during that time.

Students who have not yet made their interview appointment should come to the counselling office, S160, as soon as possible, McMillan said. Students who have received post cards in the mail and who are not returning next semester, McMillan stated, should see their counsellor right away.

Soph Ball Royalty Petitions Out Now

Petitions for king and queen of the Sophomore Ball will be available, starting today, Brad Owens, class president, announced last week and may be obtained from Owens or from the Deans' offices.

Any Sophomore man or woman is eligible to run, and in the past candidates have been supported by a sorority or fraternity. Deadline for petitions has been set for Friday, January 14.

Voting will take place during the week of January 17 to 21 and all Associated Student card holders are eligible to cast one vote for their candidate.

Results of the contest will be announced Saturday, January 22, at the ball, and crowning of the queen will be by Beta Tau fraternity, while the king will be crowned by Theta Tau sorority.

Another highlight of Sophomore Week will be the semi-annual soph-prof basketball game to be played in the men's gymnasium. The game is expected to be played during college hour on Friday, January 20, Owens explained.

Climaxing Sophomore Week will be the Sophomore Ball, to be held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel, which will be free to all AS members. Charge for non members is $2.50 per couple.

Dancing will be to the music of Jimmy Blas and his orchestra.

Phi Rho Pi Sponsors Extemporaneous Campus Speech Contest

Open to all students of the college, an extemporaneous speech contest sponsored by Phi Rho Pi, debating society here, will be held during the latter part of next week in Cloud Hall, Thomas Dutcher, sponsor of the debating society, announced last Thursday.

Deadline for students desiring to file petitions for entering the contest is Wednesday, January 12, with eliminations following on Thursday, January 13.

Students who plan to register for the event should see Dutcher in his office, 335B in Cloud Hall, he commented.

Subject of the contest will be American foreign policy.

Those trying out for the contest will be given 45 minutes to organize their material on a subject selected by judges, the student then proceeding to deliver a four to seven minute speech. The judges will then determine winners. A board of judges will be announced at a later time, Dutcher added.

VOLUME 39 SAN FRANCISCO—WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1955 NUMBER 11

AS Elections Here Today and Tomorrow; Gaal, Kingston, Niemi In Presidency Race

Phil Gaal

IN SELECTING a president, the members of the Associated Students will desire a candidate that is capable of carrying out the duties of the office in an efficient manner and one who has the ability and desire to act in the best interest of the Associated Students.

I feel certain that I am well qualified to meet these requirements.

I also feel that the most important aims for the Associated Student President to follow are to administer the affairs of the Associated Students in a fair, efficient, impartial manner, and to make Student Government as representative as possible of the entire Student Body.

If I am elected, I pledge myself to do everything within my power to follow these ideals throughout my term of office.

Phil Gaal
Independent Candidate
For AS President

Al Kingston

A CANDIDATE can shake hands, kiss babies and promise the moon, while an elected president can only step on toes, kiss his friends goodbye and cut everyone's budget in half.

So why do I want the job? Because there is a need for a review and possible change of our college activity program and because I want to experiment with that program.

I ask you for the job because, as an Independent candidate, as I was when you elected me AMS President last semester, I can help to bring about such policies.

But, when voting, look for experience. As Athletic Commissioner and AMS President I believe I have gained this necessary experience.

With these ideas, and these qualifications, I ask for your vote.

Al Kingston
Independent Candidate
For AS President

Al Niemi

SINCERITY and dependability are two of the many factors that we of the IFC feel are necessary to perpetuate the good government that has been exhibited at City College since its founding.

We shall continue our efforts to keep the Science Building coffee shop open for student use, and to obtain more price reductions for Associated Student cards.

We feel that student social activities and government can be made more attractive through partielpation and the IFC will work toward that end. We further shall attempt to find a solution to the student parking problem.

Through work, perseverance and good judgment we feel confident in our ability to live up to our platform.

Al Niemi
IFC Candidate

31 Compete For 20 Positions With Only AMS Leadership Uncontested; 2500 Eligible To Cast Ballots

By Clark Smith

Six weeks of scheme and struggle come to a boil today and tomorrow with some 2500 Associated Student members eligible to vote for next spring's student officers.

Fourteen of the 31 candidates have elected to run independently this fall, according to Anthony Frost, AS election commissioner. The United Students Association, which for the past two years has opposed the Inter-Fraternity Council, is endorsing both fraternity and Independent candidates.

Al Niemi, IFC candidate, is opposed by Independents Phil Gaal and Al Kingston in the race for the highest AS office.

Marcia Herst, who received the nomination of the IFC for AS Vice-president, will be pitted against two non-partisan candidates, Marion Cheader and Betty Petersen.

Bob Johnson, IFC nominee for Associated Men Student President, is this fall's only uncontested candidate, while IFC-sponsored Tookie Radillo is opposed by Karin Walker for the Associated Women Student Presidency.

Competitors for Sophomore Class Presidency are the IFC's Joe Graham and free-lance Deane Woods. Four students are vying for Freshman President—IFC backed Art Handy and Independents Glen Allen, Mel Patsel and Marilyn Sicotte.

Only two Independents, Ken Orzell and Amy Lee, are running for Sophomore seats on Council, IFC Council hopefuls are Lawrence Lowe, Marcia Norstrom, Connie Panagakis, Esther Phillips and Carol Thompson.

Three candidates will be eliminated in the race for seven Freshman seats on Council. Bob Bliss, Phil Braverman, Jessie Dawson, Vic Hebert, Jann Palmer, Joyce Weaver and Judy Wilson represent the IFC, while Barbara Batmale, Earl Cabrinha and Gloria Temkin are running independently.

AS card holders may vote in the basement of the Science Building from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Voting booths will also be in front of the cafeteria on the west campus from 7:45 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Producers Of '55 Varieties Ask For Student Help

With the extension of a welcome to every member of the Associated Students of the college to join in an all out participation campaign in the production of the Varieties of '55, the show moved into its second to last week of preparation last Monday.

An annual event here at the college for the last three years, the Variety Show, which is presented by the Associated Students, is a completely student controlled and directed effort.

Producers of the show explained that heavy student partielpation in the show is needed to instill the proper spirit and to insure the event's worth to the college. Every effort to provide as many of the college's various organizations with a definite part in the production of the Varieties is made, they said.

Plans for starting a ticket selling competition among the fraternities and sororities have been formulated, and tickets have been made available to students through these organizations as well as through the student bank. Admission will be 50 cents to members of the Associated Students and $1 to the general public.

Door prizes have been arranged and plans for a dance following the Friday night performance were brought to the attention of the college Social Committee yesterday for approval.

A chorus line has been organized and their routine will open the show, Pete Garrett, co-director announced.

SHOW NAME CONTEST STARTS

A $10 merchandise order is offered to the student here who gives the most appropriate title to the day when the 1955 Variety Show opens Friday, January 20, in the college auditorium. The name should be related to the Varieties of '55. Letters may be left with The Guardsman Editor, Gail Allan Moss, in Room S304 no latter than Monday, January 17. Winner of the contest will be announced by Bob Flanigan on Wednesday, January 19, over the public address system.

Desert Venture Film On College Hour Schedule

Desert Venture, a color film account of a venture by American capital in a strange and anelent land, will be shown during college hour this Friday in Room C246, Cloud Hall, according to Madison Devlin, Audio Visual Aids instructor here.

Produced by the Arabian-American Oil Company, the film is a documentary that tells the story of men who are challenged by heat and sand and a multitude of obstacles in serving the interests of the United States.

KSAN-TV Makes Plans For Ram Hoop 'Casts

Plans are now being made to televise the City College basketball games this season, according to a letter received last week by Louis Batmale, dean of semi-professional courses here, from Roy Storey, sports director of KSAN-TV.

The letter, read by AS president Bill Boldenweck to a special meeting of the student council last Friday, stated the wish of the station to either televise the games directly or film the action and televise the films at a more convenient time. In return for the privilege, the college will receive the films of the game, worth $150, for instruction purposes.

Newman Dance At St. Emydius Friday

Carrying out the holiday theme, the Newman Club will present its annual dance, The Holly Hop, this Friday, January 14, according to Bob Florer, general chairman of the dance.

Dancing will be from 8:30 p.m. to 12 midnight—and music will be provided by records.

Location of the dance is the St. Emydius Hall at Jules and De Montford streets and admission to the affair is $1.00 per couple or 75 cents for a stag ticket. Tickets may be purchased from the members of the club or from the student bank on the main floor of the Science Building, and may also be bought at the door.

Club adviser is John Selig, and officers of the club helping in the preparations for the dance are Victor Bacigalupi, president; Mike Meyers, vice-president; Marilyn Sicotte, recording secretary; Kathy Lane, corresponding secretary; Ed Schoenstein, treasurer; and Kevin Holmes, sergeant-at-arms.

USA Announces Support For Nineteen Aspirants To AS Offices, Rates Three Presidential Candidates Even

No presidential candidate won the support of the United Students Association, according to a letter to the Editor of The Guardsman by Bob Burmister, USA president. The USA believes all three aspirants are well qualified for the job.

Nineteen candidates, eleven Inter-fraternity Council and eight Independents were chosen for endorsement by unanimous vote of the USA.

Marion Cheader, Independent candidate for Associated Student Vice-president, received a strong recommendation from the USA. The USA also endorses Tookie Radillo and Bob Johnson for Associated Women Student and Associated Men Student Presidencies.

Mel Patsel is the USA choice for Freshman President. Other USA recommendations are Lawrence Lowe, Jim Nichols, Marcia Norstrom, Ken Orzell, Connie Panagakis and Carol Thompson for Sophomore Council members, and Barbara Batmale, Bob Bliss, Jessie Dawson, Vic Hebert, Jann Palmer and Gloria Temkin to represent the Freshmen.

In addition it has been reported that there is unofficial organized backing for the candidacies of Phil Gaal, Betty Petersen, Patsel and Woods.

According to USA leaders, the listing of endorsed candidates was selected on the individual candidates' merits alone with emphasis upon their "experience, efficiency, ability and organizational power."

The USA declined to endorse a presidential nominee because no one of the three candidates was favored unanimously by the organization.

SF State Reps Speak At Rally

Entertainment and orientation is in store for students at the last rally of the semester this Friday during college hour in the Building 1 auditorium, Rally Commissioner Emmett Thompson said last week.

Feature of the rally is the appearance of two or three guest speakers from San Francisco State College who will speak on State College entrance requirements and also on campus life and activities.

Entertainment for the rally will be supplied by members of the Varieties of '55 cast. Previews of skits and scenes will be presented plugging the show which opens Friday night, January 21, in the college auditorium. As an added attraction, the A Cappella Choir will appear.

Thompson, who graduates this semester, thanked members of the Rally Committee who helped plan the rallies. He said that in his opinion the two best rallies of the semester were the Homecoming rally in November and the Miss America Homecoming rally in October.

Dance Petition Deadline Friday

Applicants for king and queen of the Sophomore Ball may obtain their petitions now from Brad Owens, Sophomore Class president here, or from the offices of Dean Mary Golding or Dean Edwin C. Browne, located on the main floor of the Science Building, Owens announced recently.

Deadline for petitions has been set for 12 noon this Friday, January 14, and voting will take place the following week. Booths will be set up in the courtyard and possibly on the west campus and all Associated Student members are eligible to vote.

Results of the contest will be announced Saturday, January 22, at the ball, and the king and queen will be crowned by Beta Tau fraternity and Theta Tau Soroity. The coronation waltz will then take plaee, led by the royal couple.

The semi-annual soph-prof basketball game will be played Friday, January 21, and a double college hour, with 11 o'clock classes omitted, will be provided. The game will be played in the men's gymnasium, Owens said.

Climaxing Sophomore Week will be the semi-annual Sophomore Ball to be held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel with music provided by Jimmy Blas and his orchestra.

One Vote That 'Won't Count Anyway' May Decide Elections

WITH the elections for the Associated Student offices taking place here today and tomorrow, the campus is littered with every type of election literature that a campaign manager's fertile brain can conceive. But one very important plug has been forgotten in the race.

With the multitude of candidates running for every office and a close race expected for almost every position, the usual "be sure to vote" cries have been shunted to one side. Yet this plea to each member of the AS is an important one and one that must not be lost, even in the heated excitement of a close battle.

A slogan that has been used in national elections in recent years is appropriate here also—"Vote as you please, but please vote." Each eligible voter has his own choice for the different offices, but unless he chooses to act on that choice by exercising his voting privilege, his voice in student government is lost. If too many persons neglect that privilege, and duty, the entire meaning of student government is nullified.

There are many arguments offered for voting—the practicality of having a voice in how your AS funds are spent, the privilege of exercising the right to vote, the duty to yourself and the college that the vote entails, and many more. All of these are valid arguments, of course, but there is one basic principle behind all of them.

For the Associated Students of the City College of San Francisco to continue to be a strong, smoothly-functioning organization, every member must have a working interest in the group. This college has a high degree of student-controlled government, especially in relation to many other two-year colleges throughout the state, but the old adage of the chain being only as strong as its weakest link certainly holds true here.

In past elections, the percentage of eligible voters who marked a ballot was shockingly poor. Last semester, only 41 per cent voted, and yet that was an increase over previous contests.

This semester that "one vote that won't decide anything anyway" could decide the election for any one of the offices, from AS president on down. With the large number of candidates in the running, the vote will undoubtedly be scattered and one vote could conceivably decide the election.

Each candidate for election is a worthy one, or else he or she would not be running. It is up to you, the individual voter, to decide who you want to run your organization. But someone has to do the job, and that someone must be chosen by all of the Associated Students, not just a conscientious minority.

For the AS of the college to remain the fine example of student government that it is, you voters must act and—"Vote as you please, but please vote."

Julie Faces Life In Original Soap Opera

SO THERE'S this town in Italy a long time ago, with walls all around, and they call it Verona. This Verona has a lot of people, and a prince, but mostly it has two families.

One of the families is the Capulets and the other is the Montagues. Best I could figure was that they must have been the granddaddies of the Martins and the Coys because I never saw two bunches of people that could do such a great job of not getting along with each other.

Well, one of the Montagues is named Romeo and when he hears the Capulets are throwing a ball he decides to crack it. So he drops over and sneaks in. When he gets there, he wanders around casing the place for a raid and bumps into this doll named Juliet, who is the daughter of the boss of the Capulet mob.

This Juliet came to the ball on a blind date with some guy named Paris that her folks had fixed her up with. But Julie can't see Paris after she clamps that first look on Romeo. So Romeo takes her around the corner and says "Honey, I love you."

So then they find out that they belong to the wrong families and this kind of breaks it up. Romeo starts home and Julie goes to bed. But on the way home Romeo decides he loves Julie anyhow.

Well, Julie has the same idea, so when our hero sneaks into her back yard, there she is, pacing back and forth on the balcony, shouting "Where's Romeo already?" So, they have a lot more fancy talk on the love kick, and when Romeo cuts out in the light of the dawn, he says "Honey, I'll get in touch, but don't call me, I'll call you."

The next day Julie's old faithful nurse runs around to this monastery that Romeo hangs out in, and Romeo and the nurse make a deal with this Friar Laurence cat.

Everything being all set, Julie and the nurse drop around to the church the next day and the two kids get married up. So after the wedding Romeo goes home to try and figure how to sneak away with Julie for a quiet honeymoon. On the way home he runs into a buneh of Capulets and a brawl starts. Romeo tries to break it up but one of the brothers get sort of killed, so Romeo goes and kills off one of Julie's cousins.

This gets Julie shook up, because she thinks Romeo has reformed. Also the prince is a little shook because he's getting tired of all this blood on the streets of the town which is pretty clean otherwise. So he banishes Romeo, who goes off to live in a little town up north, without Julie.

Julie stays around the house until her old man comes up with the idea that she's supposed to marry this Paris cat. So she runs to see Friar Laurence who fixes her up with a drug that will help her play dead for a couple of days. So she dies, or at least everyone thinks so. They bury her in the family tomb.

Romeo hears about all this, but he thinks Julie is dead for real, so he gets down to Verona post haste. Sneaking into the graveyard in the dead of night he's about to get into the tomb when Paris catches him. They struggle and Paris gets sort of stabbed up and dies. Really, Romeo gets into the tomb, finds Julie lying there cold and quiet, can't take it, and stabs himself.

Just as he dies, Julie wakes up, sees him dead and stabs herself. So at the end Friar Laurence comes into the tomb, finds Paris, Julie and Romeo all dead and wades through the remains out of the tomb and off into the night to meditate on the difficulties of young love.

'Ham' Quality Large Part Of Stage Successes

Show Business Important Role In '55 Varieties

Talent, hard work and perseverance in the face of disappointment and difficulties will usually make for a successful undertaking in almost any field. In staging a variety show, however, an extremely unlikely quality that is peculiar to show business seems to play the most important role in the success of the venture.

This quality is the "ham," or more explicitly, the uncontrollable urge on the part of the individuals concerned to perform before an audience no matter what obstacles, such as lack of necessary funds or equipment or the need for many hours of difficult preparation, stand in the way.

The cast and production staff of the soon-to-be-presented Varieties of '55 show the visitor, who has dropped down to the college Little Theater in the Science Building basement to observe preparations for the show, that they have the necessary amount of the aforementioned quality.

Rugged individualism, professional know-how, spontaneous half-in-fun displays of blood-quickening talent, and an occasional flareup of the ubiquitous, all-important artistic temperament combine to provide rehearsals with the strong character and well defined basis from which a polished production springs.

A member of the cast, his facial features spelling out the word anticipation, dances nervously past a personable young lady doing leg exercises as they both impatiently wait for Pete Garrett, director of the Varieties, to start them through their acts.

The show's master electrician, Roy Maffei, tinkers with a confusing maze of wires, switches and clamps that are mounted on a dangerous-looking piece of equipment of his own design that looks as though it could only be understood by an electrical engineer.

A tow-headed assistant director, Frank Anderson, who doubles as actor, comedian and singer, stands near a back wall, one foot resting on a piano stool, plucking at a guitar and singing, as a producer, a stage hand and a couple of students in the cast listen to his bit in appreciative silence.

Rehearsals for a variety show don't have to have all these characteristics, and not all shows are fortunate enough to have the enjoyable behind-the-scenes-life that the college's show has. But, according to the staff, half of the enjoyment in doing a show is receiving and giving criticism, help and most of all deepfelt appreciation among themselves.

The Spectator
California Redwoods Inspire Reverence

ONE OF THE outstanding phenomena of nature has its home in California. Someone who has never seen the majestic spires of a redwood tree, with a trunk so thick that a car can be driven through a tunnel in its base, will never believe that such a miracle is possible. Neither photographs, paintings nor words can do justice to the "Big Trees."

Located mostly in Northern California from the Santa Cruz Mountains to small scatterings just South of the Oregon borders, the redwoods have become a symbol of the natural beauty and ruggedness of California. Proud and beautiful, the trees have withstood all types of attempted destruction.

A forest of redwoods is like a massive cathedral. Light filters through the boughs and the rays bend to finally reach the ground with the effect of sunlight through stained glass windows.

The rows and rows of towering trees form corridors like the middle aisle of a church, and the soft damp earth covers the floor like a huge rug.

Reverent silence clings to the trees, but the silence is sound itself. It's the sound of the wind, the occasional bird's whistle, the creak of bending trees, the rustle of ferns as animals brush them, the music of a small stream cadenced by the leap of a hungry trout. All these combine to produce an eerie tribute in music to the "Big Trees."

As old as history itself, these trees have seen men come and stare and leave with humility. They have felt the bite of the axe and a sudden thundering death as they crash to the ground. Fire has been an age old enemy and often have the redwoods felt the pain of its probing tongue and smelled their own flesh burning. They have seen men kill each other in fits of greed and lust and have seen other men weep for the dead.

For what seems to be an eternity, they have stood majestically swaying over the land like silent towering judges. They have seen men carve a nation out of their foundations, using their limbs and trunks as material for the framework. They have watched as men grew bigger and bigger until they too were giants.

Silently they stand surveying what goes on at their feet. They watch the fight for survival of big and small animals which are finally overcome by the biggest animal of all, man. For centuries they've stood as tall, silent judges and for centuries more, after we've blown ourselves to bits and driven ourselves into greedy oblivion, they will stand.

Shots At RAMdom

CITY COLLEGE, Rah! If Publicity Chairman Don Osborne wears a large-type grin these days, attribute it to the fact that people are finally becoming aware that the college exists.

Most recent example: The new Student Union Building under way here received a spread in a special issue of the Daily Californian at Berkeley. And more alums carried the good name of the college across the country: Former Little Theater star Connie Conners has her own radio show in Washington, D. C.; the Broadway performers Tani and Dranne Seitz were recent Life cover girls, featured as twin stage stars; Lee Meriwether (who?) received excellent notices for her TV performance in Run, Girl, Run on the Phileo Playhouse December 26.

STACKED CASE: Mysteriously appearing on Cloud Hall library shelves recently have been books with no ownership marks, apparently donated to the library. Ordinarily this would not cause any undue concern, but consider a few of the titles: Maneaters of Kuman, Outlaws at Halfway Creek and The Foreigner.

COLLEGE LIFE AND HUMOR, the new magazine that's sort of a college man's Mad Comics, is now for sale in the Ramporium after clearance from the AS administration. Published by ex-UCLA students and mostly plugging that southern college, the sheet features material taken from college humor magazines over the country.

Along with some old (and good) California Pelican cartoons, the editors have presented some straight sports comment, an attempt at a Vanity Fair section such as Pelly first printed, and some rather dubious jokes. On the title page the magazine states that it's "More to be Pitied Than Censored." They're probably right.

TEMPERATE WINTER: The Associated Collegiate Press reports that Syracuse (N. Y.) University students have been requested not to run naked through the streets of downtown Syracuse. An SU spokesman said that "this is a direct violation of University rules," and that "any student apprehended will be severly reprimanded."

Oh, those college kids! Anything for a laugh.

Advertising Design
Courses Parallel Professional Art

With William J. Eckert as instructor, the advertising design and commercial art classes are conducted for a twofold objective.

1—As a semi-professional course designed to meet the requirements of the art student wishing to gain employment in the advertising art field upon graduation. Advertising art agencies, the printing industry, art services, the newspapers, department stores, and free-lance art represent the advertising art field.

2—To equip the student with a sound background for further study in professional art schools.

In practice and study, all processes and techniques employed by students parallel those used by professional art agencies. The classes have access to such modern equipment as foto-type, air brush, typography, the silk screen process and design connected with typography.

Victor Lee, art director, Wank and O'Rourke Advertising Agency; Earl Tholander, staff artist, San Francisco Examiner; Barney Wan, fashion artist, I. Magnin Co. and part-time instructor at the Academy of Advertising Art; George Albertus, staff artist, Patterson, Sullivan and Hall Service, and Willie Ito, artist in the creative art department at the Walt Disney studios, are some of the former students of this department.

Rams Beaten In Modesto Finals

Championship Novice Boxing Tourney Slated In Men's Gymnasium Here Tonight Before Basketball Game

A novice championship boxing tourney will be held at 6 p.m. tonight in the men's gymnasium as a prelude to the Ram-Sacramento basketball game.

This tourney is part one of Director Alex Schwarz's intramural program, and is also a modified tryout round for boxing coach Roy Deiderichsen's men.

Winners of these three, one and one-half minute rounds will receive silver and bronze medals and will also be eligible for the San Jose boxing tourney to be held in late January.

Men who signed up for their respective weight classes faced their first tests Monday and Tuesday of this week in a series of elimination bouts to determine who will fight tonight.

Managers are Ken Turner, Al Scialanca, Rudy Hoffman, Norman Hill, Al Figueroa, Lorn Comaduran, Manuel Vano and John Roach. Winning managers will also receive trophies, Diederiehsen said.

Boxing Contestants

TWO OF THE thirty contestants in the intramural boxing tournament are Roger Nunez, left, of the 147 pound weight division, and Mack Calhoun, a football letterman, also of the 147 pound division. Contestants are divided into nine groups, ranging from 119 pounds to the unlimited division of 178 pounds or better. Winners will receive a trophy, as will the managers of each winner.

College Track Schedule Released; Conference Meets Start In March

Eight track meets are scheduled for this year's Ram cindermen, according to the schedule released yesterday by track mentor Roy Burkhead.

The Rams open their conference season with a triangular meet against Oakland J. C. and the Cal Frosh on March 19, and what Burkhead hopes will be a successful season will come to a close on May 21, with the running of the State JC contest. In between will come such important events as the conference meet at Santa Rosa on April 30, the Northern California JC contest at Sacramento on May 7, and the West Coast Relays on May 14.

Burkhead issued an invitation to all men who are interested in trying out for berths on the team this year and have not seen him yet, to do so immediately in the men's gymnasium.

Coach Burkhead stated that the informal practices that are going on now are important as they teach the men how to work out on their own.

Following is the track schedule for the 1955 season:

Mar. 19—2 p.m. — San Francisco, Oakland, Cal Frosh, at California.

Mar. 26—2 p.m. — San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Rosa, at Santa Rosa.

Apr. 9—10:30 p.m.—San Francisco, West Contra Costa, Stanford Frosh, at Stanford.

Apr. 15—3 p.m. — San Francisco, Stockton, Sacramento, at Sacramento.

Apr. 30—10 p.m.—Big Eight Conference at Santa Rosa.

May 7—10 p.m. — Northern California JC meet at Sacramento.

May 14—7 p.m.—West Coast Relays at Fresno.

May 21—State JC meet at Modesto.

Track Drills Start

Anyone who plans on coming out for track this season and has not signed up yet should do so immediately with head track Coach Roy Burkhead in the men's gymnasium.

Coach Burkhead stated that the informal practices which are going on now are important as they teach the men how to work out on their own time and also get them into shape for the official practices which begin next month. The opening meet of the season is March 19.

WAA Tea Today

Results of the Women's Athletic Association elections will be announced at 3 p.m. today at the awards tea in the women's gymnasium, Lene Johnson, WAA adviser, stated yesterday. All women students are invited to attend, Miss Johnson added.

Ramblings

By Bob Chrisman

TWO IMPORTANT changes in collegiate basketball rules have been made by the NCAA committee. One of these changes has been to abandon the division of a basketball game into 10 minute quarters with a one minute intermission between the quarters of each half. Instead of the quarters, the length of a contest is divided into two 20 minute periods which are played without a break except a half-time or a time out.

The other change has been the revision of the "one and one" rule. Under the new ruling, if a player receives a one and one shot, he will get another free throw if he sinks the first throw. If he does not make the first shot, he doesn't receive another try.

Fred Earle, who has coached Modesto's tennis teams for over 20 years, has tentatively planned two teams for the coming tennis season. One team will compete with the four year colleges, and the other team will vie for honors in the Big Eight Conference.

Earle's reasons for taking this step are properly founded, for last season his squad was spearheaded by Jerry Moss, who was 33rd in the country in men's singles, National Junior champion, and a U. S. Davis Cupper this year; Pancho Contreras, Mexican Davis Cup star; Joaquin Reyes, also of the Mexican Davis Cup team and Yves Lemaitre.

This powerful team defeated Stanford and UC at Ojai last year in winning the Northern California College tennis crown, and mopped up the Big Seven without losing a match.

John Henry Johnson, the brilliant '49er halfback, played on the same basketball squad with Sam Gellepes, a Ram hoopster, when both were attending Pittsburg High school. In addition to being a prep football star, and excelling at track, Johnson was a good enough forward to rate All-Northern California honors.

As a hoopster, Johnson was deadly around the key, with good touch, faking ability, fadeaway shots, and an unorthodox but effective hook.

Cagers Lose To Fresno After Three Victories In Playoffs; Davis Named To All-Tourney

By Bob Chrisman

A fast-breaking Fresno quintet overwhelmed the college's basketball team, 74-58, in the finals of the Modesto State Basketball Tourney last Saturday to win the championship and drop the Rams to second place.

Paced by guard Harvey Slade, Fresno's high-geared offensive unit swept to an 18-4 lead early in the first half and was never behind in the contest. City College failed to show the marksmanship and backboard control which paced their previous three victories in the tournament.

Slade tallied 19 points for the Fresno Rams, and Norman King, starting his first game of the season, turned in a brilliant rebounding job and scoring effort, tallying 22 points for the college.

Coach Hillsman's strategy had been to start the second string for the college and run the Fresno Rams to sap their energy, for they had played just six hours earlier, defeating Stockton in a hotly fought game. With only five men on the bench, Fresno started their first string but slowed their game down to take command from the beginning.

In the earlier rounds of the tournament, Hillsman's charges won three games to reach the finals. To trounce Sacramento, the college five had to come back from an 18-4 deficit, and sparked by big Ike Walker, who tallied 12 points in the first half, the Rams shrank Sacramento's lead to four points, 24-20 at half time. In the second half, the Rams came into their own and had no difficulty in winning by 13 points, with Walker's 17 points leading the individual scoring.

Earlier, the college had ripped Sequoia, 75-42, using their fast break to shatter Sequoia's defenses, and lead by Walker, Theopolis Dunn, King, and Dave Davis, the college's quintet had full command of the boards.

Davis, the All-Tournament forward for City College, lead the Rams in their 70-58 conquest of Ventura which put them in the finals by hitting 28 points, as the Rams took command from the opening seconds of the game.

City College received 14 silver basketballs for runner-up honors and a second place trophy. Davis, All-Tournament selection from the college, received a Bulova watch as his award.

College Faces Panthers Tonight In League Game

Sacramento's Panthers and the Ram quintet will clash tonight at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium in a Big Eight Conference game.

Excepting the basketball tourney at Modesto, the Rams have won six games as opposed to two losses and have a Big Eight Conference record of one win and one loss, defeating Santa Rosa in the league opener, 65-55, and losing to San Mateo, 68-58.

The overall record of Ned Kay's charges is five wins and four losses, with a one win and one loss record in league play, losing to West Contra Costa 76-81, and topping Modesto's Pirates, 77-75.

Tonight, the college will place its hopes on the shoulders of Ike Walker, guard, Doug Hom, guard, Ed Atkins, forward, Dave Davis, forward, and center Theopolis Dunn. Norman King, Wally Papke, Sam Gellepes, Don Brooks, Rudy Lopez, Flemen Hardy, John Rudometkin and Desha Williams will back up the starting five.

Walker, Davis and Dunn, the top rebounders on the team, lead in scoring with 107, 96, and 93 points respectively, and Atkins and Hom follow with 68 points and 66. Atkins has a sure set shot, and his quick reflexes make him an ideal ball handler, and Hom, the former All-City prep star, excels in outside shooting.

After their contest with the Panthers, Hillsman's Rams go to West Contra Costa on Friday night, January 14 for a conference game with the Comets, with whom they tied last year for second place.

Round Robin Baseball Starts 2nd Week Today

Coach Bill Fischer's baseball round robin goes into its second week today as the Yanks and the Braves, freshmen try-out teams, play the sixth game of their try-out series of 20 games at Oceanview ball park at 3:30.

A few of the freshmen ballplayers who have distinguished themselves in high school ball are Sam Johnson, an outfielder from Galileo, Tom Fadeef, a second baseman from Mission, Ed Kraft, a shortstop from Saint Ignatius, and Ken Dito, another Wildcat who is a catcher.

Block SF To Meet

The Block SF Society will hold its next meeting this Friday, January 14, in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium during college hour, Gus Bagatelos, president of the group, announced yesterday. Ram head football coach Grover Klemmer will be the guest speaker at this meeting.

The purpose of this meeting is to elect next semester's officers and also welcome all new members. Any athlete who was awarded a letter at last week's awards banquet is eligible to join.

Big Three Spark Success Of Ram Team

Although basketball has developed to the point now where a six footer is a shrimp, there hasn't yet emerged onto the scene a 19-foot center. Such a player is beyond the realm of imagination, but the college team has a pleasant combination of talent in the big three players, whose combined heights reach just a few inches above the head of this mythical fellow.

Theopolis Dunn (6'5½"), Ike Walker (6'4½"); and Dave Davis (6'4") comprise this trio, which has carried much of the force of the Ram's scoring thrusts on the court so far this season.

After the first few contests of the season, the scoring patterns which have held true to this date were established. Dunn, the towering center and ex-Galileo All-City star, potted 17 counters to lead the scoring parade against Menlo J.C., 61-53, in the season opener, and the powerfully built Walker dropped 18 points through the nets to lead the Rams in a strong, although losing, effort against the California Frosh, 64-62.

Davis, a product of San Augustine, Texas, came to the front with a sharp shooting effort against East Contra Costa J.C., scoring 19 big ones to highlight the Rams' victory.

Total scoring in the first eight games bears out the value of the Big Three. Walker tops the offensive list with 107 points, followed by Dunn with 96, and Davis close behind with a total of 92 markers.

Scoring always catches the eye of the average fan in any sport, but many is the time in all games that an entirely different maneuver is the one that most often spells out victory or defeat. In this case, the rebounding skill of Davis, Dunn, and Walker has been the difference between the Rams and their foes in countless instances this season.

Control of the backboards in basketball means control of the game, and with it the most effective club in every department. The Ram cagesabans are a well-balanced, compact team, depending upon steady play and ball control for victory, therefore making their superior rebounding even more important than usual.

The Big Three are truly that in scoring, but the two highest individual scoring totals of the season have been the work of two hustling guards, Ed Atkins and Doug Hom. With an output of 22 points against Napa, Hom holds the high total, and Atkins nearly equaled that with 20 markers to spark the college to a win over Santa Rosa in the league opener.

This diminutive pair, both being well under six feet, has nevertheless been the stabilizing influence on the successful, steady play of the basketball team.

Snack Bar Plight Is Unchanged

Students Ignore Posters Put Up By Fraternities

The hotel and restaurant division's snack bar in the basement of the Science Building here has been under fire now for several weeks without any spectacular results in evidence.

Two service-minded fraternities on campus, Alpha Phi Omega and Tau Chi Sigma, have undertaken the task of cleaning the area with some increase in student cooperation.

Attention was brought to the area by O. E. Anderson, controller here, who threatened to close the well-patronized area if the general condition was not improved immediately. Anderson's threat was made before the college closed its doors for the Christmas holidays. It was under Anderson's suggestion that the two fraternities jointly took up the project of trying to clean up the area.

"Cleaning up one's debris after eating should be second nature to everyone. Unfortunately, this is not the case at the Science Building coffee shop," according to Al Niemi, whose fraternity is working with Alpha Phi Omega on the project.

Blame does not rest with the operators of the shop, stated an official of the hotel and restaurant division, which is in charge of the operation, but with the students who patronize the area. "We run a clean operation and anyone is welcome to inspect our facilities 24 hours a day," he said. He also stated that the jurisdiction of the department ends at the receiving end of the counter. From there on the situation is in the hands of the students.

When questioned about the possible discard of paper cups which are used as coffee cups at the snack bar, the same official stated that it would be more economical in the long run if china cups were used and facilities installed to wash them. "We could also serve a better cup of coffee with china cups than with hot paper cups," he said.

CONDITIONS WHICH Alpha Phi Omega and Tau Chi Sigma have undertaken to remedy are pictured above. The stacked paper coffee cups, which will eventually find their way to the floor instead of the trash containers, are part of the mess which the two fraternities are attempting to remedy. Crowded conditions, as pictured, add to the job which would be relatively easy if a little student cooperation were shown. Dr. O. E. Anderson, controller here, has threatened shutdown of the heavily patronized snack bar.—Guardsman Photo by Sherry.

Jobs Increase For February Graduates

February graduates who wish to obtain a full time position should file a petition with Joseph A. Amori, placement director, in his office in Building 2, west campus, because employers have now started to recruit full time workers.

The biggest demand calls for students with the following majors: Accounting, secretarial, sales training, business administration, retail merchandising, chemical laboratory technicians and electronic technicians.

Competition has been increased this year as in comparison with 1953 and 1954, according to Amori. Employers now want more for their money and applicants, especially in the clerical field, have to be able to work accurately at a high rate of speed.

All employers are now giving tests to prospective employees, some of which include aptitude, vocational interests, personality and skill. Grades, participation in student activities, and past experience are rated high in the selection of new employees.

Banquets Will Honor Choir And Men's Glee

Following a successful fall season, the college A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club will each be honored at separate banquets at the end of the semester.

Elections were held last Wednesday by the Men's Glee Club. Ibsen Birgers was elected President and Joseph Buonsante was elected Librarian for the spring semester.

Glee Club and Choir pins will be presented to members of the fall semester groups for contributing to the success of the organizations. The Glee Club banquet, to be held Saturday, January 22, at the home of director Robert Morton, is sponsored and given by Morton at the end of each semester.

Sigmund Stern Grove will be the setting for the A Cappella Choir banquet. A buffet dinner will be served.

$28,000 Will Be Awarded To Students By Elks Foundation

Twenty-eight thousand dollars in scholarships will be awarded to senior high school and undergraduate students of colleges and universities in 1955 by the Elks National Foundation and the California Elks Association at the 1955 Grand Lodge session, a letter from James F. Sloan, foundation chairman, disclosed this week.

Awards offered this year are as follows: first award, $1000; second award, $900; third award, $800; fourth award, $700; fifth award, $600, and twenty awards of $500 each. In addition to these there will be awards through the California Elks Association.

To be eligible a student must be a high school senior or an undergraduate of a two year college or university and a resident of California. Scholarship, citizenship, personality, leadership, perseverance, resourcefulness, patriotism and general worthiness will be considered in judging of candidates for awards.

The Foundation Trustees furnish a blank called Memorandum of Required Facts which must be typewritten. In addition to this folder it is requested that the following be included: Recent photograph of applicant, a statement of not more than 300 words summarizing activities, accomplishments and objective of further education, a letter of not more than 200 words from a parent or other person showing the applicant's educational history from the first year of high school, a letter of recommendation covering character, personality and scholarship of the applicant from one person in authority in each school, two or three letters of endorsement from responsible persons, not related to the applicant, who can give worthwhile opinion of the applicant, and a letter of endorsement signed by the Exalted Ruler or Secretary of the subordinate lodge in the jurisdiction of which the applicant is resident.

A scholarship rating of 90 per cent or better and standing in the upper 5 per cent of the applicant's class are necessary.

Deadline for applications for scholarships is March 1, filed with Edgar W. Dale, Secretary of the California Elks Association, 315 Tenth Street, Richmond, California.

No Pedal Pushers For Campus Wear

A current trend among women students came under official ban last week when administrative officers frowned on the wearing of pedal-pushers on campus.

During last year's spring semester a virtual epidemic of pedal-pushers broke out, particularly during finals week, giving women students a resort appearance inappropriate to the campus.

Slips of paper were handed out at the beginning of this semester listing the code of dress appropriate for campus wear. The paper also stated that any women students wearing pedal-pushers during finals week would be ineligible to take their examinations.

Bookstore Buys Used Textbooks

Used text books are being purchased by the Rampodium, located on the West campus, through the last day of final examinations, January 28, according to Dick Main, manager.

Students may expect the Rampodium to pay approximately 50 per cent of the original value although a great deal depends on the condition of the text and the number expected to be needed here next semester.

It was pointed out that the earlier students sell their books back to the Rampodium the less possibility there is that the used books will not be purchased by the campus bookstore.

Help will be needed by the Rampodium during registration week, Main said. As always, the Rampodium will hire a number of students to help with the rush which is expected here during the start of the spring semester.

Although students who helped with the rush last semester will have first choice at the available jobs, a number of new hired help will be needed.

The wage paid by the store is one dollar per hour. Those interested in helping with the rush should see Main in the store which is located in Building 12 on the west campus.

The Rampodium will be located in the Student Union and Cafeteria building upon its completion, which is scheduled for some time this year. Construction was started last semester at a total cost of 750,000.

The first dwarf exhibited was a man, 53 years old, 22 inches high, who was shown at the house of Widow Bignall, a little above Mr. Hancock's wharf at Boston, Mass.

Vandals Raid Building; Damage Greater Than Loss

During the New Year's weekend, a person or persons unknown broke into the Science Building and rifled several offices, Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management, disclosed recently.

Since college rules prohibit personnel from leaving cash or valuables in the offices, the vandals were meanly rewarded for their obviously tedious efforts, Dr. Anderson said.

An investigation disclosed that the small fund of the student bank, amounting to less than $30 was taken.

The greatest damage done by the thieves, estimated at several hundred dollars, was to college property and to the building itself, he added.

Semester's End Offers Vacation

Friday, January 28, will be the last day of the fall, 1954, semester, giving students a full week of freedom from classes before the commencement of the spring, 1955, semester on Monday, February 7, the president's office here announced last week.

Registration will be on Wednesday and Thursday, February 2 and 3, for former students and on Friday, February 4, for new students. Classes will begin on Monday, January 7.

The Monday and Tuesday preceeding registration have been declared mid-term recess.

All registration for next semester will take place in Cloud Hall and the Science Building with no registration at all on the west campus which used to be the scene of all registration business, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar at the college, announced last week.

Initial procedures will take place in the Science Building snack bar. Advisers will be located on the second level of Cloud Hall. Class cards, formerly received in the Building 1 auditorium, will be available in the library.

Training For X-Ray Technicians Starts Here

Students who are interested in being X-ray technicians may enroll in classes scheduled to start February 2 here to prepare for X-ray work at the Mount Zion Hospital.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, stated that applications for X-ray training are being accepted at Mount Zion Hospital, rather than at the college.

The students who are interested in this work must enroll in anatomy, physics and photography next semester, he said.

Counsellors Plan For New Students

Counsellors have started to visit senior high schools to plan programs for spring semester students, according to Alva McMillan, counsellor here.

Within the next two weeks counsellors will have programmed all students who took the entrance examinations on December 4 and 11.

Approximately 400 high school students took the examination. This figure, McMillan said, is a 10 per cent increase over a year ago.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations Concerned With AS Elections

By Carolyn Fisher

WITH ELECTION of next semester's Associated Student officers today and tomorrow, club activities have been concentrated on campaigns and publicity for candidates.

The college Sailing Club is organizing team races with the University of California and Lake Merced Yacht Club now. Final arrangements will probably be completed by February. The next meeting scheduled is sometime during the first part of the month.

Phi Beta Rho had its pinning and elections at the home of Dorothy Trezise. The sorority will meet jointly with Lambda Phi tonight.

All Chinese students are welcome to attend the college hour meetings in Room 315 of the Science Building of the Chinese Students Club. Members would like to have help in planning the "final fling," a weiner-roast, scheduled for the close of the semester.

Alpha Phi Epsilon met recently to choose next semester's fraternity officers. A banquet dinner will be held at the end of the semester.

Kappa Phi pinning was last night. The sorority will announce its next semester's officers soon. The women held a joint meeting recently with Beta Tau at the Dolphin Club.

Delta Psi pledges received pins at initiation ceremonies at Franeinc Catania's home recently.

Eight new members were initiated into Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity on December 11. Ceremonies were held at the home of Clement Skrabak, a member of the group's advisory committee. New members are Bob Moore, Lance Thurston, Ed Emig, Klaus Aprons, Norm Foote, John Grist, Ken Henry and Phil Mottin.

Lambda Phi held its pledge dinner on December 28 at the Paris Restaurant. Dean Lou Batmale was present in the absence of sponsor Robin Dunn. Those pledging this semester are Tony Criteili, Bill Moeller, Steve Caneo, Larry Wolfe, Joe O'Shea, Buzz Quinting, Frank Collins, Larry Murphy, Meridith Hoover and Walt Garry.

Alpha Lambda Chi pledges took their sisters out to dinner one night last week. January 15 the sorority will have its pledge dinner at the Claremont Hotel in the Berkeley hills with pinning beforehand at Joan Rettus' home. Installation of officers is January 18.

A special meeting for the purpose of planning activities for next semester of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, has been called by sponsor of the group Don Jensen. The meeting, which will be in Cloud Hall in Room 232 this Friday, during college hour, is not a general meeting, but only for AGS members.

Smoking Rule Ignorance Gets Warning Expulsion

Failure to comply with the "No Smoking" regulations has resulted in the expulsion of one student from college for a day, Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, announced this week.

This was the first such action taken this semester in connection with the smoking rule. Additional signs have been posted throughout the college, and students are advised to observe them to avoid disciplinary measures, Dean Browne said.

Delta Psi Wins Dougherty Scholarship Trophy

For the third consecutive semester, Delta Psi won the Margaret Dougherty scholarship plaque and gold cup. The presentation was made at a luncheon honoring Miss Dougherty and all sororities in the faculty dining room of the cafeteria on January 11.

Pat Smith, president of Delta Psi, accepted the award on behalf of her sorority, from Miss Dougherty according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Theta Tau was runner-up in the competition, and Dean Golding stated that all seven sororities showed a scholastic average of well above "C."

Attending the luncheon were Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; Louis F. Batmale, dean, semi-professional courses; John J. Brady, co-ordinator, division of student welfare; Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, division of instruction, Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar, Dean Golding, Miss Dougherty and members of the seven sororities on campus and their sponsors.

This award has been issued semi-annually since September, 1953, and was instituted by the combined sororities in honor of Miss Dougherty, who was the former dean of women here.

In keeping with the scholastic aims of the sororities, a table, reserved for and managed by the sororities will be placed in the library sometime during the next semester, Dean Golding said. Students whose averages are falling below "C" will be encouraged to use these facilities.

LOUIS DEADLINE FEB. 23

Students wishing to file petitions for the Florence Louis scholarship are reminded that the deadline is Wednesday, February 23, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced recently.

To become eligible a student must have completed 15 units of work with a "C" average or better. The decision of the award committee is based on the student's scholarship need and leadership, Miss Golding said.

Kingston, Cheader Win Top AS Posts

690 Votes Split Executive Offices Between Independents, IFC; Three Independents Take Council Seats

By Clark Smith

Six hundred ninety voters elected Al Kingston next semester's Associated Student President last Wednesday and Thursday. Kingston won by a slender ten-point margin from Inter-Fraternity Council candidate Al Niemi.

Kingston, who bolted the IFC three weeks ago when Niemi won that party's presidential nomination, received 245 votes to Niemi's 235. Another candidate, Phil Gaal, collected 218 votes.

Other races saw two independents, Marion Cheader and Marilyn Sicotte, winning executive positions easily, thus continuing the trend toward non-partisan student officials.

Miss Cheader captured the AS Vice-presidency with a 60 vote plurality over Marcia Herst. Miss Herst, the IFC candidate, polled 253 votes and Independent Betty Petersen 128.

This semester's only uncontested race saw Bob Johnson, IFC choice for Associated Men Student President, receive a 613 ballot vote of confidence from fellow students.

IFC candidate Tookie Radillo's 342 votes won her the Associated Women Student Presidency. Miss Radillo was 39 votes ahead of Independent Karin Walker's 303.

Joe Graham, whose 363 votes were highest for any executive position, was student's choice for Sophomore President. IFC-backed Graham was opposed by Independent Deane Woods, who won 285 votes.

Miss Sicotte easily defeated three other candidates for Freshman President. Miss Sicotte, an Independent, tallied 214 votes to 188 for Arthur Handy (IFC), 173 for Mel Patsel (Ind.) and 155 for Glenn Allen (Ind.)

IFC control of the Student Council will continue this spring. Three Independents, freshman Barbara Batmale, and sophomores Amy Lee and Ken Orzell were elected to council seats.

All seven candidates for sophomore members of council were given large votes of confidence by the AS. Orzell received the highest number of votes, 550, closely followed by Connie Panagakis, with 549. Other sophomore council members-elect, in order of descending number of votes, are Marcia Norstrom (538), Lawrence Lowe (537), Miss Lee (531), Carol Thompson (529), and Esther Phillips (518).

Miss Batmale, polling a total of 466 votes, led hopefuls for freshman council seats. She was closely followed by Bob Bliss with 461. Jann Palmer had 439 votes and was followed by Judy Wilson (427), Phil Braverman (418), Vic Hebert (415) and Joyce Weaver (392).

Defeated freshman council candidates were Jessie Dawson of the IFC, with 328 votes and Independents Earl Cabrinha (307) and Gloria Temkin (267).

Kingston and Miss Cheader were sworn into office last night at the Student Council awards dinner.

Ed Harer Receives Service Award At Council Dinner

Ed Harer was awarded the Outstanding Service Award from the Associated Students for the Fall 1954 semester by AS President Bill Boldenweck at the semi-annual Student Council dinner at the California Hotel last night.

Actual nominations and elections for the award-winner were held January 11 and 13 at the regular council meetings on those days. The vote was by secret ballot, and the final result was withheld by Foldenweck until last night. The award, a golden key like the keys awarded to retiring council members, is awarded to one student each semester. The recipient of the award is voted winner by the Student Council members and President's Cabinet.

Last Thursday the final financial statements of the semester were read to the council by Finance Committee Chairman John Lo Coco.

A special meeting of the council was held January 7 after a dispute between the Election Committee and the council. The council having overridden a decision of the committee, the committee resigned as a whole. After almost two hours of debate, the Election Committee resumed office and harmony prevailed.

Show Proceeds Send Lopez To Chicago

Half the proceeds of tomorrow night's performance of the Varieties of '55 will be used to help defray the expenses of Zoraida Lopez, City College student, in her bid for a place on the American Pan-American games team.

An exceptional athlete, Miss Lopez specializes in the javelin toss and the discus throw. Born a U.S. citizen in Puerto Rico, she came to the college from Polytechnic High School.

The award was made at one of the regular meetings of the student council in view of Miss Lopez' athletic achievements and capabilities, after discussion and suggestions by Associated Student leaders, members of the faculty and business representatives of the varieties.

Student Council Passes New Charter For CAB Increase In Representation

Recently passed by Student Council, the new master charter for the Club Activities Board will be in effect next semester, Bob Moore, CAB president, said yesterday.

In the past, all organizations merely filled out a petition and submitted it to the board.

According to the new system all organizations will turn in a petition and receive a certificate which will act as a receipt. Duplicate certificates will be attached to the master charter which reads as follows:

"In order to enrich the life of City College of San Francisco and to develop the character and ability in leadership of the students of this college, duly recognized organizations are hereby authorized to engage in any and all such educational, social and service activities as shall promote the welfare both of the college as an institution and of the students as individuals."

Two clubs have not handed in petitions yet. They are the Block SF and Alpha Gamma Sigma, the statewide honor society.

The constitution of the Zeta Phi Sigma Fraternity was also passed at Student Council which admits it as an authorized organization on the campus.

California Scholarship Applications Are Considered For All Campuses; Alumni, Endowment Grants Given

Applications for University of California scholarships which average $300 each are now being processed, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Undergraduate scholarships for the Berkeley and Davis campuses derived from endowments and University funds; and awards on all campuses provided through the scholarship program of the California Alumni Association are being offered.

One application entitles the student to consideration in both of these classes.

Students whose parents' income is below $6000 a year are eligible to apply. Decisions of the Committee on Undergraduate Scholarships will be based as follows: need, 40 per cent, scholarship, 40 per cent, and leadership, 20 per cent. Of the scholarship percentage, 30 per cent will be allowed for A's and 10 per cent for B's.

One to three letters of recommendation giving information on the applicant's character, ability and need are requested plus a transcript of high school and college work and a report on the applicant completed by the dean of women here.

Petitions must be in the office of the committee at Berkeley no later than March 1, 1955. Students interested in making application should see Dean Golding in Room S150 for details.

UC scholarships awarded at last year's commencement went to Carroll Tursell, G. A. Douglas scholarship; Beatrice Sanchez, Sydney Ehrmann scholarship; Mrs. Auguste Helen Shields, Honorary Scholarship, and Jan Seweil, Weyman Low, Elsine Darby and Lois Sanchez received Alumni scholarships.

Deadline for the Florence Louis Scholarship, awarded each semester to one woman student at the college, is Wednesday, February 23. Applications must be sent to the office of Dean Golding, Room S150. This scholarship consists of $25 and an Associated Student card.

Three other scholarships will be awarded later in the semester. Among these are the A. J. Cloud scholarships and the Chinese Student Association scholarships, each available to one man and one woman student, and the Graduating Class of 1954 scholarship to be awarded to two men and two women students.

Double Friday Hour For Soph-Prof Game

Eleven o'clock classes will be cancelled this Friday, January 21, providing a double college hour for intramural championship games and the Soph-Prof basketball game, Louis Batmale, dean of semi-professional courses here, stated.

The movie originally scheduled for the college hour will also be cancelled.

Both sporting events will take place in the men's gymnasium starting at 10:40 a.m. and lasting until 12:10 p.m. The feature event will be the traditional Sophomore versus Professor basketball game which is held annually at the end of the fall semester.

Card Sales Total Short Of Goal

As of election time last week, Ralph Libby, card sales chairman here, reported that 2,090 Associated Student cards had been sold bringing revenue of $10,450 to the AS.

This total was short of the goal of $12,500 set by the AS at the start of the semester. The cards are sold at a cost of $5.00 and entitle the holder to numerous discounts ranging from 5 to 40 per cent from local merchants.

Libby announced recently that the cards which will be used next semester will have a picture of the Science Building on the front with an abstract drawing across one corner.

AS cards entitle the holder to parking and voting privileges along with admittance to athletic programs on the campus and reduced rates at several campus dances throughout the semester.

'55 Varieties, Spice Of Life, Bows Thursday

Divided into an 18-act program of dance, drama, comedy and music, the Spice-of-Life Varieties of '55 opens tomorrow night in the west campus auditorium at 8:30 p.m. for a two night run.

Curtain time for the Friday night show will be 9 p.m., following a Ram-Oakland basketball game at the college, Director Pete Garrett said.

Admission to the affair is 50 cents for members of the Associated Students and $1 for general public. Tickets may be obtained from members of the show, campus organizations and the student bank in the Science Building.

Described as a music and lighting show, the Varieties features original scripts written by Frank Anderson and Garrett, and musical arrangements by Ernie Breitenfeld, well-known bay area musician.

Breitenfeld's arrangements will be played by the nine-piece college dance band.

Among the highlights of the hour-and-a-half program are Spoon Tap by Charlie Mankin, Joyce Cody's Hungah, a comedy routine by Garrett, and Frankie and Johnny with Carol Waugh and Ron Boltz.

Special attraction of the evening will be the vocal selections of the Paris sisters, Decca recording stars.

Lighting, handled by Roy Maffei and Ron Tognetti, and stage work under Bob Flanigan combined with Garrett's artistic ideas "insure an original and imaginative production," Michael Griffin, faculty adviser to the show, commented recently.

Charter Plans Revealed By USA To Include Clubs

The United Students Association is expected to present a new constitution to the Club Activities Board before the end of the semester. The constitution of the reorganized association will be put into effect at the beginning of the Spring semester.

Membership in the new organization will be open to any CAB chartered club which is not a present member of either the Inter-Fraternity Council or the Inter-Sorority Council.

Purpose of the association, according to Bob Burmister, president of the association, will be to "promote inter-club cooperation in social, scholastic, political and organizational endeavors." The association will also try to encourage members of the member clubs to participate actively in student government affairs here at the college.

Handling of the association and its affairs will be completely in the hands of the member clubs, who will make the policies of the organization and control the functions.

Each eligible organization will be allowed two voting delegates in the new USA. New officers of the association will be elected from the delegates.

Semester's Success Due To Efforts Of Many On Campus

WITH the end of the current semester only a few days away, the time has come to voice the thanks which are due to the many groups, organizations and individuals on campus for their part in making this an outstanding semester.

The faculty was, as usual, a most understanding and patient group as they successfully coped with the large enrollment and all of the many other problems connected with teaching. All of them, from President Louis G. Conlan to Deans Browne and Golding to the entire administrative and teaching staff, made attending classes a downright pleasure.

Another less-heralded group that had a large hand in keeping the college running was the Messrs. Cook and, in the men's gymnasium, Hamilton and Giacomini, and all the rest of the virtually anonymous staff who handled every job from engineer to repairman to janitor and did everything well.

Members of the faculty who usually are better known around the campus than their academic brethren on the hill are the coaches and physical education teachers. For the fine teams they turned out and for the job they did in handling the less athletically-inclined, a special vote of thanks.

The Student Council of the college has turned in another good job, and we're sure that the voters who chose these student leaders were happy and proud of the college's student government. The council members, President Bill Boldenweck's cabinet and the other elected and appointed officers left big shoes for their successors to fill.

As able as the council was, they will be the first to admit that the way might have been a little harder without the guiding hand of Louis Batmale who, in addition to his duties as dean of semi-professional courses, continued as dean of student activities and whose advice was invaluable to good student government here.

Still another group of individuals deserves special mention. The athletes who wore the City College colors this past semester certainly did nothing to hurt the Rams' record of good performances and good sportsmanship.

Although the "thank-yous" may be getting kind of thick at this point, we of The Guardsman would like to give a few bouquets of our own. All of the groups already mentioned, and more, served as our news sources, without which, quite logically, there would have been no news. Space forbids listing the names of all our sources, but to all of them goes our gratitude for their constant help in getting the paper out.

A thank you too to our "publisher," the Associated Students. Remarks and criticisms, as welcome as they are, will not pay for printing and all the other mounting costs, so we gratefully acknowledge the financial help that the AS gave us. Too, the interest in The Guardsman was the greatest incentive that we could have had.

Last, but certainly not least, we wish to give a special vote of thanks to our wonderful faculty adviser, Miss Joan Nourse. Without her help, the newspaper might never have survived all the obstacles that fell in our way.

Now, if the editorial "We" may be dropped for just a moment, I would like to thank, from the bottom of my heart, everyone connected with The Guardsman—Miss Nourse, the editorial board, the reporters and everyone else who made my job such an easy one.

Again, thank you, and may the entire college have a Happy New Year and a happy new semester!

Classic Lines Defy Modern Supercars

Student's Model A 'Demetrius' Grandaddy To Modern Thunderbird

By Emil Portale

With the advent of the fish tail, student associations, Miss America and Gina Lollobrigida, interesting innovations in styles have evolved at the college of late.

Although the above mentioned elements and their counterparts may eventually become history, one aspect of the auto body type which will forever remain a part of campus life is Henry Ford's Model A. Even when the inhabitants of the Earth are taking weekend cruises to Alpha Centauri's fourth planet in a Deluxe Cosmic Coaster with superdrive somewhere on Earth there will be a devoted student chugging to an 8 o'clock class in a faithful "Model A."

Although the college sports about a half dozen of these relics, only one can be considered the most "broken in." "Thunderbird," as it is called, with a vintage of 1929, to this day wears its bright peeling red cloak with the same air of pomp and circumstance as it did in bygone days.

It is surprising to note the newishness of the vehicle as compared to the style of the contemporary modes of travel in use today. Its one piece picture window is enhanced by the flowing lines of the modern box-type construction (abbreviated), followed by a continental kit (with spare tire), which is rapidly coming into its own in modern day automobile styling.

"Demetrius," as it is called when the owner is in a fighting mood, can do a solid 30 miles per hour on the open road. Among its various extras the vehicle contains power steering and power brakes, that is, it takes power to make those devices succumb.

An astonishing fact is that while the present owner has had the car for less than a month, there have been only four occasions where it has been necessary to assist the car manually in moving, and only three times where "Thunderbird" refused to motivate itself for lack of a minor chemical compound called gasoline.

Even though the body types of today are the result of ingenious creativeness, perhaps none will ever surpass the engineering skill and devotion that went into the making of Bob Chrisman's beloved fire engined coupe.

Life Drawing

Artists Study Human Skeleton

Using a unique and self-developed process of lecture demonstration, Carl Beetz instructs the figure drawing and story illustration class here.

Beetz, who is Associate Professor of Life Drawing at the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, teaches here one day a week.

Tracing the human skeleton on transparent paper with a conte crayon, Beetz then has it reproduced on the Osloid reproduction machine in the engineering department.

The result is a likeness of the original drawing on white paper 4 by 8 feet high. Using this highly effective method he illustrates his lectures by drawing bone structures and muscle on the sketch which is developed into proportions of the average human figure.

Beetz studied art at Grand Central Art School and the Art Students League in New York City and also in Europe. He has paintings in the San Francisco Museum of Art and other collections. Many exhibits of his work have been presented throughout the country.

Arthur Miller, art critic, Los Angeles Times, says of him: "Another painter for whose work collectors and museums will some day bid is Carl Beetz."

MUIR WOODS, the national forest located about four miles from the town of Mill Valley in Marin County, is one of the most beautiful spots in Northern California.

In order to get the most enjoyment out of a visit to the woods, the hiker should take a bus to Mill Valley and hike four miles over the hills.

From the top of the last hill the hiker can see, laid out before him in a small valley that leads to the ocean, a dark, cool-looking grove of trees about a mile wide and two miles long. Willows and oak trees speckle the green floor of the valley and provide shade for cows and horses, while a small stream appears at the lower end of the woods and lazily winds its way through the fields toward the ocean.

Entering the woods after the two mile descent, the tired hiker is soon revived by the cool shade and calm quiet of the redwood grove; or by refreshments near the entrance to the woods where there is a restaurant, small museum and gift shop.

Following the stream is a path that leads up the center of the woods and if taken leads away from the throngs of people too lazy or tired to continue the hike.

About one mile up this path, there is a series of miniature waterfalls caused by the water falling from huge granite boulders in the middle of the stream's bed. Invariably a small pool is formed at the base of the falls that mysteriously contains a salmon or trout that journeyed upstream during the winter season.

Alongside the pools are small beaches that provide wonderful resting places to break out the picnic lunch. Hot, sore feet can be soaked in the ice cold water of the stream, and the sandy beach provides a soft bed for a tired hiker's nap.

January March Of Dimes Drive Helps Aid Polio Victims

Poliomyelitis, commonly called polio, is brought to the attention of the American people in January of each year when the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis conducts its annual March of Dimes.

Since its founding by the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, himself a polio victim, the Foundation has taken tremendous strides toward the prevention and treatment of this crippling disease.

This year, research scientists have hope that a newly developed vaccine will provide immunity for a half million youngsters.

For those already stricken, the best possible care is made available through the Foundation. Costly equipment and professional care are also provided for.

BILL BOLDENWECK, Associated Student president, was secretly confiding to Jackie Mascarelli the other day his plan to buy a birthday present for Patty Mascarelli, as sort of a remembrance for her term as AS vice-president.

He couldn't see why Jackie found this so amusing, until it was pointed out to him that identical twins in most instances have the same birth date. An embarrassing situation, so to solve it he went out and bought himself a phonograph.

Unsung Heroes Of Basketball Lineup Receive Recognition For Ability, Spirit

Unsung heroes are to be found in every cooperative effort, and basketball is no exception, for often the substitutes and reserves are ignored in the hullabaloo for individual stars.

The Ram basketball team, which has compiled an outstanding won and lost record thus far in the season, has been able to do so with the support of 13 men, not five. One of the chief reasons for the Rams' success has been their strong reserves and the spirit and pep of the men on the bench who keep team morale at a peak during a contest.

Wally Papke, John Rudometkin, Don Brooks, Rudy Lopez, Sam Gellepes, Desha Williams, Flemen Hardy and Norman King, who do not usually break into the starting lineup, are as important in the college's success as any one of the starting five.

Because these men do not participate as much as other players on the squad does not mean that these men are not good basketball performers, for in addition to being high school standouts, many of them could break into another Big Eight team's starting lineup.

Papke lettered in basketball at Washington High School and received an Honorable Mention All-City award in his senior year. Although Papke has a good set shot, he prefers to pass and work the ball in for a shorter shot, and is a reliable player at guard.

Rudometkin, also an Honorable Mention All-City performer in his senior year at Galileo, is a good dribbler and will make his share of tallies, as evidenced in the Modesto tourney when he totaled 16 points for two games.

Lopez is another guard for the Rams. Lopez joined the Ram basketball squad later in the season, for he had devoted the major portion of the fall to playing football for the college. Like Papke, he rarely shoots, preferring to pass the ball and set up a good scoring opportunity, usually for one of the forwards.

Gellepes, as a guard, takes primarily set shots, although he possesses a good jump shot and handles the ball well.

Williams, Hardy and King comprise the college's reserve strength at center. King distinguished himself in the Modesto tourney by scoring 22 and 10 points in two games. He is also a good rebounder, standing 6'3". Hardy gets up in the air as high as any man on the team, and is good on the boards, along with Williams who is the tallest man on the squad at 6'7".

Don Bessee just recently joined the basketball roster as a guard and has not yet played in any of their games.

Don Brooks rounds out the roster at guard in his first year of athletic competition at the college. Although Brooks does not frequently break into the lineup, his performance is marked by aggressiveness and hustle.

To quote one spectator who has seen every City College basketball game this season, "This team is one of the most coordinated squads this college has produced; every man cooperates as a member of the whole."

Fast Action Marks Intramural Boxing Tourney Of Last Week; Six Win; Welters Battle To Draw

By Emil Portale

Amidst the cheers and feverish excitement of their rabid followers, 14 pugilistic plow horses battled it out for top honors in the college's eighth annual Novice Intramural Boxing Championships held in the men's gymnasium here January 12.

Because of unforeseen circumstances, Reuben Tavernier of the 125 pound class had the easiest time of anyone in the night's festivities. As a matter of fact he didn't even have to put on gloves to win his bout. He took away his medal by way of the forfeit route.

As the evening wore on, the matches turned into a wildly brawling, boisterous affair, climaxed in the main event when bloody-nosed Bert Mondino floored Ron Dixon with a crashing right cross to the head which brought the big heavyweight the victory.

In the opening go-round of the tourney reliable Ron Coroompas waited out Fred Morrell's attempts at a flurry victory by picking his spots to come through with booming lefts and rights which confused his opponent and eventually gained him the decision.

Carrying the bout from start to finish, Mike Huffman swarmed over Bill Wright's snappy maneuvers and went away with a large margin of victory in the 132 pound battle.

The third and fourth clashes were relatively similar, with Audrey Lee's bombshell TKO over Joel Gallin in the former, and Roscoe Jones' smooth, almost professional-appearing victory over Len Lopez in the fourth clash.

Roger Nunes had to try lion-taming stunts to still the onrushing brawling tactics of Mack Calhoun in the 147 pound match. Both men slammed away at each other, toe to toe, for the three rounder only to have the exhausting match called a draw.

In the pre-main event scrap Tony McFadden solidly blistered his way to a resounding TKO triumph over valiant Herb Davis in a bout which pitted both brains and brawn together.

New WAA Officers Announced At Tea

New officers were announced and installed at the Women's Athletic Association awards tea, held last Wednesday in the women's gymnasium. Outgoing President Esther Phillips installed the following new officers: Barbara Jones, president; Yvonne McFarlin, vice-president; Eloise Marshall, secretary; and Ann Smith, treasurer.

The new president becomes Women's Athletic Commissioner of the Associated Student President's cabinet.

Fall athletic awards were also presented at the tea.

Sophs And Profs Clash Friday In Semi-Annual Game

Two teams will tussle this Friday in a basketball contest, kind of, that will decide in all probability everything except the winner.

It's time again for the annual Soph-Prof hoop tilt, to be held during a double college hour this Friday in the men's gymnasium. Captains of the opposing factions are Ralph Hillsman, the college's basketball coach, and Brad Owens, president of the Sophomore class. Little information has been gathered in regard to plans for the game, captains and members of both camps remaining tight-lipped about any game strategy. In fact, so strict are security rulings that leaders have been reluctant to release starting lineups.

Judging from prevalent rumors, most probable lead-off fives will feature Roy Burkhead, Roy Diederichsen, Bill Fischer, Hillsman and Grover Klemmer for the Profs, with added bench strength in the form of Alex Schwarz and Lou Batmale.

Soph starters remain a complete mystery, save for the energetic Owens. Tip-off is planned at 10:40 a.m., but spokesmen emphasized that this should be disregarded. The affair has never started on time, and rarely is finished.

Two Ram Soccer Stars Named To All-American

Freddy Zamora and Rudolpho (Fito) Molina were named to the second string All-American soccer team, soccer coach Roy Diederichsen announced yesterday.

Diederichsen was informed of the seiicction by a letter from the National Coach's Association which invited Zamora and Molina to their awards banquet in New York on January 15.

Zamora, star left inside forward for the Rams, also won first string All-Conference honors, and Molina was second string All-Conference selection at center half.

Ramblings

By Bob Chrisman

A LOOK at the team statistics of the Ram basketball squad is indicative of their scoring power. Dave Davis is the leading scorer with 155 points in 14 games, which marks the first time that Davis has led the team in scoring. In addition, the Ram forward holds the highest point score in one game this season for the college—he hit 28 points against Ventura at Modesto.

Ike Walker has been dropped to second place with 136 tallies. Previous to the Modesto Tourney, Walker had hit double figures in seven out of eight games. Walker, who plays under the bucket, is a top rebounder, and is fouled more than any other player on the team. Because of this, he leads the team in free throws, having sunk 50 charity shots in 14 games.

Theopolis Dunn, the center for the Rams, has hit 130 in 14 contests for an average of 10 points per game.

Doug Hom is fourth in the scoring brigade with 90 markers. Hom has played in 12 games, having been sidelined for two games with a twisted ankle. He is the set shot artist for the Ram squad and scores mainly from outside the key, with an occasional layup.

Ed Atkins, the top ball handler and dribbler for the college five, is fifth in scoring with 87 points. As a guard, Atkins does not shoot as much as the other four starters.

In the field goal department, Davis is the leader with 66 in 14 contests. Dunn, who averaged 14 points a game last year, is second with 48 field goals, Walker is third with 43 field goals. Hom follows, having connected from the floor 38 times, and Atkins is fifth, with 30.

The even distribution of scoring down the lineup is indicative of this team's offensive power. Every man on the starting five has led the team for scoring in one game: Hom has hit 22 for high point honors, Davis has hit 28, Dunn has hit 19, and Walker has connected with 18 points.

In the Santa Rosa game, Atkins hit 20 points.

Surpassing last season's work will be no easy task for the new coach, for the clubbers of 1954 smoothly swept through the conference and brought the top spot in the golf league back to Ramdom. Veterans Doug Heidohrn, Dave Watkins and Rich Derry are expected to do their part in bringing another successful season to the hilltop.

During the course of the season's scramble for big money the Rams will host three teams at home, West Contra Costa, Sacramento, and Modesto. The Santa Rosa, Oakland, Stockton, and San Mateo struggles will be held on foreign greens.

Ram Cagers Trounce Sacramento, 65-42, Dropped By League-Leading Comet Five In 65-60 Thriller

By Bob Chrisman

Superior outside shooting gave the West Contra Costa Comets a 65-60 victory over the City College basketball team and undisputed possession of first place in the Big Eight Conference last Friday at West Contra Costa.

Led by guards Clyde Hardeman and Sam Hitcher, the Comets thwarted the tightly-packed shifting man-to-man defense of the Rams with a barrage of long shots as Hardeman, Hitcher, and Wally Patch consistently hit from 20 feet out to score 19, 18, and 10 points respectively.

The West Contra Costans used a similar defense, closing in on the college's three big men around the post, Ike Walker, Theopolis Dunn, and Dave Davis. The Rams were forced to shoot from outside the key, as guards Ed Atkins and Doug Hom carried the scoring load with 24 and 9 points, respectively.

In the second half, Forward J. D. Banks got hot for the Comets and hit 10 points to spark the Contra Costa offense, which was bolstered by superior backboard control. A last minute rally by the Rams was snuffed with the final buzzer, despite their hustle, as West Contra triumphed, 65-60. The excellent shooting of the Contra Costans from the charity line was instrumental, for they sank 19 out of 23 tries.

Last Wednesday, the college hoopmen overwhelmed a weakened Sacramento club in another Big Eight game, 65-42, at City College. Hamstrung by the loss of key guards Ray Davis and Doug Pierce, Sacramento was able to score only 13 points in the first half, with Davis, Dunn, and Walker controlling rebounds and bottling Harvey Fong, the Panthers' high-scoring center.

In addition to rebounding well, Davis hit 24 points to lead both teams in scoring, with guard John Rudometkin second for the Rams with eight points. Guard Ed Franklin hit 17 for the Panthers.

Sacramento was forced to shoot from the outside against the college and wasn't hitting in the first half, while Coach Ralph Hillsman's quintet could do no wrong. Later in the second half, Hillsman played the reserve team, which took up where the others had left off, as Flemen Hardy, Norm King, and Squirrel Papke, an excellent pass-maker, capped the Rams' victory.

Oakland Five Plays Rams Here Friday; Modesto Tilt Next

Oakland's well-balanced Blue quintet and the Ram basketball team will clash this Friday, January 21, at 8 p.m. in the Ram gymnasium in a Big Eight Conference game.

In addition to this home conference game at the college, there will be another Big Eight contest on Friday night, January 28, when the Rams play the Modesto Pirate squad at 8 p.m. at Modesto.

Oakland's main weakness is lack of height, as Coach Bill Rockwell does not have any player taller than 6'2". Their top individual performer is Sam Haggerty, a guard, who is an excellent rebounder, despite his 5'10" stature.

Oakland's tentative lineup for their contest with the Rams will be: Andy Lemons, center; Walt Sasser, guard; Hal Gardere, forward; Bob Bozonier, guard, and Les Clausen, forward.

For the Rams, the tentative starters will be Ed Atkins, forward; Ike Walker, guard; Doug Hom, guard; Dave Davis, forward, and Theopolis Dunn, center.

Modesto lost both its games in the Modesto tourney, losing to Ventura in the first round and to Pasadena in the consolation round. By virtue of their win over Ventura in the semi-finals, the college's quintet is favored to defeat the Pirates, who have only two returning lettermen from last year's club.

Handicapped by a relatively small starting five, the Modestans depend on the shooting ability of guards Jerry Schell, Ray Sampson, and Bill Mills, with 6'5" center Dick Jenkins to peaform the rebounding chores.

Last year, a strong Modesto squad defeated the Rams in the last game of the season to decide the Big Seven championship between the two teams.

Klemmer 'Sponsors' Golf Team; Season Signup Here February 7

This year's golf season will tee off with a meeting and sign-up of those interested in the fairway sport on Monday, February 7, at 3 p.m. in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium, as announced by "sponsor" Grover Klemmer here last week.

With the ascension of last year's coach, Ralph Hillsman, to the head spot in the men's athletic department during Chairman Jack Gaddy's Sabbatical leave, Klemmer has gained the post and will serve as mentor for the sport this year. Because of this Klemmer declined the usual term of that position and whimsically referred to himself as "sponsor."

'Intra' Finals Friday

With the quarter and semi-finals being completed last week, the intramural program will hold its finals in its respective sports during a double college hour this Friday, 10:40 a.m. to 12:10 p.m.

Tennis, badminton, ping pong and basketball are among the sports included in the finals with football being a doubtful contender because of heavy rain and soggy fields.

A Cappella Choir Here Elects New Officers

Elections for the Spring 1955 A Cappella Choir officers were held January 6. The newly-elected officers took over their official capacities at a choir banquet held yesterday.

New president of the choir is James Price, serving with Jo Anne Bedell as vice-president. Patricia Quick is the new concert manager, and the new secretary is Vivian Price, wife of the new president.

Other new officers elected are Shirley Secrest, and Golden R. Swenson, librarians; Barbara Jones and Joseph Aranda, property managers; and Ralph Donovan, publicity manager.

Saturday Night Dance Highlights Social Events; Colonial Room Of St. Francis Site For Gala Affair

This year's Fall semester will come to a close with the presentation of the Sophomore Ball Saturday, January 22, in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Brad Owens, Sophomore Class president.

Dancing will be to the music of Jimmy Blass and his orchestra.

Admission to the dance is by one Associated Student card per couple, and charge for non-AS members is $2.50 per couple. Tickets may be purchased at the student bank on the main floor of the Science Building.

Appropriate attire for the affair is semi-formal, Owens said last week, with business suits for the men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Highlight of the evening will be the coronation of the king and queen by Beta Tau fraternity and Theta Tau sorority and the coronation waltz led by the royal couple. Trophies will also be awarded to the couple.

The first Sophomore Ball was held in the Fall of 1936, and in 1940 a "sweetheart" was elected to reign over the festivities. In the Fall of 1945, sophomore men were able to share in the honor when the position of king was added to the ballot.

Handling preparations for the dance are Owens and Marion Cheader, Sophomore Class vice-president.

Election of the king and queen will take place today and tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and all students are eligible to vote. Booths are located in the cafeteria and by the silver pole at the main entrance of the Science Building.

Because of the late deadline for acceptance of petitions, names of candidates were not available for publication.

Conlan Reviews Accomplishments Of Fall Semester; Advances In Academics, Activities Cited

In his traditional semester-end message to the college, President Louis G. Conlan last week reviewed the happenings of Fall 1954 and termed it "one of the most successful semesters in the history of the college." His review is as follows:

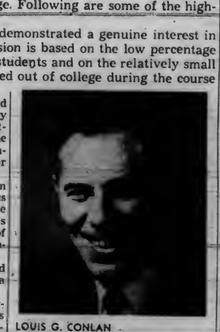
"In my opinion this has been one of the most successful semesters in the history of the college. Following are some of the highlights of the semester:

"1. Students generally have demonstrated a genuine interest in academic pursuits. This conclusion is based on the low percentage of absences on the part of our students and on the relatively small number of students who dropped out of college during the course of this semester.

"2. The full utilization of Cloud Hall, our new classroom and library building, improved the general atmosphere of our college. When the new Student Union Building is completed this situation will be further improved.

"3. Although the activity program has been most successful in previous semesters, it would appear that we have attained even greater heights this semester. Following are some of the highlights of the activity program:

"a. More than 2000 Associated Student cards were sold. This is a new high for recent years.



"b. The reception for Miss America, in which City College students played a leading part, was most successful. Through our participation in that civic enterprise we gained many friends in San Francisco.

"c. Homecoming Day was the finest we have had and was attended by more than 20 former Associated Student Presidents including the first President of the Associated Students.

"d. As usual, Prep Day was one of the outstanding events of the semester. The visiting students and administrators were most enthusiastic about the entire program.

"e. There was more interest than usual in the Associated Student election. Every office, with the exception of one, was contested and the total vote was the highest in recent years.

"f. The football and soccer teams were in contention for the highest honors until the final game and both missed the championship in their respective leagues by the narrowest margin. For the first time in the history of the college all home football games were played on our campus. Next year we shall have five home games at Balboa Park Stadium. The basketball team did very well in the Modesto Invitational Tournament, losing only to Fresno in the final round."

Draft Certificates Due

All students in draft classifications 1-A, 1-S or 2-S should apply to have college student certificates sent to their draft boards, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of the division of student welfare here.

Applications must be secured in Brady's office, Room 130, Science Building, before the end of the semester.

Registration To Start February 2

For the benefit of the many students who were programmed before the registration schedule was arranged, Alva McMillan, counsellor here, released the following registration time schedule:

Returning students: Wednesday, February 2: 8 a.m.—1 to 199; 9 a.m.—200 to 599; 10 a.m.—600 to 999; 11 a.m.—1000 to 1399; 1 p.m.—1400 to 1799; 2 p.m.—1800 to 2199.

Thursday, February 3: 8 a.m.—2200 to 2599; 9 a.m.—2600 to 2999; 10 a.m.—3000 to 3399; 11 a.m.—3400 to 3799; 1 p.m.—3800 plus.

New students will register on Friday, February 4, McMillan said.

The registration line will begin at the south basement entrance and travel through the hallway to the present snack bar site where registration procedure will begin. (Formerly, McMillan stated, this procedure took place in Building 2 on the west campus.)

Students will then go to their registration advisers who will be in rooms on the second floor of Cloud Hall. Class signups will be in the library on the third floor of Cloud Hall. The final checkout procedure will be on the first floor of Cloud Hall.

The first monument to an insect was dedicated December 11, 1919 at Enterprise, Alabama "in profound appreciation of the Boll Weevil."

Library To Stay Open During Week Of Final Exams

During finals week the college library will stay open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. as usual, Clement Skrabak, library staff member, announced last week.

Books should be returned and outstanding fines paid in order to straighten out the records as soon as possible, Skrabak added.

Seven new Webster International Dictionaries have been added to the shelves in order to provide students with additional help during finals week.

To help those having difficulties in English, Plain Words and Their ABC, by Sir Ernest Bowers, has been newly acquired.

For those who have taken politics after the recent elections, A Call to Greatness, by Adlai Stevenson, and The Roosevelt Family of Sagamore Hill, by Herman Hagedorn, will be of interest.

Pulitzer Prize winner William Faulkner's A Fable, is his latest contribution to the literary world. The Private World of William Faulkner, by Bob Coughlan, gives a vivid description of Faulker's life.

H&R Lists Cafe Hours For Registration Week

An announcement by the hotel and restaurant division here recently stated that the division will keep all its campus eateries open as usual during final examination week. The division's cafeteria, located on west campus, is open from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

During registration week, a spokesman stated, only the cafeteria on the west campus will be open.

St. Francis Hotel Day, the day students from the hotel and restaurant division assume the operation of the hotel, has been set for Friday, February 25.

Alumni Now Open To New Members

Students interested in joining the college Alumni Association here who have attended the college for one or more semesters are asked to see Joseph Amori, placement director, in his Building 2 office, west campus.

Initial fee for the association is $3, with three annual payments of $3, making a total of $12 for life membership. Annual membership is $2.

IFC Smoker A Wasted Effort Without Boost

By Bev Swope

Tonight's Inter-Fraternity Council Men's Smoker can be a success or just another example of college disinterest. Whether or not the fourth semi-annual stag affair proves profitable and enjoyable depends entirely upon the masculine majority of the college student body.

Two main requirements for the success of any enterprise are: (1) careful and complete preparation of plans and activities; (2) enthusiastic interest on the part of the participants.

Under the leadership of IFC President Phil Gaal, presidents of the nine campus fraternities have spent weeks of effort in carrying out point number one. Refreshments were chosen specially for the bottomless male stomach, and a varied program of entertainment was designed to interest the men. The fraternity group also mailed postcards to all men students notifying them of the smoker. Judging from this brief list of Council activity, the smoker does not lack adequate preparation.

But, and here's the rub, the same cannot be said for student interest. From the approximately 3600 male day students enrolled here, each smoker until now has seen no more than 100 present.

"This seems like a rather poor representation. Have all the men found themselves a cave and crawled away to hibernate for two or more years?

A brief history of the smoker reveals that the affair has been held three times with only relative success each time. The original idea took form in Fall 1953 under Bill Boldenweck, then president of the IFC. At that time almost 100 men students attended, while the following saw 75 present at the affair.

Now again tonight the IFC will welcome old and new men students to acquaint them with the members and activities of the college fraternities. The men will be given a chance to meet under their own terms in comfortable and informal college surroundings. The smoker is held in the student lounge.

Presence at the affair does not mean an obligation to join a fraternity, but it does mean an opportunity to meet and make new friends. The success of tonight's smoker will also fulfill another, larger purpose—much college disinterest will be laid to rest.

The question is will the men meet the challenge by attending? Remember, men, when thinking about your college and the success of its activities, the old army recruiting poster —"We need you!"

CAB Rules On Club Day Participants

A resolution stating that "any officially recognized club on campus that does not have a representative at two out of three meetings of the Club Activities Board here before Club Day on Friday, March 4, will not be allowed to participate in activities of the day," was passed at the CAB meeting last Thursday in Building 2, west campus.

Application forms for club space in the Student Lounge, where booths will be located, are available now at the student bank, on the first floor of the Science Building, during bank hours. The forms must be signed by the club sponsor and club president and can be filed at the bank with the $1 registration fee, Ed Dollard, CAB president, said.

Tentative plans for the traditional Club Carnival dance concluding activities of the day are underway, according to dance chairman Earl Cabrinha, vice-president of the CAB. Leo Maliari's band will supply music.

Vets Reminded To Sign Attendance Certificates

Veterans who are attending the college here under public law 550 are reminded by Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of Veterans Affairs, to sign their certificate of monthly attendance in Room S134 by Thursday, March 3.

These forms are 7-1993. Dunn's office is open before 12 noon and after 1 p.m.

Registration Week Card Sales Net Half Of $10,450 Spring Goal

A goal of 2,090 Associated Student cards, a total of $10,450, has been set for this semester's AS card sales, according to Karin Walker, AS card sales chairman. Half of the total was reached during the first week of sales which began with registration.

A time extension was asked of Student Council, at their meeting on Thursday, for the semi-annual Associated Men Student versus Associated Women Student card sales contest. The deadline was extended to this Friday, February 25.

Last semester's AMS-AWS contest was won by the AMS. This semester the AWS, under the leadership of Tookie Radillo, is pressing the race against Bob Johnson's AMS team.

At the last count in the race, the AMS was again in the lead by a narrow margin, according to Miss Walker.

The final outcome of the card sales contest will not be known nor can any predictions be made, until the last card is counted. One very significant reason is the extension granted by the Student Council for the benefit of the veterans. This semester there are 1,400 veterans attending the college under the GI bill of rights.

Many new students of the college who are not aware of the benefits of the AS card have refrained from purchasing them, according to Miss Walker. Some of the benefits listed by the card sales chairman are west campus parking permits, several dances, which will cost from 75 cents to $2.50 without an AS card but which are free to the holders of the $3.00 bargain cards, and discounts on merchandise from several merchants, including a 2 cent per gallon discount on gasoline. Miss Walker pointed out that the savings which may be obtained through the AS card are virtually uncountable.

Two discounts have been added to the list which appears on the reverse side of the AS card since they were printed, Miss Walker said. The new merchants, she announced, are Leos' Avenue Restaurant, 1612 Ocean Avenue, which will give a special rate to the holder of an AS card, and The Campus Fountain, 1425 Ocean Avenue, which will give 20 per cent off to the AS card owner.

The cards may be purchased at the bank, Room 188, Science Building, in the Associated Student office, located in Building 2, west campus, and from the AMS-AWS sellers on campus.

Rally Scheduled For Friday College Hour

An entertainment rally will be held during college hour on Friday in the auditorium on the west campus. Rally Commissioner Glenn Allen announced last week. Entertainment will be provided by student performers.

Following is the college hour schedule for this semester: March 4—CAB day; March 11—baseball rally; March 18—no college hour, midterm; March 25—track rally; April 15—benefit rally; April 22—club meetings; April 29—club meetings; May 6—midterms, no college hour; May 13—club meetings; May 20—election rally; May 27—entertainment rally; June 3—double college hour, soph-prof. game; June 10—pre-finals week, no college hour; June 17—finals, no college hour.

This Is My Railroad will be the first film shown in the college hour film series, which begins on the March 4 college hour.

H&R Students Manage St. Francis On March 4

Fourth semester students from the hotel and restaurant division will take over the management of the St. Francis Hotel on Hotel Day, Friday, March 4.

With the cooperation of the St. Francis, the H&R division is holding Hotel Day for the fourth year. The purpose of the event is to acquaint each of the participants with the hotel job in which he is specializing here at the college.

Several students from the journalism and photography departments will also participate in the management of the hotel publicity department along with the H&R students who will have charge of every function of the hotel for the day.

Guardsman Marks Two Decades From Emanon To Eminence In College Newspaper Ranks

By Deane Wylie

The Guardsman celebrates itself this semester and next, as the college commemorates its twentieth anniversary. From the time ceremonies establishing the college were held in the summer of 1935 The Guardsman has been the official publication of the Associated Students.

Tagged "Emanon" in the first two issues (see at left) the paper shortly received its present name through a vote of the students by ballots published in the initial issues.

Prior to 1940 The Guardsman was published from Galileo High School, where afternoon college classes were held. At that time students were distributed in as many as 23 locations about San Francisco. University of California Extension offices on Powell Street, Mission High School and the downtown P. G. & E. building housed other units of the college.

As enrollment steadily increased it was realized that a permanent location had to be selected for San Francisco Junior College, as it was then called, and from a dozen sites that included acreage in the Sunset, Marina and Golden Gate Heights districts, the City Board of Education finally settled on the 38 acres of Balboa Park that are now the east campus.

When the Science Building was completed in June of 1940 The Guardsman moved its editorial offices from Galileo to the newly-erected building and a first floor office.

In 1945 the college acquired facilities that had been used to house women who were training for service in the WAVES, and the 19 buildings west of Phelan Avenue became the west campus area. In one of several moves, the paper moved down the hill to Building 12 and an office next to the Ramporium.

Larger editorial offices were soon needed, and staff members again moved their headquarters, this time to a spacious office in Building 4. It was in this last location that The Guardsman stayed until last June, when the west campus was for the most part abandoned and classes concentrated on the hill. Present editorial offices are on the third floor of the Science Building.

Except for one unsuccessful attempt to publish the paper completely on the campus, The Guardsman has always been printed by commercial printers and typographers in the downtown area. Mechanical work is done by Shanly Typographers, located on Second street.

Before and after the World War II period the paper appeared twice weekly, on Tuesday and Friday. Enrollment dropped with the Korean War in 1950, and production costs forced return to the weekly publication.

Semi-Annual IFC Smoker Tonight; All Men Invited

For the fourth consecutive semester the Inter-Fraternity Council will hold its semi-annual men's smoker in Building 2 tonight at 8 p.m. The smoker is held to acquaint all men students with the activities and members of the nine college fraternities.

All men students of the college are invited to the smoker, and the IFC hopes for a very large turnout, according to Phil Gaal, IFC president.

Scheduled on the smoker's entertainment ticket are movies of highlights of the 49ers' past season and a tentative personal appearance of Ollie Matson, former Rami All-American football star, and Bob St. Clair.

Scheduled speakers at the event will be Edwin C. Browne, dean of men here, Jack Brady, coordinator of student welfare, and Joseph A. Amori, placement director here. Coffee and doughnuts will be served as refreshments at the smoker.

At least two members each from the nine campus fraternities will be present at the smoker to acquaint students with their fraternities.

PHIL GAAL, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, welcomes men students tonight at the IFC men's smoker in the student lounge.

Enrollment Here Grows To 6,040; Men Outnumber Women 3 To 1

Total enrollment of the college as of February 16 was 6,040 according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here. The overall ratio of men to women is 4 to 1 with that ratio being broken down to 3 to 1 during the day. Students attending classes during the evening number 1,206 with the men still outnumbering the women 7 to 4, according to Miss Learnard.

In comparison with last semester the enrollment took a sharp incline under the GI bill of rights. This shows an increase of 191 veterans over the previous semester which had a total of 869 veterans in attendance.

The office of Veteran Affairs stated that there are 21 veterans in attendance at the college under the state bill of rights which provides $1,000 for education after the Federal GI bill of rights expires. Allotments of $40 per month are made under the state bill of rights, according to the office of Veteran Affairs.

At the present time there are several women veterans in attendance at the college under the GI bill of rights. They are enrolled in courses ranging from general to semi-professional courses.

The present semester, the spring of 1954, a total of 4,880 students were enrolled in classes here at the college, Miss Learnard pointed out.

Night enrollment at the college this semester has also risen to a total of 1,206. This is an increase of 206 students attending courses here at night over the previous semester which had 1,000 in attendance during the evening sessions.

There has also been an increase of veterans attending the college in proportion to the general increase in enrollment. At the last count by the office of Veteran Affairs there were 1,063 veterans attending the college

Active AS Membership Makes College Stay More Profitable

TO THE MANY hundreds of new students entering City College for the first time this semester, and to those returning for another fling, college life poses many problems, just as it does for college and university students all over the country. Many ask themselves the question, "Is it worth it?"

Even at City College, with all of its advantages, everyone still has his own problems, both general and personal. Everything from where to get the money to fix the car to where do I stand with the draft to who to take to the dance Saturday night is a problem, and the more personal worries add even more to the overall problem.

Is the education that City College can offer you worth the trouble? The answer is certainly obvious to all of us, or we wouldn't be here. The good old days when a high school diploma marked a man as a virtual scholar are over, and a college education is a must in almost any field. Furthermore, the friends and experiences that one meets in college are a life-long aid and comfort that cannot be measured in practical values.

Thus a college education, here at City College or anywhere, is worthwhile, but only inasmuch as the student makes it so. One only gets out of college life what he puts into it, and to realize the full benefits of this experience one must put his wholehearted interest into it.

This is, as suspected, leading into an urge to become a member of the Associated Students. The practical benefits have been related again and again, and of course they are worthwhile and may even help solve some of those monetary problems that we all face. But even deeper than that is the interest in the college and in its activities that is mirrored in Associated Student membership and can be achieved only by active participation in the Associated Students.

The answers to each student's individual problems can be worked out only by the individual, his friends and his counsellors. But the answer to the question of "is it worth the trouble?" can be answered in one word—Yes. To make it even more worthwhile, we urge every student here to join the Associated Students and by doing so gain the utmost from college life.

Prince Of Players

Recent Cinemascope Production Is 20th Century Hollywood Milestone

(The Management of the Fox Theater of San Francisco invited Don Osborne, The Spectator of last semester, who has left the college, to a special showing of the Fox production, Prince of Players. The showing occurred too late for review in the last issue of The Guardsman for Fall, 1954. Following is Osborne's review of Prince of Players.)

By Don Osborne

Hollywood has, for the past few years, been primarily concerned with photographic and sound effects, forgetting one very important ingredient to any movie — acting.

In a recent 20th Century Fox Cinemascope production, Prince of Players, they have succeeded in combining both sound and photographic effects into a superb movie that also includes good actors and actresses.

The story itself is somewhat loose and concerns the lives of one of America's two great acting families, the Booths. Our generation is probably much better acquainted with the other great family, the Barrymores, and have only a hazy recollection of the Booths as being somewhat connected with the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. The Booths, however, were a very precocious acting family and as good if not better than the Barrymores.

Richard Burton plays the lead, taking the part of Edwin Booth. His father, Julius Caesar Booth, played by Raymond Massey, is the boy's idol and though the family intentions are for John Wilkes, Edwin's brother, (played by John Derek) to be the great actor of his generation and follow in his father's footsteps, Edwin soon steals the show.

Possessing some of his father's genius for the stage and some of his weaknesses also, Edwin began his career touring mining camps enchanting the rough and illiterate miners with his portrayals of Shakespearian characters.

Soon he toured the East Coast to win international acclaim and received a contract to play in London. His portrayal of Hamlet in that city was so great that he was commissioned to do it alone for six weeks.

John Wilkes, who was touring the South, felt dwarfed by the acclaim Edwin was receiving and channeled his energy into political directions. Frustrated by his position as second best to his brother he joined a band of revolutionaries and just as Edwin's career was reaching its peak of success, John Wilkes infamously murdered the President of the United States, Abraham Lincoln.

Alarmed and embittered by this cold-blooded murder, the American people picketed theaters and denounced the field of drama as being a breeding ground for sin and corruption. Edwin himself predicted that through his brother's action the American Stage would be set back almost a hundred years. His prediction came true.

Sprinkled with many famous Shakespearian scenes, the movie revolves about the role of Edwin, and Richard Burton does a magnificent job of portraying this role. He plays King Lear, Hamlet and Richard with almost as much feeling, gusto, and talent as Edwin Booth himself might have done.

Hollywood, with its stereophonic sound and its cinerama photography, has truly reached a milestone in drama. This is a movie that shouldn't be missed and will always be remembered by anyone who appreciates really good acting.

The Spectator

By Bob Chrisman

JUAN BELMONTE, Killer of Bulls, is an autobiography in which one of the greatest bullfighters who ever lived candidly describes a brilliant triumph of man's spirit over his flesh.

The triumph of mankind is the ability of man's spirit to rise above his environment and defy pain, hatred, poverty, and sorrow. When the individual transcends these challenges, he justifies his existence, which is the desire of every human being.

The men who are superior to their physical circumstances are fountainheads of inspiration and leadership for their fellow men. What music critic does not honor Beethoven, Wagner, Tchaikovsky, and other musicians who have mastered grief and misfortune through their spirit? Or what lover of literature does not appreciate Milton's triumph over his blindness, or John Keats, who rose above a fatal illness and personal tragedies to become a great English poet?

This ability of man to vindicate his existence is not limited to art alone, for it is found in religious, business, government, athletics—in short, any form of human endeavor.

Bullfighting is one of the most colorful vehicles for the triumph of man—it is a pre-meditated situation in which the crux of human existence is enacted—the matador must win, or he shall perish. Through the unsophisticated, frank description of his career, its sorrows and its joys, Belmonte proves, as he states in his book, that "bullfighting is a spiritual and not a physical exercise."

Belmonte, who grew up in poverty in the streets of Seville, was always a thin sickly man with little physical strength. His very style of bullfighting was to conserve all motion and lure the bull to him, a style based on his body's limitations.

As a young man, who would venture at night to the pastures of the nearby ranchers and practice bullfighting with their stock, which was both dangerous and illegal, resulting twice in near death for Belmonte.

During one period of his career, he was weakened by anaemia to such an extent that he would spend the days between bullfights in bed. In spite of medical advice, he continued to fight bulls, although "any wound I received might produce a fatal hemorrhage."

It is little wonder, then, that this great bullfighter was idolized by the people of his time. The bullfight, is symbolism in which the bull represents man's Fate, his Destiny. If the bullfighter is to triumph, he must slay the bull, and symbolically overcome sorrow, grief, and the miseries of human existence.

The bullfighter's only weapons against a 1500 pound bull are a small piece of cloth, a sword, and courage, so that the triumph of the matador is primarily spiritual, and not physical. The victories of Belmonte were highly spiritual victories, crippled as he was physically, and symbolize the spirit of mankind conquering his environment, and thereby justifying his existence.

Before the invention of friction matches in 1834, the only match in use was a slender splint which was ignited by drawing it quickly through a double fold of sandpaper.

Undaunted Randi Reaches H&R

6,000 Mile Trek Ends On West Campus As Randi Solheim Arrives With Aid Of College Instructors

Six thousand miles of land and sea stood between a 19-year-old Norwegian student and training in her career; but with influential friends in the United States and an interested uncle in Norway, Randi Solheim arrived in America in June 1954 from her home in Aalesund, Norway, on a student visa and enrolled in the Hotel and Restaurant department here last September.

According to Dean of Men here, Edwin C. Browne, Miss Solheim heard of the courses in hotel management offered here through his sister who was traveling in Europe last summer. Miss Solheim obtained her visa, and since a sponsor was necessary to make the student entry acceptable to this government, Robin Dunn, a faculty member of the college, was willing to serve as her legal sponsor.

Speaking five different languages fluently, Swedish, Danish, Norwegian, French and English, Miss Solheim is carrying a full 16½ units in the Hotel and Restaurant department and also works after classes are over.

Before leaving Norway, she arranged with the local newspaper in Aalesund to have three articles on her impression of American life and people published.

Throughout Norway, she said, there is a Midsummer Night festival occurring on June 23 which is somewhat like a spring celebration here. For months children gather wood for, a bonfire contest where they stay up all night keeping their fires burning. A flaming boat cruises in the water and there is dancing throughout the countryside.

During World War II, Aalesund was named "Little London" because of its seacoast location, and was the keynote in Norwegian underground operations.

Upon completion of her two year course of study here in the H & R department, Miss Solheim plans to gain experience in her field and learn more about American life by working for a year, for which she will have to obtain a trainee visa.

Spring Drills Out For Big 8

Although many of the nation's universities and colleges are beginning spring football practice, the Rams will have to wait until next fall before they get a chance to limber up. Big Eight Conference teams are prohibited from having spring practice by league ruling.

Although there will be no practice until next fall, Head Coach Grover Klemmer thinks the Rams will field a team comparable to last year's. Last season's team won seven, lost one, and tied one. The only defeat was a heartbreaking 14-12 decision to Santa Rosa.

The "T" formation will again be employed by Coach Klemmer. This is one of the few details that are certain. Asked what he thought of the team in general, Klemmer said, "It's hard to tell at present. I expect about 30 men from last year's squad to return."

The 1955 version of the Rams should be "stronger than we have been in a long time," he added. The 1955 Rams will have a tough time matching last year's record.

If some of the new men come through with performances like those of some of last year's mainliners who were the key to the Rams' success, like Jerry James, Willie Hudson, Gus Bagatelos, and Les Barros, the team should have a good season.

One Door Moves Male Heats; Two Doors Provide Quick Exit

"The doors swing in,
And the doors swing out,
Where some pass in,
And others flunk out."

Doors at the college are a fit topic for sober psychological consideration. What male heart, for instance, would fail to be moved at the sight of a young lady trying to open the front door of the Science Building against a strong west wind?

This is an obvious gambit, designed to raise the ego of the male population of the campus. As such, it is sorely needed.

More vicious is the unknown intruder who opens classroom doors, peers inside, and then departs without revealing himself. This practice, common on the third floor of the Science Building, is a frequent cause of hysteria among instructors and students.

Perhaps the greatest mystery on campus is why certain rooms on the second floor of Cloud Hall were favored with two doors. These doors were so placed by compassionate contractors that a student, waking from sound slumbers to find he had slept into the next period, might be able to effect an escape with less embarrassment.

It is respectfully suggested to the Board of Education that all rooms be fitted with two doors. Thus the wise could be separated from the foolish by hopelessly confusing the latter during registration week. Examinations and term papers could then be dispensed with, to be exhibited in museums or college showcases to scare future students.

The tragic flaw of this idea would be the truly hopeless plight of those eliminated. Picture several hundred souls wandering around the halls with glassy eyes, frantically rolling everything from ball-bearings to bits of cellophane, accosting passers-by with "What's English 1A?" Or peering into classrooms?

As a step in evolution the Two Door Idea is not to be discounted. Who knows, in time we may evolve to a classless school. By Clark Smith.

A Horse, Of Course

Smoky Feeds In Sam's Ole Green

By Dolores Stoffers

In emerald fields where Sammy the Ram once dwelt and fed on tender blades of succulent grass, there now abides a new and more sizeable tenant. His name is Smoky.

He is a horse, of course and has a big job ahead of him, as he feels the college is greatly in need of a representative again. As Smoky explains it, it is a well known fact in the animal world that in colleges throughout the country, student bodies subconsciously depend on animals, mascots, if you like, to guide them as a whole through times of need and represent their ideals.

Since Sammy's demise, he says, something vital has been lacking in the college's spirit. As he roams about Sammy's old haunts, he is constantly reminded of his old friend and mentally devises plans to carry out Sammy's interrupted mission.

Smoky disclosed a secret desire that has been gnawing at his brain for weeks—to saunter up to the sloping hills in front of the Science Building and partake of the grass there which is of the highest quality. Invading the courtyard behind the Science Building is among his wildest dreams, but he insists that someday he will tread upon the cement squares and nibble at the sumptuous golden leaves of shrubbery.

However, in the meantime, he is content to dine on the low-grade greenery, interspersed with weeds of the west campus.

In his daily routine, Smoky grazes leisurely behind the cafeteria, moving slowly southward so that he may catch the 10 o'clock sun when he is working on the pasture behind the fountain. With this routine, he is able to observe the actions of the students and thus discover what he must do to fulfill his duty to them.

As the day draws to a close, he wanders back to his stall on the north pasture, mulling over in his mind the day's events and finding himself wiser for them.

Smoky describes himself as a handsome steed with flowing mane, shiny chestnut coat and soleful, brown eyes. He bears the manner of being—and is—extremely intelligent, despite the fact that he has never opened a book.

He will soon wander off to his haven in Novato, looking back with pride on service well done for his long gone friend, Sammy.

Rams Stop WCC For 7th Straight

Ramblings

By Bob Chrisman

A BASKETBALL court's dimensions are such that it places a premium on tall men. Basketball hoops are placed 10 feet above the floor, and the advantage is to the tall player, both in rebounding and scoring.

If a coach is to produce a winning team, he must have tall personnel—in fact, big time college centers are dwarfed if they are not over 6'4".

This brings us to literal "giants," men who approach and surpass the seven foot mark. There is a school of thought existing which holds that it is unfair to recruit a "giant" player, in that he is capitalizing on his size, not any athletic skill or aptitude, and turns the game into a circus.

There are tall men who possess athletic ability, such as Bill Russell of USF, Kenny Sears of Santa Clara, and Bob McKeen of UC. Of course, there is also an abundance of giants who are crude, unpolished players relying on their height to make up for lack of skill.

It is ridiculous to pass any rules limiting the size of a basketball player, for a talented athlete should not be barred from competition because of physical dimensions he cannot help.

Talent will be served, viz., the 5'11" Ron Tomsic of Stanford, who broke the Pacific Coast Conference scoring record for a single game, or Johnny O'Brien, high-scoring University of Seattle guard two years ago.

Athletics is a competitive field, and competition cannot be geared to the mediocre. Whether or not basketball can survive the test of its merit supplied by the big man will be determined by time.

Basketball is a synthetic game invented by James Naismith at the turn of the century—it has not evolved gradually, like baseball and football. If it has any intrinsic worth as a game, it will survive the test of the "giant." There seems no reason to believe that it won't.

Improved College Nine Opens Season

A warmup encounter with Washington High tomorrow will embark the City College diamond squad upon a long schedule of 28 games which the players and Coach Bill Fischer hope will meet with success.

It's a long haul from February 24 to May 14, but the lure of the state baseball playoffs from May 17-28 makes it well worth the effort.

First sacker Rich Bandelini, pitcher Jim Hatchel, catcher-outfielder Bob Mannini, shortstop Dave Negrebron, and hurler John Palli are the veterans Fischer claims will be "fighting for their jobs" this season.

Catching for the Rams will be more than adequate with Ken Dito (St. Ignatius) and Jim Poppin (Balboa), the outstanding bidders for the receiving chores.

Pitching is responsible for 50 per cent of a baseball team's success in most cases, and the performances of newcomers Sam Chicos, Steve Gallagher, Larry Nissin and Ray Warman, plus Hatchel and Pulli, will largely determine the success of this year's team.

Talented infielders have shown well in practice thus far, with Jim Candler (Lincoln), Jim Doherty (Mission), Ed Kraft (St. Ignatius), and Bob Zucca (Mission and Cal Poly) leading the way.

Slated for heavy outfield duty are Don DeSuville (Riordan), Jerry Green, Stan Johnson (Galileo), and Jim Nelson (Oakland). Johnson is the jack-of-all-trades for the squad, and performs with equal skill in the outfield, at first base, or on the mound.

Klemmer Squad Grows

City College has a new member of its coaching family with the addition of Carol Klemmer, newly born daughter of Ram football coach Grover Klemmer and his wife, Elaine.

Carol, born February 9, weighs seven pounds five ounces and according to Klemmer, is just about the cutest thing there is.

Story Of The Game Of The Year

Hillsman Leads Profs To Annual 'Unofficial' Win Over Sophs, 19-16

By Mike Berger

Once again the highlight of the last college hour of the semester was that struggle to end all court struggles, the Soph - Prof game. As usual, the aging instructors reached back for a little "extry" to prove that their youth still returns at least once a semester, and in doing so once again thwarted the bid of the Sophomores by the highly "unofficial" count of 19-16, a high scoring affair as this tilt goes.

Despite the faculty win, one of the determined Sophs was the standout of the game. "Crazy Trunks" Bagatelos completely befuddled everyone but the opposition by intercepting a pass, madly dribbling the length of the court, and missing an easy jump shot, while unhindered by Ralph "Get-'em" Hillsman, who was supposedly guarding the speedy Bagatelos.

The reason why Hillsman wasn't guarding Bagatelos was easily found when a look down court revealed that he had actually gotten hold of the ball in the Prof's backcourt, and had taken a shot at his own basket. A follow-up shot by "Stretch" Faber also missed, and so the story of the year literally went by the boards.

Hillsman led the potent Prof offense, which rolled up 12 points by half-time without any effort whatsoever. The hustling basketball coach scored only once, but proved quite effective with his aggressive floor play.

Pigskin mentor Grover Klemmer paced the scoring parade for the Profs with a total of six markers. Klemmer clearly showed the Paul Brown influence, as his steady passing and flashy speed dazzled the onlookers more than once. Soccer coach Roy Diederichsen was another standout in the well deserved victory, and was effective in the scoring column with five points. Don Jensen, a counselor, gave an excellent account of himself in the game by skillful use of agility and football prowess.

Don Baroni, high scoring man for the Sophs with three field goals for six points; Jerry Stack, Al Kingston, Phil Gaal and Jim Thomas were also prominent in the sterling Sophomore defense, which held the score down for at least the first half.

The game bore a marked resemblance to football, and surely would have been finished on the grass outside the men's gymnasium had Alex Schwarz gotten into the contest sooner. The husky football coach threatened to steal the whole show with his "spirited" rebounding and skilled foul shooting and making.

Ram Tracksters Prepare For Season Opener; Lack Of Jumpers, Depth In Shot, Sprints Are Weak Spots

Four events mar an otherwise well-rounded 1955 edition of the Ram track team. Lack of personnel in the high jump and broad jump events and depth in the sprints and shot put section have plagued Coach Roy Burkhead's attempts to bolster an already talent-studded squad.

There are still many places for enthusiasts on the team, Burkhead has said, and any interested trackster is welcome to try out for the squad.

Thincinds firmly imbedded in the Ram organization include Henry Stroughter, loping the mile and two mile marathons; Jack Egan, flipping the discus; Tal Webb, striding the 880 and 440 distances; and Bill Thorson, who rambles along the 880 pathway.

Others are All-City 440-yard sprint winner of last year, Myron Zimmerman; Dennis Moorhead, who excels in the 440 and 880 paces; and Clay Williams, a field event artist. Medford Todd and Bob Frick will help hold up the two mile and pole vault struggles respectively this season.

Talented Franklin Carroll, who will perform in the shot put and discus events, is the first Alameda High School product ever coached on the college track squad. The highly touted 6'4½" trackman appears to Coach Burkhead to have the spirit and potential that is characteristic of all good sportsmen.

Record breaker Clint Redus leads the pack of freshmen standouts this year. In his high school days the lanky spiker turned hurdle records into shambles and did well in the short dashes. Hurdlers John Apperson and Will Pinkston are also good prospects for the coming campaign.

Rams Meet Lowell In Tennis Opener

Ram netmen will launch the tennis season when they challenge a strong Lowell squad at Golden Gate Park at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Thus far, the college's team is composed of eight members: returning veterans Alan Matsumoto, Don Wing, Bob Chrisman, Sam Yamoto, and newcomers Les Jacobson, Ed Wong, Greg Miller and Wayne Bertleson.

Boxers Compete Friday In Far Western Bouts

Winners of the intramural boxing competition will combine with varsity boxers to form the City College boxing team which will go to the Far Western Frosh-Junior College Boxing Tournament in San Jose this Friday, February 25.

The team, led by 147 lbs. varsity boxer Ken Turner, will perform in seven weight divisions in the tournament. The boxers with their respective weight categories, who will participate under the direction of Coach Roy Diederichsen are Mike Huffman (132), Roscoe Jones (139), Tony McFadden (156), Roger Nunez (147), Al Scialanea (varsity 160), Reuban Tavernier (125) and Turner.

Golfers Brush Up For Big 8 Season

With just eight days to go before the regular season opens, Coach Grover Klemmer's golf team is meeting twice a week in a group to brush up on their putts and long drives.

As of now, the 12 men on the ladder are James Carlisle, Lee Champagne, Rich Derry, Mike Evanis, Bob Fontes, Gary Greenberg, Ron Green, Doug Heidorn, Rich Kramer, Ed McClinton and Dave Watkins. Derry, Heidorn and Evanis are the only three returning veterans.

The league games, with home matches to be played at Harding Golf course, are as follows:

March 3—WCC Here
March 25—Santa Rosa There
April 1—Oakland There
April 15—Sacramento Here
April 29—San Mateo There
May 6—Modesto Here
May 13-14—Conf. Tournament
May 16—State Tournament

Comets, San Mateo Fall As Cagers Fight To Stay In Race; Four Other Big 8 Foes Beaten

By Bob Chrisman

Two crucial victories in the twilight of the Big Eight Conference kept the Ram basketballers in contention for the Big Eight crown as they walloped San Mateo, 71-56 on February 8, and upset league-leading West Contra Costa 61-55 February 15 at the college's gymnasium.

Prior to their win over San Mateo, the Rams had suffered two losses, one to the Comets at Richmond, 65-60 and the other to the Stockton Mustangs, 66-60.

Center Theopolis Dunn shackled 6'8" giant Jack Allain with a fine defensive game, holding him to 17 points for the entire route, and capitalizing on the mammoth center's defensive weaknesses to tally 19 points and lead the college quintet in scoring.

Coach Ralph Hillsman took advantage of San Mateo's shifting man-to-man defense to lure Allain from the post, thereby giving the Rams backboard control with Walker and Davis towering over the Bulldogs and hitting for 14 and 13 points, respectively.

In the Angelo Maestri Benefit contest with West Contra Costa, the college eagers' rebounding control was the keynote in the first half, after which the Hillsman quintet had a 26-23 lead. Forward Davis held the Comet's shooting star, Clyde Hardeman, to 7 points, while Walker and Dunn limited Joe Dorsey and J. D. Bands, top Comet rebounders, to a total of 14 points.

Norman King replaced Davis in the second half, since Davis had four fouls in the first canto, and sparkled on rebounding, setting up several fast breaks with heads-up passing to Dunn and guard Sam Gellepes, who led the Ram attack from outside the key, scoring 11 points.

Other league contests saw the Rams defeating Oakland, 58-41; Modesto, 74-56; Santa Rosa, 63-51, and Sacramento, 81-70, in easy victories sparked by the Big Three of Davis, Walker and Dunn, who dominated the backboards and the Ram scoring.

Hoopsters Invade Oakland Tonight For League Tilt

A three week stretch drive for Big Eight Conference honors by the Ram basketball squad will be climaxed tonight when the college's hoopsters invade Oakland for a league tilt, and Friday night, when the Rams host Modesto's Pirates at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Sparked by the awakening of sleeping giant Theopolis Dunn, the college's basketball squad has clicked to drop San Mateo into fourth place, and then trounced West Contra Costa last week to stay in contention for Big Eight honors.

In the first half of the Big Eight's double round-robin competition, the Rams lost to San Mateo and West Contra Costa, although they defeated Oakland and Modesto easily.

Oakland's lack of height and the abundance of altitude with Dave Davis, 6'4½", Ike Walker, 6'4½", and Dunn, 6'5½", the "Big Three" of the college hoopsters in scoring as well, make the Blues underdogs in this final contest between the two squads this season.

The Hillsman - coached squad will attempt to shackle Ray Sansom and Jerry Schell, the high scoring guards for the Pirates. Like Oakland, Modesto has a dearth of height, and set up conservative patterns, featuring much ball handling and passing in an effort to spring one of their guards for a drive-in or a jump shot from around the key.

Both games are crucials for the college's basketball fortunes; if they are to have an outside chance for the Big Eight Conference championship, they must win both games. At the same time that the Rams play Modesto in their final game of the season, West Contra Costa and Stockton will meet at West Contra Costa in a game which will determine the Big Eight Conference champions.

Hom, Atkins Beat Size Barrier

By Bob Jones

Although basketball is generally regarded as a tall man's sport, there comes along every once in a while a small man with big talent. The Rams are fortunate enough to have two such "little" men on their squad.

Doug Hom and Ed Atkins are the two casabans who have gained a reputation as outstanding offensive and defensive players in the league.

Hom, 5'7", was a first string guard on a starting lineup that averages 6'4", but as Hom himself pointed out, size is no difference, as David spotted Goliath about seven feet when he slew him.

A graduate of Galileo High, Hom played 130 pound and varsity ball, making All-City in both divisions. This year, while playing in 14 games, Hom has hit the hoops for a total of 131 points, connecting for 36 field goals and 25 free throws for a shooting percentage of 65 per cent. A twisted ankle, suffered early in the season, has reduced his point production in recent games.

Easy Ed Atkins, another guard who can play either post, is a 5'9" hoopster who Coach Ralph Hillsman regards as one of the finest ball-players on his squad, disregarding the height disadvantage. Atkins as well as Hom is in his first year of ball, after graduating from Berkeley High School. Heading for UCLA after his junior college days are over, Atkins has knocked the netting so far this year for 59 field goals and 43 charities for a total of 161 points.

Summing up the characteristics of these two men, Hillsman says, "They have the quickest reactions and the fastest pair of legs on the team."

FLEET ED ATKINS is captured here by Guardsman photographer John Sherry as he scores a layup in a recent Ram game.

Little Theater Semester Opens With Comedy

The Silver Whistle, a comedy in three acts by Robert E. McEnroe, will officially open the Little Theater for this semester Thursday, March 10, for a three-night run, Michael J. Griffin, director, stated last week.

Heading the cast are Frank Anderson as Oliver T. Erwenter, Edwina Moquin as Miss Tripp and Warren Smith as Reverend Watson. Featured are Pete Garrett, Joe Bavaresco, Barbara Raffaelli, Anne Canellos, Gail Clark, Antoinette Mannina, Bob Tucker, Ron Boltz, Jim Nichols, Warren Jacklevich and Don Ball.

Tickets for the play go on sale this week. General admission is $1.00 with admission free to Associated Student members. Tickets may be purchased at the bank or from any member of the cast and crew who will be wearing silver whistles to identify themselves. A booth will be set up by the silver pole and in the Science Building snack bar to accommodate as many students as possible.

The comedy depicts the change which occurs in a home for the aged when a tramp decides to assume the identity of a 77-year-old man. The affect his arrival has on the inmates of the home gives way to many comical and amusing situations.

Producer is Jerry Mainard; assistant producer is Gail Clark; assistant director is Anne Canellos; stage manager is Rich Barulich; publicity, Antoinette Mannina; promotion, Don Ball; lighting, Roy Maffei, and costumes Carole Waugh.

80 Oregon Summer Job Openings; Deadline Soon

Students interested in resort work at Crater Lake, Oregon, should file applications at the placement office in Building 2 by Tuesday, March 1, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here. There will also be resort openings within California.

Bus driver, front deskman, bellhop and camp counsellor are among 80 jobs listed by Amori. Each job pays according to a uniform scale, with experience weighing heavily in wage standards.

Lucky Photo Won Auto Show Title For College Queen Jann Palmer; Theme Girl Plans Law Career

A snapshot sent while she was on a between-semesters ski trip proved a fortunate one for Jann Palmer, Theme Girl of the 1955 San Francisco Auto Show, for it garnered her an invitation to come and be judged among 106 other Northern California high school and college coeds for the title.

Jann, a popular City College coed who was well known before "Theme Girl" title honors (she was Homecoming Queen last semester and before that had been one-half of the cutest couple at last Fall's Freshman Ball) was introduced to the Auto Show judges first through a photo sent by her parents when competition was announced.

JANN PALMER

On February 2 a board of judges headed by bandleader and TV star Del Courtney, and including executives from the Powers modeling schools, theater-chain head Howard Mann and several newspaper reporters, chose Jann as the prettiest and most talented of the many coeds that paraded across the Orpheum Theater stage.

"They kept narrowing the number of girls down," the winsome brunette said, "until there were just a few left. Finally I looked around and there were only two other girls next to me on the stage. I still didn't think I had a chance until Mr. Courtney got up and declared that they had a winner to announce. Oooh . . . clutch!"

Her duties at the Auto Show, which closed last Sunday after a record run in the Civic Auditorium, were those of official show hostess. She appeared each day at two stage shows along with comedy stars Abbott and Costello and juggler Rudy Horn of TV fame.

In her second semester at City College, Jann, who's 21, has lived in San Francisco only one year. A native of Detroit and graduate of Woodrow Wilson High School in Washington, D. C., she has attended schools throughout the country. Her home is now at the San Francisco Naval Shipyard at Hunters Point, where she lives with her mother and stepfather, a Naval Commander.

Asked about her plans after graduation, Jann replied she was usually hesitant about telling of her career goals, because "people always laugh." Now in pre-legal studies, she hopes someday to become a corporation lawyer. Any amusement listeners have found in that probably stems from traditional ideas about beauty queen I.Q.'s, but here they are fooled, for serious brown eyes and an intelligent demeanor indicate no whimsical nature.

Sweetheart Ball Saturday

Drake Hotel Site For Chinese Club Semi-Formal

Following a tradition here the Chinese Club will present the annual Sweetheart Ball Saturday, February 26 at 9 p.m. in the Empire Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. with music provided by Jimmy Blass and his orchestra.

Admission to the affair is $3.50 per couple and appropriate dress is semi-formal with cocktail dresses for the women and suits for the men.

Highlight of the ball will be the crowning of a sweetheart at midnight by Barbara Fong, queen of the 1954 Sweetheart Ball. In addition to the crowning of the queen each contestant will be presented with a trophy.

The seven women competing for the honor are Pauline Chan, Patricia Fong, Lily Lee, Sylvia Lim, Carolyn Ng, Alice Sung and Penny Young. The sweetheart is elected on the basis of campus vote, door vote and the sale of tickets.

Proceeds from the ticket sales will compose two scholarships to be awarded to two qualified Chinese students.

Hi O Hawaii Club Plans Luau Fete

A Luau, an Hawaiian feast, is tentatively planned to be held Saturday, April 23, at the college auditorium as the first spring activity of the Hi O Hawaii Club. This event will be sponsored by the International Relations Club, Darius Chung, president of the Hawaii Club announced last week.

There will be presentations of Hula dances and Hawaiian music by members of the Hawaiian Club and a few professional entertainers. The traditional Hawaiian foods will be prepared and served by members of the Hawaiian Club and the International Relations Club.

Tickets will go on sale Tuesday, March 1, and can be purchased for $2.50 at sales stands on campus.

Two New Positions Added To Presidential Cabinet Roster

Two new executive positions have been added and approved by the Student Council for the spring semester in addition to the six elected positions and eleven appointed officers, Associated Student President Al Kingston said last week. Following is a list of the Spring 1955 cabinet members and a brief description of their duties:

Associated Student President — Al Kingston, chairman of Student Council and head of the Cabinet.

Associated Student Vice-President —Marion Cheader, assistant to the AS President and Social Committee chairman.

Associated Men Student President —Bob Johnson, in charge of all AMS affairs.

Associated Women Student President—Tookie Radillo, in charge of all AWS business.

Freshman Class President—Marilyn Sicotte, representative of her class.

Secretary to the AS—Betty Peterson, in charge of council minutes and general assistant to the AS President.

Rally Commissioner — Glen Allen, in charge of all rallies and head of the Rally committee.

Card Sales Chairman—Karin Walker, in charge of AS card sales and discounts to card holders.

Finance Committee Chairman — Bill Cirimele, in charge of all activity finances and budgets coming from AS funds.

Information Service Chairman — Paul Ortiz, responsible for all material from the California Junior College Student Government Conference of which he is an officer.

Alumni Liaison Officer — Dean Woods, liaison between the college Alumni Association and the Associated Students.

Parliamentarian — Al Niemi, sees that Roberts Rules of Order are followed at council meetings.

Chief of Campus Police and Campus Liaison Officer to the AS—Don Baker, acts as a liaison between the AS and the Campus Police.

Men's Athletic Commissioner—Don Baroni, represents AS men's athletics.

Women's Athletic Commissioner—Barbara Jones, represents AS women's athletics.

Publicity Committee Chairman — Antoinette Mannina, head of all external and internal AS publicity.

Publications Board Chairman — Gail Allan Moss, responsible for all printed matter on campus.

Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer (new position)—Bill Boldenweck, represents the AS at Junior Chamber of Commerce meetings giving the college better public relations with San Francisco as a whole.

Awards Commissioner (new position) — Arthur Handy, determines student awards according to the constitution.

Election Commissioner—not chosen as yet, is head of all AS elections.

Who can deny we need not see eye to eye in order to stand shoulder to shoulder?

Student Council Okays AMS-AWS Appointments

In their regular meetings last week the Associated Student Council approved the appointments made by the Presidents of the Associated Women Students, Associated Men Students, Sophomore class and Freshman class.

Approved as Sophomore Vice-President was Lois Mantel. Mel Patsel was confirmed as Freshman Vice-President. AWS appointees receiving the council's assent were Dorothy Trezise, vice-president; Amy Lee, treasurer; Miss Mantel, secretary; and Judy Wills, corresponding secretary.

Ray La Fonteau, treasurer, and Marcia Herst, secretary, were confirmed as AMS officers.

The council also confirmed Arthur Handy in the newly established post of Award Commissioner.

Short Drags were sea chanties sung by sailors when their duties were light.

Campus Clubs Elect Officers And Plan Activities For Semester

By Joan Anderson

STARTING off the new semester, campus organizations are planning their social events.

Finishing off last semester the Masonic Club had a dinner dance January 30 in the Capri Room at A. Sabella's on Fisherman's Wharf. New officers are Rich Klein, president; Bobbie Toland, women's vice-president; Bob Seeker, men's vice-president; Lois Fishman, recording secretary; Wayne McFadden, treasurer; Lisa Horwitz and Barbara Poister, corresponding secretaries.

A new organization for contracting and architectural drafting students, the Building Club, is making its appearance on campus this semester. Sponsor is faculty member George Hutchinson, and meetings are held each college hour in C103.

The first activity of the Canterbury Club was a turkey dinner at the St. Francis' Guild Hall on February 17. The club joined the Canterbury Clubs of Stanford and California Universities on a snow trip last weekend.

Sisters of Phi Beta Rho were honored recently with a dinner given for them by the pledges at the home of Pat Baroni. New officers are President, Mary Daley; Vice-President, Betty Peterson; Treasurer, Dorothy Trezise; Corresponding Secretary, Bobbie Leboff; Recording Secretary, Lois Mantel; Historian, Janice Willis and Sergeant-at-Arms, Dottie Phleger.

First rushing affair of Theta Tau sorority was held last night at the home of Loretta Crawford.

Delta Psi will hold their first affair Sunday in the Monterey Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. New officers are President, Connie Panagakis; Vice-President, Joyce Galligani; Corresponding Secretary, Marilyn Euler; Recording Secretary, Nancy Gommeringer; Treasurer, Carol Bean; Assistant Treasurer, Diane Culbertson; Historian, Carol Fisher; Pledge Mistress, Pat Sullivan; Sergeant-at-Arms, Randi Solheim, and CAB Representative, Pat Smith.

Alpha Lambda Chi will also hold their first affair Sunday at Laurel Hall. The sorority went bowling on Valentine's Day with Tau Chi Sigma.

New members will be inducted into the Block SF Society at the next club meeting college hour. The organization now has 53 members.

The Corinthian Room of the Hotel Whitcomb will be the site of Zeta Chi's first affair Sunday.

The Newman Club held its first meeting February 17 at which the newly elected officers were installed. Mike Meyer is President; Jean Vachon, Vice-President; Larry Murphy, Treasurer; Bernie Gotelli, Recording Secretary; Carolyn Barbera, Corresponding Secretary; and Jack McDonough, Sergeant-at-Arms. Membership is expected to reach 200. Meetings are held on the first and third Thursdays of each month at St. Emydius Parish Hall.

2 New Awards Offered Chinese Students Here

Two Square and Circle Club awards for Chinese students at the college are being offered this semester for the first time, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Established by the Square and Circle Club, a group of Chinese businesswomen, the award is available to one man and one woman student of Chinese descent, each of whom will receive $125 and an Associated Student card.

To become eligible, a student must have completed 15 units of work with at least a "C" average. Judgment of the applications will be based on the student's scholarship, need and service to the college, Dean Golding said.

Letters of application from women students are due in Dean Golding's office not later than Monday, February 28, and men students may make applications to the office of Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, not later than February 28.

Letters of application for the Theta Tau and Florence Louis scholarships will be accepted until February 28 also, Dean Golding stated. This is an extension of five days over the February 23 deadline previously designated.

bership in the Associated Collegiate Press, the paper has been rated All-American twenty-one times, a record equalled by few two year colleges. Each semester at the ACP's University of Minnesota headquarters a group of professional newsmen acting as judges analyze issues of college newspapers entered in competition from over the country.

Papers are rated as All-American, First Class, Second Class, Third Class or Fourth Class. Last semester only four other papers in The Guardsman's class received the top rating.

Most of the hundreds of student journalists who have passed through Guardsman editorial and reportorial positions since the paper's founding have been guided by popular and respected adviser Joan Nourse.

When eventually the Fine Arts Building is erected north of the Science Building, The Guardsman will make its permanent headquarters there.

Women's Day Gives Fair Sex New Powers

By Bev Swope

This semester, for the first time in the history of the college, women students will have the last word in student affairs. Yes, on Thursday, May 19, the college inaugurates its first Women's Day.

At this time unwilling males will temporarily relax their strangle-hold on certain student government positions for one whole day to allow their feared foe, the female, to take over. And it is our prejudiced opinion that the women will "do themselves proud."

Associated Student President Al Kingston will be obliged to turn over his official gavel to AS Vice President Marion Cheader. His control over Student Council plus his other executive powers will become hers. Student Council will also be a women's monopoly. Only women council members will have a vote on all measures coming before the body.

That's not all. If plans are approved, Women's Day will be followed by a Sadie Hawkins type dance Friday night, May 20. Profits from the Associated Women Student sponsored dance would go to a charity.

These plans for Women's Day still lack the approval of the Finance Committee, because of the extra expense of the AWS dance. So, women, if you want to reign for an entire day on campus, here is a suggestion. Buy an AS card now and insure your official domination. Who knows, we may never get another chance.

Compliments to AWS President Tookie Radillo for her forward-looking plans. Someday when Madame President installs herself in the White House, the college will be able to boast it gave her her foundation in government.

To prove that the men can't get along without an efficient woman, the Associated Men Students have chosen Marcia Herst their secretary. The group probably broke tradition in making this appointment, but as usual, a woman was found indispensable to the organization.

Women's Day will also present a challenge to the men. If the fair sex does too good a job, especially in stimulating college spirit, the men could find themselves out on their ears. But then again, who can stop progress?

Greenhouse Grows—Smaller, That Is

They're still growing down at the greenhouse—growing smaller, Harry Nelson, instructor in Floriculture here, said recently.

The State is taking a third of the greenhouse space and the freeway going in by the railroad tracks will decrease space further.

Plans for the latter part of April are to enter the California Spring Garden Show at Oakland, L. F. Teuscher, president of the Floriculture Society, said.

The garden show is handled exclusively by students and prize money from the show is used for the society.

Six hundred square feet of tropical and house plants are being put in now.

Norman Holcolm is the Floriculture Society treasurer. Ronald Halberson is vice-president.

Rail Film Postponed Until Next Week

Because of a scheduling difficulty, This Is My Railroad, first film in the college hour film series, will be shown Friday, March 11, instead of this Friday as originally announced.

The film will be lent to the college's audio-visual department by the Southern Pacific Railroad, Mrs. Madison Devlin, acting audio-visual aids instructor here, said last week.

The motion pictures are presented in the audio-visual department's second floor projection rooms in Cloud Hall. There is no admission charge, and all interested persons are invited to attend.

New Site Planned For Cal Bookstore

The building at 965 Ocean Avenue which houses the California Book Store, is to be moved intact across the street, according to Bob Winegardner, the store's manager.

New location for the store will be the northeast corner of Ocean and Phelan.

Clubs Greet Prospective Members In Semi-Annual Club Day This Friday

Carnival Dance In Auditorium Tops Off Events

Club Carnival, traditional theme of the dance terminating Club Day activities on campus, will be held in the college auditorium Friday night, March 4, Earl Cabrinha, Club Day chairman here, said last week.

Lasting from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, the dance is a sport affair and features the music of Leo Mallari and his five piece band.

Admission to members of the Associated Students is free and non-members pay 50 cents. Tickets for non-members may be bought at the door. Refreshments will be served at the entrance to the auditorium.

CAB members working on refreshment, decorations and publicity are Marion Cheader, Bill Chisum, Ed Emig, Ed Harer, John Pulley and Gloria Temkin. Other members of the Club Activities Board, Cabrinha said, will work on these committees.

Officers working on committees are Ed Dollard, president; Cabrinha, vice-president; Rosalee Thurman, secretary; and Donna Olsen, corresponding secretary.

AL KINGSTON, Associated Student president, predicts changes and improvements in student government this semester.

Kingston Predicts Changes, Renews Clean-Up Campaign

By Emil Portale

Successfully beginning to mesh the gears of a newly elected student government, Al Kingston, Associated Student president here, last week released a preview of the many changes and improvements planned for student administration and public relations in the present semester.

Renewing last year's extensive campaign toward a clean and fresh looking campus, Kingston along with his fellow officers has arranged for a committee, headed by Al Niemi, to follow up this work. Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, has suggested incorporating fraternity and sorority pledges in this crusade against uncleanliness as part of Hell Week activities.

In the process of planning for various constitutional revisions and continuing efficiency in student administration, three new offices were created. The positions of Campus Affairs Coordinator, with Walt Frehe, Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer, with Bill Boldenweck, and Awards Commissioner with Arthur Handy, will serve to strengthen policies within and outside the college, Kingston said.

Improved methods in conjunction with student-faculty relations and alumni connections are planned. Public relations promotion, already a distinct part of college policy, will be strengthened, and a discussion conference among Big Eight colleges is hoped to be formed to smooth rough spots in the local government and to observe how other institutions run activities to the betterment of this college's organizations, the president said.

With the wheels of this semester's government slowly starting to roll, Kingston expressed his hopes for a unified and spirited college year.

March 11 Deadline On Graduation Petitions

Petitions to graduate in June must be filed in the office of the Registrar, Room 126 of the Science Building, no later than next Friday, March 11, Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar, announced yesterday.

Students who fail to meet the deadline must wait until the office staff has time to check their petitions, which may mean having to wait an extra year before receiving their diplomas.

Graduation requirements are a C average in all courses, 60 units of credit, with a C average in the last 12 units.

Booths To Be Set Up In Student Lounge; IFC Serves Refreshments; CAB Head Expects 1500 Visitors

Purposes and activities of clubs on campus will be shown off to new and old students alike in the semi-annual Club Day this Friday, March 4, sponsored by the Club Activities Board, in the student lounge. Final deadline for handing in applications for club space is tomorrow, March 3.

Along the walls and down the center of the lounge, booths will be installed by members of clubs with trophies, group colors, insignias and scrapbooks displayed. A signup list for potential members will be available. Officers of each group will be in the booths to answer any questions concerning activities of their organizations. Clubs, fraternities, sororities and other campus organizations will construct booths on Friday morning.

Activities of the day will begin at 10:40 a.m., start of college hour, and will continue throughout the day, with the Club Carnival dance terminating activities from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the college auditorium.

Designed to show off the activities, events and purposes of each duly recognized club on campus, the CAB hopes to give every student here a chance to participate in one or more of the variety of activities offered at the college. A signup list for students interested in joining one of the groups will be provided at each booth.

Refreshments of cookies and punch will be served by members of the Inter-Fraternity Council, headed by President Phil Gaal.

Of the 6000 students enrolled here this semester, Ed Dollard, CAB president, expects at least 1500 to visit the booths throughout the day.

Clubs scheduled for representation during Friday's activities and their CAB representatives follow: Canterbury Club, William Chisum; Alpha Phi Omega, Ernest Emig; Beta Tau, Bill Middleton; Lambda Phi, Joseph O'Shea; Newman Club; Hui O Hawaii, Earl Cabrinha; Tau Chi Sigma, Al Niemi; International Relations Club; Pick and Hammer; Alpha Sigma Delta; Theta Tau, Marcia Norstrum; Chinese Students Club, Barbara Fong; Zeta Chi; Phi Beta Rho, Mary Daly; Forum, Ed Brush; Hillel Foundation. These clubs are listed in the order that their petitions for space were handed in.

Committee members working on the activities of Club Day and Club Carnival are as follows: Marion Cheader, John Pulley, Ed Harer, Gloria Temkin, Emig, Chisum, Ray Dangerfield, Al Argo, Marilyn Williamson, Wayne McFadden and Miss Fong.

To date 17 membership petitions in CAB have been turned in. Sponsor of the board, Robin Dunn, reminded students that there are still 29 clubs on campus with petitions outstanding.

857 More Cards Must Be Sold To Meet 2,090 Goal

With only 857 Associated Student cards left to be sold before the semester goal of 2,090 cards is reached, the AS has increased its treasury by a total of $6,165 from the sale of AS cards alone, Karin Walker, card sales chairman, said last Thursday.

It is expected that card sales will pick up considerably after this week when the campus police start issuing parking tags to autos parked on the west campus without parking permits, which can be issued only to members of the AS.

As the total enrollment of the college climbed to 6,040 over the previous total of 5,650, the goal of card sales did not climb accordingly, Miss Walker's figures show.

If all goes well in AS card sales, the $17,000 estimated income goal will be reached and the many organizations of the college will receive the necessary funds to function efficiently, Bill Cirimele, chairman of the Finance Committee said last week.

Major parts of the estimated income for the present semester include $8,000 from AS card sales, $7,000 from book store revenue, and various smaller amounts from drama, the handbook, Forum Magazine, the Mari Gras and sports.

The official budget, Cirimele said, will be ready for release in a few weeks.

Students Prominent At Retail Meeting

At the Fifth Annual Convention of the Future Retailers of California held in Santa Monica recently, students of the college's merchandising department played prominent parts.

Leo Manantan held the office of vice-president of the northern area, Lisa Horwitz was one of the finalists in the "Miss Retailing" contest and Susie Metaxas was chairman of the nomination and election committee for the convention.

Campus Police Force Numbers 22

Twenty-two officers comprise the complete roster of this semester's Campus Police force here, according to Chief of Campus Police Don Baker.

The full roster is as follows: Baker, chief and Campus Liaison officer to the Associated Students; Fred Nevill, assistant chief of police; Bill Anderson, John Burns, James Cherny, Bob Dagitz, Richard Dunn, Lee Hargus, Harold Hockett, Pete Nelson, Rudy Hoffman, Philip Moore, James Nelson, Ken Orzell, George Plese, Ralph Pierotti, Bill Scott, Duncan Snell, Michael Sugrue, Bill Traner, W. J. Whitman and Don Wilson.

Sworn in by the Chief of Police of San Francisco, these men are responsible for directing traffic on campus, keeping order at all AS activities, and giving citations to motorists for violation of traffic laws.

Student parking on campus is restricted to the west campus parking lot, by permit only, and to areas around the men's and women's gymnasiums. Faculty parking zones are located behind Cloud Hall by special permit.

Students parking without permit in the west campus parking lot or in the faculty parking area will be subject to a $2 fine, Baker said, payable to the San Francisco City Hall, not the college.

Certain other areas on campus are restricted for parking under special circumstances. They are as follows: red zones indicate no stopping; yellow, stopping only for loading or unloading passengers; white zone, loading and unloading of passengers also; green, 10 minute parking only. Fines for violation of these regulations are $5 for red zone, double parking, yellow zone, improper parking on a grade and parking by a fire hydrant, $2 for parking in a white zone, green zone and parking on state, municipal or county property.

Critics Overemphasize Dangers Of Sports, Forget Importance

IN RECENT YEARS there seems to have been a growing outcry against the dangers of the harder physical contact sports as being detrimental to today's American youth, especially on the grammar and high school level. Too many people are forgetting what, fortunately, most educators realize—that sports are an integral part of school life.

The cynics points to two so-called bad points in the athletic programs of schools and colleges now—the number of injuries, mostly in football, and the infamous "over-emphasis," again primarily in football and basketball.

On each point, the anti-athletic clan does have some arguing points. Too many injuries occur in scholastic athletics, and there undoubtedly is over-emphasis in some places.

The injury problem, and it is a problem, can be traced to negligence, not the activity itself. Even one injury in ten years is one too many, but they can, for the most part, be avoided. A good thorough physical checkup and the proper equipment can reduce injuries to a minimum. Too many players in any sport, especially below the college level, are allowed to participate with only a token physical examination, one that is no safeguard in hard contact or even games that require a steady output of energy.

The recent death of a high school football player in the peninsula area is a good example. The youngster suddenly dropped over dead after only a light, non-contact workout. If he had been properly examined before being allowed to play, his untimely death might have been avoided. The necessary padding, footwear and other equipment is just as necessary to prevent injuries, whether the sport is football or table tennis.

As for the remainder of the injuries, and some are bound to occur, the cynic must be reminded of one thing. Injuries will occur, no matter what a young man is doing. Anyone can be injured fatally while crossing the street or walking down stairs, and some sort of hurt may happen in any form of youthful exercise. Growing youngsters, and grown young men, must have some sort of exercise, and fear of injury should be no reason to forbid it.

The old devil "over-emphasis" is, of course, mainly on the college level. True, there are cases of a coach or, worse, a whole college spending entirely too much time, money and effort in the sports line. Again, one case is too many, and there is no excuse for the Midwest university, for example, that held its graduation exercises in the morning and in a very abbreviated form in order to free the gymnasium for a nationally-televised afternoon basketball game.

Cases like that are the exception rather than the rule. To be perfectly blunt, most large colleges and universities depend on the major sports for a large part of their income, and it is rarely that a losing team can support every financial burden that is expected of it. However, over-emphasis is not nearly as bad as the cynics make it out to be, and spectator sports, as well as participant games, are a necessary part of college living.

City College is fortunate to be relatively free of both of these "evils." The able coaching staff of the college is perhaps the best safeguard against unnecessary injuries, and the entire nature and policy of the college, its administration and its physical education instructors make over-emphasis impossible.

As we have stated before, athletics are an important and necessary part of college life. City College has fine coaches, fine facilities and everything else needed to make the college's teams, both intercollegiate and intra-mural, a success. The only thing that could stand improvement is the participation.

The college has an athletic record to be proud of. It is up to the students here to continue their admirable support, both as active participants and faithful rooters.

The Spectator — Ban Of Youth Horror Comics Defeats Purpose

By Bob Chrisman

A RECENT RULING passed by the Los Angeles Board of Supervisors prohibits the sale of comic books of horror and violence to children, punishable by a fine or imprisonment.

This statute exists on the premise that such comic books wield unhealthy effects upon a child's mind, for to read and enjoy any fiction work, the reader must suspend his own convictions and sense of realism to envelope himself in the work. It is alleged that, by exposing a child's mind to comics of horror and violence, the child will be permanently influenced by these comics and develop a warped character and personality.

This is faulty reasoning. The assumption that comics of horror and crime result in an abnormal outlook by their youth audience makes these publications a cause. These comics are not causes—an unnatural, morbid interest in them is a manifestation of a state which already exists. If the child cannot differentiate between the fantasy of comic books and the reality of his own world, then he is at fault and not the comics.

Children who are unnaturally fascinated by these comics will find other outlets if these are denied. Merely denying such comics as an effect does not stop the cause. Unbalanced, neurotic children will give evidence of such characteristics in any phase of their environment from killing cockroaches to murdering people. These comics may define more prominently a characteristic already within the child, but they do not develop or artificially cultivate an abnormal trait.

If to deny the effect were to deny the cause, then a state, theoretically, could limit its number of suicide deaths by forbidding the sale of firearms or by closing its bridges.

In addition, no line can be drawn between what is to be condemned and what is to be sanctioned. If comics of horror and violence are to be tabooed for children, then movies of crime should also be condemned. These movies would not be limited to the Edward G. Robinson-George Raft type of crime film. Hopalong Cassidy and Roy Rogers would also have their films condemned, for they deal with violence, and these heroes kill men, which is not a fitting ideal for growing children, according to this line of reasoning.

Not only must movies be condemned, but violent radio and television programs must be prohibited as well, if children are to be kept from such influences which may warp their characters. It would also be advisable, by the same principle, to forbid the sale of toy guns, planes, and tanks to children, for they are weapons of violence.

Children read comic books because they stimulate their imagination, not because of the intellectual contact. Those comics which deal with horror and violence are read because they provide a particular situation of interest to an imaginative child. Crime and horror are interesting segments of human life.

Indeed, if adults were not interested in crime and violence, axe slaying would not be front page material in newspapers today. By the same token, there would be no market for science fiction and detective stories.

The Los Angeles ruling is "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing," offering no aid whatsoever to the problem of criminally-inclined or neurotic children.

Vandals Raid, Plunder H&R

By Dolores Stoffers

A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the west campus cafeteria, et cetera, and the kids who keep the eateries running were cleaning up in jig-time.

It seems that the daily routine of the Hotel and Restaurant staff was somewhat upset last Wednesday when they entered the establishment, ready to perform their usual tasks, and a sight of stark horror greeted them. From the eggs plus shell covering the walls and the milk minus cartons covering the floors came the surmise that culprits had been afoot.

When it had been discovered that the refrigerators, deep freezers, and filing cabinets had been broken into and their contents strewn about, the existence of culprits became a surety. Police were called in.

Our nation's first, who could not tell a lie and was the very word honesty itself, must have flipped his powdered wig during that infamous act, for it was performed during the four-day weekend celebrating his birthday.

As a result of their plunder, the vandals have caused the H&R staff great anxiety and emotional instability.

Latest reports say they are still trying to recover from the sight of a kicked-in door, broken locks and syrup gumming up the works in the kitchen.

Perhaps the greatest psychological blow came to the students who, blurry-eyed, tried to perform their daily morning ritual of extracting cigarettes from the cafeteria's machine. The dirty culprits got those too.

The Beachcomber — Vigorous Activity, Nutritious Meals Features Of Typical 'Comber Sabbath

By Bill Boldenweck

WARM Sunday. 10:00 a.m. Awaken, (partially, using only one eye), to contemplate cheery robin perched on window sill singing his merry song. Nearest object at hand (bottle of athlete's foot medicine) becomes unguided missile headed in general direction of cheery robin. Cheery robin departs abruptly, as does awakened condition.

11:43 a.m. Reawaken with not a sign of cheery robin, but lonesome feeling alleviated by presence of two rather grumpy looking caterpillars in same place. Venture forth to face the day.

11:47 a.m. Cheery shower ((ECH!)) good for constitution but hard on the nerves, followed by heroic expedition to front steps to retrieve newspaper dellvered by courageous but mercenary little wretch in the wee hours of the morn.

11:49 a.m. Retire to living room to review current weekly news and affairs of the day. Look into world affairs (will Terry and Spruce get away from those nasty reds?), Pan-American activities (Gordo), child psychology (Peanuts, Dennis), and the crime picture (will Rughead escape with the $200,000?). Knowledge of current problems complete, retire to kitchen for nourishing, appetizing breakfast, warm cottage cheese, cold mashed potatoes, salami and two pieces halvah.

12:37 p.m. Because heavy activity after meals hard on the digestion, repair to bedchamber for short nap.

3:05 p.m. Arise refreshed and well digested to realize that it's too nice a day to spend inside. Contemplate the spiritual values of working with the soil. (digging, hoeing, pulling weeds). To the back yard to study extent of work that needs doing. Sudden desire to explore contemporary literature. Settle down in lawn chair with good book (MAD Reader). Read two pages, warmth of sun leads to drowsiness which leads to sleep.

6:54 p.m. Awaken shivering and soggy in fog of density much like marshmallow syrup. Decide to return to house. Long labors have resulted in condition of hunger. To kitchen for refreshing supper of iced minestrone and fried bologna sandwiches on toast, with two more pieces halvah.

7:38 p.m. To study Plato. Read carefully pages two and three. Carefully re-read pages two and three. And again. And again. Leave Plato with Cephalus and Socrates still discussing and decide to study modern American drama instead.

7:59 p.m. Turn on TV.

8:00 p.m. Modern American drama begins (Martin and Lewis).

9:00 p.m. Exhausted by study of drama, and faced by heavy schedule of classes on the morrow, decide to rest up so as to be able to face it. And so (as the saying goes) to bed.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

USUAL enrollment snafus plagued students and administrators alike in the college's February 2 registration week. Honors for the most misled without a doubt go to a busy blonde who on the first day of classes rushed into a room ten minutes late, spotted a vaeant chair and in a clear-cut example of heads-up thinking sat down on a history book, a slide-rule and two peanut-butter sandwiches.

After making amends she rested peacefully for ten minutes before realizing that not only was she in the wrong class but in the wrong building. At least she managed to exit laughing.

IN ADDITION to being Macy's top recruiter, Placement Director Joe Amori gets requests for student help that range from the routine to the slightly off-beat, for instance:

Last week a distinguished male voice made a telephone call for a student to work part time, barely. Walking a pedigreed German Shepherd dog, which he described as "four months of age, past the baby stage and now in adolescence."

The job was to pay $1 an hour for an hour's daily tour around the Lake Merced apartments. But first the student had to be interviewed—by the dog, to make sure that their "personalities would blend."

College Finishes Third In Big Eight

Track, Baseball Squads Prepare For Conference

Horsehiders Have Practice Tilts Before Loop Play

With the practice sessions drawing to a close, and the first league game with Stockton College in the valley city on March 26 nearing, the baseball club of Bill Fischer has embarked upon a 13 game practice schedule.

At this writing, two contests with Washington High and the California Junior Varsity have been played, but scores were not available at press time.

In many respects, the practice schedule is every bit as important as the outcome of the Big Eight race, for it is here in the practice games that the starting lineups are formulated. For this reason, no definite starting lineup of any kind can be announced because the only way that Fischer can decide on his starting nine is to see all the players against college competition.

Another important function of the practice schedule is to get the team going as a playing unit, and in doing so help the players to get off to a fast start when the league action does start.

One of Fischer's main problems during the 13 game grind before the March 26 league opener will be the organization of an effective pitching staff. Lack of hurling talent last season was one reason why the Rams won only one league game.

Fielding, another weakness in the ball club in 1954, seems to have been solved in 1955. Jim Candler, smooth fielding second baseman from Lincoln High School, is not only dependable with the glove, but effective on occasion with the bat as well. The potential other half of the keystone combo, shortstop Ed Kraft from St. Ignatius, has proved his worth in high school competition as he made the San Francisco All-City baseball team last season. Here again, however, the practice slate of games asserts itself, for these men and all the others must prove themselves in the faster Big Eight Conference before the chances of the club can be determined.

Home games this season are scheduled to be played at the Big Rec diamonds in Golden Gate Park, but no definite plans in this regard have been made.

The following is the practice and league schedules as they now stand:

March	3	East Contra Costa there
	5	USF JV's there
	7	Stanford JV's there
	10	SF State there
	12	Santa Clara Frosh there
	15	Cal JV's there

The famous Dean brothers, Dizzy and Paul, accounted for all four of the St. Louis Cardinal's victories in the 1934 World Series against the Detroit Tigers. Dizzy was also charged with a loss.

Tracksters Face Oakland In Big 8 Test March 18

Priming for their first Big Eight encounter on March 18, Coach Roy Burkhead's trackmen have been toeing the gravel lanes for the past month while anticipating a rugged cinder season.

Four triangular meets are regularly scheduled for the college foot squad in the coming year. Oakland and the California Frosh will pit their strength against the local thinclads in the March 18 clash. For all intents and purposes the affair should be a tough one in all respects. The Cal Frosh sports, among others, the great Monty Upshaw, a name which sends shivers down the trunks of track spines. Upshaw ran away with all the hurdle honors in last year's state prep meet, and leaped 25-4 in the broad jump. Experts rate Oakland as no less than fourth best in Big Eight competition for this Spring.

Santa Rosa, Sacramento and Modesto claim to be the big guns in the conference shooting match. Last year's league champion and state second placer, Modesto, is reported to be weaker but no less dangerous. Santa Rosa and Sacramento have been blessed with valuable high school material and returning veterans which in no way harm their chances for successful seasons.

Ram spikers boast outstanding material in almost all events but are at a loss as far as depth is concerned. The high jump, broad jump, shot put and sprint sections are badly lacking in manpower.

Last year, the college pebble steppers sagged to the eleventh notch in state competition as compared to 1953's sixth place and 1952's third place efforts.

Discounting 1954, the college track squad has exclusive rights on the high point men in two out of the last three state meets. Vin Parish in 1953 brought the Rams top individual scoring honors by capturing the 100 and 220-yard dashes; and Harry Wade in 1952 wrapped up the 220 sprint and low hurdles for the high point trophy.

Intramural Play Signup Starts

Clubs, organizations and individuals who wish to be represented in the college's intramural program should sign up as soon as possible at the intramural office in the men's gymnasium, Intramural director Alex Schwarz announced recently.

Teams are set up during physical education hours and the classes compete within themselves for class championship. Winner or winners of each class play one another to determine the champions of the college.

Medals are given for winners in each class, and for college winners in each sport a belt buckle is awarded.

Schwarz said that this semester he is going to set up a basketball league in which members of the basketball team will act as coaches. Sign-up sheets will be posted in the men's gymnasium and from these lists coaches will draft members to set up about 15 teams. Each team will play a round-robin tournament.

WAA Plays Santa Rosa

Basketball competition will be featured in the Women's Athletic Association sport day this Saturday, March 5, with Santa Rosa Junior College, Lene Johnson, WAA sponsor announced last week.

Ram Boxers Face USF Ringsters Tomorrow Night

Boxing once more holds the spotlight in the sports scheme of things tomorrow night as the ringsters of Coach Diederichsen take on the University of San Francisco boxing team at the St. Ignatius High School gymnasium, Stanyan and Balboa Streets, at 8 p.m.

The matches, which are to be held under the auspices of U.S.F., are not only the first of the year for the Hilltoppers, but the first boxing competition in eight years for the boxing team at the San Francisco college.

Both U.S.F. and City College competed in the recent Far Western Freshman Boxing Tournament at San Jose, but tomorrow night will mark the first dual meeting for the squads.

Two performers on the team here who have distinguished themselves in competition are Ken Turner, a 147 pounder, and Ted Floyd, who boxes in the 175 pound division. Floyd boxed for Diederichsen three years ago, and did well then before entering military service, from whence he rejoins the team this year. Turner made himself known last year in the varsity competition, and returns this season to further prove himself.

The following is a list of the scheduled matches:

At 137 lbs.: Roscoe Jones vs. Jack Roddy of USF; 147 lbs.: Ken Turner or Roger Nunez vs. Joe Bondanza, USF; 155 lbs.: Al Soialnea vs. Vince De Bello of USF; 160 lbs.: Tony McFadden vs. Bill O'Brien of USF; 175 lbs.: Ron Caroompas vs. Ron Pifnotte of USF; and Ted Floyd vs. Ken Colon of USF.

Ram Netmen Host San Mateo Friday

City college's tennis squad will clash with College of San Mateo at Golden Gate Park this Friday at 2:30 in the first Big Eight Conference match of the season.

At the present, the Ram ladder lists Les Jacobson, first; Alan Matsumoto, second; Ed Wong, third; Sam Yamoto, fourth, and Wayne Bertleson, fifth.

Several changes will be initiated this tennis season. Modesto Junior College, which has won the Big Seven championship for the last six years, will form two teams of its players. The first team, consisting of their top performers, will compete with four year colleges, and will not vie in Big Eight competition. The second team will represent Modesto in the Big Eight Conference.

City College's squad finished second in the annual Big Seven Conference tournament, a post season tourney, the Rams captured first place.

Stockton Loss Knocks Quintet Out Of Contention For Title; Rams Whip Modesto, Blues

By Bob Chrisman

Guard Len Oswald tanked six points in the last three minutes of play to give the Stockton cagers a 59-55 victory over the City College quintet and mathematically eliminate the Rams from the Big Eight championship on February 18 at Stockton.

This loss anchored the college in third place, and the Rams defeated Oakland 87-46 on February 23 at Oakland and Modesto 68-47 at the college last Friday to culminate Big Eight play with 8 wins and 4 losses.

The crucial Stockton game was a see-saw dogfight in which the Rams pitted their superior rebounding strength in Dave Davis, Ike Walker and Theopolis Dunn against high-scoring guards George Moton, Len Oswald and Jack Cheney.

Despite the benching of top rebounder Ray Silvas with four fouls in the first half, Stockton led 31-26 at half time, having collapsed their defense on the Big Three to limit their effectiveness. Center Lon Ferrario and Moton took up the rebounding slack left by Silvas.

Oswald and Moton accounted for 20 of the 30 points scored by Stockton in the second period. Oswald led both teams in scoring as well, with 23 points, while Dunn was high for the college with 17, followed by Walker and Davis, who notched 13 and 12 points respectively.

Undaunted by the loss of this crucial game, the college quintet took the measure of the Cal Frosh the next night, on February 19 at Berkeley, as they mastered the Cubs zone defense to the tune of 61-45, with Walker the high point man for both teams, scoring 21.

This defeat by the Rams was only the second suffered by the Frosh.

Oakland's height-starved team was never in the scoring picture with the college hoopmen, who led 40-20 by halftime, for their complete lack of height surrendered the backboards to the college, which scored repeatedly on fast breaks.

Again Walker led the college scoring brigade with 23 points, followed by guard Ed Atkins with 13, Davis and Dunn, who had 11 points apiece and Sam Gellepes, with 10 as every member of the starting five hit for double figures in this pointfest.

Modesto fell before the Rams here last Friday, 68-47. Heads up defensive play by the Ralph Hillsman-coached quintet prevented any of the Modestans from scoring in double figures, as the potent rebounding duo of Walker and Dunn hit for 21 and 15 points to pace the Ram scoring attack, augmented by guard Sam Gellepes, who tallied 12.

Block SF Elects Scovil President At First Meeting

With elections of new officers heading the program, the Block SF Society held their first meeting of the semester on February 18.

This year's officers are Kent Scovil, president; Jerry James, vice president; Don Wilson, secretary, and Jim Pfenning, sergeant-at-arms.

Sponsor of the society, Bill Fischer, gave the unofficial total of money brought in from the Angelo Maestri Benefit Basketball game, which was sponsored by the Block SF Society.

Maestri, who recently taught at Marina Jr. High School, became a victim of Polio recently. He was a former Washington High School, St. Mary's and S. F. State star. Although his medical expenses are underwritten by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, his wife and two children have no income.

Fischer said the unofficial total collected for the Maestri fund drive was $175.00, which was made from gate receipts, contributions, and sales of cokes.

Golfers Meet WCC In Big Eight Opener

Coach Grover Klemmer's golf team will try for their first Big Eight win of the season when they have their first outing tomorrow as they face the always dangerous West Contra Costa team at Harding Golf Course.

With five returning veterans in Rich Derry, Mike Evanis, Harlan Haynkawn, Doug Heidorn and Dave Watkins, and a big host of potentials in Lee Champagne, Jim Carlisle, Bob Fones, Gary Greenberg, Ron Green, Rich Kramer and Ed McClinton, the team appears to be a top contender for the round-robin championship they took last year.

Ramblings — Stockton May Start Basketball Tourney

By Emil Portale

RUMOR has it that Stockton may start a basketball tournament next year similar to the traditional cage affair held at Modesto for the past 17 years. Although it is only in the hearsay stage, the feasibility of the tourney is not especially bright, considering the fact that most southern colleges probably couldn't travel the long distance north for two major tournaments. The Stockton event would probably tip off in December, whereas the Modesto games are presently held in January.

• • •

Modesto's Big Eight tournament and state champion golfers have plenty to live up to this year. Back for another try at the Eisenhower sport are Jack Cummings and John McMullin, who form the main threat for a Pirate repeat in the coming season.

• • •

Ram track prospects for the coming cinder stint round themselves around state, city, school and what have you standouts. New additions to the club include a 440 chase expert, Myron Zimmerman; a flashy hurdle skipper, Clint Redus; powerful discus flingers, Jack Egan and Franklin Carroll; and long striding middle distance runners, Dennis Moorhead and Tui Webb.

With all this talent, coupled with many returnees, one would think that the squad was all set for the bruising schedule lying ahead. The truth of the matter is, as of two weeks ago the team had absolutely no high jumpers and only one broad jumper gracing the outfit.

This is a ridiculous situation, for it is no deep dark secret that there are men on campus that could ably fill those yawning vacancies. Coach Burkhead has repeatedly urged any interested spiker to try his wares at the oval sport. Certainly the individual has nothing to lose, but the team might well have plenty to lose otherwise.

• • •

Although the term "cindermen" has, in the course of sports writing, been used merely as a synonym for trackmen, the expression is a reality for spikers on the Santa Barbara College thinclad squad. Their recently completed track oval is reputed to be the best looking on the West Coast, primarily because of its setting and the material used on the lanes, a cinnamon colored, volcanic cinder from the Mojave Desert mountains.

'Operation St. Francis' This Friday As Students Manage Famous Hotel

Fourth Semester Students Take Part In Program

"Operation St. Francis," the Hotel and Restaurant Department's annual Hotel Day event, will take place Friday when 32 H&R fourth semester students from the college take over the management and operation of the St. Francis Hotel.

This fourth successive hotel day, held by invitation from Dan London, the hotel's managing director, will give the students the opportunity to put into use all of the hotel management techniques learned here at the college.

Each student assisting in the operation will carry out some phase of hotel management from the office of managing director, to be held by Marvin Alldaffer, to the handling of the telephone and mail departments. The students will also handle the important kitchen department of the hotel, with Donald Giovannoni acting as chef.

Assisting the H&R students will be students from the college Journalism and Photography departments, who will work in the hotel Publicity Department. Working in the hotel-owned promotion department, the students will photograph and interview members of the hotel staff and their charges.

Fundamental purpose of the event is not only to acquaint students with their chosen vocation but also to give the members of the hotel staff pointers on better hotel operation. In past years, many of the suggestions of the H&R students have been incorporated into the daily routine of the hotel.

Students participating will lunch with their department heads and members of the hotel staff and will tour the hotel from basement to rooftop throughout the day.

Sophomore students participating in the event will be Paul Abee, Antonio Albini, Alldaffer, Leonard Briggs, John Dinkelspiel, Klaus Enders, Juliette Furtado, Bruce Gilmore, Donald Giovannoni, George Greich, Robert Hall, Joseph Herley, Paul Kingery, Alonzo Lisama, Leonard Lucich, Juan Mabor.

William Miller, Isao Motomura, Albert Myhrberg, Antonio Novelo, Barbara Pope, Tevis Smith, William Swank, Tadayasu Tani, Leonard Thorvala, Carl Tretting, Robert Van Liefferingen, Rafael Vega, Rochus Welzeeck, Kim Wilkin, James Wilson and Dean Woods.

Positions to be held by students specializing in respective phases of hotel and restaurant operation will be those of managing director, financial manager, resident manager, assistant manager, front office manager, catering department manager, chef, sous chef, pastry chef, auditor, credit manager, housekeeping department manager, and building superintendent and chief engineer.

Students will also work in the purchasing department, assistant manager stewards department, beverage department, publicity department, telephone department, pastry store, personnel department, Mural Room, Grill Room, room service department, mail department, and fill the offices of banquet captain, checker and Mural Room captain.

Little Theater Expects Heavy Ticket Sales For March 10 Production Of McEnroe Comedy, The Silver Whistle

Because of added interest and enthusiasm shown the Little Theater here, this semester ticket sales are expected to be heavy for The Silver Whistle, which opens Thursday, March 10, for a three night run, Jerry Mainard, producer, stated last week.

Tickets for the three-act comedy by Robert E. McEnroe are currently on sale in the bank, in booths at the Silver Pole and in the Science Building snack bar.

General admission will be $1.00. Members of the Associated Students will be admitted by presentation of their membership cards.

Performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. Since there will be no reserved seats, AS members are advised to arrive early in order to obtain a good seat.

Members of the cast and crew will be wearing Silver Whistles this week in order to identify themselves as ticket sellers.

The play deals with a tramp who assumes the identity of a 77 year old man and decides to take advantage of the benefits of an old people's home. His scheme to make the old people young again provides much merriment throughout the play.

The cast includes Frank Anderson, Edwina Moquin, Warren Smith, Joe Bavaresco, Barbara Raffaelli, Anne Casellos, Antoinette Mannina, Gail Clark, Bob Tucker, Pete Garrett, Ron Boltz, Jim Nichols, Warren Jakelvick and Don Ball.

The challenge of designing an outdoor set was left in the hands of Rich Barulich who produced the realistic set for the play.

Planning and work concerned with the various phases of production are under the management of Mainard, producer; Miss Clark, assistant producer; Miss Canellos, assistant director; Al Allen, stage manager; Miss Mannina, publicity; Ball, promotion; and Carole Waugh, wardrobe mistress.

Business Slower For Campus Bookstore After Registration Week Rush

A semblance of quiet has descended over the student bookstore on campus, The Ramporium, which is located in Building 12 on the west campus, according to Dick Main, manager of the local book shop.

During registration the student book store did its usual booming business on texts and supplies. The store, which is owned by the Associated Students, but under the control of the San Francisco Board of Education, has turned over to the AS, since it started, fundeinting five semesters ago, a total of $42,000 which has been used for AS functions, Main pointed out.

Students were warned by Main last week that in order to sell a text back to the Ramporium it will be necessary to have an official drop card which has been signed by the student's counsellor.

Debate Society Here Is Open To Students

City College's debate team, which is sponsored by Thomas Dutcher, is open to all members of the Associated Students who have both an interest in speech work and will devote time required to prepare for the many debates which are held each semester.

Last year, students debated with University of California, Stanford, participated in the Hearst Oratorical Contest, the Stanford Discussion Conference and the Pi Kappa Delta Tournament at Los Angeles.

Students who are interested in joining the debate team should see Dutcher in his office located in Room 335-B of Cloud Hall.

Guardsman Releases Publication Schedule

Tentative publication schedule and members of the Publications Board were recently announced here by board Chairman Gail Allan Moss.

The Publications Board, appointed by Moss, is Deane Wylie, associate editor of The Guardsman; Bev Swope, managing editor of The Guardsman; Al Kingston, president of the Associated Students; Marion Cheader, vice-president of the AS, and Bill Cirimele AS finance chairman.

Moss announced that tentative publication dates for The Guardsman are March 9, March 16, March 30, April 20, April 27, May 4, May 11, May 18, May 25, June 1 and June 8.

Council Approves Establishing Of New AS Position

Approval was given to several budgets and a newly created committee by the Student Council during the regular meeting last week. The new committee, whose chairman and entire membership are one and the same, is the Campus Affairs Co-ordinator Walt Frehe. Duties of the new position will be to act as a liaison between Al Kingston, Associated Students president, and the committee making up his cabinet. The new position is a temporary one, lasting only for the duration of this semester.

Hesitancy and indecision were reflected by the council's vote on the new committee. The balloting was two for, none against, and eleven abstentions.

Budgets were received with more favor by the council. The following budgets were unanimously approved: Administration, $150; Club Activities Board, $177; Basketball, $400; Dean of Women, $25; and Dean of Men, $25.

Nominations for the vacancy on the Sophomore Council were received by Jim Nichols and Joan Pace.

The Rally Committee reported that they desired buses to transport rooters to the college's out-of-town games. The Publicity Committee asked that they be given at least two and a half weeks' notice of all activities and events requiring publicity. Tookie Radilio, Associated Women Students president, announced that the Jay Vee Shops had agreed to sponsor the AWS fashion show. It was reported by Marilyn Sicotte, Freshman president, that the Frosh Bail was a success, for as well as attracting approximately 200 couples, the dance showed a profit.

Check Signatures Due Noon Friday From Vets

Veterans attending the college under Public Law 550 were reminded by Robin Dunn, in charge of Veteran Affairs here, that Friday, March 4, at noon is the last day for filing their Monthly Certification of Training for the month just completed.

If the Monthly Certification of Training is not filed before noon on the 4th day of each month, Dunn said veterans monthly subsistence checks may be delayed for several weeks.

The law requires veterans to maintain attendance and grades according to the established standards and practices of the college.

Applications For Resort Jobs Due

Students interested in resort work this summer should appiy immediately at the Placement office, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here. Jobs are open in California as well as outside the state's boundaries.

Bus drivers, front deskmen, bellhop, and laundrymen are among resort jobs listed by Amori. Pay ranges from $75 to $450 a month, with room and board usually included.

Men majoring in education, social work and recreational leadership are preferred for work as camp counsellors. Openings are listed in private and public camps. Pay for camp jobs ranges from room and board only to $500 for qualified camp directors.

Part time jobs are extremely scarce at present, Amori said, but full time positions are open for students with accounting, chemical, mechanical engineering and clerical backgrounds. Pay scales range from $300 to $375 a month in the first three named fields.

Clerical workers, with shorthand, typing and IBM skills, can get from $225 to $275 a month. Some part time sales and clerical jobs are open to women.

A few unskilled laboring jobs will be opened by the government this summer. Some government jobs will be open in skilled trades.

Visitor Finds Parking A Puzzle, Smashes Up On West Campus Lot

Justice may be blind, but she'd better sneak a peek now and then, at least that's what Gus Gabriel and George Armstrong, students here, must be thinking by now.

It all began last Thursday, when Julia Grant, who is not a student here, was searching for a parking space on the west campus, while visiting the college in order to pick up a transcript from the registrar.

Turning eastward from the last lane in the west campus parking lot, her car lurched forward into Armstrong's auto, which swung approximately five feet to the right and forward into cars belonging to Gabriel and John Langhans.

The left front fender and door of Armstrong's car were demolished, and the car's front axle broken. Gabriel's car received damage to the trunk and right rear fender, and Langhan's was left unharmed. Miss Grant's car received a small dent in the right front fender.

No injuries were incurred by the five passengers in Miss Grant's car, and the other autos involved were unoccupied at the time of the accident.

Miss Grant said that she was merely trying to follow the arrows painted on the pavement, when her car slipped partially off the curb, then lurched uncontrollably back over the curb and into Armstrong's car.

Armstrong and Gabriel were unaware of the accident until they spied the gathered crowd from the Science Building.

CAB Day Friday Prompts Review Of Campus Clubs

By Joan Anderson

WITH Club Day being held this Friday, students may be interested in the different clubs and organizations on campus. These clubs will be represented in the student lounge during Friday's college hour with sign-up sheets for those students interested in joining.

In the special interest category there is the Canterbury Club, sponsored by Katerine Pedley; the Chinese Students Club, guided by faculty adviser John Stafford; Collegiate Christian Fellowship, with Howard Schoon as sponsor; the Filipino Club, sponsored by John Fawcett; the Hillel Foundation, sponsored by Michael Zarchin; Horticulture Society with Raymond Peterson as faculty adviser; Latin-American Club, guided by sponsor Benjamin Dryden; the Lutheran Club, with Manfred Mueller as faculty sponsor; International Relations Club, with Joseph Jacobsen as adviser.

Two service societies on campus are Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, sponsored by Don Jensen; and Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity with sponsor Donald Shaw.

The professional groups include Le Cercle Francais, guided by faculty adviser Doris Hernreid; the Drama Club, sponsored by Michael Griffin; the Engineering Society, with Harold Edmison as faculty sponsor; Hotel and Restaurant Society, advised by faculty sponsor Edmund Nielsen; the Merchandising Club for merchandising majors, with Virginia Gohn as sponsor; economics society Sigma Tau Sigma, sponsored by Michael Zarchin; Phi Rho Pi for students interested in debate, with Thomas Dutcher as faculty adviser; Pick and Hammer, campus geology club sponsored by faculty member George Green; the Building Club with George Hutchinson as faculty sponsor.

For those athletically inclined students there is the Block SF Society for men who have won letters in sports, headed by sponsor Bill Fischer and President Kent Scovil; and the Women's Athletic Association, sponsored by Lene Johnson of the women's physical education department, with Barbara Jones as president.

The fraternities on campus include Alpha Phi Epsilon with George Baffico as sponsor; Alpha Sigma Delta, sponsored by Russell Posner with Stan Lee as president; Beta Tau, sponsored by Howard Benninghoff and led by president Phil Gaal; Gamma Phi, sponsored by Fred McFarland and Dan Corsetti as president; Kappa Rho, led by President Dean Woods and sponsored by John Carlson; Lamba Phi, with Robin Dunn as faculty adviser and Walt Frehe, president; Phi Beta Delta, guided by faculty adviser John Ross; Tau Chi Sigma, led by Al Neimi, president, and sponsor Merritt Beckerman.

The seven sororities are Alpha Lambda Chi, with Carolyn Riedeman as sponsor and Joan Rettus, president; Delta Psi, guided by faculty adviser Martha Scott and president Connie Panagakis; Kappa Phi, with Valerie Bertoni as president and Valerie Phillips as adviser; Phi Beta Rho, led by president Mary Daly and faculty adviser Evelyn Kerkhof; Theta Tau with Mary Lou Reidy, president, and Gertrude Norgard, faculty sponsor; Zeta Chi, Ruth Inskipp, sponsor; and Delta Sigma Tau, with Olga Perkins as sponsor.

International Relations Club Installs Officers

The International Relations Club held its first meeting February 18, at which newly elected officers were installed.

Leonidas Koulos, president; Bill Lohmus, vice-president; Maurice Lehmus, treasurer; Henry Athanasiou, Club Activities Board representative; Elena Acosta, corresponding secretary; Claudia Volhontseff, recording secretary; Hilda de Leon, historian, are the new officers for the spring semester.

First activity of the International Relations Club was a picnic to Mt. Tamalpais which was held February 22, with 34 participants.

Little Theater Play Is Farce Of Old Folk's Home

Capacity audiences are expected for the college's Little Theater production of The Silver Whistle, a three-act comedy by Robert E. McEnroe which opens tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the little theater located in the basement of the Science Building.

Performances Friday, March 11, and Saturday, March 12, will have the same curtain time, according to Michael J. Griffin, director of the production.

Admission to The Silver Whistle is free with an Associated Student card. General admission is $1.00. Tickets may be purchased at the bank and at booths by the Silver Pole and in the Science Building snack bar. Silver whistles are being worn by the cast and crew to distinguish them as ticket sellers.

The Silver Whistle depicts the change which occurs in an old people's home when a tramp who has assumed the identity of a 77 year old man decides to make the inmates "twenty-five years younger." The reactions of the six old people are said to give way to many amusing situations.

Heading the cast are Frank Anderson as Oliver T. Erwenter, the tramp; Edwina Moquin as Miss Tripp, superintendent of the old people's home; and Warren Smith as the Reverend Watson, the minister who finally realizes the good of Erwenter's plan.

Featured in the roles of the old people are Joe Bavaresco as Mr. Beebe; Barbara Raffaelli as Mrs. Hansen; Anne Canellos as Miss Hoadley; Antoinette Mannina as Mrs. Sampler; Gail Clark as Mrs. Gross; and Bob Tucker as Mr. Cherry.

A number of characterizations are brought forth in the old people's roles. Among them are an alcoholic, a flirt, a prude and a wisecracker.

In other roles are Pete Garrett as Emmett, Erwenter's comical sidekick; Ron Boltz as the Bishop; Jim Nichols as Father Shay; Warren Jakelvich as Mr. Beach; and Don Ball as Mr. Reddy.

Production staff for The Silver Whistle includes Jerry Mainard, producer; Miss Clark, assistant producer; Roy Maffei, master electrician; John Adams, props; Miss Mannina, publicity; Ball, promotion; Diek Moore, publicity consultant; Rich Barulich, set design; Carole Waugh, wardrobe mistress; Joy Frasier, in charge of the house, and Nancy Medina, ticket management.

Budgeted Time Boon To Studies Of Ambitious

By Bev Swope

BE-PREPARED Week is here. Now, conscientious students have but one week, less three days, to catch up with delinquent class work before midterm exams are upon them.

Have you checked up on your class standing? Are you in the A-1 classification (completely up to date) or are you F-4 (sure to flunk if you continue the same way)? If you fall within the F-4 classification, this is last chance week for those five chapters in history that must be read or the lab work that must be done.

Fortunately, this week is fairly uneventful on campus, except, of course, for the drama production, The Silver Whistle, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday evenings. Although the Little Theater group would appreciate a large-sized crowd at every performance, they do not expect students to attend the production more than once. After all, they want everyone to have a chance to see the play!

For those who plan to stay up until 2 a.m. Sunday evening (with the help of toothpicks and numerous cups of strong coffee), here is a suggestion. As today is Wednesday, exactly four days or 60 waking hours remain in the week for study, minus three hours each day for meals and two hours for the drama production. Here's how to budget your time.

The F-4 individual was undoubtedly very time-conscious on registration day. According to his class schedule, he comes to college at nine in the morning and leaves at 12 noon, while carrying 15½ units of class work. Now follows the suggestion.

If he is exceptionally worried about his midterm grades, he will allow himself one half hour for lunch and utilize the remaining half for a glance at Shakespeare. Now with a full stomach and a soft cushion this sterling example retires to his private boudoir for at least five hours of steady study, until stomach or family tells him it is time for dinner.

After the meal, this ambitious student again returns to the books equipped with a light snack to keep him until bedtime. By 10 o'clock he will undoubtedly fall asleep in complete mental exhaustion.

If this routine is followed faithfully for the remainder of the week, it is guaranteed that all such ambitious F-4 students will pass midterm exams with flying colors.

The above suggestion is recommended only to the persevering. But, here is a suggestion for all. Be prepared before Be-Prepared Week and save unnecessary hibernation!

Graduation Petition Deadline March 11

Students who expect to graduate here this semester must file petitions at the registrar's office in Room 121 of the Science Building by Friday, March 11, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, announced last week.

The office closes at 4:30 p.m., she added.

The first midterm examination period of the semester will commence Monday, March 14, and end Friday, March 18.

Counselling Appointments Available; New Numbering System Installed

Students may now make appointments with their counsellors to plan their fall semester programs, according to Alva McMillan, counselor here. Appointments can be made in the counselling office, S143.

A new numbering system will be instituted this semester, McMillan said. The registration number, which is usually assigned after the student has made his program with his counsellor, will now be assigned when the student makes his appointment. The number will appear on a copy of the student's program sheet which will be forwarded to his counsellor and will indicate the time of the appointment.

If the student fails to keep the appointment, the counsellor will return the numbered program to the counselling office and it will be necessary then for the student to make a new appointment and receive a later registration number.

"The advantage to the student in this arrangement," McMillan noted, "lies in the fact that he receives his number in the order appointments are made rather than by days the appointments are kept. This is a much fairer method for the student."

At the time the student makes his appointment he will receive a white "proposed program" sheet which will indicate the date and hour of the appointment. This sheet, McMillan said, affords the student an opportunity to plan his program independently, so far as possible, before the appointment date. More time can be permitted for discussion of other counselling problems if this sheet is prepared in advance and brought to the appointment, McMillan stated.

AMS Captures Card Sales Crown; Semi-Annual Contest Nets $2510; LeBonville Cops Individual Honors

Twice in the last two semesters the Associated Men Students have captured the semi-annual Associated Men Student vs. Associated Women Student card sales contest. This semester, the second in a row, the men outsold the women in the race which is held during the first three weeks of the semester.

This semester the men sold 290 cards to the women's total of 212. The contest accounted for the sale of a total of 502 cards or $2,510, according to Karin Walker, card sales chairman.

Emery Le Bonville was the high point salesman for the AMS turning in a total of $345, the receipts from the sale of 109 cards. Le Bonville's total bettered the mark set last semester by Abe Virdeh who turned in $315 accounting for 65 AS cards. The mark set by Le Bonville bettered Virdeh's figure by $230 or 46 cards.

Emily Hardy was the winner of the women's individual contest last semester, but the figure on the individual woman selling the most AS cards this semester has not been tabulated.

The goal for this semester's card sales has been set at $10,450, Miss Walker stated. Card sales had reached a total of $6,535 or 1,307 cards of the goal of 2,090 cards last Thursday, she reported.

An additional 74 cards were sold last week accounting for $370, leaving 783 cards to be sold before the goal is reached.

In order that the full program of the AS be carried out, she said that the goal of AS card sales must be reached. The estimated income of the AS is $17,000 this semester, Bill Cirimele, Finance Committee chairman, said.

Additions to the AS treasury are expected from Forum Magazine, drama, Mardi Gras and sports events. Also a total of $7,000 is expected from the Ramporium, campus bookstore, which has been able to turn over a total of $42,000 to the AS since its beginning five years ago, Cirimele stated.

"Realization of student activities can only come about by reaching the goal of AS card sales," Al Kingston, AS president, said.

Benefits from the purchase of the AS cards were listed by Miss Walker and include parking on the west campus, and discounts from 34 merchants including two cents off per gallon of gasoline at four local service stations.

Conlan Attends Denver Conference Saturday

Chicago was the scene of the American Association of Junior Colleges Conference last week with Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction, representing the college.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will attend the American Association of School Administrators in Denver from March 12 to 16.

Dr. Luckmann has been named as the official representative of the Church Peace Union at the anniversary session of the United Nations which will be held in San Francisco on June 20-25. The Church Peace Union is accredited to the UN by the U. S. State Department.

College Hour Rally Friday Will Honor Baseball Team

A baseball rally during college hour this Friday, March 11, will be held behind Cloud Hall for the college's game against the Santa Clara frosh at Santa Clara on Saturday, March 12, Glenn Allen, rally commissioner here, said last week.

Purpose of the rally, he said, is to introduce the baseball team and their coach, Bill Fischer, to students and to promote spirit at all the college's games.

To date there are 13 members of the committee, which are as follows: Allen, Robert Frick, assistant Rally Commissioner; Kay Griffin, secretary; Gloria Temkin, CAB representative; Joan Rettus, council representative; Barbara Gock, Dorothy Goldman, Abe Virdeh, Kirk McBean, Carl Pearson, Myrna Bailey, Mike Pease and Bobbie Elster. Members wear red and white rally hats and attend all games. Among other duties, committee members deliver The Guardsman to the silver pole, library, cafeteria and fountain, student lounge and Ramporium.

Meeting on Monday and Wednesday at 2 p.m., the rally committee is under the sponsorship of Warren White, faculty member here, and is a one unit course called Recreational Leadership G8.

Allen said that the committee needs more members to plan rallies. For the first time since organization of a rally committee, he plans to give out a special award to the outstanding committee member of the semester at a rally committee dinner tentatively planned for the end of the spring semester. All graduating members who have served for two or more semesters will be allowed to keep their hats and all members will receive a certificate at the dinner. Awards will also go to officers of the group.

An exchange rally is being planned now for sometime in April or May with another two-year college to instill spirit at games, with student and professional performers.

On the entertainment committee are Miss Griffin, Miss Rettus and Miss Elster. Publicity members are Frick, Miss Gock, Miss Goldman, Miss Bailey and Pearson.

Mannina Named Winner Of Louis Scholarship

Antoinette Mannina, publicity chairman here, was named the winner of the Florence Louis scholarship at a meeting of the award committee held last week, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced yesterday.

Miss Mannina, in addition to her publicity work, is a member of Zeta Chi sorority and has been an active member in the Drama department. She will appear in their production of The Silver Whistle, to be presented March 10, 11 and 12, in the role of Mrs. Sampler.

She is a Journalism major, now in her second semester, and wants to enter the Public Relations field upon graduation.

This scholarship in the amount of $25 and an Associated Student card was instituted by Miss Louis, an alumna, as a token of appreciation to the college.

Winners of the Square and Circle Chinese scholarships and the Theta Tau award are not yet definite, Dean Golding said.

Today's Young Adults Face Problem Of World Freedom

WITH the problem of military service foremost in the minds of many college students, the events currently taking place in China and Formosa and the resulting problem before the people of the United States takes on a special significance for today's young adults.

If the United States is forced to intervene militarily in the Formosa crisis, there is no apparent reason to doubt that the Selective Service quota, currently at its lowest point in many years, will increase all too rapidly.

Unfortunately, too many uninformed people consider this a good reason for ignoring the problem of Formosa and the advancing Chinese Communists and taking a "That's half-way around the world and doesn't affect me, what do I care?" attitude. The truth is that the situation anywhere in the world today vitally affects the United States. We are one of the leading powers in the world, and the foremost defender of the democratic way of life, and as such each tiny, apparently insignificant blow against a free world is a blow against us.

The continuous chain of "minor revolutions" that the Communists are shaping all over the world apparently mean little when taken singularly, but together they represent a hard body punch against freedom. If the United States does not do something about these "minor incidents," the world will soon have a major incident, in the form of a shooting war, on its hands.

The Cold War going on now is not a pleasant one, but the discomfort to the American people is nothing compared to the suffering of the people directly involved. Too many short-sighted Americans feel that the whole affair should stay that way—with the United States limited virtually to reading about it in the newspapers. The Communists, however, will not stop with the little countries (and some bigger ones) that they have already taken over in one way or another. Sooner or later they're going to get even greedier and want everything.

We have heard many parents take a stand on the subject with this qualifying statement: "We had boys in two wars in the last 15 years and we don't want to go through that again." Of course, they have a point. There are very few Americans who want to fight. Neither the young people on this campus, for instance, nor the veterans of the Korean mess and, in some cases, World War II who are here at the college are eager to return for another try at killing people.

But these same people realize just what the problem is. If the United States is forced into an all-out war with Communism, it will not be just for the Chinese, or the Slavs, or anyone else, important as they all are. It will be for the ultimate freedom of the United States.

We are at the age now where this question vitally affects our futures. To be blunt, this may decide whether we have futures or not. The decision lies with the executive and legislature of the nation.

If they can avoid war reasonably, everyone will be better off. If they cannot, the United States cannot afford to ignore the pebbles that herald the coming avalanche. The only way to beat this avalanche is to fight back.

We have offered one side of the story. It rests on the young people, the ones who will actually be on the battlefield, to stand up with their points of view, and to help America decide whether or not, if forced into it, we will go to war to defend our freedom and way of life.

Success Story

Japanese Student Overcomes Obstacles, Starts College Here

By Therese Brychta

Sailing beneath the Golden Gate bridge just one month ago marked the realization of more than three years of planning on coming to America for Yoriko Kawamura, a 19 year old Japanese student here.

It was all made possible through the efforts of a group of American Army wives who have established an organization seeking to promote culture and better international relations by inviting foreign students here and acting as sponsors for them. Yoriko is in this country as a guest of Colonel and Mrs. Harvey Coddington. Colonel Coddington is the Chief of the Army Biological Clinic located at the Presidio.

YORIKO KAWAMURA, a 19 year old Japanese student here, whose enrollment in the college marks realization of a three-year ambition.

Since the days when she was a Freshman in high school, Yoriko has entered some 40 essay and scholarship contests hoping that, should she win, she would be able to come to America. After winning ten tuition scholarships to American colleges, among them, Goddard College in Vermont, Beaver College in Pennsylvania and St. Mary's College in Illinois, her efforts were farther thwarted when the Japanese Government imposed a restriction forbidding any citizen to take money from that country because of the current depression.

This meant that she would have to make her own living while attending college without any financial aid from her parents. If she came to America. Because of the language barrier and her comparative young age, this was almost impossible.

Last April, Renzo Sawada, the Japanese representative to the United Nations, who is a friend of Yoriko's family, learned of the American Army wive's organization and recommended her to them. They accepted and last month she took up residence at the Presidio of San Francisco and enrolled in the college.

Remembrance of the ravages of war, her sister's death, seeing her home burned to the ground and a six year separation from her family are reflected in the serious eyes of this young woman when she says: "I want to major in and contribute to better International Relations."

Next fall she will accompany the Coddingtons to Washington, D.C. where she will continue her American education.

THE increase in high-horsepowered cars provides an interesting question. Does a high-horsepowered car operate more efficiently, or does it merely build up the vanity of the owner to have a car which has 190 or 200 horsepower?

Actually, the high-powered vehicle is safer in some ways, if it is driven with care. The extra pickup provided by a high-powered car is valuable in passing other cars, for such a car accelerates much more rapidly than a lower-powered car.

On the other hand, the speed afforded so effortlessly by such a car is tempting to the owner, for he naturally wants to "wind it up." As the saying goes, speed kills, and accident fatalities are increased by speeding motorists.

Of course the development of power brakes makes rapid stopping much easier, but most individuals rich enough to afford a highpowered car are not in good enough physical condition, as far as their nerve systems and reactions are concerned, to master it and control it.

Another justifiable excuse for a high-powered car is the need of a stronger engine to support the strain provided by an automatic transmission. There is a lot of slippage in an automatic transmission, for the power is not engaged to the wheels directly through gears, but through fluid units.

There is no direct meshing, so that the automatic transmission is less efficient than the manual-gearbox type of transmission. To keep the motor from lugging from this strain, its power must be increased.

The best functioning transmission is the manual shift type, as far as efficiency is concerned, but the vogue in modern cars is toward the automatic transmission, for the convenience of no clutch or manual shifting.

This is one reason for the increase in horsepower of six cylinder cars, and also the switch to V-8 engines, which generate higher horsepower at more revolutions per minute, an ideal motor for such a transmission. In fact, every major car factory today produces a V-8 model.

American cars are considered a luxury, and not a necessity, so that the engineering for these cars is along luxurious lines, which necessitates automatic transmissions and more power.

Actually, higher horsepowered makes for easier, more enjoyable driving. The only danger lies in the excessive speeding of the motorist who does not recognize his own physical limitations and the limitations of the car's design — steering, center of gravity, brakes.

The average stock car today, however high powered, is not designed for racing, unlike the European sports cars, such as the MG, the Jaguar, or the Ferrari.

THOUGHTS of instability of American youth and irreverence to the founding father might have occurred to passers-by noticing a group of students flipping about the college's Phelan Avenue lawn on Washington's Birthday, but they were wrong.

It was just enthusiastic rehearsal by Ann Canelos, Warren Smith and others of The Sliver Whistle cast, whose entertaining comedy opens here tomorrow night.

Dead Week

Editor, The Guardsman:

On behalf of students at the college who are genuinely interested in being successful in their final exams, I would like to congratulate the administration, faculty and student leaders for their plans for a dead week before final week.

Formerly the stress and strain of active participation in the numerous campus functions told heavily on conscientious students. After spending an enjoyable evening at the St. Francis, it was often difficult to return to Plato and mathematics 31.

This idea, without a doubt, will stimulate study and benefit all.

Miami Paper Gives Advice To Skeptics

A.C.P.: Most New Year's resolutions have been forgotten or broken by now, but it's not too late for a few additional ones which might have been overlooked by the skeptical students.

Here are a few timely suggestions to incorporate in "resolve"- lists, which may come in handy for brightening dull conversations.

Resolve to . . . refrain from scheduling any classes with instructors who are consistently tardy or absent or both . . . Spend one hour a day in the library, not necessarily studying, but rather getting acquainted with the setup in case you ever wish to take out a book for kicks . . .

Laugh at your instructor's jokes at least once a week to humor him, but not too often, for you may encourage him to go overboard . . . Don't fall into heavy slumber in lectures because it gives the idea that you are bored . . .

See your adviser before you graduate, preferably the day before, so he can tell you what required courses you still have to take . . . Either wear glasses or avoid blind dates . . . Quit loaning out term papers to fellow students who end up with better grades than you . . .

Trackmen Display Potential In First Month Of Practice; Cal Frosh, Oakland First Foes

Rounding out their first month of practice, Coach Roy Burkhead's track charges are gradually showing the potential that will enable them to survive the long cinder campaign which begins Friday, March 18, in Berkeley.

In the early stages of time trials, many men have given encouraging accounts of themselves. Henry Stroughter has been impressive in the mile and two mile. Myron Zimmerman is shaping up well in the 440 after some trouble with a pulled muscle, and hurdle skipper Clint Redus has also been pounding the Riordan practice gravel admirably. Coach Burkhead remarked.

Team veterans for the most part will bolster the action of the new thinclads. Ray McIntyre, Kent Scovil and Bill Chrimele will hold up the sprint department along with Bill Canihan and Jim Kanihan who will be doing hurdle duties in the Spring festivities. John Connell, Harold Hill and Bill Rumford will be pacing the middle distances.

At this point, the coach said, the squad looks good except for the vacancies in the high jump and broad jump sections. To strenghten the high jump department, Burkhead had hopes of turning Norman King into the fold. The lanky basketballer leaped five feet eleven inches in a casual attempt recently.

With Santa Rosa and perennial champion Modesto heavily armed for the coming season, the Rams are not going to have an easy time of it, observers have noted.

The 1955 CCSF track schedule is as follows:

Saturday, March 19—2 p.m., CCSF and Oakland at Cal Frosh.

Saturday, March 26—2 p.m., CCSF and San Mateo at Santa Rosa.

Saturday, April 9—10 a.m., CCSF and West Contra Costa at Stanford Frosh.

Friday, April 15—3 p.m., CCSF and Stockton at Sacramento.

Saturday, March 30—10 a.m., trials, Big Eight Conference Meet at Santa Rosa; 3 p.m., finals, Big Eight Conference Meet at Santa Rosa.

Saturday, May 7—10 a.m., trials, Northern California JC Meet at Sacramento; 3 p.m., finals, Northern California JC Meet at Sacramento.

Saturday, May 14—7 p.m., West Coast Relays.

Saturday, May 21—State Meet at Modesto.

Ramblings

By Emil Portale

IT'S about that time of year, now, when basketball coaches look back and wonder why their teams hadn't done better, and players recall the things they should have done. What do observers do? They bare their teeth, place spectacles on their noses, and scan the records as well as their memories and pick a Big Eight All-Conference cage team.

After careful scrutiny, the sports staff has come up with these standout, easabans on the first dream team.

Center: Jack Allain, San Mateo.

Forward: Clyde Hardeman, West Contra Costa.

Forward: J. D. Banks, West Contra Costa.

Guard: Ike Walker, City College of San Francisco.

Guard: Len Oswald, Stockton.

Consistency and scoring prowess mark the selection of Allain and Hardeman. Both men were proficient point getters for their teams. Choosing Banks over Ray Davis was not an easy task, but consistency, the mark of a champion, won the Richmond cager the spot. Walker was a shoo-in for one of the guard notches, but Oswald, the other guard pick, presented somewhat of a problem, that problem being Sam Haggerty of Oakland.

Second team honors would receive around Sacramento's center, Harvey Fong; Ram forward Dave Davis; the aforementioned Davis of Stockton and Haggerty of Oakland; and West Contra Costa's guard, Sam Hitcher.

Honorable mention standouts include Santa Rosa's Jim Guinn, Stockton's Ray Silvas, Oakland's Bud Bonzmier, Modesto's Ray Sampson, and Ram center Theopolis Dunn . . . and remember, you read it here first!

College Will Use Balboa Park Pool

A swimming pool will be built in Balboa Park for the general public, the city Park and Recreation Commission announced recently and the college will have access to it.

At the present time, architects and the Park and Recreation Commission are blue printing the proposed pool. The pool, which will cost approximately $400,000, will measure 40 by 100 feet and will be enclosed. When it will be opened to the public is not known at this time.

Although it was thought that the pool would be constructed on the college campus, it was stated that this was a misunderstanding. Raymond Kimbell, superintendent of the Park and Recreation Commission said that the pool would be for public use.

The first American born chess champion of the world was Paul Charles Morphy, 20 years old, of New Orleans, Louisiana.

Six WAA And Co-ed Sports Offered

Offered this semester at the college are three co-ed sports, archery, badminton and folk dancing, according to Lene Johnson, physical education instructor here.

Archery meets from 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Fridays and is sponsored by Gloria Dunn and Mrs. Johnson. Sponsored by Nancy Sparks, badminton meets from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesdays. Folk dancing, under the guidance of Mrs. Johnson, meets on Fridays from 12 noon to 1 p.m.

Women's Athletic Association sports this semester are swimming, tennis and volleyball. Swimming meets with Mrs. Johnson at the YWCA between 2 and 3:30 p.m. on Tuesdays. Tennis meets with Mrs. Dunn during college hour on Fridays.

Volleyball, under the guidance of Laurine Bergin, meets in the women's gymnasium from 2 to 3 p.m. on Wednesdays.

Ram Golfers May Keep League Title; Schedule Revised

Chances of City College's golf team keeping the championship crown they won last year were very much alive this week with the addition of a thirteenth man, Don Fex, and scores of high 70's in practice matches held at Harding Golf Course.

Hanlan Hayakawa, who scored a hole-in-one two weeks ago, has reported a score of 73 for an 18-hole practice match as have Doug Heidorn, Dave Watkins and Rich Derry, the first three men on the ladder.

A schedule published in a previous issue of The Guardsman has been changed because of several revisions and additions.

March 11—Menlo at Burlingame.
March 15—SF State at Sharp Park.
March 18—W. Contra Costa here.
March 25—Santa Rosa there.
April 1—Oakland there.
April 12—Sacramento here.
April 19—Stockton there.

Ram Cagers End Successful Year With 20-6 Mark, Third Place Finish

By Bob Chrisman

After a mediocre first half in the Big Eight Conference with three wins and three losses, the Ram' hoopsters racked up six straight vielories in a drive for Conference honors before they were beaten by Stockton on February 11 and eliminated from the Big Eight championship race.

By defeating the Rams, Stockton became the only team in the Big Eight to deal the college team two losses this season. Both San Mateo and West Contra Costa dumped the college in the first half of the season, but the Ralph Hillsman coached eagers bounced back in the second half of the double round robin season to trounce San Mateo by 15 points and master West Contra Costa by a four point margin.

After defeating Santa Rosa 65-55 in their first Big Eight game on December 14 at City College, the Rams met San Mateo and their highly touted center Jack Allain, on the Bulldogs' home court to lose, 68-58, with 6'8", 260 pound hoop-Hercules Allain racking up 26 points to pace the Bulldogs.

RALPH HILLSMAN, head basketball coach here, enjoyed a successful year in which his team finished third in the Big Eight, with a 10-4 record.

City College's quintet entered the Modesto State Junior College Tournament and placed second in the tourney whieh had a field of 16 teams, including the entire Big Eight loop. The Rams defeated College of Sequoias, 75-42, in their first round and then dispatched Sacramento after trailing 20-4 at one time in the first half. In the semi-finals, the college ground out a systematic win over Ventura, 70-58, and entered the finals.

The other finalist team, the Fresno Rams, beat the college cagers, 74-58, with a potent offense which included a good fast break, strong outside shooting, and a "big man" offense, centered around 6'8" Gary Alcorn, who made the All-Tournament team. Forward Dave Davis provided the chief offensive punch for the Rams, reaching a peak of 28 points against Ventura. His all-around performance warranted him a position on the All-Tournament five, the only City College man to make the team.

West Contra Costa, pre-season favorites to cop title laurels, ground their championship axe at the expense of the college quintet, beating them 66-60 at Richmond to deal the Rams their second Conference loss.

Stockton added insult to injury as they defeated the college basketballers 65-60 at the college's gymnasium, with their hard-driving guards, Len Oswald and Monte Maniz swinging the balance to their side, aided by the rebounding of Ray Silvas and George Moton, their top forwards.

City College met Santa Rosa once more and beat them again, 65-51, at Santa Rosa on February 4, after taking Modesto 74-56 on January 28 at the Pirates' den.

In their first crucial game of the second round robin, the Rams hoopsters outclassed the San Mateo Bulldogs at City College, dealing them a 71-56 loss to stay in the Big Eight title race. The entire San Mateo offense is centered around Allain, their huge center, and Hillsman capitalized on the Bulldogs' shifting man-to-man defense to lure Allain from beneath the bucket, which gave the Rams a balance of power, as Theopolis Dunn, Ike Walker and Davis handled the boards for the college.

Once more Sacramento fell to the Rams, this time at Sacramento on February 11, 81-70.

Third place City College knocked West Contra Costa into second place by handing them their second loss, 61-55, at the college gymnasium. The college quintet turned in an excellent job defensively to stop J. D. Banks, Joe Dorsey, Clyde Hardeman and Sam Hitcher, the top shooters for the Comets. This game, which was an Angelo Maestri benefit contest, was a make it or break it affair for the Rams, who had to win this game to have a chance for the conference championship.

Gotterdammerung sounded for the college conference hopes, however, when Stockton squeaked past them in a close contest, 59-55, at Stockton, as their all-court game and strength from beneath the key as well as from outside proved too much for the Ram cagers.

It is a tribute to the college's quintet that they did not fold in the middle after the loss of this game, on which their conference basketball hopes had centered. They bounced back the following evening to decapitate the California Frosh by 16 points, 61-45, becoming only the second team to defeat the Cubs, along with the Athens Club.

Modesto and Oakland provided no opposition for the college in the last two games of the Big Eight, as the Rams massacred Oakland, 87-46, at Oakland on February 23, and Modesto, 68-47, on February 25 at the college.

College Horsehiders Win 2 Practice Tilts

Paced by the slugging of Jim Candler and Stan Johnson, the college baseball squad sprang off to a quick start in 1955 diamond action, besting the Cal JV's, 13-4, East Contra Costa, 15-4, and the U.S.F. JV's, 20-9.

Johnson hit a single, double, and triple in the victory over the Bearcubs, and Candler had a five for five afternoon in the win over ECC.

The practice slate continues with a trio of road games in the next seven days. San Francisco State provides the opposition tomorrow, the Santa Clara Frosh will host the Rams on Saturday, March 12, and a return go with the Cal JV's on Tuesday, March 15, rounds out the threesome.

Tennis Team Set For WCC Friday

City College's tennis squad will host West Contra Costa at Golden Gate Park this Friday at 2:30 in their second Big Eight Conference match of the season.

In previous matches, the college had defeated Lowell at Golden Gate Park on February 24, and lost to the Stanford Frosh on February 28, 6-1, at the Palo Alto courts. The following is the schedule for the Ram squad:

March 8—California Frosh, there, 3:00.

*March 11—West Contra Costa, Golden Gate Park, 2:30.

*March 14 — Burlingame, Golden Gate Park, 3:00.

*March 18—Stockton, there, 2:30.

*March 25—Modesto, Golden Gate Park, 3:00.

*April 1—Oakland, there, 2:30.

*April 15—Santa Rosa, there, 2:30.

*Denotes league games.

Intramural Program Offers Five Sports

Participation in the current intramural athletic program is now in progress and, according to Coach Alex Schwarz, is proceeding in fine order.

He added that the intramural league was mainly designed for the pleasure and enjoyment of the students participating.

Ping-pong, touch football, tennis, badminton and basketball take place this semester, and are played during the gymnasium periods. Winner or winners of each gymnasium class compete for first place honors, Schwarz said, and gold belt buckles are awarded for first place winners in every event and silver medals for second place holders.

West Contra Costa Wins Cage Title

Guard Sam Hitcher bucketed 22 points to lead his West Contra Costa cage team to a 76-69 victory over Stockton in a special Big Eight title playoff game at Richmond last week. The two teams had finished the regular season with identical 12-2 records.

Coach Rudy Hansen's Comets, with four men hitting in double figures, held a narrow 32-28 margin at halftime. Guard Len Oswald tanked 33 points for the losers.

Rams Take Third In All-College Boxing Tourney

By Mike Berger

A number of pleasing performances marked the college's first outside boxing competition of the season in the First Annual Far Western Freshman-Junior College boxing tourney at San Jose on February 25-26.

By ringing up a single victory in the finals of the tournament on the night of action, the squad of coach Roy Diederichsen took third place among all the schools that participated in the weekend of boxing. A City College duo fought for the 147 lb. crown, with Roger Nunez decisioning Ken Turner for the lone college victory.

Perhaps the most outstanding aspect of the results of the matches was not a victory, but a loss, as Roscoe Jones made a fine showing in the finals of the 130 lb. competition. Jones' opponent was Ron Rall, who was later voted the outstanding boxer in the tournament and who also is a veteran varsity performer on the strong Idaho State team.

Despite the more vast experience of Rall, Jones used what know-how he did possess to great advantage. The City College fighter would have had a draw had it not been for a slight edge for his adversary in the first round of the three round bout. Both the second and third stanzas were even in the judging.

In the preliminary matches, which were held on the first night of the tourney, Mike Huffman lost to Bill Fortye (Cal Poly), Al Scialanca was decisioned by Dick Hensen (Idaho State), Ted Floyd was defeated by Pete Davies (Cal Poly), and Ken Turner reached the finals by whipping Joe Bondanza (U.S.F.).

The veteran Idaho State aggregation headed the unofficial team scoring, followed by the perennially strong San Jose State squad and the improving City College group.

AS Leaders Meet Saturday At San Mateo

San Mateo will be the scene of the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference next Saturday, March 12, Al Kingston, Associated Student President here, announced last week.

The regional conference, held at the Coyote Point Campus of the College of San Mateo, as in the past, will endeavor by a scheme of workshops to smooth student administration of the many attending institutions.

The Northern California meeting will revolve around eight workshop discussion groups which provide for a wider knowledge and better understanding of student government, Kingston said. These groups will include analyzing the finer points of student association management, finance, Associated Men and Women Student organizations, and discussion of the constitution of the State Junior College Association.

Delegates from the college will leave for the conference early Saturday morning and return in the early evening. Of the many participating students of the college, the following will be in attendance: Marion Cheader, Bob Johnson, Tookie Radillo, Marilyn Sicotte, Paul Ortiz, Betty Peterson, Bill Cirimele, Dean Woods, Al Niemi, Don Baroni, Lawrence Lowe, Connie Panagakis, Joyce Weaver, Vic Hebert, Judy Wilson and Kingston.

At the present time, plans are being made to attend the State Conference, to be held April 21 through 23 at Riverside, California.

Seven Colleges Plan 'Soph Hop'

Sponsored by the sophomore classes of San Francisco and bay area colleges and universities, an "Inter-Collegiate Soph Hop" will be held at Hotel St. Francis Saturday, March 12, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Featured event of the evening will be the crowning of the "Inter-Collegiate Soph Doll" from a group of sophomore women representing the sponsoring institutions. Contestants must not be student officers or previous beauty contest winners. A further requirement is that they must not be "pinned" or engaged. The college entry has not as yet been selected.

Tickets are $2.50 per couple and may be purchased in the student body office. Sponsoring colleges are City College, East and West Contra Costa Colleges, College of Marin, San Francisco State, and the University of San Francisco and California.

AWS Prepares For Semi-Annual Tea

Plans are now being made for the presentation of the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show to be held Wednesday, March 30, according to Tookie Radillo, AWS president here.

Twenty students from each high school in the city along with their senior advisers and deans of women have been invited. Invitations have been sent to all AS members, and Miss Radillo said that any woman student who is a member of the Associated Students is also invited to attend.

Fashions for the event will be supplied by the Jay Vee shop, 250 West Portal Avenue, which is participating in the event for the first time this semester. Models have not yet been chosen.

To honor high senior students and to acquaint them with the college is the primary purpose of the affair, Miss Radillo said, and more than one thousand persons are expected to attend.

A definite location for the tea and show has not yet been selected.

Campus Organizations Approach Final Days Of Membership Drives

By Joan Anderson

WITH the first part of the semester going rapidly campus clubs and organizations are finishing their membership drives.

Alpha Kappa Rho held their first affair last Wednesday at the Golden West Y.M.C.A. Dinner was served by campus sorority members.

Theta Tau sorority presented its second rushing affair, a Hawaiian Luau, last Sunday at the Stonestown Y.M.C.A.

A French dinner will be given by Alpha Lambda Chi at the Wawona Club as their second affair. Candlelight and French costumes will highlight the evening.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon recently elected Steve Korbay as pledge master of the fraternity to fill the office which had been left vacant by Bill Shoaf, who left college.

Officers of the International Relations Club are Leo Koulos, president; Bill Lohmus, vice-president; Elena Acosta, corresponding secretary; Claudia Volhansoff, recording secretary; Maurice Lemus, treasurer; Hilda DeLeon, historian, and Henry Athanasion, CAB representative.

New officers of Alpha Phi Omega for this semester are Al Argo, president; Bob Kelleher, first vice-president; John Grist, second vice-president; Norm Foote, secretary; Ken Henry, treasurer; Al Tanner, historian, and Ed Emig, sergeant at arms.

President of Alpha Phi Epsilon is James Lyneh with Lafayette Jamerson, vice-president; Arthur Handy, recording secretary; Harold Hill, corresponding secretary; Lionel Jackson, treasurer; Hiawatha Crawford, dean of pledges; Ray Dangerfield, custodian, and Lawrence Lowe, publicity chairman.

The Masonic Club will present "The Beachcomber's Pipedream Costume Ball" Saturday, March 12, in conjunction with the Masonic Club of the University of California.

Phi Beta Rho recently held its second affair, an Italian dinner, at the Wawona Club House. Members of a fraternity served.

A smorgasbord dinner will be given tonight at the Wawona Club by Zeta Chi for their second affair. Entertainment will be from the Varieties of '55.

New officers of the Chinese Students Club are Albert Gee, president; Amy Lee, vice-president; Carolyn Chinn, recording secretary; Barbara Fong, corresponding secretary; Stephen Chin, treasurer; Pat Fong, social chairman; Garnet Hung and Benny Chuek, publicity chairmen.

Library Rules, Fines Are Same This Semester

Regulations governing student use of the college library in Cloud Hall are once again being carried out through this semester with no change.

Rules which are in effect and suggestions made by the library staff for students' help are as follows:

1. Registration cards must be shown before books may be taken out of the library.

2. Two week books, in open stack sections, arranged by subjects according to the Dewey Decimal System of classification, may be selected by students and withdrawn for two weeks at the loan desk. Books numbered 000-600 will be found on the first floor stack; those numbered 700-900 will be found on the second floor stack along with oversize books.

3. Books, magazines and pamphlets placed on reserve by instructors for one or two-hour use and for overnight or week-end use after 2 p.m. may be reserved in advance at the loan desk.

4. The bound volumes of magazines in the reserve reading room are for library use only.

5. In the periodical room unbound magazines are shelved alphabetically by title. Back issues may be borrowed overnight, but current issues are for library use only. Newspapers may also be found here.

6. Reference books, atlases, bibliographies, dictionaries, encyclopaedias, yearbooks, case books, college catalogs and pamphlets, and periodical indexes are to be found in the reading reference room.

7. Fines for books held overdue are as follows: two week books, 5 cents per day; reserve books, 5 cents per hour, 50 cents per day.

More students have been using the library at the beginning of this semester than ever before because of student tours from the English classes, according to Library Staff member Clement Skrabak.

Three Compete For Soph Student Council Vacancy

Three new nominations for the Sophomore vacancy on the Student Council were made as the two previous ones were removed during last week's Student Council meetings. New nominees, still subject to investigation of their scholastic qualifications, are Ed Harer, Joan Rettus and Al Argo.

Jim Nichols and Donn Pace, former nominees, were removed from the list of potential candidates. Nichols was disqualified from running because of his lack of the required 30 units. This was the second time he had failed to gain the approval needed to run for the council seat.

Last semester Nichols submitted his petition for candidacy to election committee too late for their acceptance.

Pace, who satisfied the scholastic requirements, asked the council to withdraw his name from the nominations after the three new nominees were placed on the slate. He said that he felt that it was obvious that the council felt him unqualified in view of their re-opening the nominations.

Asked by a council member if he would accept a new nomination, Pace was somewhat non-committal in his reply, but left the door open with a reference to the next council meeting. Pace is a veteran of the Student Council, having served two previous semesters with the group.

Approval was given to the Men's Glee Club budget of $150. This represented a slash of 25 per cent from their original request.

Council member Jann Palmer asked the Associated Men Student President Bob Johnson if the AMS intended to limit their selection of the Mardi Gras Queen to women who had not previously been chosen as a queen of any student activity. Miss Palmer said that she thought this restriction would narrow the field down too much, and that in view of the fact that the Queen would be a representative of the college, the selection of the best possible woman was required.

H&R Students Assume Duties In City's Largest Hostelry During Annual Hotel Day

By Gail Allan Moss, Editor

Manager Dan London and his staff of the St. Francis Hotel enjoyed a day off from their usual routine duties as students from the Hotel and Restaurant department here at the college took over the establishment on the fourth annual Hotel Day last Friday.

Every job in the hotel, from London's position, handled by Marvin Alldaffer, to the duties of head chef, taken over by Don Giovannoni, was filled, for a day, by the 44 students from the H&R and the other departments that took part in the temporary on-job training—advertising, journalism, photography and law enforcement.

After a morning on the job, the visitors had lunch with the St. Francis personnel with whom they were working, the larger part of the group eating in the hotel's Mural Room. After lunch, they returned to the job and, in some cases, to tours of the 14-floor hotel, largest in the city.

This year's Hotel Day, just as in the past, was assured of excellent publicity through the efforts of Betty Bell, director of the St. Francis' publicity department. Reporters and photographers representing the San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco News and San Francisco Call-Bulletin were present during part of the day. In addition, Miss Bell was able to secure a radio interview for Julie Furtado, Hawaiian H&R student, with Ann Holden of radio station KGO on her afternoon show. Miss Furtado's job for the day was with Eula Gibbs of the St. Francis, in charge of the housekeeping department.

Following the on-the-job experience, a reception was held by the hotel staff for the visiting students. Several administrators from the college were present, as was Hilda Watson, director of the Hotel and Restaurant department, who is at the present time on a leave of absence from the college.

Those third and fourth semester students from H&R taking part in Hotel Day were: Paul Abee, Tony Albini, Alldaffer, Pat Briggs, Paul Burton, John Dinkelspiel, Klaus Enders, Miss Furtado, Al Gallagos, Bruce Gilmore, Giovannoni, George Grcich, Bob Hall, Joe Herley, Howard Hendricksen, Paul Kingery, Al Lisama, Leonard Lucich, Juan Mahor, William Miller, James Morrison, Isao Motomura, Al Myhrberg, Tony Novelo, Barbara Pope, Bob Schofield, Tevie Smith, Randi Solheim, William Swank, Tadayasu Tani, Leonard Thorvaid, Carl Tretting, Robert Van Liefferingen, Ray Vega, Rochus Welcreck, Kim Wilkin, James Wilson and Dean Woods.

Others participating were Janet Mowll, advertising; Al Moss and Deane Wylie, journalism; and Bill Hamilton and Frank Stork, photography, all of whom worked with Miss Bell in publicity; and Don Baker, law enforcement, who worked with Court Smith, chief house officer.

IRC Presents Show For Parkside PTA

Because of their performance at the International Fair of last semester, the International Relations Club members have been invited to a party by the PTA of the Parkside School in San Bruno to present a show Friday evening.

Five shows of different countries are planned for the evening, and they will be presented at the auditorium of the Parkside School, 1801 Niles Avenue at San Bruno, starting at 8:15 p.m. The dinner will start at 6:30 p.m.

International Club Attends Parley

Five members of the International Relations Club attended the sixth annual Asilomar conference, given by the Student World Affairs Council of Northern California, for three days from March 4 to March 6.

Shinji Aizawa, Marie Louis Carl, Maurice Lehmus, Mitsuya Ohno, and Lam Tai left the college at noon last Friday to participate in the opening rally of this three-day conference, accompanied by Joseph M. Jacobsen, club adviser.

Topic of the three-day conference was Problems of Security in the Pacific Area. Dr. Robert J. Kerner, director emeritus of the Institute of Slavic Studies, University of California, gave the keynote address. His subject was The Far Eastern Crisis and Recent Developments in Moscow.

Other speakers were Dr. Thomas C. Blaisdell Jr., director of the Bureau of International Relations, University of California, whose speech was on The Pacific Area—Yesterday and Today; Dr. Norbert Einstein, international economic consultant; and Robert MacKenzie, instructor of geopolitics at the University of San Francisco. They also directed a panel discussion on March 5, at which students from the college took part in discussing the subject.

Social events at the conference included an open house and dance.

AMS Plans For Mardi Gras Fete On West Campus

Plans are in the making for this year's Mardi Gras festivities which will again take place on the west campus Friday, May 13, and will include a parade of floats up Ocean Avenue and a dance in the evening, Bob Johnson, Associated Men Student president, announced last week.

Booths for the affair will be situated along the boardwalk adjacent to the fountain and book store on the west campus. Presently many clubs on campus are organizing booths and floats for the activity, and all interested college organizations are invited to take part, Johnson said.

The Mardi Gras float parade will emanate from 19th Avenue and march up Ocean Avenue to the college. As yet, official plans for floats and booths were not available, the president said.

In discussions with student officers a suggestion of combining the Mardi Gras affair with the college's twentieth anniversary celebration was mentioned, because of the active social calendar, Johnson remarked. The wearing of masks at the evening dance to add to the festive spirit was also discussed.

SP Battles Elements In RR Film Friday

This Is Your Railroad, a sound and color film produced by the Southern Pacific Railroad, will be shown during college hour this Friday, March 11, in Room 136 of the Science Building.

Depicting Southern Pacific operations against the elements, the movie is described as a dramatic account of railroad activities in the battle against wind and heavy snow along its western lines. Also included are details of fruit, lumber and ore freight movements, and shots of scenery from the Pacific Coast to New Orleans.

Deadline For Forum Copy Is April 4

Copy deadline for Forum, annual college literary magazine, is Monday, April 4, according to Catherine Connolly, Forum sponsor.

Manuscripts should be typed double-spaced on 8½ by 11 inch paper, and be turned in to Miss Connolly in C331A. Contributions in any literary form are desired, with satirical or humorous material especially encouraged.

Edwin Brush was elected Editor-in-Chief of Forum this spring. Members of the committee include Helen Brewer, Melbourne Lockey, Dorothy Rader and Margaret Shour.

Students interested in advertising, editorial and publicity work for Forum are invited to attend meetings in Room 222 during college hours.

Fraternity Dance Marks Midterm End; AS Votes For Blue Book Sweetheart

Members of the Associated Students and purchasers of tickets to the midterm-ending Blue Book Blues dance will be eligible to vote Thursday and Friday at the silver pole and cafeteria for the "Sweetheart of Alpha Sigma Delta," who will be crowned by the fraternity at the dance Friday night, Stan Lee, Alpha Sigma Delta president, announced yesterday.

The unusual dance theme, according to Lee, is significant of the dance's purpose: the end, temporarily at least, of the cares and worries of midterm-worn students, and the first opportunity to relax after the unaccustomed strain of "cramming."

The Sweetheart contest will become a permanent feature of the newly revived annual dance, Lee said, and a new sweetheart will be chosen each spring, to reign over the hearts of the fraternity's members and be an honored guest of the fraternity's affairs for an entire year. She will also have her name engraved on a perpetual trophy and receive a smaller individual trophy.

The newly-chosen sweetheart will be crowned by Lee during the semi-formal dance to be held Friday night at the Forest Hill Lodge, Laguna Honda Boulevard near the Forest Hill Station, from 9:00 to 12:00, featuring the music of Walt Tolleson. In addition to the trophies she will receive an orchid corsage from Podesta and Baldocchi and a dinner for two at the famed Venetian Room of the Hotel Fairmont.

Contestants for the sweetheart title are Helen Yu, sponsored by the Chinese Student's Club; Jean Vachon, of Kappa Phi Sorority; Lenore Thompson from Delta Psi; Rose Thurman, candidate of Alpha Lambda Chi; Mary Lou Reidy of Theta Tau; Ruth Wolfe from Zeta Chi, and Phi Beta Rho's Betty Peterson.

Outstanding feature of the campaign to publicize the dance, Lee stated, will be the distribution of free blue books during midterm week. Members of the fraternity who will man the polling places will also pass out the books.

Blue Book Blues was an annual activity of the fraternity, but has been shelved for the past three years, Lee said. Current plans are to once again make the dance a yearly spring entry in the college's social calendar. Members of the dance committee, headed by Vice-President Joe Graham, include Lee, Emery LeBonville, Juan Alealde, Diek Kramer, Bob Mackessy, Frank Ray, Miles Chapuis, and Donn Pace.

Name Causes Mardi Gras Disinterest

By Bev Swope

COLLEGE tradition determines that in the spring semester the Associated Men Students will hold a carnival-type celebration or Mardi Gras. Again for the umpty-umpth time in college history the AMS is planning its affair, this time for Friday, May 20.

On this date, as has been done in the past, booths and displays will be set up in the west campus area by campus clubs, and a dance will be open to the public in the auditorium building 1, that same evening.

The carnival idea is a good one basically, since it enables campus organizations to work together on a project which stimulates the spirit of cooperation and college interest. The unfortunate part of the idea is that out of the total college enrollment, few students show enough interest to attend, and the AMS invariably loses money.

This lack of student and also public interest probably stems from the name of the celebration itself. About this time each year, there are Mardi Gras galore—from junior high school and high school levels to the University of San Francisco and the huge St. Francis Hotel benefit ball festivities. The majority of these affairs are presented at the traditional Mardi Gras time, Shrove Tuesday before Ash Wednesday, which this year was three weeks ago on February 22.

A college of this size deserves a better show than it has had in past years. Located in "the city that knows how," we appear to have mislaid the knowledge. Why not replace the tired old Mardi Gras idea with a fresh new plan? Ideas are unlimited.

In connection with the college's birthday this year, a twentieth anniversary celebration might be in order. Keeping the carnival format, the name of "fair," "circus," "pageant" or anything but Mardi Gras could be substituted. By the end of May the Mardi Gras title is worn out.

There has been much talk but less action in past semesters on this subject. In Spring 1955 let's give a college-wide push and make this season a successful one for the AMS event and college spirit.

Conlan Looks Ahead, Sees Possible 10,000 Enrollment Here By 1960; More Building Space Already Needed

Predicted enrollment of 10,000 students here by 1960, tightening of college scholastic standards and campus parking problems were subjects reviewed last week by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Dr. Conlan, asked to comment on problems of the college as it marks its twentieth anniversary, spoke of growing educator concern throughout the country over rapidly increasing college enrollments. "Since a year ago last fall," the president said, "City College has had an increase of more than 1,000 students. Five years from now our enrollment could reach 10,000, according to several estimates."

LOUIS G. CONLAN

Present total here this semester is nearly 5,000 day students.

The college's physical plant is growing rapidly to meet the anticipated increase, and to replace the loss of the west campus facilities, Dr. Conlan observed. "We are already planning an addition to the new Student Union Building," he said, "and hope to secure funds for that purpose and for the Fine Arts Building from a bond issue to be voted upon this coming November."

Six temporary bungalows are being placed east of the Student Union Building to take care of immediate demands, Dr. Conlan said, and will contain classrooms and offices for the Associated Students.

"Funds totaling $50,000 have already been allocated for construction of two new shops in the basement of the Science Building," he stated, "and in the space now occupied by the snack bar and study hall will go an electronics laboratory and a machine shop."

Commenting on college scholastic requirements, Dr. Conlan noted that a group composed of California college and university administrators is presently studying college entrance and academic performance requirements in the state, and that a general tightening of standards may be expected in the near future. "College scholastic standards in California are below the rest of the country," the president said, "especially those of the Eastern colleges."

"Here at the college we may raise student performance requirements by making readmission more difficult after a student has been dropped for failure to maintain a 'C' average," Dr. Conlan said.

Turning to the parking situation here, the president pointed out that with the abandonment of the west campus students will no longer be able to park in that area.

"We will have parking spaces equalling the number presently available on the west campus in a main lot east of the Student Union Building and above the football practice field," he said, "and in an area near Hurley Village on Marston Avenue. Faculty parking will continue on Cloud Circle."

No College Hour Friday

In order to avoid interference with midterm examinations, no college hour is scheduled for this Friday, March 18, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of the division of instruction, announced last week.

Regular college hour program will be resumed next week, when a track rally will be held in the 10:30 a.m. hour.

Board Announces Posting Rules

Regulations governing the distribution of printed matter other than official or recognized publications, and posters about the campus were announced yesterday by Gail Allan Moss, publications board chairman here.

All printed matter which is to be distributed on the campus must be submitted to the publications board chairman for approval before distribution, in accordance with the regulations which are as follows:

1. Any organization or campus group which intends to publish any material for distribution to any students of the college must have the master copy approved by the board chairman, and a copy of the distributed copy must be sent to him. If this rule is not followed, the publication will be cancelled by the board.

2. All posters which are to be put on campus must be approved by the chairman before posting. Violation of this rule will result in immediate removal of the posters.

Mullany Named Editor Of Newsman's Magazine

George G. Mullany, Journalism instructor here, was named the 1955 editor of "Scoop" by the Press and Union League, according to Paul Speegle, president.

"The yearly publication represents a compiling by newspapermen of their experiences in journalism.

ASD Sweetheart Contestants

Audio Visual Film Schedule Released

Because of the illness of Madison Devlin, regular Audio-Visual Aids manager, his wife is acting as temporary manager of the department until his return next month.

The schedule of the college film series for this semester is the following:

March 25, Pacific Sails.
April 1, Adventure to Europe.
April 15, Rainbow of Stone.
April 22, The American Farmer.
April 29, Trails to Tucson.

The Audio-Visual Aids department possesses a large staff of assistants, many of whom are veterans with previous experience in this field, Mrs. Devlin stated. New additions to the staff are Robert Florio, Robert Newby, and Raymond Rogoway.

Students interested in becoming Audio-Visual Aids assistants who have had previous high school experience may see Mrs. Devlin in her office, room 239 Cloud Hall.

College's Alumni Reorganize Group

Plans for reorganization of the college's Alumni Association were launched at a meeting of the Board of Directors on Tuesday, March 8, at the college, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

Ten vacancies exist on the 16 member board of directors. Twenty-eight candidates have been selected from the association's membership to be screened for these vacancies.

The six persons presently members of the board of directors are Max Call, former AS president; Gloria Duna, secretary of the group; Don Jensen, counselor at the college; George Mullany, graphic arts instructor here; Bob Winegardner, manager of the California Book Company store on Ocean Avenue, and Amori.

Amori was instructed to prepare a letter to be sent to the candidates informing them of the Board's action. When availability of each candidate is known, selections will be made to fill the vacancies. Immediately following this action, new officers will be chosen to head the Alumni Association next year.

Pace Fills Soph Council Vacancy; 13 Budgets Okayed

Donn Pace was elected to fill the Sophomore vacancy on the Student Council and 13 budgets received approval from the council last week.

Pace, who had once withdrawn his name from contention, accepted the nomination for the second time before debating. Jean Hettig, the only other candidate who fulfilled the scholastic requirements for council membership, Al Argo, Ed Harer, and Jim Nichols were disqualified from running after receiving nominations because of deficiencies in scholastic requirements. Pace stated that he had misunderstood the council's motive for re-opening the nominations two weeks ago.

Last week's council meeting held the dubious distinction of being the most disorderly of the semester. Associated Student President Al Kingston was forced to use his gavel many times in order to restore quiet during the meeting. Most of the noise and distraction came from observers and not the council themselves.

The budgets receiving the council's seal of approval were:

Eight H&R Students Tour Restaurants In State Trip From April 12 To 19

By Dave Baar

Eight fourth-semester Hotel and Restaurant students will enjoy an all-expense-paid week of travel from April 12 to 19 when they embark upon the Annual Spring Trip of the Hotel and Restaurant department.

One of the most sought-after honors given to H&R students, the trip, sponsored by the California Northern Hotel Association, has been continuously held each spring since 1939.

Competition for the privilege of going on the trip is high, with only eight selected from the 34 students eligible. Participants will be selected by both the H&R students and faculty, with emphasis being placed upon each student's class work, leadership and ability to represent the department and the Hotel and Restaurant Society here at the college.

Students going on the trip will be accompanied by Wendell Muntz and possibly Dr. Louis Batmale. They will visit approximately 30 restaurants in Southern California.

On the first day of the trip, the travelers will stop at Casa Munras Hotel in Monterey, spending the day visiting the hotel and others in the area. The second day will be spent in Santa Barbara, and the third, fourth and fifth in Los Angeles at the Hollywood Roosevelt, Biltmore and Statler hotels.

While in Los Angeles, the students will be the guests of the Southern California Restaurant Association, which has planned an itinerary of restaurant tours for them.

Palm Springs and Fresno will host the H&R travelers on the sixth and seventh days of their trip.

Sincere Thanks Given For 4th Successful Hotel Day

FOR the fourth time, the staff of the St. Francis Hotel hosted students from the college in the annual Hotel Day last week, and for the fourth time, it was a success.

Manager Dan London, and each member of his staff, have been thanked many times over for their efforts on behalf of the college's Hotel and Restaurant and other departments. We're sure that they won't mind one more accolade, and everyone concerned deserves all the praise heaped upon them.

Each year the kind invitation by the hotel is re-extended, and this in itself is a compliment to the manner in which the visitors from the college conduct themselves.

If each member of H&R, Journalism, Photography, Advertising, Law Enforcement, and every other department taking part in Hotel Day did not perform his duties admirably, we're sure that the St. Francis personnel would quietly forget to issue their yearly invitation.

Practically every job in the hotel is taken over for a day by some representative of the college, and if they didn't do a good job and give everyone on the hotel staff a good impression of the college, the entire day would be wasted.

After watching the staff of the city's largest hotel in action for a day, we can easily understand how the St. Francis gained its fine reputation. Everyone from Dan London on down was friendliness and co-operation personified, and it was their help that made the day the complete success that it was.

We're sure that we speak on behalf of everyone from the college who took part when we express our sincerest thanks for the friendliness and co-operation shown us by the staff of the St. Francis Hotel.

72 Year Old AS Member Back At Parking Lot Entrance

By Emil Portale

For 21 years a small, strange-looking vehicle has adorned the entrance to the west campus parking lot, and has served during that time as a place of nourishment and pleasant passing conversation for a countless number of students at the college.

So long has the quaint lunch wagon on Phelan Avenue been a definite part of campus life, that it was sorely missed when its owner, Khan Mihan, became ill recently and had to close up shop for a week.

Many students have patronized the goodie wagon since the amiable gentleman acquired its ownership in April of 1947. The Pakistan-born proprietor feels as close to the college as it does to him, even to the extent of buying an Associated Student card each year and mounting it in the truck on a board which reads, "I belong, do you?"

Seven hours a day the mobile cafe can be seen in its accustomed spot, through sunny mornings and rainy afternoons, patiently awaiting the hungry student.

The 72-year young lunch wagon owner has a refreshing philosophy on life among his various qualities. Mihan's "live and let live" belief, coupled with his pleasant ways, have made him a favorite with his customers, whom he considers all friends, not merely customers.

Society's Interests Are Best Served When Morals Are Not Warped By Mores

By Bob Chrisman

THE statement, "Nothing is either black or white, but a varying shade of gray" is one of the most thoughtless platitudes ever coined.

This idea of the relativity of fixed moral standards is based on the fact that immoral actions may be committed if the results are moral. Robbing the rich to feed the poor is an example. There are cases where breaking the law or the moral code are justifiable, but they are in the minority. In the interests of man and society, the "black and white" classifications must exist, for irresponsible individuals will attempt to judge whether or not their actions are wrong or "justified." When the individual makes these distinctions, he subjects universal laws (proven religion and philosophy) concerning man's relation to man and the state to his own subjective views.

When the individual sets himself above the state and other men, the social structure collapses, and man becomes no more than an animal. As a biological organism, man is an animal, but he differs from animals because he has the capacity to recognize what is best for himself and his reality. An animal has these capacities, but only in direct relation to his drives.

Belief in the state comes when the citizen has respect for himself as a person capable of dignity, honor and trustworthiness. All men realize their capacity for greed and desire, but the man who realizes his ability to be honorable and truthful will select the path of honor and truth over greed. Society is built on the theory that the individual is capable of exercising self-control and cooperating with his fellow man to produce an easier way of life. When the individual believes in himself as an honorable person, then he will believe in the state as well.

To grow and improve, society depends upon the unselfish creative efforts of its citizens. Should the individual's whims come before the wishes of the state, or should the state come first? Whenever a citizen accepts responsibility, he shoulders part of the burden of society.

If a man were to shirk all responsibilities of society, only then could he have complete freedom of self. But this freedom of self is costly, for when the individual shirks all responsibility, he is not even taking care of himself. When the individual fails to take care of himself, he suffers from a lack of self-respect, confidence, or both.

Occasionally, a man is faced with a situation in which he may assume a position of responsibility in society and give first attention to his duties, or refuse the position and give his time to himself. Assume that a teacher has been offered a position as head of his department. In terms of time consumed and loss of pleasure, the position offers more disadvantages than advantages. Usually, the position is accepted because of a feeling of moral obligation, the desire for prestige, or because the individual enjoys that type of work, assuming that there is no tremendous financial gain offered.

Situations such as these are the turning points in a man's life, when he must decide whether he is to fulfill his will as a person, or the will of the state.

H&R Student Spreads College Fame In The Hotel Day Activity

Julie Furtado In Local Radio Appearance

Perhaps the best plug the college has received in a long time came when Julie Furtado, Hotel and Restaurant Department student here, was interviewed on KGO during Hotel Day recently.

Miss Furtado, a fourth semester student here, was participating in Hotel Day as assistant to the head of the housekeeping department of the St. Francis Hotel.

She was chosen from the H&R staff working that day at the hotel to appear on the Ann Holden radio show, by Betty Bell, publicity director of the St. Francis.

The fact that her father owns a restaurant and motel in Hawaii, says Miss Furtado, is possibly the reason she was chosen.

Not new to the hotel business, she once worked at the Santa Barbara Biltmore as assistant pantry worker, receptionist and typist.

Miss Furtado plans to return to her native Hawaii when she graduates this June, and will work at the Waikiki Biltmore in Honolulu.

She enrolled here in 1953, immediately after graduating from Punahou school in Hilo, because of the courses offered here in the H&R division.

As her favorite aspect of the H&R, Miss Furtado names the many different personalities she has encountered.

Sukiaki Sam Is Back, Tells Old Native Tale

By Bill Boldenweck

SNOW WHITE were a pretty little jo-san who living in big castle by the forest. She having a mean old stepmama-san queen lady, who also very pretty type. Queen having magic type mirror and every morning after breakfast she going and ask mirror, "Mirror, mirror, up on wall, who is ichi-bon doll of all?" And every time mirror saying, "No kidding you, honorable queen, you are prettiest to be seen." And every time queen going away happy.

But one day S. W. growing up and when queen asking mirror, he speaking, "Queenie, you have been it every day, but Snow White's my new musume." This getting the queen somewhat griped and she ordering a woodsman taking Snow White into the woods and kill her to death. Woodsman taking sweet little S. W. into forest but he nice guy, he don't kill her, just speaking to her, "You shoving off quick, kid, or stepmamasan catching you and me both."

Snow White running and running through forest until she tripping and falling into a little tunnel. She following it until she coming to little house underground. "Ohio, coming in," a voice saying. She looking around and see seven skoshis. "What's up, baby-san," the oldest one speaking, "My name Doc, these are Grumpy-san, Happy-san, Sleepy-san, Dopey-san, Sneezy-san, and Bashful-san, and we working in huge uranium mine for loksan loot, but what brings you around?"

"My stepmamasan kicking me out of the castle," S. W. speaking, "and I need job." So Snow White going to work for them, making beds, cleaning up, and all time cooking.

All time queen is making happy thinking S. W. dead. One morning she asked mirror, "Mirror, mirror up on wall, now who's sweetheart of you all?" And mirror speaking, "Queenie, you might think I saw a ghost, but Snow White's still the very most." Queen is getting horrible shock and raging up and down hall like if she baka, but finally coming up with evil plan.

She cooking up delicious, number one teriaki steak and putting on it three fingers of magic powder. Then she putting on number one kabuki robe and running down to skoshi house in woods where living seven skoshis. Knocking on door. "Who goes?" S. W. speaking. "Welcome Wagon," Queen speaking, "I bringing you number one teriaki steak from Yamoto's flying gohan house."

So Snow White taking steak, eating it, and falling asleep. Skoshis coming home, thinking S. W. dead, and throwing her out in back yard. She staying there six months sleeping until handsome samurai warrior coming along and kissing her. She waking up and going back to work for seven skoshis which samurai going off to marry homely but rich banker's daughter. Queen getting sick of lousy lying mirror and giving it to samurai for wedding present. Everybody happy more or less. The end. No moral.

Students Here Wear Green Around Gills

By Therese Brychta

There are a lot of Irishmen in San Francisco, or so one is led to believe by the merrymaking on St. Patrick's Day.

Each year, a gigantic, colorful parade slowly inches its way up Market street admid cheers and shouts from thousands of spectators who line the sidewalks from the Ferry Building to the Civic Center. Church ceremonies are held and almost everyone wears green for the day. Some local Irish "refreshment houses" even serve free corned beef and cabbage in honor of the patron saint who drove the snakes from Ireland.

At the college, however, Midterms take the place of celebration on the great day. Even though many students will be sporting the traditional shamrock, most of the "wearing of the green" seen on the campus will be around the students' gills!

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

THOSE who thought that college publicist Toni Mannina had suddenly gone high-fashion or that pressures of her job had brought about premature old age were fooled last week by the silvery locks in her normally brunette coiffure.

All a part of the publicity campaign for "The Silver Whistle," last week's Little Theater production, the two-tone was applied by helpful members of the play's cast. "I was ambushed," says Toni. "I walked in and they pinned me down and sprayed it on."

THE CLASSIC STORY of the guy who gets robbed in front of the police station had its counterpart here recently. Bob Sibley, a student here, climbed into his flashy yellow MG after classes last week, and was greeted by a large hush when he pressed the starter.

Checking under the hood, he discovered that someone had pussyfooted off with the distributor cap and spark plugs. Naturally, he was parked in front of the campus police building.

MELANIE MEAD, a drama major here and rightly so with a name that could appear in lights, is a good candidate for a "Which One Is Ava Gardner" advertisement. A ringer for the famous actress, Melanie has been mistaken for her before. But Melanie's had fewer husbands. None, in fact.

HIGH POWERED BLONDE: Joyce Frazier, pretty Little Theater member, has turned her talents to backstage technical problems and under the guidance of Roy Maffei is becoming adept at stage lighting. Chance to use her new abilities will come in the Little Theater's next play, "The Willow and I."

EFFORTS to step up the Associated Students' "Campus Cleanup Campaign" were speeded last week as campaign members tried to squelch a fast-becoming popular nickname for the Science Building basement snackbar. Seems that students have been calling it the "Slop Shop."

BEMOANING the fact that many students complain of a lack of publicity space for their clubs and groups and then fail to take advantage of the college's many hallway display cases, Jan Mowil (rhymes with Powell) sits and waits for takers of the space in the cases available for the asking. A pert brunette advertising art major, Jan is responsible for many of the attractive displays that do appear in the hallways.

RICH BANDETTINI, Ram first baseman, who has been hitting at a .375 rate in practice sessions.

College Nine Dealt First Loss By SF State In 9-7 Thriller; Rams Play Gators Again Today

Seeking revenge after suffering their first loss of the year to San Francisco State, 9-7, on March 10, the Ram nine will engage the strong State club in a rematch this afternoon at the Gators' home field.

After trailing throughout most of the battle, the cohorts of Coach Bill Fischer came up with a pair of three run rallies to challenge the State lead, but their last burst in the ninth inning came too late.

The State squad has been bolstered by outstanding new players, and its record of two losses to Cal and Santa Clara and a tie with Stanford is deceptive.

Santa Clara's centerfielder belted a last inning homer to climax a come from behind 9-8 victory for his Santa Clara Frosh team over the Rams in a game on March 12.

Rich Bandettini's seventh inning single brought in the runs that spelled a 5-3 victory for the college over Stanford JV's in a previous contest on March 7.

Following today's SF State game, the Rams meet Mission High, St. Mary's College, and the USF JV's on successive days, the later contest on Saturday, March 19.

At first base, the weak spot of the club, several players are alternating. Tom Murphy handles the keystone slot in the infield, teaming with freshman shortstop Booker Jackson, all league selection in the Oakland High School last year. Bob Quattrin, captain of the team, is the third sacker.

Leftfielder Ron Rosenberg was the leading hitter on the club last season with a strong .352 mark, and leads the offensive punch of the 1955 group. Stan Korich and Ray Vallejo complete the picket line.

The Gators of Coach Dick Boyle are exceptionally deep in catching. The outstanding new player on the '55 aggregation is backstop Bill Conley, who is supported in his role by newcomers John Salegni and Phil Ladas.

The SF State hurling corps is rounding into form after a shaky start. Returning pitchers Joe Heckman and Clint Lee were both winners last year, and their experience should profit the team this season. Star performer in the throwing department is relief specialist Elmer Clawson, who fashioned a flawless 4-0 record in 1954 with an excellent ERA of 1.85. Southpaw Bob Beach, who hurled the recent State win over City College, rounds out the twirling staff.

The Rams' attack has been aided in spots by poor fielding on the part of the opposition, but the pitching has shown well this season. Fischer recently singled out Steve Gallagher and Larry Nissim as being particularly effective on the mound during the practice run.

Hitting figures include only four games, but still show a greatly improved batting punch over the inept marks of a year ago. Second sacker Jim Candler leads the parade with a sparkling .500 average, followed by outfielders Stan Johnson (.429) and Don DeSurville (.400), catcher Ken Dito (.384), first baseman Rich Bandettini (.375), and hot cornerman Bob Zucca (.364).

WAA Basketballers Win Twice At Santa Rosa

Victory was claimed by nine City College Women's Athletic Association members on Saturday, March 5, when they defeated East Contra Costa 18-14, and West Contra Costa 16-13 in a basketball sports day held at Santa Rosa College.

Those women from the college who participated were: Myrtle Zanco, Eldonia Norman, who suffered a broken arm in the games; Irene Vengasis, Peggy De La Torre, Wyoming Robinson, Norene Phillips, Barbara Jones, Emily Bell, and Missie Pitts.

Business Instructor Harry Buttimer Sparkles In Tennis; Bright Net Career Includes National And State Rankings

By Bob Chrisman

Harry Buttimer's tennis fame graces a faculty which bristles with football, basketball, track and baseball stars.

Buttimer, who teaches business and accounting at the college, has been prominent in tennis circles since his teen age days. After graduating from Lowell High School, he attended the University of California, majoring in business administration. He received his master's degree in this field in 1945, after entering the college in 1940.

Buttimer began his teaching career at the college in 1947, and in addition to teaching business accounting, coached the Ram netmen for two years.

While attending the University of California, he lettered for three years in tennis, starring in collegiate doubles circles with Tom Brown, a San Francisco lawyer who is the sixth ranking player in the nation today.

Although Buttimer is currently ranked as the sixth best singles player in Northern California, he is a better doubles performer than in singles, rated with partner Harry Roche as the top doubles team in Northern California.

He plays the typical "big game," following a cannonball serve to the net. Equipped with an unerring overhand and cat-like volleying reflexes, he is most dangerous while at net.

In 1946, his record on the West Coast as a tennis star earned him a trip back east to play the tournament circuit. Buttimer and his doubles partner, Jim Livingstone, garnered a ranking of eighth in the nation as a team, and Buttimer received the highest ranking of his career as a singles player; thirteenth in the men's singles.

By his own words, the affable business instructor's greatest day in tennis came last May when he defeated Seth Peterson and Jack Frost, the thirteenth ranking player in the nation, in one day at the 1954 Pebble Beach Tournament, only a week after Peterson had defeated Frost in the finals of the 1954 California State Championship.

HARRY BUTTIMER, business instructor at the college, has an illustrious tennis career behind him, having won numerous singles and doubles championships. He is acknowledged to have the finest serve of any player in Northern California and is a top doubles player.

College Boxers Win 3-2 Victory Over USF Dons

Boxing was once again in the spotlight of success on March 3 as the Roy Diederichsen coached team defeated the University of San Francisco, 3-2, in matches held at the St. Ignatius gymnasium.

Highlight of the evening was the methodical pounding of Roger Nunez, as the 147 pound fighter punched his way to a decisive third round technical knockout over Joe Bondanza.

In victory, the Ram ringsters ruined the return of USF to dual boxing competition. The Dons, who are coached by Bay Area fight manager Joe Carlo, were inactive in the squared circle for eight years until the recent Far Western Frosh-Junior College Tournament.

Other results found Al Selalanca (155 pounds) defeating Vince De Bellis (USF), Ted Floyd (175 pounds) scoring a decision over Ron Pimental (USF), and Roscoe Jones (139 pounds) and Tony McFadden (156 pounds) losing to Jack Roddy and Phil O'Brien of USF.

Sports Stars And Films Highlight Block SF Meetings

The college's athletic award's society, Block SF, will hold its next meeting this Friday, March 18, in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium during college hour, Bill Fischer, sponsor of the group, announced recently.

This year Block SF, will, as in the past, host well known sports personalities at coming meetings.

These sports personalities preside at the meetings, point out highlight action on films which are presented, and give tips to the athletes on how best to play their sports.

A visit by George Wolfman, formerly of Mission High School and presently University of California baseball coach, is planned for the near future.

Intramural Offers Four Sports Here

Clubs, organizations, veterans and individuals who wish to be represented in the college's intramural program should sign up this week at the intramural office in the men's gymnasium, intramural director Alex Schwarz announced recently.

Although armed forces veterans are not required to enroll in physical education, they are nevertheless urged to participate in the intramural sports program.

Touch football, basketball, tennis and ping-pong competition take place this semester, and will be played on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Golfers Lose To USF By One Point

Preparing for their match against Menlo March 18, City College's golf team lost a close practice match to the University of San Francisco by one point.

Led by USF first man, Joe Fry, who placed high in the city golf finals, the Rams found themselves outplayed but not outclassed as each divoter hit in the high 70's or low 80's.

The match against Menlo, to be played on Friday at the California Country Club course in Burlingame, will find these five men trying to bring the Rams into the win column for the first time: Dave Watkins, who hits in the low seventies consistently and Doug Heidorn are the first two men on the ladder with third and fourth places to be settled between Dick Kramer and Rich Derry. Fifth man is Harian Hayakawa.

Jim Carlisle, Mike Evans and Bob Fontes are the three men singled out by Coach Grover Klemmer as most improved and who will do most to help the team this season.

City Hesitates On Using New Fields

By Emil Portale

WITH four new baseball diamonds just a stone's throw from the college proper, the Ram horsehiders should have large turnouts to watch their capers this season. That is, if the college, or anyone for that matter, is allowed by the city to use them. It seems that the top brass in concern shy away from having teams rip up the infant turf so soon after the city's tax money has been spent.

Ram baseball coach, Bill Fischer, has been steadily trying to obtain the Balboa Park pastures for this college's use. The success of his efforts can only be gained with patience. At the present, the Rams are taking no chances, and they have scheduled almost all of their games at Big Rec.

Last week the championship round of the Pacific Association cage tournament at Kezar Pavilion was held. Strangely familiar names appeared in a box score of a team called the S. F. Rams, Dave Davis, Theopolis Dunn, Norman King and Ike Walker were among the high point men of that team which eliminated Sarlos A. C. from the running, 82-55.

Best of luck to the S. F. Rams, which in reality are the college's cage team almost in its entirety, and they just might need it when they clash with the Olympic Club, which sports such hoop greats as Ken Sears, Russ Lawler, Ron Tomsic and Niek Romanoff.

Bob De Mattei, a student here, recently stood the bowling pros back on their heels when he rolled a neat 617 series to lead the field in the opening round of the Chronicle Diamond Medal bowling championships held on Bagdad lanes. The artful kegler hit 212, 188 and 217 in his alley antics.

Stockton College has the dubious honor of being the first junior college in Northern California to introduce rugby to its students, according to their coach, Don Hall. At least 60 enthusiasts signed up for the bruising game, which was introduced mainly "for students who like a contact sport not as complex as football."

The Mustangs are planning to field a team in 1956. The only problem is to find some institution to compete with them.

San Diego Junior College provided the world famed Harlem Globetrotters with a day of rest recently, when they hosted the clowning cagers in their southland retreat amidst 2,000 spectators.

So entertained and confused by the Globetrotter antics of playing "baseball" and "football" on the court, the San Diego bucketmen promptly forgot their guarding chores and busied themselves by wiping aways tears of joy as they went down to an all-in-fun, 69-34, defeat.

Ram Trackmen Meet Cal Frosh, Oakland At Berkeley Saturday; New High Jumpers Bolster Squad

In the last stages of preparing for their first regular season meet this Saturday, March 19, the Ram trackmen have been finishing preliminary trials and are ready for the foot fest with Oakland and the California Frosh in the 2:30 meeting at Berkeley.

Newest member to bolster the group's effectiveness is Bob Arterberry from Washington High. His high jumping skill will assist the locals quite ably. Coach Roy Burkhead commented, for the smooth appearing spiker cleared six feet one inch in a regular season attempt during last year's prep activities.

With the acquisition of Arterberry, the squad's standout high jump roster was brought to two in number, Norman King holding the other spot.

Injuries and ineligibilities have already plagued the team. Myron Zimmerman, a 440 standout, and John Apperson, a hurdle expert, have turned up with strained muscles and may be unable to compete in next Saturday's contest.

Even though the college cindermen have been stymied as far as depth is concerned, all the available manpower will be in good shape for the triangular meet, Burkhead said. Good conditioning will be a must in vying with Cal's Frosh, which has dominated track scenes for the past eight years, and the Oakland club, which has been rated as no less than fourth best in the coming Big Eight campaign.

California's Frosh team, relatively weak last year, boasts one of the best squads in the Bay Area this season. Sparkplug of the Bear Cubs should be Monte Upshaw, all-everything trackster from Piedmont, who has broad jumped 25-4 and is equally adept as a hurdler.

HEAD TRACK COACH Roy Burkhead, former USF football and track star, anticipates a successful season for his Ram trackstars in the Big Eight.

College Netters Play Stockton's Team On Friday

The Ram netmen will seek their third Big Eight Conference tennis victory when they challenge the Stockton Mustangs at Stockton this Friday at 2:30.

Tennis coach Roy Diederichsen will oppose the Stockton lineup with Ram netmen Les Jacobson, Walt Zoschke, Bob Chrisman, Alan Matsumoto and Lee Anderson.

The college squad overcame a strong obstacle to their Big Eight Conference hopes when they defeated a powerful College of San Mateo team, 4-3, at Golden Gate Park. Chris Vickery won the number one match for the Bulldogs, defeating Jacobson, 6-2, 6-4. Victories by Zoschke, Chrisman, Matsumoto, and Anderson clinched the match for the college.

Diederichsen is optimistic about this year's Ram squad's chances for the Big Eight championship. Last year, the college squad finished second, losing only to Modesto, 7-0.

Modesto's top six players will face four year college competition, while the remainder of the ladder will play in the Big Eight. Ray Samson and George Morfeitt, veterans from last year's squad, are expected to star for the Pirates again this year in the Big Eight.

Spacious Student Union Will House Cafeteria, Coffee Shop With New Design, Faster Service

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING of the new Student Union Building shows shucture as it will appear when completed this May. Patio area in center foreground will be accessible from both the cafeteria, under raised section of roof to left, and the coffee shop, on the right side of the photo. The Ramparium, student store, faces to the west and will be entered by path shown in right background. Raised rectangle on roof in center background will house special machinery and air conditioning equipment. Service area in upper right background will have Phelan Avenue entrance.

Limp Legumes Out With Special H&R Equipment

By Deane Wylie

Don't like soggy vegetables? Just one of many features of the new Student Union Building here will be the elimination of the old legume steam chests used in the west campus cafeteria in favor of steam-jacketed kettles that will prepare vegetables and other foods in small amounts as needed.

The spacious building now being completed south of the Science Building will house all Hotel and Restaurant department operations, including a modern cafeteria and a separate coffee shop with fountain service.

In addition to non-soggy vegetables that look and taste better, students will be able to get complete food service in nearly half the time it now takes to wait out the cafeteria line in rush hours. A new "open square" design will permit hungry lunchers to go to any section of the food counter, rather than start at the end of a long line even for one or two items.

All new equipment is being installed in the structure, including special plastic-topped tables and chairs in the cafeteria and coffee shop. An open patio entered through the coffee shop will offer space for leisurely meals on warm days.

There will be two levels in the new building. A classroom and storage rooms will occupy lower level space, with upper level area being taken by the large cafeteria and coffee shop, kitchens, food preparation areas and a pastry shop.

On the west side of the structure the Ramporium, student bookstore presently on the west campus, will be located, along with several offices.

Full occupation of the Student Union Building is scheduled for the start of the Fall semester in September. Construction is scheduled to be finished in May. General contractor is the Ira H. Larson Construction Company of San Francisco. Architect Milton T. Pflueger, Cloud Hall designer, also blueprinted the cafeteria building.

Plans are already being made for expansion of the building. Provision has been made in present construction to allow for an annex to the west. Funds for this purpose will be requested in a bond issue this November. The proposed addition would contain classrooms, several small rooms for group meetings, a large room for college conventions and other educational groups and student government offices.

Until the time that the addition is completed, some Hotel and Restaurant classes will be held in six portable buildings, to be located immediately east of the Student Union. Student government offices will also be moved to the bungalows, which are being moved from a discontinued elementary school.

With the close of the west campus cafeteria and fountain in June, student parking will also be transferred to an area to the east of the Student Union, giving students easy access to the new building and to other campus areas.

Club Cavalcade

Exams Cancel Club Meetings

NO CLUB meetings are scheduled this week because of midterms, but clubs will resume their social functions next week.

The Chinese Students Club is planning a skating party for March 25 at the Oakland Rollerland, 55th and Telegraph Streets in Oakland. The party will be held from 10:30 p.m. until 1 a.m. Tickets are being sold by the officers of the club.

Meetings of the Rally Committee are held on Monday and Wednesday from 2 to 3 p.m. in Building 2 on the West Campus. Membership is open to Associated Student Card holders.

The Hui O Hawaii Club is making plans for their Luau on April 23. It will be held in the auditorium and the admission fee will be $2.50.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held its first pledge meeting at Wawona Lodge last Saturday. John Grist presided as chairman.

Phi Beta Kho sorority met with Zeta Phi Sigma fraternity recently at the home of Don Wilson.

Zeta Chi sorority held their second affair recently at the Wawona Club. Members of Zeta Chi Sigma served.

The International Relations Club will sponsor a masquerade dance on March 25, 8 p.m. to 12 midnight. The Social Hall of the Spreckels Russell Dairy Company, 1717 Mission Street, will be the site. Admission for non-members will be 75 cents.

Guest Speakers Lecture Criminology Students

The Criminology Department will have several guest speakers this semester including speakers from the District Attorney's offices of San Francisco and Santa Clara counties. Others are from the state narcotics department, Youth Guidance Center, San Francisco Police Department, and from the Burglary, Rohbery and Homicide Details.

Eighty-five new students enrolled in the spring semester. One hundred forty-nine continuing students bring the total to 234 this semester and high interest in the criminology course prevented 54 students from getting into a single criminology class because of shortage of space, Mr. Fitzgerald, head of the department, said.

There are 23 campus police—11 of these are new. They have organized two pistol teams—four men in each team—and will compete in the national matches in Oakland against the country's best. They compete in San Mateo March 20.

Although X-rays are similar to those of light, they are thousands of times shorter.

Card Sales Reach $7055 Mark, Short Of Sales Goal

Slow progress is being made with the sale of Associated Student Cards, according to Karin Walker, AS Card Sales Chairman here. Last Thursday it was reported that an increase of 104 cards accounting for $520 had been turned in, bringing the total of sales to date to 1,411 cards or a total of $7,055. The goal set for this semester is 2,090 cards or $10,450.

Actually the increase in sales reported last week is one of the largest amounts turned in since the end of the AMS-AWS card sales contest, which was won by the AMS with a total of 290 cards, or $1,450, Miss Walker stated.

Friday, April 1, has been set by Miss Walker as the day by which card sales must reach the set goal without cutting out an important AS social function. Miss Walker stated, "One of the big social events of the AS may have to be cut out unless all AS cards are sold."

Graduating students were reminded by Al Kingston, AS president, that they will be charged $4.50 for caps and gowns unless they have AS cards. The purchase of an AS card will also allow the holder to attend the semi-annual Soph Ball without cost. The saving on graduation functions, cap and gown, Soph Ball and other AS activities amounts to approximately $40.00, Miss Walker said.

Because of a mix-up in tabulation there will be no announcement of the woman individual winner of the AMS-AWS card sales contest, according to Miss Walker. Emory Le Bonville was the high sales man for the AMS with a total of 109 cards accounting for $545. The AMS total was 290 cards and the AWS total was 212. Total receipts from the contest amounted to $2,510.

Tomorrow at the regular meeting of the Student Council at noon in room 2A, Bldg. 2 on the west campus, Miss Walker will present Bob Johnson, AWS president, with the perpetual trophy which goes to the winner of the semi-annual AMS-AWS card sales contest. Johnson in turn will present LeBonville with the individual winner's trophy.

At the last count a total of 679 AS cards are left to be sold before the goal of 2,090 cards is reached. The cards, which allow parking on the west campus, free cap and gowns for graduating students, and admission without cost to the Soph Ball and other AS activities may be purchased for $5.00 at the Student Bank, Science Building room 188.

The first grizzly bear captured from the wild was "Jennie" which has been on exhibition in City Park Zoo, Denver, Colorado, since 1903.

Sunday Music Course Conducted By Cahn

Meyer M. Cahn, director of instrumental music here, is conducting a radio course in music appreciation called "Making Music" over station KSFO from 9:15 to 10:15 every Sunday evening.

The thirteen week series, started on February 20, includes a relaxing format of all types of music with informative lectures given by Cahn to aid in the understanding of the proceedings. Students may even earn one unit of college credit for following these programs and passing examinations based on them.

New System Helps CAB Meetings

With a new master charter system and another successful club day behind them, the Club Activities Board here hopes to step up representation at board meetings to the near 100 percent mark, according to Robin Dunn, group sponsor.

Under the new charter system, each club turning in a petition will receive a printed certificate indicating recognition as an official campus organization. One copy of the certificate will go to the club president and the second will be put on display in the Science Building show case along with the master charter.

Requirements for a group name on the master charter, Dunn said, are representation at all CAB meetings, a list of club members and their Associated Student card numbers and a petition signed by the club president and faculty sponsor.

Of the 43 clubs here, he continued, 26 of these have handed in their petitions. Clubs officially recognized are as follows: Canterbury Club, Chinese Students Club, Horticulture Society, Lutheran Club, Masonic Club, Hui O Hawaii, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Alpha Phi Omega, Forum, Hotel and Restaurant Society, A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club, Phi Rho Pi, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Kappa Rho, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma, Alpha Lambda Chi, Delta Psi, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau.

Women Choose Blossom Time For Tea Theme

Blossom Time is the theme for the semi-annual Associated Women Student's Tea and Fashion Show to be held here on March 30, Tookie Radillo, AWS president, announced last week.

Women students from San Francisco high schools have been invited to attend along with AS women students here.

The Jay Vee Shop of 250 West Portal Avenue will sponsor the show. Helene Montrose will act as commentator, Miss Radillo added.

Models for the fashion show are: Barbara Batmale, Allie Green, Kay Griffin, Pat Harris, Yvonne MacFarlin, Mary Lou Reidy, Marilyn Williamson and Judy Wills.

AWS participation in the event is as follows: Mary Daley and Judy Wills, invitations; Kay Griffin, hostess committee; Joan Rettus, food; Karin Walker and Amy Lee, decorations; Lois Mantel, models; Joyce Weaver and Lee Carol Lomhard, set-up; Carolyn Fisher, programs; Claudia Spectzen, registration, and Connie Panagakis, clean-up.

More than one thousand students are expected at the affair, which will honor high school seniors and acquaint them with the college.

Final Deadline For Forum Magazine Copy Set For April Fourth

Students capable of writing satirical or humorous material are especially encouraged by Forum sponsor Catherine Connoly to turn in material to the college's literary magazine. Deadline for all copy is April 4.

Some vacancies exist on the staff of the 20 year old magazine for students interested in advertising, editorial or publicity work. Forum meetings are in C222 during college hour.

Members of the Forum committee who have been prominent in assisting Editor-in-Chief Edwin Brush are Helen Brewer, Melbourne Lockey, Dorothy Rader and Margaret Shour.

Material for the Forum should be typed with double spacing, on 8½ by 11 inch paper, Miss Connoly added.

$16,000 In Budget Appropriations Submitted To Student Council Here

A total of $15,966.54 has been recommended for the expenditures for campus activities, according to the finance report released by Bill Cirimele, Finance Committee chairman, to the Student Council Tuesday, March 8, for its approval.

One thousand dollars was recommended for the A Cappella Choir, $206.25 for Alpha Gamma Sigma, $350 for Band and Orchestra, $400 for graduation, $600 for dramatics, $175 for the Rally Committee, $400 for the sophomore class, $376.35 for the freshman class, $400 for the Campus Police, $325 for Phi Rho Phi, $500 for the handbook, $450 for Forum Magazine, and $162 for the Social Committee. This makes a total of $5,344.60 recommended for co-educational activities.

Under the heading of miscellaneous, $2,277 was recommended: $150.00 for administration, $400 for the Controller, $25 for the Dean of Men, $25 for the Dean of Women, $900 for the Executive Council, $600 for the Publicity Committee, and $177 for the Club Activities Board.

For men's activities $4,097.78 will be needed. This includes $200 for the Associated Men Students, $150 for the Men's Glee Club, $300 for the physical education department, $883.78 for intramural sports, $214 for the boxing team, $900 for the baseball team, $950 for the track team, $350 for the tennis team, $400 for the basketball team, and $250 for the golf team.

For women's activities $600 will be needed: $300 for the Associated Women Students and $300 for the Women's Athletic Association.

For publications, $3,647.16 was recommended for The Guardsman.

An estimated income of $7,100 is expected from all sources. $7,000 is expected from the bookstore, $2,376 from the reserve fund, $800 from the vending machines, $250 from the drama productions, $300 from miscellaneous sports, $250 from the Mardi Gras, and $8,000 from the card sales.

Originally $23,025.35 was requested by the college organizations, but $7,158.81 was deleted by the Finance Committee, resulting in the present total of $15,966.54.

Selections are being made for models for the Photography Department, Emmett Smith, photography instructor here at the college announced last week. Already chosen are Sonia Cordero, Barbara Jo Dove, Marilyn Johnson, Ruffina Martin, Susan Martinsen and Joy Place.

Certain basic requirements are necessary in making a selection. The women should be photogenic, with interesting facial plans, a slender figure and an ability to pose with ease and emotion.

Models who show ability may have an opportunity for motion picture work at the college. In addition students posing receive a free copy of their pictures.

Hours for modeling are from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Additional posing is with the advertising photography class on Mondays and Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Although women are preferred, men who are interested may contact Smith in Building Nine.

The photography class, in conjunction with the Drama Department, is now in the process of filming a 16mm sound movie, according to Bev Pasqualetti, photography instructor here.

This group meets for three hours at night in the auditorium where they go through rehearsals, camera set-ups and dry runs.

In Greek mythology, a monster with the body of a horse with shoulders and head of a man was called a centaur.

Everett Honor Students Visit Here Wednesday

Sixty honor students from Everett Junior High School have been invited to visit the college on Wednesday, March 23, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Along with the Scholarship Society Sponsor, Betty Scanlon, the group will be guided throughout the college by women students selected by Marion Cheader, Associated Student vice president. The group will visit as many departments as possible and are to receive catalogs and literature to further acquaint them with the college.

This visit is in accordance with a current movement in the public schools of the city to encourage the students at the earliest possible age to think about their college careers and to begin making plans for them, Dean Golding stated.

Religions On Campus Meet Student Needs

By Bev Swope

THE passage of Lent inspires some serious thought. No doubt most of us believe in a God and follow a religious belief in our private lives. But how many individuals publicly practice their faith?

In our opinion, religion is as much a part of everyday college life as it is a definite part of home life. For example, friendships demand a basis of shared thoughts and interests. What more unifying interest can be found than in similar religious viewpoints? This is only one reason why religious clubs are important.

No matter to what faith a student belongs the college offers a religious group for him.

The Canterbury Club and sponsor Katherine Pedley welcome students of the Episcopal faith and other interested students. The club has a national charter and is a branch of the national Canterbury Club. Social activities such as turkey dinners and snow trips are part of the fun.

The Newman Club is the Catholic organization on campus and is also open to all interested students of other denominations. Activities of this group include meetings twice each month at St. Emydius Hall, Jules and De Montford streets, plus a Communion breakfast, a college dance and many other social functions, such as the St. Patrick's celebration last Thursday night. John Selig advises the group, and Father Edward Casey is club chaplain.

Study of the Bible is the primary purpose of the Collegiate Christian Fellowship. This club is non-denominational and presently includes students of almost every race, creed and nationality. Howard Schoon sponsors the group's many activities. It is also associated with the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship in colleges and universities throughout the United States.

Michael Zarchin is the adviser to the Hillel Foundation, which readily welcomes all students of the Jewish faith.

The Lutheran Club conducts a weekly discussion group under the supervision of group sponsor Manford Mueller. The club meets during college hour.

With atheism and communism so much in the limelight these days, religious faith must not take a back seat. Such an impressive list of religious groups on campus is a stimulus for every student to practice his faith and participate in one of them.

Lee, Leong Win Square And Circle Scholarship Award

Amy Lee and Edward Leong were named winners of the Square and Circle scholarships, at an award committee meeting held last week, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Miss Lee is Treasurer of the Associated Women Students and a member of the Sophomore Council. She has served as Vice-President of the Chinese Students Club and as Secretary of the Club Activities Board. She plans to become a teacher and upon completion of her studies here she will enter San Francisco State College.

Leong, a graduate of Commerce High School, is a pre-dental major now in his second semester. He is a life member of the California Scholarship Federation and a member of the Chinese Student Club here. Active in Chinese community affairs, he serves at the YMCA and Recreation house. He plans on eventually going to China to do what he can toward raising the standards of living of the Chinese people.

These awards were instituted by a group of Chinese businesswomen and were made available for the first time this semester. The winners will each receive $125 and an Associated Student card.

Copy Good But Forum Needs More By April 4

Excellent copy has been turned in to The Forum, traditional college magazine of student writing, but more is needed, according to Catherine Connolly, Forum sponsor. April 4 has been set as deadline for the magazine copy, and plans call for distribution during the week before finals.

Manuscripts are chosen by vote of the 22-member Forum committee. Each member assigns a letter grade to manuscripts, and results are tallied the same way a student figures his grade point average. Paper patches are placed over the author's name during judging to insure objectivity.

Contributions to Forum, not to exceed 1500 words in length, should be typed with double spacing on plain white paper. They should be turned in to Miss Connolly in C331A. Material that is humorous or satirical, but not sarcastic, is especially desired.

Prominent members of the Forum committee are Edwin Brush, editor-in-chief, Al Argo, Earl Hess, Jack Loscotoff, Dorothy Rader, Joanne Thor and Allen Wendroff.

Students Picked For H&R Tour

Selected for the Hotel and Restaurant department's upcoming Annual Spring Trip from April 12 to 19 were Antonio Albini, Marvin Alldaffer, Joseph Herley, Donald Giovannoni, Leonard Lucieh, James Morrison, Barbara Pope and Robert Van Lieferingen.

Chosen for the sought-after honor of going on the trip because of class work, leadership and ability to represent the Hotel and Restaurant Society, the students will visit hotels and restaurants in Monterey, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Palm Springs and Fresno.

While on the seven-day excursion, the students will be accompanied by Acting Chairman Wendell Muntz of the H&R department, and Dean of Semi-Professional Courses, Louis Batmale.

Sponsor of the annual trip, held continuously since 1939, is the California Northern Hotel Association, providing the all-expense-paid Hotel and Restaurant tour each year with the assistance of the Southern California Hotel Association, which will host the students during their three-day stay in Los Angeles.

During the trip the students will visit approximately 30 restaurants in Southern California.

Competition for the privilege of going on the annual educational vacation is always high, especially this year, with a total of 34 fourth semester H&R students eligible. The eight students finally selected to go on the trip were chosen not only by their fellow students but also by all the members of the H&R department faculty.

'New Deal' Will Be Instituted At College Rallies

In the interests of increasing college spirit at rallies, a "New Deal" will be initiated at the track rally this Friday by the college sororities, fraternities and clubs, according to Glenn Allen, Rally commissioner here.

During the college hour this Friday and again during the April 15 college hour, a contest will be held to determine the best of several five-minute revues and skits to be presented by the college sororities, fraternities and clubs.

Two winners, one from each college hour contest, will be determined by an applause meter and will be eligible for a final contest.

During the June 3 college hour, the final contest will be held with the two winners in competition, Allen said, and first and second place trophies will be awarded to the final winners as determined once again by the applause meter.

Much college interest and turnout for the "New Deal" is expected by the Rally Committee. Allen added that the group hopefully anticipates the establishing of the "New Deal" as a regular semi-annual college event.

College hours will be held each Friday this semester except on April 8, May 6, and June 10 and 17 because of midterms, Easter, and pre-finals and finals weeks.

Free Passes Given For Opera Ushering

Tickets to see performances at the War Memorial Opera House and Civic Auditorium may be obtained in exchange for ushering at the events, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Passes may be secured in Dean Golding's office on the first floor of the Science Building. Usually, six persons are needed for each event and they are required to usher for an hour and a half.

Northern California Regional Conference Delegates Pass 4 Resolutions, Constitution

Four resolutions and a new constitution were passed by the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association in their regional conference, co-sponsored by College of San Mateo and Menlo College and held at San Mateo on March 12.

The resolutions and constitution will be submitted to the General Assembly and workshops of the CJCSGA state conference, to be held at Riverside on April 21-23.

Two of the resolutions were passed by the general consent of the General Assembly, presided over by Al Bolt of San Mateo, and the proposed constitution was passed unanimously without being read. The other two resolutions were vigorously diseussed at length.

The two controversial resolutions passed were the following:

1. A resolution supporting public school teachers and their right to complete freedom of political activity, and in effect condemning the boards of education of the communities involved in the ruling restricting active politics among instructors, was submitted by the Student Government Workshop. Al Kingston, Associated Student president here, put the college on record as against the resolution, but after rapid discussion it was passed.

2. A resolution supporting the bill now before the State Assembly which, if passed, would give each public two-year college the right to make the purchasing of a student body card mandatory was brought forward by the Finance Workshop. This bill was strongly supported by the college and passed despite scattered but vehement opposition.

Other resolutions passed were as follows:

1. A resolution, to be brought before the state convention for final approval, suggesting that all member colleges honor Associated Student cards of other members at athletic events and other similar affairs by a substantial reduction in admission price and/or other benefits. This move, presented by the Athletics Workshop, was slightly confused, but was passed with general consent of the body when finally straightened out.

2. A resolution, suggested by the Publications Workshop, suggesting that each activity represented by a workshop in each member college compile, at the end of each semester, a report on some of the problems encountered and, if possible, the solutions to the problems. The report would be sent to the hosting college of the next regional conference, and to each of the other members of the NSCJCSGA. In this way, some of the problems could be solved in advance.

The new constitution was worked on by a committee, with representatives from 15 of the 22 member colleges, until late on the evening preceding the convention. Marlon Cheader, AS vice-president here and secretary of the Constitution Workshop, received special praise from workshop chairman Alan Milner, of Santa Rosa, when he presented the constitution to the General Assembly.

Workshops were Student Government, Constitution, Rallies and Assemblies, Associated Women Students, Associated Men Students, Athletics, Finance, Public Relations-Publications, and Campus Organizations.

AWS Holds Annual Tea And Fashion Show Next Week

Senior women students from San Francisco high schools have been invited to attend the Associated Women Student tea and fashion show which will be held next Wednesday from 2:30 to 4 p.m. Tea will be served in the student lounge with the fashion show taking place in the auditorium, according to Tookie Radillo, AWS president.

All women students at the college are also invited to attend the semi-annual affair, Miss Radillo added.

Fashions will be provided by The Jayvee Shop of 250 West Portal Avenue, who are sponsoring the show for the first time. An array of afternoon dresses, sportswear, evening attire and summer clothes will be presented, Miss Radillo added.

Helen Montrose, a business administration major here, will be fashion commentator. Miss Montrose is a former San Francisco fashion model, fashion coordinator and show commentator, and has had experience in New York, Paris and London.

Decorations for the affair will be centered around the theme Blossom Time, with an Oriental touch added, Miss Radillo said.

Models for the fashion show are Kay Griffin, Alpha Lambda Chi; Shirley Downing, Delta Psi; Barbara Batmale, Kappa Phi; Judy Wilson, Phi Beta Rho; Allie Green, Theta Tau; Ruth Wolfe, Zeta Chi; Yvonne MacFarland, Women's Athletic Association; Pat Harris, Nancy King, Jo Glencher, Melanie Mead and Judy Wills, non-sorority. Alternate models are Anne Cancilos and Emily Archilles.

Committees for the event are as follows: invitations, Mary Daley and Judy Wills; hostess, Kay Griffin and Pat Baroni; food, Joan Rettus; decorations, Karin Walker and Amy Lee; models, Lois Mantel; programs, Carolyn Fisher; registration, Darrolyn Donnelly and Donna Gilbert; and clean-up, Connie Panagakis.

Music Department Plans Jazz Concert

To elaborate on an already widely recognized program of music study offered at the college, music enthusiasts here are exploring the possibilities of holding a jazz concert called Jazz at City College, comparable to the world famed Jazz at the Philharmonic affair, Henry Stroughter, band manager here, said recently.

Although the concert is only in the idea stage, the college musicians are endeavoring to gather non-band members here in order to obtain the best possible material for the performance, because many good musicians are unable to take the band courses offered at the college.

The concert would probably be held in the auditorium and last about three hours, Stroughter remarked. It would probably be the first student managed performance of its kind offered at any two-year college, or any university for that matter, he said.

As a whole, the idea was endorsed quite favorably by Meyer M. Cahn, instructor of instrumental music here.

AS Funds Buy New Choir Robes

After almost a year of patient waiting, the A Cappella Choir and Choir Director Robert Morton have been allotted $900 by the Associated Students for the purchase of new robes and stoles.

Needed since the choir began to experience growing pains a year ago, the robes, already purchased, will be used by the women members of the choir, and will be of a soft grey material with maroon stoles in contrast to the maroon robes with grey stoles worn by the men singers.

Contrasting colors of the robes is because the choir already possessed robes in two different shades of maroon.

First concert which the choir will give bedecked in their new outfits will be at the Presidio with the Sixth Army Band. On either May 8 or 22 the choir will sing at the First Congregational Church, Post and Mason Streets.

Allotted a total of $1,000 by the Associated Students, the budget is $700 larger than the choir's usual $250 to $350 allotment, and almost all of the overize sum is being spent for the much needed robes and stoles.

Arrival of the robes is expected on or about May 4.

Student Spirit Indicated By Poor Rally Attendance Here

ONE of the worst showings that the students of the college have made in recent years was at the intended baseball rally here on March 11. The support shown was definitely no indication of the kind of spirit that the college should show.

Of approximately 5,000 day students enrolled here, the highest count taken at the rally totalled 100, and this is a generous estimate that probably includes the entire baseball team, the entertainers, the rally committee, and the several campus police officers on duty.

By no stretch of the imagination can this be called good attendance. When less than two per cent of the total student body attends a rally to support one of the college's athletic teams, that is a poor commentary on campus spirit.

The record of the Ram baseball team, to this date, indicates a strong squad for the upcoming season, one of the strongest the college has fielded in recent years. Every position is well handled, and apparently the only thing needed to make the club a championship contender is student support.

There have been some complaints that the rally was not well enough publicized, and that "no one knew about it." Several announcements of the event were made, and there were certainly more than 100 students on campus who were aware of the rally.

The effect on the baseball team and the entertainers who appeared was a disheartening one, to say the least. Entertainment was provided by members of the cast of The Silver Whistle, the Little Theater's production at that time. Acting to rows of empty seats can be awfully discouraging, especially after the crowded houses that the comedy itself played to.

This is one isolated example, but similar incidents are all too common. The spirit is undoubtedly there, but so far it has not been completely unearthed.

Every member of the student body, especially each member of the Associated Students, must support the college's social functions if those affairs are to attain anything near success. Shocking and disappointing scenes like the baseball rally must be scarce if the college is to be able to continue the fine program of activities now in existence.

Only the students can generate the spirit necessary to the life of any college, and they cannot be forced to take an active part in social events. Only a real interest in the college will save the uniquely student-regulated activities program that we now boast.

The Spectator Technical Advances Aid Improvement Of Movies

By Bob Chrisman

HOLLYWOOD'S development of wide screen techniques and new sound effects marks an improvement in the production of movies.

By using oversized screens, the state of empathy in which the audience is suspended is heightened. For any novel, play or movie to be successful, the audience must suspend its sense of reality and yield to the action presented in the work. In a novel the plot, action and characterization must be realistic, and the same is true of a play, or else the viewer's sense of realism cannot yield to the synthesis of the work.

In a movie, the audience is concerned with the content but is also interested in the technique. For a movie to be successful, the viewer must feel that he is there, on the spot, watching the action presented. This sense of realism can be attained through the content of the movie, which is occasionally the case, or the use of technical devices.

Stereophonic sound and attempts at three-dimensional movies are being used now. During the presentation of The Robe, in addition to staring at Victor Mature's anguish-gritted teeth face to face, the viewer also heard music in the background—literally in the background, for loud speakers were situated in the rear of the theater, as well as in different places on the stage.

This placing of the sound in different places is as the sound would be located in actual circumstances.

Naturally, the wide screens increase the realism of the movie, for their greater size surrounds the viewer so that he is looking up and out into the action, rather than upon or at the action, as was the case with the old, smaller movies.

The pioneers of realistic wide screens used now were the polaroid glasses type of three dimension movies, but The House of Wax took care of this technique, which was surrealistic rather than realistic.

Another step towards greater realism by Hollywood is the use of technicolor in more productions. Five years ago technicolor was reserved for "epics" but now a third rate movie is often put in color to induce a larger audience.

Some of the deeper productions have been put in technicolor, but Hollywood has exercised discretion artistically in using color. Stark, sober films are put in black and white. Two of the best movies in the last three years have been in black and white: High Noon and From Here to Eternity. On The Waterfront and The Country Girl are also in black and white.

Both On The Waterfront and The Country Girl are being boomed for best movie of the year Oscars. Waterfront has received one such award already, from a British film guild. Such films which include A Streetcar Named Desire and Death Of A Salesman, are documentarily realistic in context, an effect heightened by black and white film.

By using larger screens, high-fidelity sound, and color, Hollywood has attained greater realism in their movies. The only thing left for them to do now is make a good one.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

NO JUNIORS Here: In a letter last week to Karin Walker, Associated Student Card Sales chairman, the downtown Paramount Theater went to considerable length to explain that information on the back of current AS cards, stating that holders get a percentage discount at the theater, was in error and caused confusion.

The Paramount claimed that instead of a discount, it allowed students here to buy a junior ticket at a price much less than adult admission. The letter went on to say, however, that junior prices had been discontinued some months before. Sorry, students will have to purchase adult tickets. No more confusion.

RISING RAPIDLY in Bay Area LP record sales is a disc called "The Investigator," originally a sharp radio satire broadcast by the Canadian Broadcasting Company and now sold under a "Discuriosities" label.

Written by Reuben Shipp, a writer who was quizzed by a congressional investigating committee, "The Investigator" is a story of events that take place when a rather well-known Senator leaves this earth and goes "up there."

Involved and investigated in the record are such personages as Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln, John Milton, J. S. Bach and Frederic Chopin. Also included are 10 or 20 men named Karl Marx. Acting is excellent and dialogue is wonderful. It's worth several listens.

AN ITEM in last week's Guardsman described how Photo Department models are selected, and listed a few "basic requirements" of model selection: "The women should be photogenic, with interesting facial plans . . ."

Plans for modeling, it's hoped.

PROFESSOR FRANK BAXTER (standing) broadcasts over station KQED from studios in the John O'Connell Trade School on Harrison Street. The educational series includes programs on general health, psychology, and Shakespeare. Facing the audience is James Day, station manager.

KQED's Achievement Citation Sums Up Educational TV Credo, Cites Intelligent Program Fare

"For bringing reality to the dream of an educational television station in this area; for demonstrating that non-profit television can compare favorably with commercial operations in production and programming; for giving the viewing public a varied, highly interesting and intelligent selection of educational features and programs; and for the credit it has brought to our area and our industry—an award for Special Achievement in 1954 is presented to KQED."

So read a citation presented to San Francisco educational television station KQED at a recent banquet of the Northern California Academy of Television, awarded after only six months of telecasting on Channel 9.

The citation could be said to summarize the educational television credo. While it has been noted that "nobody yet knows just what educational television is or even exactly what it ought to be," educators have called television the greatest advance in the educational field for both children and adults since the Middle Ages, when movable type was invented.

In 1952, protests of parents and educators across the nation submitted to the Federal Communications Commission, in objection to television programming of night club comedians, tap dancers and gangster stories shown just before children's bedtimes on commercial TV, brought the FCC to establish 257 television channels over the country for the use of non-commercial, educational television stations.

At present there are 11 such stations in operation, and assets of more than $25,000,000 have been made available for educational television. The Ford Foundation, through the Fund of Adult Education, set aside $8,000,000 for non-commercial TV usage.

From an initial grant of $150,000 from the F. A. E., KQED purchased operating equipment, and leased from the San Francisco Board of Education and the University of California space for studios and TV equipment.

The station is owned and operated by the Bay Area Educational Television Association, a non-profit membership corporation. Through $10 and $100 memberships in the association, the station plans to approach complete self-support on a community sponsorship basis. To date over $30,000 has been received from memberships and other donations.

From studios in the John O'Connell Trade school on Harrison street KQED broadcasts a diverse fare. Programs range from a series on general health education, presented in cooperation with the San Francisco Health Council, to chamber music by the internationally known Griller String Quartet, to a series entitled "This Animal World," intended to acquaint youngsters with everything "from bats to whales."

Commercial television, subject to pressure of advertising schedules, cannot televise educational programs at desirable hours, nor follow a consistent schedule. Free from commercial advertising controls, education channels as such KQED can aim their efforts at special interest groups.

In the words of the National Citizens Committee for Educational Television, established by the Ford Foundation to stir national interest, "Programs must be judged by their intrinsic excellence, rather than by how large an audience they attract. If these stations are to show what is best in art and thought, they may have to risk unpopularity in a way that educators should and advertisers cannot. The best thinking is not always popular."

In the field of formal, adult education, KQED inaugurated "telecourses," making college courses for credit available in the home on subjects including psychology, music appreciation, accounting and history. Recently concluded was a lecture on Shakespeare, by University of Southern California professor Frank C. Baxter, that won large audience acclaim.

The station employs a skeleton professional crew of 12 that includes an engineer and other skilled people necessary to produce the programs. Students from the O'Connell Trade School and from Stanford and San Francisco State man equipment and act as floor managers.

Bulletin Ad Has Sennett Touch

Mack Sennett took advantage of the feminine trait of individuality in sofar as articles of clothing go, and turned it into many a silent, slapstick movie scene.

He often shot scenes of women showing up at a dinner in identical frocks, then employed the old slow burn and pie throwing bits.

A quick glimpse of the Science Building's bulletin board shows that perhaps Mr. Sennett panned the femmes a bit too hard.

It seems a damsel is now in distress, because she happened to attend a dinner while wearing a jacket identical to one worn by another woman at the same dinner.

No pie throwing occurred, but said femmes did walk off with each other's jackets. This should pose no problem, but reading further one finds a plea for the return of the jacket, because "the one I have now is two sizes too big."

Sennett, it appears, has unduly wronged the feminine contingent of the population in creating an eternal wrong impression.

AS Funds Watched By Finance Head

Paying the bills, approving or disapproving budgets and balancing the assets and liabilities of the Associated Students are all part of the job of Finance Chairman Bill Cirimele.

Income for the AS fund comes largely from the campus bookstore, sale of AS cards, and receipts from drama, sports events and the Mardi Gras.

Each semester all AS organizations on campus submit a tentative budget to the finance committee for approval. A final recommendation depends on how much money is available for distribution. The committee works closely with the AS card salesmen, because as Cirimele pointed out, "the success of the card sales either makes or breaks the AS program."

Helping the chairman are Walt Frehe, Joyce Weaver and Dean Woods.

Trackmen Edged By UC Frosh, Whip Big 8 Foe Oakland; Rams Face CSM, Santa Rosa Saturday

By Emil Portale

Rocking Edwards' Stadium with flashy victories in the 440, low hurdles and broad jump, Monte Upshaw paced the powerful Cal freshman tracksters over Oakland and the Rams in a triangular meet held last Saturday in Berkeley. The Cal Frosh posted 75 points to the Rams' 65 and Oakland's 8.

Next Saturday, March 26, the college cindermen meet San Mateo and Santa Rosa at 2 p.m. in Santa Rosa.

Upshaw, with his 24 feet 2¾ inch broad jump, missed the freshman record by a bare one and a quarter inches. He also bested Ram John Carroll in the 440 with a :50.2 timing, and topped challenging Clint Redus in the low hurdles with a :24.5 effort.

Henry Stroughter legged out wins in the mile and two mile runs, the latter turning out to be a fight to the finish when Cal's Maynard Ormer got his second wind in the backstretch of the eighth lap and turned on the steam, only to have Stroughter do the same.

Cal's Leamon King stopped the clocks at :10 and :22 in the 100 and 220, respectively. Redus was hot on his heels in both instances.

Oakland's Hal Theus, by virtue of a six foot three inch soar in the high jump, brought home the only win for his team. Rams Bob Arterberry and Norman King tied for third with jumps of five feet nine inches.

Ram weight event expert Jack Egan topped sill with a 41 feet 3½ inch heave of the shot, and a 135 feet 3¾ inch toss of the discus.

Striding shoulder to shoulder for four laps with Cal freshmen, the Rams finally broke loose in the final stretch to win the relay in 3:26.9.

Unofficial Big Eight point totals credited City College with 98 and Oakland with 17.

Mile—Stroughter (SF), Orme (F), Reinhold (F), Hill (SF); 4:39.9.

440 yards—Upshaw (F), Connell (SF), Moorehead (SF), Diamond (F); :50.2.

100 yards—King (F), Redus (SF), Wiener (F), Fukuda (SF); :10.0.

120 yard high hurdles—Griffin (F), Baker (F), Kanihan (SF), Dinkelspiel (SF); :24.2.

880 yards—Williams (F), Robinson (F), Webb (SF), Brown (O); 2:02.3.

220 yards—King (F), Redus (SF), Connell (SF); Wiener (F); :22.0.

Two miles—Stroughter (SF), Orme (F), Reinhold (F), Castle (O); 10:13.9.

Mile relay—San Francisco (McIntyre, Hill, Connell, Moorehead); 3:26.9.

220 yard low hurdles—Upshaw (F), Redus (SF), Griffin (F); Merchant (F); :24.5.

High jump—Theus (O), Baker (F), Arterberry (SF), and King (SF) tied for third; 6' 3".

Pole vault—Williams (SF), Frick (SF), Bridson (F), Fenton (F); 11'.

Broad jump—Upshaw (F), Merchandt (F), Fukuda (SF); (record set) 23' 3¾".

Shot put—Egan (SF), Chastain (F), Carlson (F), Lacks (O); 41' 3½".

Discus—Egan (SF), Carroll (SF), Merchant (F), Chastain (F); 135' 3¾".

Ram, Stockton Baseball Squads Clash Saturday

By Mike Berger

After a resounding 15-13 win over S. F. State on March 16, the college nine will entertain the East Contra Costa baseball club at Big Rec tomorrow afternoon in the final practice tilt before the March 26 league opener against Stockton in the valley city.

Stan Johnson's homer, double, and single led the 13-hit Ram attack, which was also aided by nine miscues by the Gators.

The Stockton College opener, a doubleheader, will initiate the 14-game Big Eight Conference slate for the Rams this Saturday. Oakland College, newest addition to the conference, will host the Fischermen in additional league activity on March 29.

West Contra Costa, the conference champion last year, Stockton and Santa Rosa comprise the greatest threats to the title hopes of the Rams. The two former groups possess pitching staffs deep in talent, and are the big stumbling blocks in the schedule. The Bearcubs of Santa Rosa, like the college nine, are greatly improved over 1954, and loom as dark horse candidates for the blue chips this year.

In a previous contest on March 15, the Cal JV's belted the Rams, 14-8, with Dick Perry hoisting a grand slam homer over the boards for the Cubs to highlight the victory. City College bats were held to only six bingles by the Cal hurlers.

A makeshift lineup for the Rams was defeated by Mission High School, 8-4, on March 17, and on the following day the baseballers were edged by St. Mary's College, 4-3, at Moraga. On March 19, City College was trounced by the USF JV's, 16-4, as the college club was routed by a 10-run first inning for the Dons.

Interesting Items

Love, Literature Lost, Found

By Bob Jones

A story recently appeared in one of the San Francisco newspaper stating that a wallet had been found in the Ferry Building containing various cards and tickets.

Among them were three raffle tickets on a 1936 car, a pass to the Colonial Creamery good for one person and a friend, a ticket to the Women's Track and Field Championship of Northern California for 1936 and a season pass to the Marin Kennel Country Club.

Not to be outdone is the personnel of the Lost and Found department here at the college.

Various items, either lost or discarded, have found their way to Room S149.

Here are just a few of the things found there:

One picture of Glenn Allen, Rally Commissioner, unclaimed.

One woman's dress and petticoat.

One copy of Mickey Spillane's book. The Long Wait.

One Somerset Maugham paperback book.

Two bathing suits (not Bikinis).

Eight rightbanded and four lefthanded gloves.

One set of false teeth.

One biology dissecting set.

Twelve binders.

Fifty textbooks.

Various assortments of lunches, scarves, jewelry and raincoats and a few love letters safely tucked away in a lost textbook.

And last but not least, there's the ever popular dog. Three were found last semester, but one of them belonged at S. F. State.

Davis, Walker Named To 1955 Big Eight All-Conference Basketball Team

Two members of Coach Ralph Hillsman's third place Ram cage team have been named to the 1955 Big Eight All-Conference basketball team as chosen by the coaches and announced last week by Dr. Harold F. Taggart, league commissioner, in San Mateo.

Dave Davis, high-scoring forward in the college's attack and one of the Rams' top defensive men, was selected for the first team, and Ike Walker, another of the San Francisco squad's Big Three, was named to the second squad.

Leading the choices for the all-star five was Sam Hitcher, West Contra Costa's star guard and playmaker. Hitcher, a dangerous scorer as well as the team's floor leader, helped lead the Comets to the Big Eight championship by bucketing 22 points in a special title playoff game. He was the only unanimous choice.

Pairing with Davis at the forward spot was another West Contra Costan, Clyde Hardeman. Hardeman was consistently his club's leading scorer and finished second in the Big Eight in scoring.

Another high scorer was Jack Allain, center pick on the coaches' dream team. With a seasonal peak of 40 points, against Santa Rosa, the 6-8, 265 pound San Mateo ace led the conference in scoring, averaging over 20 points per game. Besides his scoring prowess, with his greatest point splurges coming around the basket, his size made him a valuable asset on the backboards.

Rounding out the first string all-league choices was Stockton guard Jack Cheney, the only holdover from the 1954 All-Big Eight. Cheney, only 5-7, was the playmaker of the squad and, although he usually trailed his teammates in Stockton's well-balanced scoring columns, his ball-handling set up many scores and was a vital factor in taking Stockton into the final playoff game for the league championship.

Named to the second squad were Walker, City College's leading scorer with 354 points in 26 games; J. D. Banks of West Contra Costa, whose 25 point average in the three-game State Tournament helped the Comets to third place in the tourney and earned Banks all-tournament honors; Harvey Fong, Sacramento's smooth-working and high-scoring pivot man; Len Oswald, the other Stockton guard and one of the conference's leading point-producers; and Fred Giannini, the bright spot in an otherwise dismal Santa Rosa season.

The coach of each member college of the Big Eight is allowed to submit two players' names to be considered for all-star honors, with the exception of the league champion's mentor, West Contra Costa's Rudy Hansen in this case, who is allowed three choices. A list of these 17 names is then made up and sent to each of the coaches.

Then, using only the names on the list, each coach chooses an all-opponent five, excluding his own players. The players receiving the most votes receive first team mention, with the next five named to the second squad.

FORWARD DAVE DAVIS, second highest scorer on the third place Ram team, won first place on the All-Conference Basketball Team for 1955.

Ingleside Horse Stables Turned Into Club House

Soccer and baseball locker rooms will take the place of the old Ingleside Police station horse stables in Balboa Park.

Included in the club house will be a spacious lobby and meeting room. There will be two baseball dressing rooms, large enough to accommodate 60 players. Two dressing rooms for soccer will also hold 60 players.

Also housed in this building will be an office for the director of the playground, a first aid room and private dressing rooms for soccer officials and baseball umpires.

The baseball field consists of two baseball diamonds with a bleacher capacity of 1000 seats each, and two softball diamonds with a seating capacity of 500 seats each. The approximate cost of the field and the field house is $260,000.

Because of the layout of Balboa Park there will be no need of a large cage around home plate to stop foul balls from damaging private property, as there is in other baseball parks.

The field will also have an automatic sprinkling system and its own pumping station. This will mean that the field can be watered at night in order to be dry during the day.

Santa Rosa Next On Golfers List

Coach Grover Klemmer's golf squad will face the Santa Rosa club this Friday, March 25, at their course in the second Big Eight match of the season for the Rams. The results of the first league match, played with West Contra Costa March 18, were not available at press time.

With scores of 77, 79, and 80, the college's golfers beat Menlo College on March 11, 8½-12½, and lost to a strong San Francisco State Club 11½-15½.

Despite the fact that in the SF State match Klemmer's divoteers hit in the high 80's as against State's high 70's, the coach is pleased with the showing as it proved his men are coming up to par. Klemmer also said that the winter months have hampered practice considerably and that the matches were practice and cannot be counted on to be an indication of league strength.

The Rams will face Sacramento Junior College in their next home game at Harding Golf Course on April 15. They are also slated to attend the State tournament May 16.

The maximum seating capacity of Yankee Stadium in New York City is 90,000.

Ramblings 'Cinderella Team' Surprise Of PAA

By Emil Portale

CLIMAXING eye-opening performances in the recent Pacific Association AAU cage championships, the "Cinderella" quintet called the San Francisco Rams was finally rebuffed by a talent-studded Olympic Club outfit. The Rams, a team composed almost entirely of City College casabans, virtually stood onlookers on their heads as the group swept past Sartos A.C., 82-55, and Alta Roofing, 71-62, in the qualifying rounds.

The champion Olympic Clubbers showed, as it turned out, that they were not just another team to be trifled with. After holding the all-star aggregation to 31-37 at the half, the Rams found that their well finished foes had too much strength for them when Ken Sears, Ron Tomsic, Bob Matheny, Russ Lawler and company pulled out all stops to roll up a 86-53 decision at the final buzzer.

Doug Hom, who also appeared in the tourney, potted 23 counters before his team, the San Francisco Chinese, was eliminated in the semi-finals.

The Rams must be commended for their outstanding play. It's unfortunate that the "Cinderella cagers" couldn't get under the wire before the stroke of midnight.

History records that in 1916 a young lieutenant, just graduated from West Point, was summoned from his post at Fort Sam Houston to coach the football team of a nearby school. The coach, one Dwight D. Eisenhower, found the spirit there willing, but the material sparse. Desperately seeking reinforcements for the skimpy squad, he suddenly spotted a husky specimen crossing the campus.

"Look here, young fellow," he called sharply, "why aren't you out to play football?"

The husky replied, "Lieutenant, I'll have you know I'm the principal of this school."— Thanks to the COS "Campus."

A certain celestial wire service might have this to say, if Tom Harmon hadn't said it first, that is.

It seemed that St. Peter and St. Thomas had wondered if their long unused golfing eyes were up to par, since they hadn't played in centuries. So, one appropriate day in infinity, the twosome stepped out on the nearest cloud formation and teed up.

At the first hole St. Peter sent a screaming line drive down the fairway, and he was rewarded with the ball, bounding onto the green and dribbling into the cup. Not to be outdone by any old saint, St. Thomas promptly retaliated by driving a perfect placement, matching his companion's hole-in-one effort.

This went on for the next five holes, each player banging out perfect one stroke attempts at each turn. On the seventh go-round, St. Peter took two practice swings, hesitated, and slowly turned to St. Thomas.

Eyeing him whimsically, he said, "Say, Tom, what say we cut out the miracles, and play some golf?"

Olympic Club Five Whips SF Rams In PAA Tourney Final

The San Francisco Rams, composed of City College basketball stars, racked up three straight wins to reach the finals of the Examiner sponsored PAA tournament before succumbing to the superior experience of a stellar Olympic Club quintet, 86-53, on March 13 at Kezar Pavillion.

This tourney was open to any amateur basketball team, and the San Francisco Rams did not represent City College, for in addition to the regular college squad, Eugene Brown, former USF Frosh forward, aided the Rams' cause.

The Olympic Club met the Rams in the final tilt, in the first half, the Rams held the star-studded Olympic outfit to a mere 37-31 lead at halftime, muffling such scoring stars as Russ Lawler, Ron Tomsic, Kenny Sears and Bob Matheny.

The Olympic Club came into their own in the second half and swept past the Rams, with Lawler and Sears leading the way, using a fast break to rip the less experienced Rams' defense.

Brown received The Most Promising Player trophy and made the first string All-Tournament team, while Theopolis Dunn received second team honors.

Texdahl and Johnson provided stiff competition in the semifinals, having previously defeated the powerful Athens Club. The Rams' superior condition and team spirit made the difference in the final score of 68-50.

With Dunn notching 21 points to lead the way, the Rams beat the shingles off the Alta Roofing Company, 71-62, in the quarterfinals. Speed and rebounding control provided the Rams' edge for victory.

Captain Sam Gellepes' Rams had little trouble in defeating Sarto's Athletic Club, 82-55 in their first game on March 6. All-Conference forward Dave Davis sparked the Rams in this game, scoring 19 points to lead the team.

College Meets Modesto Netmen Here This Friday

Powerful Modesto's tennis squad and the college netmen will clash this Friday at 3 p.m. at Golden Gate Park in a crucial Big Eight Conference match.

City College and the Pirates are the two strongest teams in the Conference, with Santa Rosa threatening as a dark horse with returning veterans Jack Schaefer and Ron Uehytel. If the Rams are to have a chance for the Big Eight title, they must defeat Modesto.

The Pirates will place their fortunes on the shoulders of returning veterans George Morfeitt and Ray Samson, their top netters. Tentatively, Les Jacobson, Walt Zoschke, Alan Matsumoto, Bob Chrisman and Ed Wong will represent the Rams.

The remaining league games are with Oakland on April 1 at Oakland, Santa Rosa on April 15 at Santa Rosa, and Sacramento on April 29 at Sacramento.

In their last match at home, played at the Golden Gate Park Courts, the Rams defeated Burlingame High by a score of 5 to 1.

The singles found the Rams winning three matches and dropping one. Another was halted on account of darkness. Led by the teams of Jacobsen and Matsumoto, and Greg Miller

WAA Sends Four To Yosemite Meeting

Four members of the Woman's Athletic Association here participated in a statewide convention sponsored by the Athletic Federation for College Women last weekend in Yosemite National Park.

WAA members here attending the conference were Barbara Jones, president, Eloise Marshall, secretary, Noreen Phillips, badminton manager and Juanita Hall, volleyball manager.

Block SF Donates $200 To Maestri Fund

At a luncheon today, the Block SF Society, which sponsored the Angelo Maestri Benefit Basketball game earlier this year, will donate a check for the sum of $200, collected from gate receipts, contributions, and sales of cokes.

The game was played between the City College Rams, who finished third in the Big Eight Conference, and West Contra Costa. The Comets dropped the match to the Rams.

Library Stocks Dictionaries In Braille Here

On a special shelf in the college library, there will be a seven volume American Vest Pocket Dictionary in Braille for blind students. This project of the Theta Tau sorority was undertaken by Diane Benninghoff.

Under the supervision of Irene Mensing, reference librarian, Delta Psi sorority has a program where the students work out pledge assignments in the library. The pledges donate 18 hours of their free time.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity has donated some pledge time to the library, by arranging the book stacks on the second floor.

Students who would like to improve their reading speed may be interested to know that through Grace Brown, English instructor here, there has been placed in the library general reading room a Reading Pacer, a simple device for someone who reads at a slow rate to step to an increasingly higher rate of reading.

Magazines such as Reader's Digest may be used in connection with this machine.

In the college library there is also a collection of books given by Mande K. Terzean, which number about 250. He is an instructor of social science at Horace Mann Junior High School. Terzean has had an interest in the college to the extent that he has annually made a presentation to the library.

Currently the library is featuring a collection of books on the San Francisco high seas, health, and biographies under the heading of Bring Me Men To Match My Mountain. Among the books on the sea are The Bounty Trilogy by Nordhoff and Hall; The Cruise of the Cow by Max Miller, and The Sea Hawk by Rafael Sabatini.

Willow Is Next Play At College Due In April

Following the successful performance of The Silver Whistle, rehearsals have been started in the Little Theater for the next presentation, The Willow and I.

The Little Theater experienced its first financial success as the receipts for The Silver Whistle totalled more than $150, resulting from two sellout crowds March 11 and 12.

The next play, The Willow and I, is a three-act drama by John Patrick which will be presented on April 28, 29 and 30 in the Little Theater.

Patrick's play concerns a conflict between an older sister, Mara, and her younger sister, Bessie, played by Melanie Mead and Anne Canellos, respectively.

Mara marries Robin, the man whom Bessie loves. Bessie decides to shoot herself, but when the gun goes off the shot causes Mara's mind to become opaque. This blankness lasts 40 years, during which Bessie marries Kirk, a doctor and Robin's son, both of whom are portrayed by Pat Hickey.

After 40 years have lapsed, Mara regains her mind and confronting a new situation in a new world finds fulfillment of happiness.

John Patrick, the author of the play, is remembered for having written the Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, The Teahouse of the August Moon.

Training In Firearms Starts For 23 Cops Here

Firearms training and qualification tests started for 23 campus police at the San Francisco City Police Range Monday.

Campus police will meet on Monday of each week until their training is completed, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here, said.

Keeping parking violations at a minimum is part of the curriculum for the campus police. Approximately 60 citations are issued each week to violators.

Parking permits can be obtained in Room 120C from 9 to 10 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The applicant must have a valid driver's license, 1955 car registration, and an Associated Student card.

Graduates Go Further

Criminology Instructor Cites Advantages Of College For Cops

College graduates go further faster in the criminology field, earn more money and find jobs more easily, with trained men in constant demand, than is possible for non-graduates, Fred Fitzgerald, instructor in charge of the criminology department here said recently.

New ideas in criminology studies and research call for trained investigators to use the scientific approach, replacing opinions with facts, and today's criminologist must be an expert in his field.

Here at the college, under the direction of Fitzgerald, a program in criminology is offered that prepares students for jobs paying upwards from $375 a month. Jobs for graduates will be available in local, state, federal and private agencies engaged in the administration of criminal justice or concerned with public safety and security.

Degrees granted in the pre-service criminology department are the Associate in Arts degree, involving completion of 60 units of college work with at least 20 units in the major field, and the Certificate of Completion, given if the student meets requirements of the curriculum.

The college's criminology department was originally organized in 1939 and conducted until 1942 by the San Francisco Police Department's director of the personnel bureau. It was curtailed during the war and reactivated in September, 1947, giving full academic recognition to professional training requirements of law enforcement service.

The college offers pre-criminology curricula to those students who wish to pursue more than two years of study at college or university undergraduate level.

Students are deputized by the San Francisco chief of police as special officers and are assigned to the college campus to work with three matters — security of property, assisting the Dean of Student Activities and control and regulation of traffic on campus and adjacent streets.

In many agencies the two-year program serves in lieu of recruit training because it goes far beyond the basic training needed to fulfill the requirements for policemen. College degrees in criminology serve in lieu of experience in many cases enabling the college graduate to begin work on a higher level of pay.

In summary, Fitzgerald said, "The professionalization of law enforcement will evolve through the efforts of criminology programs in universities and two and four year colleges."

Orzell, Steigerwald Resign; Posts Await Replacements

By Don Ball

Resignations, resolutions, budgets, and a special night meeting occupied the Student Council last week.

Associated Student President Al Kingston regretfully accepted the resigations of Ken Orzell, Sophomore member of the council, and Sandy Steigerwald, corresponding secretary of the Associated Students. Nominations for the vacancy on the council were received by Joan Rettus, Dean Woods, and Walter Frehe.

Nominees are all subject to an investigation of their scholastic qualifications. Corresponding secretary is an appointive office; as such it will be filled by a selection of the AS president, subject to approval by the council.

Myrna Taylor and the San Francisco Rams Basketball team were the subject of praising resolutions by the council. Miss Taylor was congratulated on her selection as the first attendant to the winner of the Soph Doll contest at the Inter-Collegiate Hop. She finished second in the Queen contest in order to become the Queen's attendant.

The Rams, who are not officially connected with the college, are all students here at the college. The team is coached by Ralph Hillsman, who also coaches the college's basketball team. Council commended the Rams for reaching the last round of play in the Pacific Amateur Association Basketball Tournament before being defeated by the Olympic Club for the championship.

Eleven budgets were approved by the council. They were:

Co-educational Activities
Alpha Gamma Sigma	$206.25
Sophomore Class	411.58
Phi Rho Pi	335.00
Campus Police	400.00*
Women's Activities
Associated Women Students	300.00*
Men's Activities
Associated Men Students	200.00
Publications
The Guardsman	3,647.16
Miscellaneous
Controller	400.00
Executive Council	900.00
Publicity Committee	600.00

*Denotes partial budget.

Delegates to the California Junior College Student Government Association conference in Riverside were chosen after a special night meeting of the council and the president's cabinet was held to discuss the potential delegates' qualifications. The final selection of the delegates was made by AS President Kingston and the council's acting faculty adviser, Dean Louis Batmale. The delegates selected were Bill Cirimele, Al Nieni, Al Moss, Marion Cheader, Paul Ortiz and Kingston. Karin Walker, Bob Johnson, Lawrence Lowe and Dean Woods were chosen as alternate delegates.

Sixty-Five Students Apply For Summer Jobs At Crater Lake

Sixty-five applicants were interviewed here on March 11 for summer resort jobs by Earl Smith, managing owner of Crater Lake National Forest Resort, Placement Director Joseph A. Amori said last week.

More than 200 students, both men and women, applied for the various jobs, which commence on June 13, but the screening committee narrowed the list to 65 applicants to meet the requirements as set forth by Smith.

The duration of the season is for 90 days and fits in well with the college instructional schedule. There are many fringe benefits and all the workers participate in welfare and recreational activities, operated by a workers' welfare committee.

Crater Lake is at an elevation of 7,500 feet and has a width of more than six miles. Approximately 400,000 tourists visited there last summer, while 30,000 utilized the facilities of the resort area.

College Hour Movie Shows Deep-Sea Fishing Near Acapulco Coast

Deep-sea fishing off the Acapulco coast will be shown in a film scheduled for this Friday's college hour in Room 5136, according to Mrs. Madison Devlin, acting audio-visual aids instructor here.

Entitled Pacific Sails, the color movie was shot from an outboard motor rig under the direction of the Evinrude Corporation, makers of boat engines and equipment.

Next film in the college hour series will be Adventures to Europe, booked for the April 1 college hour.

and Wong, they also triumphed in the doubles by the identical scores of 6-2, 6-2. Richard Yee and Don Wing also took part in the singles for the college.

In previous matches this year, the Rams have defeated Lowell High, West Contra Costa and Burlingame High.

College Honor Society Totals 90 Members

Sparked by a large amount of interest, the membership of the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society is steadily increasing. The membership totals approximately 90 persons, the same total registered late last semester.

Don Jensen, sponsor of AGS, stated that the society has been unable to contact the honor graduates from the high schools. These students, with the gold seal on their diploma, are eligible for membership in AGS, and together with other members of the society, are entitled to receive early registration numbers for next semester. A few early registration numbers are still being held in S160 for honor students who act promptly.

Members of the Executive Council of the society are President George Hernon, Vice President Joan Beckie, Recording Secretary Barbara Gock, Treasurer Al Brown, and Club Activities Board representative Dorothy Chittum. Also members of the council are the following members at large: Johnnie West and Hugh Twomey of the first semester; Dan Peters and Martha Lozar of the second semester; Eva Russell of the third semester.

Chairmen of the various committees are Miss Beckie, Service Committee; Ibsen Birgers, Public Relations. Committee; Ted Jensen and Barbara Bawden, co-directors of the coaching staff; Ken Maxwell, Election Committee; Miss Russell, Membership Committee; Miss Chittum, Mardi Gras Chairman.

Fort Miley Is New Location Of Air Force Unit

Formerly located on the west campus of the college, in Building 8, was an Air Force Reserve unit under the command of Captain Ronald Won. Recently the evacuation of the west campus forced the unit out and as a result it was relocated at Fort Miley, according to Won.

The unit is composed of veterans of either World War II or the Korean conflict who wish to remain active, Won pointed out. As a matter of fact the requirements to join the unit are that a person be a veteran of either war from any branch of the service, including the Marines.

Reservists are paid and receive retirement points besides being offered evening courses from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Won did not disclose the subject matter of the evening courses nor the hours or days that they are to be held. Further information on the opportunities and advantages of the Air Force Reserve may be obtained by calling Won at Fort Miley. Won's telephone number is HEmlock 1-1888.

It was pointed out that many members of the unit, which is now trying to increase its membership, are veterans attending the college.

Oakland Scene For '55 Flower Show

Designing of the college Horticultural Society's floricultural exhibit which will appear in the 1955 California Spring Garden Show at the Oakland Exposition Auditorium on Thursday, April 28, has been recently completed at the floriculture department here.

Consisting of a 675 square foot array of tropical plants adorning a modern-design patio floored with crushed marble, the displays will be foundationed by water pools situated on a series of semicircular platforms.

Modern outdoor furniture and a barbecue pit will accent the exhibit plaque which is presented to the president of the organization selling the most AS cards in the annual AMS-AWS card sales contest.

Also presented at the meeting of Student Council on Thursday was the plaque for the individual selling the most cards. The presentation was made to Emery LeBonville, who rallied the AMS to a win with his sales, which totaled 109 cards.

AS cards may be purchased at the student bank, Science Building Room 188 or from Miss Walker, whose office is in Building 2 on the west campus.

Club Cavalcade

Campus Clubs Active Again After Midterms

By Joan Anderson

SOCIAL functions are back in full swing after last week's layoff for midterms.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society on campus, will hold a meeting in C232 during college hour this Friday. Club plans and activities for the semester will be discussed. New members are invited to attend.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity will hold its final rushing affair, a formal interrogation, this coming Sunday evening. Their second affair, A Night in Hawaii, was held March 12 at the home of Don Geddes.

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity held their second pledge orientation last Sunday at Ed Emig's home.

The Chinese Students Club will hold a meeting during college hour. Their skating party is Friday at the Oakland Rollerland.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity is making plans for their annual Spring Fever Dance on April 1.

Phi Beta Rho sorority will hold its pledge instruction meeting tomorrow night at the home of Dana Christiansen.

A masquerade party will be given by the International Relations Club Friday night at the Spreckels Russell Dairy Social Hall. Admission will be 50 cents for members and 75 cents for non-members. Refreshments will be served free of charge. The affair starts at 8 p.m.

Members of Alpha Lambda Chi sorority will make a trip to Letterman Hospital tomorrow night. A business meeting will follow at the home of their sponsor, Carolyn Riedeman.

Theta Tau sorority will hold their pledge instruction Sunday at the home of May and Marina Seoras.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity will hold their second affair Sunday at Lake Temescal in Oakland.

Cheader Warns Clubs Of Fees For Events

Clubs here planning an event are required to turn in $5 to the Social Committee to reserve a date on the social calendar, Marion Cheader, Associated Student vice-president, warned last week.

Each group, she said, must also attend two consecutive social committee meetings before the affair it plans to give, and one committee meeting after the affair. If meetings are not attended, the $5 will be taken into the AS treasury at the end of the semester. Meetings are at 8:15 a.m. in Room 130, Science Building.

2090 Goal For AS Cards, April 1 Deadline Placed

Associated Student card sales to date have reached a total fund of $7,171, according to Karin Walker, card sales chairman here. The new mark is $829 from the estimated income of $8,000 which has been reported by Finance Chairman Bill Cirimele.

Miss Walker set a deadline of April 1 for the goal of AS cards to be sold. This semester's goal is 2,090 cards or a total of $10,450.

Lost cards may be replaced for a charge of $1 at the student bank, which is located in Room 188 of the Science Building. Miss Walker pointed out. To date 1,434 cards have been sold and one has been replaced.

At last Thursday's meeting of Student Council, Miss Walker presented Bob Johnson, president of the Associated Men Students, with a perpetual plaque which is presented to the president of the organization selling the most AS cards in the annual AMS-AWS card sales contest.

Also presented at the meeting of Student Council on Thursday was the plaque for the individual selling the most cards. The presentation was made to Emery LeBonville, who rallied the AMS to a win with his sales, which totaled 109 cards.

AS cards may be purchased at the student bank, Science Building Room 188 or from Miss Walker, whose office is in Building 2 on the west campus.

Twelve Models Named For Style Show-Tea Today

By Antoinette Mannina

Approximately 800 senior women students from San Francisco high schools are expected to attend Blossom Time, the Associated Women Student tea and fashion show, to be held today from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tea will be served in the Building 2 student lounge with the fashion show held immediately after in the auditorium, according to Tookie Radillo, AWS president.

Along with the senior women students, their assistant principals, head counsellors and senior class sponsors, AWS members here have also been invited to attend the semi-annual affair. About 500 women students are expected, Miss Radillo said.

Pouring tea will be Laurine Bergin and Mary Perry, college instructors, and pledges of all the college's sororities will serve.

The Jay Vee Shop of 250 Ocean Avenue, sponsoring the show for the first time, are presenting an array of summer dresses, bathing suits and spectator and active sportswear, Miss Radillo added.

Helene Montrose, a student here, and Miss Radillo are coordinating the fashion show. Miss Montrose will also be the show's commentator.

Models for the fashion show include Kay Griffin, Alpha Lambda Chi; Shirley Downing, Delta Psi; Barbara Batmale, Kappa Phi; Judy Wilson, Phi Beta Rho; Allie Green, Theta Tau; Ruth Wolfe, Zeta Chi; Yvonne MacFarland, Jo Gientcher, Pat Harris, Nancy King, Mary Terwilliker and Judy Wills, non-sorority. Alternate models are Anne Canellos and Emily Archilles.

High schools from which students are invited are Balboa, Galileo, Jefferson, Lincoln, Lowell, Mission, Polytechnic and Washington. Private school students invited are from Immaculate Conception, Mercy, Presentation, Sacred Heart Convent, Notre Dame, St. Rose, St. Peter, Notre Dame de Victoires, St. John, St. Paul and St. Vincent Schools.

General chairman is Miss Radillo. Committee heads are Mary Daley and Judy Wills, invitations; Miss Griffin and Pat Baroni, hostesses; Joan Rettus, food; Karin Walker and Amy Lee, decorations; Lois Mantel, models; Carolyn Fisher, programs; Darrolyn Donnelly and Donna Gilbert, registration; Joyce Weaver and Lee Carol Lombard, set-up; and Connie Panagakis, cleanup.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon Spring Fever Dance Ends Week Of Purgatory For Fraternity, Sorority Pledges

The frenetic activities of Hell or Help Week (depending on individual points of view), will be brought to a peaceful end Friday night, April 1, with the Gamma Phi Ypsilon Spring Fever dance, Dan Corsetti, Gamma Phi Ypsilon president, announced recently.

The dance will take place in Building 1, the west campus auditorium, which will be heavily decorated with greenery and other special effects to create a park-like effect, Corsetti said, and decorations are expected to top last year's efforts, considered by many to be the high point of the annual dance.

Also featured will be a fountain of youth, in the spirit of spring, which, it is said, will guarantee eternal youth to all who make a wish and drop in a coin. All proceeds from the fountain will be turned over to the Gymnasium Fund of the University of San Francisco, Corsetti stated.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. until midnight to the music of Jimmie Price and his band.

Admission will be by ticket only. Tickets are $1.50 per couple, and may be obtained at the student bank, Room S188, from Gamma Phi members, from pledges of any fraternity, or at the door.

Appropriate attire for those attending will be cotton dresses for women and sport clothes for the men.

In charge of preparations for the affair is Al Coppin, Gamma Phi Ypsilon vice-president. Assisting him are members Steve Korby, Jerry Carver, Jack Rossi, Abe Virdeh, Jerry Roth, Jim Brownfield, Eric Hansen, Jim McDermot, Brent Street, Ron Ferrario, Ray Vega, Milt Harper, Ray Marcott, Keene Turner, Roger Carver, Warren Jaklevic, Wally Goddesmann, and Bob Peters.

The fraternity is sponsored by Fred McFarland. Officers, other than Corsetti and Coppin, are Korby, pledgemaster; Carver, treasurer; Rossi, historian; Virdeh, secretary, and Turner, master-at-arms.

Clean-Up Drive Gives Prestige To Hell Week

By Bev Swope

WHOEVER put the purpose into Hell Week activities this semester deserves public acclaim. No longer are fraternity and sorority pledges obliged solely to perform foolish pranks to gain approval from future brothers and sisters, but instead they are using elbow energy to improve the appearance of their college.

Not just the college alone, but both pledges and members are benefiting from the clean-up campaign. Pledges learn that fraternity and sorority membership is not all play as might have been expected from former Hell Week activity. They discover that these groups of men and women are conscientiously striving to improve their college and add to its record and prestige among educational institutions.

Fraternity and sorority members also learn something. Perhaps they learn most from their own pledges. Examples of interest and hard work from the "lowest of the low," a pledge, are difficult to ignore.

Of course, the ultimate purpose of the entire cleanup effort is to make the college campus more habitable and pleasant for the students, a subject of praise by the college administration and faculty and a subject of envy by less fortunate colleges and universities.

Today, in the middle of Help Week activity, the purpose is being fulfilled. The college already looks a little brighter. Among the projects taken up by these industrious pledges are improvement of the Science Building Snack Bar.

These areas are being checked each morning by six critical judges, who allow from 0 to 10 points every day for each area. Sincere efforts will not go unrewarded, since the sorority and fraternity with the greatest number of points will each receive a trophy donated by the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils.

Sorority and fraternity members are urged not to interfere with the clean-up process, because the organization to which they belong will be penalized.

From Hell Week to Help Week is a big stride in the right direction, and campus fraternities and sororities seem quite determined to make the clean-up campaign a successful one.

Pledges Take Over Campus Cleanup During Hell Week

Hell Week, the semi-annual pledge period of the college's fraternities and sororities, this week finds the new members of the organizations devoting time to a campus clean-up campaign in addition to their usual pledge activities.

Each sorority and fraternity has been assigned a section of the college campus, including the Science Building, Cloud Hall, the court between the two buildings, the west campus and both gymnasiums. It is the job of the pledges to clean the area assigned to their respective groups each day of this week.

Six judges have been chosen to inspect the areas, according to Marion Cheader, Associated Student vice-president, and these judges will award points to each fraternity or sorority according to the thoroughness of the clean-up job. Trophies will be awarded to the groups earning the most points, and will be donated by the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils.

Any members of these organizations caught evading his duties or littering the campus will receive five demerits, Miss Cheader warned.

All fraternities and sororities on campus are participating. The trophies will be awarded at the Spring Fever dance in the Building 1 auditorium Friday evening by Phil Gaal, president of the IFC, and Mary Lou Reidy, ISC president.

Forum Copy Due By Next Monday

All material for Forum, creative writing magazine at the college, must be turned in to Sponsor Catherine Connolly in Room C331A or to Editor Edwin Brush by next Monday, April 4.

Manuscripts already submitted are excellent, Miss Connolly commented, but more copy is needed, particularly in a humorous or satirical vein. The Forum accepts poems, factual essays and articles, and short stories. None of this material is to exceed 1,500 words in quantity. Typewritten work is to be double spaced on plain white paper.

The material will be proofread and judged by the Forum committee, which includes Don Ball, Barry Cockerill, Bob Burmister, Bob Chrisman, Melbourne Lockey, Fred Hill, Margaret Shour, the Forum's advertising manager, and Alan Wendroff, managing editor.

The week before finals has been established by the Forum staff as the week for releasing the magazine. This publication will be free to Associated Student members, but will cost non-members 50 cents. A budget of $450 has been approved for the Forum by the Student Council. The magazine staff hopes to gain half that sum from advertising revenues and sales to non-AS members.

Forum meetings are held each Friday college hour in Room C222.

College Classes Recess For 3 Day Easter Holiday

College classes will be in recess from Wednesday, April 6, to Friday, April 9, for Easter holidays.

The Guardsman will not be published during the week of vacation nor in the following week of April 11. Publication will be resumed with issue number seven Wednesday, April 20.

Clubs Urged To Submit Petitions

All campus clubs and organizations are asked to submit their petitions to the Club Activities Board as soon as possible, according to Ed Dollard, CAB chairman.

Twenty-six out of the 43 clubs have submitted their petitions. They are Alpha Gamma Sigma, Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Sigma Delta, A Cappella Choir, Alpha Lambda Chi, Beta Tau, Canterbury Club, Chinese Club, Delta Psi, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Forum, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Horticulture Society, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Hui O Hawaii, Kappa Phi, Kappa Rho, Lambda Phi, Masonic Club, Men's Glee Club, Phi Beta Delta, Phi Beta Rho, Phi Rho Pi, Tau Chi Sigma and Theta Tau.

The Lutheran Club charter was returned because it was incomplete. Lack of petition caused the Block SF charter to be returned.

At last week's CAB meeting a recommendation was adopted to limit the number of high school students attending the college dances. It was resolved that:

1. Letters be sent to high schools.
2. There would be an announcement on the public address system.
3. Guest passes would be sold before the dance.
4. A hand stamp would be used and a closer watch would be kept at the door.

This policy will be used at next semester's CAB dance. Dollard urged that it be used at the USA dance to be held Friday, April 15.

Twenty-Eight Alumni Up For Board Vacancies

Twenty-eight names are before the Board of Directors of the college's Alumni Association as candidates to fill the vacancies existing on the board. Candidates will be selected in order to bring the board's roster up to the required 16 members.

All candidates have been active in student affairs while attending the college.

Kingston Clarifies Conference Stand

Clarification of a stand taken by the college's delegation at the Northern Section, California Junior College Student Government Association regional conference held in San Mateo on March 12 was made yesterday by Al Kingston, Associated Student president here, who headed the delegation.

It was erroneously reported that Kingston, speaking for the college delegation, opposed a resolution advocating complete political freedom for teachers in public schools. Actually, his opposition, in which he was backed by the other members of his delegation of 24, was to the presentation of such a resolution to the NSCJCSGA. The student delegation representing the college felt that such a resolution in a conference of this type was not relevant to the business of a student government conference.

Club Meetings Set For College Hour

Club meetings will be held this college hour from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. in rooms assigned, according to the college hour schedule released at the beginning of the semester.

Sororities, fraternities and clubs interested in presenting acts at an entertainment rally during college hour Friday, April 15, should contact the Rally Committee immediately, according to Glenn Allen, Rally Commissioner here.

Skits and revues, not to exceed five minutes in length, will be judged by an applause meter. Winner and runner-up will be presented with trophies at the semester's final rally.

Officers of the Rally Committee are Allen, commissioner; Bob Frick, assistant commissioner; Kay Griffin, secretary; Joan Rettus, student council representative, and Gloria Tempkin, CAB representative.

College hours will be held every Friday this semester excepting April 8, May 6, and June 10 and 17. The Rally Committee hopes to make this type of rally permanent in the college's program.

Hell Week Becomes Help Week As Pledges Put Energy To Work

AFTER many years and innumerable suggestions to the effect, the fraternities and sororities on campus have decided to turn the excess energy of their eager pledges to a useful purpose, and Hell Week has finally become Help Week.

We strongly feel that these campus organizations have made a long step in the right direction. Wanting to pledge their new recruits is certainly all rights, and most of the idiotic stunts that the newcomers have endured in the past were all in fun. Undoubtedly, some of these "unusual" stunts will continue.

There are many who feel that without these typical Pledge Week activities, the spirit of the fraternities and sororities would be lost. These people have an argument, and some of the farces perpetrated are in good clean fun, Too many, however, simply serve to make the pledges look like low-grade morons and degrade both them and the fraternity or sorority whose beanie they wear.

This semester something new has been added. Each fraternity and sorority has been assigned a section of the campus, including the Science Building, Cloud Hall, the court between the two buildings, the west campus and every other part of the college's territory. The job of these groups is to keep their respective sections clean each day of this week, Pledge Week, and each organization will be graded according to the job they do.

The problem of keeping the campus clean is not a new one. The snack bar in the basement of the Science Building is a horrible example, and it does not stand alone as a site both degrading and demoralizing to the college and the students. Now perhaps something will be done about it.

This job of keeping the campus presentable should not be left to the pledges of the fraternities and sororities. If each student here would mind his manners and observe simple rules of cleanliness and courtesy, there would be little or no mess for the pledges to clean up.

Phil Gaal and Mary Lou Reidy, presidents of the Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils respectively, the presidents of all of these groups on campus, and everyone else connected with the idea and the realization of the idea are to be congratulated. They have started a Hell Week activity that we hope to see last for a long time.

We sincerely hope that the pledges will have the help of all students here this week in keeping the campus clean, and that this will mark the beginning of a year-long campaign in which each week is Help Week.

Couples, Convertibles Prove Spring Sprung; 53 Days Left

By Mary Jones

Spring has been blamed for everything from "Spring fever" to turning the fancy of a young man to thoughts of love. Many songs and much poetry has been written about this season, which, incidentally, appeared on time this year. In fact, some persons may think it arrived a bit early, and that brings us to the question of, "What is spring?"

According to reliable sources, spring is that season of the year between winter and summer, usually including the months of March, April and May in the United States, when plant life begins to vegetate and grow.

The vernal equinox on March 21 marks the beginning of spring. The days and nights are equal. The length of the day is 12 hours. The sun is ascending 6 hours and descending the same amount of time.

In hot regions of Central and South America, the seasons are divided into dry and wet, and they occur suddenly, without definite transitional periods.

Out at the college here, spring is the week after the first mid-terms. It is a time for colorful feminine costumes to blossom from beneath polo coats, a time for men to wear opened-necked shirts with daringly-hued pullover sweaters.

A sure sign of spring fever is the straying eyes of students to the bright sunshine outside, rather than to the classroom assignment in front of them. Couples dotting the lawns give evidence that this season is a time of fancies being channeled in the direction of seemingly warmer friendships.

Open-top convertibles and wind-swept hair, gathered crowds in the courtyard instead of in the library and the cafeteria, broadcast the fact that spring is definitely here.

With the coming of spring, the calculations of many students here at the college tell them that in 53 more college days, another semester will end and the beginning of a wildly anticipated summer vacation will be underway.

Smokey Leaves College For Greener Pastures

Tenant Horse Retires To Novato To Lead Select Herd Of Superior Steeds

By Dolores Stoffers

Smokey, the college's philosophical tenant horse, is no longer watching over the college.

He has retired to Novato where he will resume leadership of a select herd. This herd, says Smokey, is among the finest in the world, and is the envy of neighboring herds.

According to Smokey, the members of his herd are only the best of steeds, and can be recognized the world over by their distinctive brands. Consequently, not all horses can be affiliated with the herd. Smokey, along with a few of his most trusted cohorts, choose its members, keeping in mind the future welfare of the herd.

"Needless to say," added Smokey, "my pack's components are not the usual wild, untamed, uncouth type found in the typical unorganized herd."

Fist of all, he said, they must be slightly tame, at least to the point where they know and conform to all recognized horse sense.

Other factors taken into consideration are their adaptability to a new and superior way of life, their acceptability in equine society, and their personal appearance. Smokey admitted that a steed's possibility of being a definite asset to the herd holds the most weight in the selections.

Great caution and subtlety is taken to assure the admission of only the best into the herd. Its members wander throughout the countryside and mingle with interesting prospects, taking care to put on their best manners and show their incomparable personalities so that no other herd will take them in, and thus overpower Smokey's herd in prestige.

By the time the integrating into the herd takes place, he says, most of the deadbeats of the great throng of colts clamoring to be admitted have been weeded out.

Smokey ashamedly confessed though, that at times his cohorts' personal evaluations are wrong. For this reason, all new members are admitted on a probational basis and are reduced to a state of servitude. They must undergo an excruciating period of self-indignity and shame. This they do gleefully, however, as they know that soon they will be full-fledged members of the herd, and no sacrifice is too great for this.

Occasionally there are wrong-doers, said Smokey, and they, along with the wrong-thinkers, must be either punished or ejected.

All this occurs sometime around April Fool's Day, he said, which must signify something, but this is neither here nor there.

Soon only the most intelligent, trustworthy, personable steeds are left, and members, new and old, trot side by side down to Trigger's for a bale of hay or something.

War Relics Link Trainers Lie Grounded In Snack Bar

For some time one of the college's minor mysteries has been the two link trainers in the basement cafeteria of the Science Building. These link trainers are to assist classes in air navigation, but the college offers no course in air navigation.

So the link trainers, acquired shortly after World War II, are put to all sorts of uses not planned by manufacturers. Their stands are disposal areas for cups bearing traces of the health-giving juices of the coffee bean. Their cockpits, where fledgling cadets once made their maiden flights, are disposal areas for spare parts and dust.

Curious students have ignored the "no step" signs stencilled on these penguins, giving the miniature aircraft the appearance of having been through many bombing missions.

Perhaps the college plans to use its link trainers in a cadet training program, to augment the government's reserve plans. Enlistments into such a program could be induced by gaudy uniforms, high pay, promises of security and press gangs.

Discipline could be enforced by having evil doers run 200 times between the gymnasiums and Cloud Hall. A general could be elected by Associated Student members, to review the troops on the west campus parking lot, on the horse, of course.

Imagine the pride students would feel to read: RAM FLIERS DOWN NINE MIGS in the sports page of their Wednesday Guardsman.

Two-week summer cruises, a must to any military program, could be accomplished at any number of establishments such as Crater Lake, Tahoe or Pinecrest. For cadets over 21 training could take place at any number of interesting littleplaces in the city.

Lines, another integral part of service life, could be handled at registration and at lunch time at the H&R cafeteria.

Or perhaps the link trainers should be equipped with handy machines that convert nickels into rides.

10 Women Students Brighten Motorama

General Motors' $5,000,000 Motorama presently in progress at the Civic Auditorium is being brightened considerably by 10 attractive women students from the college.

Acting as hostesses and working on demonstration machines are Georgia Baldasarri, Anne Canellos, Francine Catania, Joanne Dahl, Janet Foehr Adele Mallinger, Marcia Moore, Jann Palmer, Marilyn Sicotte and Myrna Taylor. Moving next to Boston, the show closes Sunday.

The crookedest street in the United States is one block of Lombard Street, in San Francisco.

Trends Of Times Reflected In Pages Of Forum Magazine

The week before finals marks the appearance of Forum, the college's literary magazine, a barometer which for 18 years has kept a knowing finger on the pulse of student opinion.

The Forum began as a discussion group under the direction of Dorothy Mercer, English instructor here. The group usually had literary as well as argumentive interests, which led to the airing of opinion in print by members.

In the beginning, the magazine was a mirror of the spirit of the times. Echoes of the depression, pacifism, and patriotism along with parodies of surrealistic art forms, found their way into Forum's pages in the years before World War II.

Peace in 1945 saw an influx of veterans, resulting in a preponderance of war stories. Recently the trend has been toward a more literary and less controversial magazine.

Famous alumni of the Forum include Thomas Parkinson, writer and teacher, whose best known work is a critical commentary on the Irish poet William Butler Yeats, Conrad March and Henry Evans, owner of the Porpoise Bookshop.

Advertising has been accepted by the magazine since 1949. Distribution problems were eased when the college moved to its present site in 1940.

Evasive Photog Creates Wonder

PHOTOGRAPHY IS RAPIDLY ADVANCING as an art, and it seems that photographers are developing into a race all their own. This bird's eye view of the main entrance to the Science Building suggests that the photographer was either quite agile in another art, aero-acrobatics, or possessed the contortive ability to stretch his neck to tremendous lengths. Where was said photographer while creating this gem? Well he could have been suspended from the shelter by a rope about the waist, or it could be that he, striving for reality, snapped it while leaping.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

TWENTY strong-armed H&R students assisted the Fairmont Hotel's catering staff last Friday night in serving at a General Motors Motorama preview for a select group of San Franciseans. No figures have been released yet on total refreshments consumed, but at last year's preview more than 3,000 drinks were given out. The affair was a rousing success.

Now in progress at the Civic Auditorium, GM's well-polished presentation employs a bevy of City College dolls to staff several displays showing steps in auto assembly lines, including the now famous radiator cap operation where Lee Mortwether last year first faced, kind of, the public.

She wore a white shop coat and pulled caps from the machine, but to the audience all that was seen of Miss America's now famous person were big blue letters reading "GM Motorama." This angle of Lee's past has been soft-pedaled by the Nash rhetoric people, now one of her sponsors. During her year's reign Miss A may ride officially in no other car but a Nash.

Hawaii Calls Kalua Pig Feast Here April 23; Students Invited

All students of the college are invited to enjoy a Kalua Pig luau, sponsored by Hui O Hawaii, the college's Hawaiian Club, on April 23, according to Darlus Chung, the club's president.

The Kalua Pig dinner was originally prepared for the first king of the Hawaiian Islands, and afterwards was accepted as a formal dinner of the Hawaiian royal family. And today Hawaiian people celebrate all kinds of special occasions with this dinner, Chung said.

First step in preparation of the Kalua Pig dinner is digging a hole big enough for a full sized pig. A wall of heated Imu rocks is then made in the hole.

Stuffing and seasoning the pig is done at the same time as the digging of the hole. Then the pig is wrapped first with banana and then with tl leaves and finally with chicken wire.

Finally the pig is set to cook in the hole and covered with soil and more heated Imu rocks.

After four hours the pig is taken from the pit and eaten. In addition to the Kalua Pig dish, Lumi Lumi salmon, Hua Pia, chicken long rice and baked potatoes are included in this six-course dinner.

Tickets for the Hui O Hawaii dinner cost $2.50 and may be purchased from Chung. The luau will be held in Building 1 at 8:30 p.m. The Hawaiian Club is sponsored by the International Relations Club, with Joseph Jacobsen, counsellor, faculty sponsor.

Three League Crucials Loom For College Nine In Oakland, Comet, San Mateo Matches

By Mike Beigers

City College will plunge into the thick of the Big Eight baseball race this Saturday, April 2, as they host the Oakland College Blues at Big Rec field.

Having played three Big Eight conference games already, the crucial middle games of the schedule now loom ahead for the Rams. The old diamond adage that one must beat the weak teams to rate among the strong ones will have to be proved by the men of Coach Bill Fisher if they are to be contenders for the conference title.

The Oakland team is just getting organized, since this is the first year of diamond competition for the newest league school. Such performers as Will Souza, Jim Stockton, and Frank Wells are without college experience, but were standouts in East Bay high schools.

After conference inactivity for a week, the Rams will take on the San Mateo nine in a pair of tilts on Tuesday, April 12, and Saturday, April 16, the latter contest being a home affair.

Paced by the hitting of outfielder Lanny Wallwork and the sterling defensive play of shortstop Bob Cunningham, the speedy Bulldog club of Coach Herb Hudson is shaping a record superior to that of 1954. Arnie Brooks, Paul Conrad, Wally Garcia, Bob Harrington, and Buek Shore are the nucleus of an improved hurling group.

Following the duo of games with San Mateo, the college nine will meet the West Contra Costa Comets, last year's conference champs, for the first time this season on Tuesday, April 19, at Big Rec, the Ram's home field.

Coach Gene Corp's Comets look just as formidable to opponents this season as last. Basketball standout Sam Hitcher will be around some more this spring to give baseball headaches to foes by virtue of his excellent hitting, which leads the club's attack. Pitcher Ray Luce, rated as one of the best in the loop by the various coaches, heads a strong mound staff which also includes Rich Smith and Gene Stang.

The last college practice game for the Rams on March 24 saw the Rams besting East Contra Costa, 9-2, behind the pitching of Stan Johnson.

Inter-Fraternity Hoop League Starts April 5

An inter-fraternity basketball league, with play to commence Tuesday, April 5, was announced yesterday by Don Baroni, Men's Athletic Commissioner here, and his assistant, Bob Geppert.

The seven fraternities represented are Beta Tau, Alpha Sigma Delta, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Gamma Phi Epsilon, Zeta Phi Sigma, Tau Chi Sigma and Beta Phi Beta, last year's champions.

The April 5 opener will highlight Beta Tau and Zeta Phi Sigma, with the nightcap between Alpha Phi Epsilon and Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

College Golfers Trounce West Contra Costa In Conference Match

Topping all their previous scores, City College's golfers easily beat West Contra Costa, 14-1, in a Big Eight Conference match held March 18 at Harding Golf Course.

The Rams are awaiting their third league match against Oakland this Friday, April 1, to be played at Sequoia Golf Course in Oakland.

Rich Kramer shot his best game to date with a score of 77, while Dave Watkins was only a stroke behind with 78. Rich Derry and Harlan Hayakawa turned in their usual sound performances, Coach Grover Klemmer commented.

Although only five men can compete in any given match, the Rams have 12 men competing for starting positions on the varsity ladder, with the fourth through seventh players separated by only three strokes in their respective scores.

Two more league games follow the Oakland match on successive Tuesdays, April 12 and April 19, against Sacramento and Stockton, respectively. The Sacramento match will be played at Harding Golf Course.

Following the windup of the Big Eight round robin golf championship, the college golfers will compete in the annual Big Eight Conference Tournament, which is tentatively scheduled for May 13 and 14 at Stockton.

Baxter, Ex-Ram Star, Aids USF Title Victory

WARREN BAXTER, top scorer on the '53-'54 Rom basketball squad.

When Warren Baxter, high-scoring All-Conference guard on the City College 1953-54 basketball squad, chose University of San Francisco to finish his education and basketball days, he stepped from high class into higher class.

USF's Dons, with Baxter contributing his share, climaxed a truly great season last week when they whipped LaSalle and Tom Gola, 77-63, to capture the NCAA championship and earn once and for all the number one rating that they had won during the regular season.

Despite his season-long scoring spree for the Rams last year and his finesse as a passer and ball-handler, Baxter was forced to an early-season spot on the bench. With two great veterans, K. C. Jones and Hal Perry, sparking the club, Coach Phil Woolpert's Dons were well set at the guard spots.

Starting as the number five guard on the squad at the first of the year, the 5-8 Baxter worked his way up to the number three guard slot behind Jones and Perry. As the season progressed, so did his amount of playing time and his material contribution to the team.

In his first year at City College, Baxter spent most of his time on the Rams' bench, but the following year, in the 1953-54 season, he combined the coaching of Ralph Hillsman, City College mentor, and his daily summer workouts with K. C. Jones, even then a top guard with USF and now Baxter's teammate, to win a first string berth and All-Conference honors. He hucketed 212 points in 12 conference games for a 17.7 average and second place league scoring honors.

The top performance of the season for the junior guard came against Colorado in the semi-finals of the NCAA tourney at Kansas City. As a replacement for Hal Perry, the speedy Baxter impressed with his floor play, and his total of seven points for the game included two clutch shots from 30 feet out in the last minute of the first half, which stretched the Dons' lead from one point to six. From then on, the San Franciscans were never headed as they trounced the Buffaloes, 82-50.

With both Jones and Perry returning for another year on the Hilltop, along with Russell and several other members of this year's squad, it will take a terrific effort by Baxter to break into the starting quintet.

After his progress this season, Woolpert and other observers are sure that he'll see plenty of action next year, and no one is willing to bet that he won't see action with the first five as the Dons make their bid for another national championship.

Ram Nine, Stockton, Divide Big 8 Opener

Strong relief pitching by Ray Warman earned the college nine a 5-4 win over Stockton College in the second game of a Big Eight Conference-opening doubleheader at Stockton last Saturday.

The Rams dropped the initial contest, 8-4, as a two-run rally in the sixth inning brought the Mustangs from a 4-3 deficit to a one-run lead and their subsequent victory.

City College was trailing in the seven inning nightcap when outfielder Don DeSuville rapped a two-run homer to put the Rams in front to stay.

Women Host 8 Colleges In Badminton Playday

An annual Co-ed Badminton Playday will be held on Saturday, April 16, in the gymnasiums here, beginning at 9 a.m., Nancy Sparks, physical education instructor, announced last week.

The college has invited two men's singles, two women's singles and two mixed doubles teams from each of San Mateo, Marin, Napa, Santa Rosa, East and West Contra Costa, Oakland, and Hartnell Junior Colleges.

All men and women are welcome to come to the badminton practices which are held every Wednesday afternoon from 2:45 to 4 p.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Ram Thinclads Nip Bearcubs, Rout Rival San Mateans; Face WCC, Stanford Frosh April 9

By Emil Portale

Sparked by triple winner Clint Redus and double winner Jack Egan, the Ram trackmen blistered powerful Santa Rosa and traditional rival San Mateo to the tune of 85½-62½-3, respectively, in a triangular meet held last Saturday in Santa Rosa.

By virtue of the conference dual meet triumphs over Santa Rosa, 73-49, and San Mateo, 112-8, the Rams boast an unbeaten league record. This three meet win string will be put on the proverbial line when the college cindermen clash with West Contra Costa and the Stanford Frosh Saturday, April 9, at 10:30 a.m. in Palo Alto.

Showing his old form, Redus stunned onlookers with a :15.8 victory in the low hurdles after he had captured the 100 in a relatively slow :10.4. Rounding out a good day's work the sharp hurdle skipper took the 180-yard lows in :20 flat.

Egan dominated the throwing events with a neat 42-feet 2½ inch heave of the shot, and a 142 feet 3¼ inch discus toss. His discus fling was nearly 20 feet further than the closest challenger, Frank Carroll, who brought the Rams place money in the event. Egan's effort broke a nine-year-old team record of 139 feet 6 inches.

After having a 24 foot broad jump ruled out because of a foul, Bob Arterberry promptly leaped 21 feet 1¾ inch to lead a three-way sweep rounded out by Sam Fukuda and Hal Crockford.

The relay was a fight to the finish battle which saw Santa Rosa eke out a three wide win after capturing the lead in the homestretch turn.

Santa Rosa's outstanding contribution was Hal Kuhn's 10:10.2 timing in the two mile, an effort which broke a Beareub team record set a week before by the same man.

After their April 9 encounter, the Rams face powerful Stockton and Sacramento on Friday, April 15, at 3 p.m. in Sacramento.

Mile—Kuha (SF); Stroughter (CCSF); Broadson (SR); Leonard (CSM); 4:31.5
440 yards—Harper (SR); Connell (CCSF); Moorehead (CCSF); Collins (SR); :59.8
100 yards — Redus (CCSF); MacIntyre (CCSF); Robbins (SR); Dado (SR); :10.4
120 yard HH—Redus (CCSF), tie-Robbins (SR) and Kanihan (CCSF); Pinkston (CCSF); :15.8
220 yards — Tillson (CCSF), Hill (CCSF), Amsbaugh (SR), Adamson (SR); 2:05.6
100 yards—MacIntyre (CCSF), Dado (SR), Connell (CCSF), Mossen (CSM); :10.5
Two miles—Kuha (SR), Stroughter (CCSF); Todd (CCSF); Mattos (CSM);
220 yard LH—Redus (CCSF); Robbins (SR); Kanihan (CCSF), Bennett (SR); :20.0
Mile Relay—Santa Rosa (Collins, Amsbaugh, Dado, Harper), San Francisco; 3:27.0.
Pole Vault—Brosl (SR), tie Backer (SR) and Cox (SR); Cutler (SR); 12'1".
Broad Jump—Arterberry (CCSF); Fukuda (CCSF), Crockford (CCSF), Robbins (SR); 21'1¾".
High Jump—Kumamoto (SR); tie-Atterberry and King (CCSF), tie Ryan and Butler (SR); 6'0".
Discus—Egan (CCSF); Liza (SR); Carroll (CCSF); Smith (CCSF); 142'3".
Shot Put—Egan (CCSF); Carroll (CCSF); Liza (SR); Hawk (SR); 42'2½".

Netmen Oppose Oakland Friday

Oakland's newly formed tennis team will host the Ram netmen at Oakland this Friday in the fifth Big Eight Conference match for both squads.

Prior to their match with Modesto, the Rams sported a 3-0 won and lost record in Big Eight competition, having defeated San Mateo, West Contra Costa and Stockton. Results of the Modesto match played at Golden Gate Park last Friday were unavailable at press time.

Stockton's Mustangs provided little opposition for the college squad, succumbing to the Ram lineup by the score of 6-1. The Rams were forced to default a singles match because of the absence of their number five man, which accounted for the single Stockton victory. Les Jacobson, Bob Chrisman, Alan Matsumoto, and Lee Anderson accounted for the four singles victories and two doubles wins for the Rams.

RAMBLINGS Cage Play Altered By Players' Height

By Emil Portale

INCREASING height and a let's-do-something-before-people-think-we're-doing-nothing thought have prompted the latest desperate efforts of the National Basketball Rules Committee. The group, plagued by the realization that this year there were 130 players between the heights of 6-8 and 7-3 dominating basketball in the nation, has again decided to revise a few miscellaneous rules so that it won't get its ears boxed verbally by observers who know what the game is all about.

Line painters will reap the benefits of the first profound rule change. The free throw lanes, now six feet wide, are to be widened even more, to a 12-foot gap. This is supposed to prevent fouls during rebounding; it probably, for the sake of variety, will mix a little track work in it when the five men on the lanes sprint a short 100-yard dash for the ball.

Following up last year's magnificently insignificant choice of inaugurating the bonus charity toss, the committee extended the privilege for the full 40-minute game. Before, any foul committed in the last three minutes gave the offended player two shots. The bonus rule entitles a player to an extra try if his first charity attempt is successful. The new rule is also supposed to minimize the amount of fouling in a game; how this is to be done was not stated. Probably with a bit of intense concentration one could figure it out.

Another gem from the mouths of the committeemen was the fabrication of a scheme to defeat those selfish casabans who persist in stalling a game when their team is leading. Next season when a defensive man has come to within a yard of a dribbler, and the dribbler does not get rid of the ball after five seconds, a held ball will be called. Of course the dribbler's team will have to be leading at the time, and the referee will have to have a sharp stop-watch eye. We can just see the fans howling their protests!

If these rule changes don't insinuate that basketball players are an essentially dirty, unsportsmanlike and selfish lot, they do little else. It is agreed that freezing the ball is not the best practice to follow and there are better things to do than foul, but why make the regulation of these evils so unnecessarily complicated?

The pros have solved their stalling problems by allowing any team, leading or not, just 25 seconds to shoot at the basket. There is no chance for error then.

It seems that the committee is trying to squeeze its way around the fact that there are so many tall men in the game nowadays, and after all, veteran coach Forrest C. Allen of Kansas University has been fighting for years to have 12-foot baskets installed in courts; we might as well put the carpenters to work and get something constructive done.

Education-Business Day Among Top Events On College Agenda

Two conferences, Teachers' Institute, Education-Business Day and Public Schools Week were labeled last week as the major events on the college calendar by Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction here.

The San Francisco League for Nursing and its Education Committee will meet here in Building 2 this Friday. Present at the conference will be representatives of the nursing faculties of the two-year colleges which offer nursing and the committee members.

Meeting next Wednesday, Teachers' Institute has as its theme a restatement of the philosophy of two-year colleges, their aims and purposes, and a study of the student population at the colleges. Scheduled on the agenda are discussions concerning student personnel service, admission policies and curriculum problems.

April 15 is scheduled as Education-Business Day. On this day approximately 65 businessmen will visit the college. The chairman of the day's events will be Jack Brady, coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

For half an hour beginning at 9 a.m. there will be a social get-together in the student lounge, followed by an explanation of the operation of the college by President Louis Conlan and other members of the administrative staff.

Visiting businessmen will then be taken on a tour of the campus and shown the classes in operation. After lunch in the faculty dining room the drama and music departments will furnish entertainment for the visitors. Two students will then explain in detail the benefits which they have received from attending the college.

Open House on April 27 is scheduled as the college's contribution to Public Schools Week. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, will serve as chairman for the Public Schools Week program here at the college.

There will be a dinner in the cafeteria, after which the A Cappella Choir will entertain the guests for half an hour. For the rest of the evening, the open house will be held in the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

AS, Block SF Contribute $210 To Maestri Fund

Associated Student President Al Kingston and Block SF President Kent Scovil each presented checks totalling $210 to the Angelo Maestri Benefit Fund representative John Boyle last Wednesday at a luncheon in the faculty dining room here.

The check presented by Kingston to the polio-victimized Maestri's Benefit Fund was allocated from an AS fund and dedicated to the memory of Oscar A. Anderson, father of Oscar E. Anderson, controller of Educational Management here.

Scovil presented the funds earned from the Block SF-sponsored benefit game between the City College basketball team and West Contra Costa on February 15 at the college. The money from Block SF operated refreshment concessions at this game was also donated.

Four IRC Members Appear On Panel

Four members of the International Relations Club will participate in the after dinner panel discussion on Tuesday evening, April 12, at the building of the National League for Women's Service, 465 Post street. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction here, will be a moderator for the discussion group.

In anticipation of the United Nations anniversary meeting in San Francisco in June, this panel discussion has been planned by the National League for Women's Service.

Marie-Louise Carl, Tat Lam, Karima Mughannam, and Abraham Virdeh are expected to be in the discussion. Topic of the discussion will be, "Should Greater Economic Aids Be Extended to the East?" Miss Carl is a student from Denmark and will speak on the educational and cultural background of that particular area; Lam is from Hong Kong and will speak on geographical background; Miss Mughannam is from Iran and will speak on economical background; Virdeh is from India and will speak on political aspects.

Air Film Of Europe Showing Due Friday

College hour film goers will take an Air Adventure to Europe this Friday, April.1, by way of a motion picture of the same name.

Covering many European cultural and historical highlights, the 30-minute color film will take viewers high above the continent. How an actual trip could provide credits toward college degrees will be pointed out in the film.

Released by the Institute of Visual Training in New York, the travelogue is scheduled to be shown in Room S136 during college hour, with no admission charge.

Applications For 3 Scholarships Due By April 12

Applications are now being accepted for the Dr. A. J. Cloud, the Graduating Class of 1954 and the Chinese Students scholarships, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Petitions will be received by Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, Room S148, and Dean Golding, Room S150, until Tuesday, April 12, 1955.

Established by the faculty in honor of Dr. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, this award is issued annually to one man and one woman student, each of whom will receive $50.

The Graduating Class of 1954 scholarship carries an award of $200 and will be divided among two men and two women students. An award of $50 each will go to the man and woman winning the Chinese Students scholarship.

To become eligible for any one of the above awards, a student must have completed 15 units of work with at least a "C" average. Winners will be chosen on the basis of scholarship, need and leadership, Dean Golding said.

Campus Policemen Win Pistol Match

Campus police pistol teams won first and second place in the San Mateo County Police Matches on March 20.

First place in class B was won by the first team. It was composed of team captain Philip Moore, John Burns, Lee Hargus, and William Tane. They accumulated a total of 980 points.

With a total of 823 points the second team won second place in class C. Team captain Fred Neville, Richard Dunn, William Anderson and Robert Dagitz made up the second team.

Sunday, April 3, is the date for the next match the campus police will enter. It will be sponsored by the Oakland Police Department and held at the Oakland Pistol Club.

Cast Announced For College Play, The Willow And I

All roles in the Little Theater's next production, The Willow and I, were cast last week and the list was released by Michael J. Griffin, drama director here.

Scheduled for presentation April 28, 29 and 30, the three-act drama by John Patrick tells the story of two sisters in love with the same man. The triangle brings on a series of strange events in which the older sister, Mara, upon hearing a gun shot, withdraws into a state of blankness which lasts 40 years. Her restoration to normalcy, her adjustment and final happiness conclude the play.

Headlining the cast under the direction of Griffin are Mclanie Mead as Mara; Anne Canellos as Bessie, the younger sister; Thelma Ann Hawkins as Tinny; George Miller as Bailey; Joe Bavaresco as Theodore; Barbara Raffaelli as Millie; Al Allen as Dr. Oliver; Pat Hickey in the dual role of Robin and Kirkland; Eva Russel as Mabel; Antoinette Mannina as the Duchess; and Edwin Brush as Dr. Trubee.

Production staff for The Willow and I include Don Ball, technical director; Roy Maffei, master electrician; Bob Loshuertos, stage manager; Fred Sutter, sound; Miss Mannina, publicity; Ball, promotion; Edwina Moquin, make-up; and Gene Kurilow and Ron Tognetti, electricians.

Veterans Reminded To Sign For GI Bill Money

Veterans are reminded that the next sign-up period for the Monthly Certificate of Training is from April 1 through 4, Robin Dunn, assistant to the coordinator of veterans affairs, said last week.

Because of the large number of veterans signing each month, Dunn urged those signing to come in on their free hours rather than during the ten-minute break between classes.

Lombard, Woods Become New AS Officers; Council Approves Entire Budget For Semester

By Don Ball

Two new Associated Student officers were sworn in and the last of this semester's budget were passed by the Student Council last week.

Dean Woods was sworn in as a Sophomore member of council, replacing Ken Orzell who resigned last week. Woods defeated Joan Rettus and Walt Frehe to gain his seat in the council. Because of constitutional restrictions, Woods was forced to resign his cabinet position as Alumni Liaison Officer before taking his place on the council.

Lee Carol Lombard took the oath of office to become the AS corresponding secretary suppianting Sandy Steigerwald who resigned to devote more time to her studies.

Council voted to give $50 to the University of San Francisco to help in the drive they are holding to finance the construction of a gymnasium. It was pointed out by Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, that the USF student body gave $50 to this college in 1950 when the basketball team was endeavoring to raise money to go to the national two-year college finals in Kansas City.

USF also was subject of a resolution of congratulation and commendation. Their basketball team, coach and rooters were praised for their showing at the NCAA tournament.

Final budgets were passed last week, bringing to a close the semesterly struggle between the activities chairmen and the chairman of the Finance Committee. The budgets passed were:

Rally Committee	$175.00
Social Committee	162.00
Handbook	500.00

This year, Hell Week is being utilized by the AS as a service week, Miss Cheader announced. Pledges to the various sororities and fraternities will help clean up the campus instead of engaging in the usual frolicsome festivities that have marked previous Hell Weeks. Areas have been assigned to each of the participating groups and the group keeping its area cleanest will receive an award.

Discussion was held by the council on a bill before the state legislature which would make the purchase of an Associated Student card mandatory for enrollment as regular student in a two-year college, at the discretion of each college. It was pointed out that the college treasuries stood to benefit greatly if the measure passed. Opponents of the law said that this would mean the end of free college education in California. Most state colleges now require student cards.

As President Al Kingston is asking for the opinion of students on the question of mandatory Associated Student cards. Any suggestions on this subject may be left with the telephone operator in the Science Building before Thursday, April 21. Kingston would like to know the opinions of the college students before the Riverside Conference.

All special committee reports must be turned in in writing, Kingston announced. Council member Donn Pace appealed Kingston's decision, but was ruled out of order. Pace asked for a vote to decide whether or not he was out of order. The council decided he was.

Two Regulations Govern Students In College Halls

Students at the college are presently required to abide by only two building regulations because of their cooperation and the philosophy of the college, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here.

Smoking, states the first building regulation, is permitted in the lounge in Building 2, at the fountain in Building 12, and at the cafeteria in Building 14. The ground floor of the Science Building is also a designated smoking area. Cigarette stubs "certainly don't improve the appearance of the college, but, we can't expect them to put them in their pockets," Anderson said recently.

Posters and news bulletins are for the bulletin boards. They are not to be posted on windows, walls or telegraph poles. Special attention, Anderson declared, should be drawn to the fact that it is strictly illegal to advertise non-college regulated organizations, dances or parties on the campus grounds.

These restrictions are for the most part, he added, satisfactorily complied with by the adults that make up the student body of the college. "The philosophy of the college is that few rules are needed, and that any more would be unnecessary and undesirable for college students," Anderson said.

It was also emphasized by Anderson that common-sense is expected to be used for a little more than "adding and subtracting," and that thoughtfulness and consideration for others "have never blackened anyone's eye."

Six Man Debate Squad Enters Tyro Tourney

Six members of the college debate team travel to Stockton for the Tyro Tournament this Friday and Saturday. Subject of the debate will be the national collegiate question of the year: Recognition of Red China. This question, selected by the leaders of the National Forensic Society, is being debated throughout the country this year by colleges all over the nation.

The team will also participate in the extemporaneous debate on the defense plans for western Europe and the impromptu debate on the United Nations.

Members of the team going to Stockton will be Luke Distler, Vic Hebert, Pat Mahoney, Norman McLeod, Jim Mullins and Al Niemi.

Sorority And Fraternity Pledges Steal Club Spotlight This Week

CAMPUS cleanup by sorority and fraternity pledges has stolen the spotlight from other campus clubs this week.

Zeta Chi sorority met last week at the home of Sally Yudnich, where pledge instruction was also held Sunday.

Phi Beta Rho sorority will hold its traditional Hell Week joint with Beta Phi Beta tonight.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity subjected its pledges to a formal interrogation Sunday. The fraternity will meet jointly with Alpha Lambda Chi tonight.

Women of the Chinese Students Club met last Friday during college hour to make plans for their Box Lunch activity in April.

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity held its interrogation of pledges last Thursday night at the home of Carroll Hall and met with Phi Beta Rho Monday night.

Delta Psi sorority is conducting a Clothes-for-Korea drive to which fraternity pledges are contributing. A prize will be given to the fraternity that contributes most. Myrna Taylor is chairman of the drive.

Pledges of Alpha Lambda Chi sorority were faced with pledge instruction Sunday at the home of Joan Rettus, president of the sorority. Three new officers were elected recently: Roselia Thurman, vice-president; Joan Anderson, recording secretary; Susan Herrington, historian. Fifteen pledges went through formal interrogation held by Gamma Phi Ypsilon Sunday. They will meet jointly with Delta Psi tonight.

Members of the Hui O Hawaii club have started a 30-day ticket sale campaign for their Hawaiian Luau Evening, Saturday, April 23, in the college's auditorium.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity held interrogation of pledges Sunday night at the home of Dick Hood.

CAB Plan Gives Clubs Official College Status

By Bev Swope

ONE of the Science Building showcases now boasts 26 certificates of official recognition. Seventeen more are due soon, or so it is hoped!

Under a new charter system, adopted by the Club Activities Board, campus clubs will for the first time in their long or short lives be officially-recognized college organizations.

A few of the 43 clubs on campus have grown up with the college since its early days in 1935 and have been active for the past 20 years. Yet never before have these clubs been officially recognized by the college. Finally, the Spring semester, 1955, marks the time for all campus organizations to gain official status.

Long-considered plans for the new charter system are successfully taking form through the efforts of CAB Chairman Ed Dollard with the advice and aid of Group Sponsor Robin Dunn.

Requirements for official standing with the club's name on the master charter are easily met. A club representative must be present at all CAB meetings. Also, a list of club members with their Associated Student card numbers must be submitted to CAB with a petition signed by the club president and faculty sponsor.

In the past, personal records and histories kept by the numerous clubs were the only proof of longtime campus activity. Now, organizations will have printed proof of their existence as part of campus life, when each club president receives a copy of the certificate.

The present certificates are valid, when signed each semester by the CAB chairman, until Fall, 1956.

This new project of the CAB, in our opinion, is a worthwhile accomplishment and a creditable example for others to follow. Perhaps student leaders will think the same and spread the idea among other two-year colleges at the Riverside conference this week-end.

There is no question but that the CAB's new endeavor benefits the students. The certificates of recognition are proud additions to club scrapbooks and college progress.

Alumni Reorganize Board Of Directors

With a complete new slate of directors, the Alumni Association of the college is planning a well-balanced program for the remainder of the spring semester.

Four former Presidents of the Associated Students are among the members of the newly re-organized Board of Directors. They are Maury Swartz, president of the AS in 1936; Ralph Vetterlein, president in Spring, 1951; Pete Chevrier, president in Fall, 1951; and last semester's AS president, Bill Boldenweck. Also new on the board are Don Constine, George De Urioste, and Lillian Bommarito.

In conjunction with the administration and the AS, the Alumni Association is planning a dinner, to be held on Charter Day, Wednesday, April 27. Spokesman for the Alumni at the dinner will be Vetterlein.

A general meeting will be held on June 6 to discuss the election of officers, social activities and enlargement of membership.

Current headquarters of the alumni is the placement office of the college. Joseph Amori of the placement office is handling correspondence and coordinating the activities of the group.

Four Hotel Students Win Scholarships

Four scholarships were awarded in the Hotel and Restaurant Department here on March 25 to students Marvin Alldaffer, Robert Van Lefferingen, Barbara Pope and Robert Schofield.

Van Lefferingen and Miss Pope were awarded the Harvey Toy scholarships offered each semester to H&R students here. Alldaffer was awarded the Dupar Foundation scholarship, and Schofield won the Northern Californer Stewards' and Caterers' Association scholarship.

Recipients of the awards were selected on the basis of their scholastic achievement, needs, leadership and character by the Scholarship Committee of the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation.

College Tightens Regulations; New Standards Stricter

By Deane Wylie

Major revisions of the college's entrance and scholastic performance requirements were announced last week by John J. Brady, coordinator of the division of student welfare here.

Main point of the revised plan, expected for some time in the face of a 40 per cent increase over present enrollment by 1958, is the strict enforcement of existing scholarship requirements, including strengthening of readmission regulations.

State Laws Govern

Existing state laws provide that the president of a California two-year college shall admit any high school graduate and also non-high school graduates over 18 years of age, who in the president's judgment can profit by instruction.

Up to and including this semester admission was granted to students over 18 who filed two letters "satisfactory to the president of the college from reputable citizens of California, certifying the student's character and ability to do college work."

Under the new set-up, effective in the Fall, 1955, semester, non-high school graduates will be required to take a special Stanford Achievement Test, with admission determined on the basis of the test score.

Students will no longer be accepted for registration at the college directly from high schools if they have not received high school graduation diplomas, Brady said, a regulation designed to prevent students who repeatedly do failing high school work from being finally foisted off on the college.

Majority of High Caliber

"I am impressed with the caliber of the majority of the students we attract," Brady declared, "and I feel our first responsibility is to students who choose to come to City College. I don't feel we should force them to associate with students who have already indicated by their records they will not do satisfactory work here."

Also excluded from college registration will be students who have flunked out of other two-year colleges. Students dropped from four-year colleges, the majority here from San Francisco State College and the University of California, will be admitted to the college only by the achievement of high scores on City College entrance examinations, Brady said.

Strict enforcement of existing scholarship standards will be followed. Students whose grade point average falls below .5 (a "C—" average), figured on the total of all courses taken at the college, will be dropped. While state law requires the college to accept all high school graduates and non-graduates over 18, it does not specify how long a student must be enrolled at the college.

Counsellors Act First

First-time applicants for readmission may be approved by counsellors under the revised program, and students will be accepted for readmission a second time only on the recommendation of a college readmission committee. Scholastic records will be examined after the first mid-term, Brady said, and warnings issued.

Students who are receiving a grade of "F" in all courses mid-way in the semester will be given the option of taking an indefinite leave of absence or receiving "F" grades on their transcripts.

Effective this semester college students with "F" grades in physical education at the first mid-term period will be given a chance, by double attendance, to make up absences and pass the required course.

Students still receiving a physical education "F" at the second mid-term, Brady stated, will receive "F" grades in all courses and be dropped from registration.

Special students will register only after all regular students (carrying 12 or more units) have enrolled in future semesters, Brady said. The deadline for dropping of courses in the past one month before final examinations, will be moved ahead to the week following the first mid-term period.

Six Delegates Attend Semi-Annual Government Parley At Riverside

Mandatory Student Body Card Bill Main Issue At State Conference

Six student leaders will leave International Airport tomorrow morning to represent the college at the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association state conference, being held this semester at Riverside from tomorrow through Saturday, April 23.

Delegates from the college will be Al Kingston, Associated Student president; Marion Cheader, AS vice-president; Paul Ortiz, state information, service chairman; Bill Cirimele, AS finance chairman; Gail Allan Moss, publications board chairman; and Al Niemi, AS parliamentarian.

AL KINGSTON, Associated Student president, is among the delegates to the Riverside conference.

Fifteen Considered

Five of the delegates were chosen from among 15 possible representatives by Louis Batmale, acting dean of student activities here, and Kingston, with advice from the Student Council and Cabinet. Ortiz holds a state CJCSGA office and was an automatic choice to attend the convention. Batmale will accompany the delegates.

Recognized as one of the most important resolutions to be brought before the General Assembly is a statement supporting California Assembly Bill 3473, an act which would, if passed, give each two-year college in the state the right to make student body cards mandatory.

The resolution caused considerable controversy at the Northern Section of the CJCSGA convention held in San Mateo on April 12, and Kingston is undecided as to what stand to take on the matter at the state conference. The stand taken by the college delegation will depend largely on student opinion, according to Kingston, and a questionnaire has been circulated among students of some of the departments of the college.

OPINIONS ASKED

Student opinion of a resolution favoring California Assembly Bill 3473, giving each state two-year college the option of mandatory student body cards, was requested this week by Al Kingston, Associated Student President here.

Letters stating pro or con opinions, Kingston stated, may be submitted to the AS office in Building 2, to the telephone operator by the Silver Pole in the Science Building or at The Guardsman office, S304.

The six representatives from the college will stay at the Mission Inn in Riverside.

Sixty-five Colleges Attend

Approximately 65 two-year colleges are scheduled to be represented a the conference, with members of th Northern, Central and Southern Sections of the CJCSGA participating.

The convention will open with a General Assembly of delegates, presided over by Howard Harmer, CJCSGA state president and AS president at Mount San Antonio College. Guest speaker will be Reverend Robert Richards, one of the nation's outstanding pole-vaulters and decathlon men.

Included on the agenda are meetings of Workshops in Student Government, Rallies and Assemblies, Athletics, Publications and Publicity.

College Plans Open House Wednesday For Schools Week

Main feature of the college's participation in next week's Public Schools Week activities will be the 20th Annual Charter Day dinner and open house, sponsored jointly by the Alumni Association, the Associated Students and the college administration, according to Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, open house chairman.

Open house is scheduled for Wednesday night, April 27, from 7 through 11:30 p.m. The dinner will be the same evening in the cafeteria on the west campus.

In addition to displays to be exhibited, many day students will be on hand in the laboratories and departments to demonstrate for the public the actual workings of their departments. Holding exhibits or giving demonstrations will be the art, biology, business, chemistry, engineering, physics and police departments. The planetarium will give showings to a limited number of persons only, because of lack of space.

"The Public School—An American Heritage," was chosen as the theme for the 36th annual observance of Public Schools Week and the event will be brought to the public through a number of downtown exercises in addition to those held in the schools and colleges.

A Song-Fest by elementary school choral groups will be held in the rotunda of City Hall at 12 noon on Monday, April 25, and a high school band concert will be given in Union Square at 12 noon on Tuesday, April 26. A demonstration of several Driver Education training cars will also take place at Union Square.

Choir, Glee Sing In Open House Program

Contributing its part to the Public Schools Week program here at the college, the A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club will entertain visitors in the cafeteria next Wednesday night, April 27.

Singing together in only one performance, the choir and glee club will present several selections. The choir will sing parts of The Peaceable Kingdom, with the glee club singing arrangements of several Negro spirituals.

In the near future, the choir will go to the Presidio to sing with the Sixth Army Band when it will present a symphony written by Robert Morton, choir director here.

Applications For Scholarships Due

Letters of application for the Chinese Students Club scholarships are now being received, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

To become eligible a student must have a "B" average or better and must be returning to the college next semester. An award of $50 each will be made to one man and one woman student.

Because of the success of the Sweetheart Ball and other Chinese Student Club activities, the group has established this fund for scholarship awards. In addition to the amounts given winning students here, the club has also instituted an award to be presented to an outstanding public high school graduate who is planning a college education here.

Applications will be accepted until Wednesday, April 27, and may be submitted to Dean Golding in Room S150 or to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, in Room S148.

Wheat Farm Movie During College Hour

American Farmer is the title of the college hour movie this Friday, April 22. Produced by the Ford Motor Company, the sound-color film depicts an 800-acre wheat farm as seen through the eyes of a 16-year-old city boy, working on the farm as a summertime apprentice.

Admission-free showing will be held at 10:30 a.m. in Science Building, Room 136. Club meetings are also scheduled for the college hour.

Special showings of the National Broadcasting Company's honored production of Macbeth will be held here May 12 and 13, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor at the college, announced last week. The widely-acclaimed television film, nearly two hours long, stars Shakespearean actors Judith Anderson and Maurice Evans.

Hui O Hawaii Club Presents Kalua Pig Dinner

More than 300 guests are expected at the Hawaiian Luau to be presented on Saturday, April 23, in Building 1. The Luau, which will feature a Kalua Pig dinner, is sponsored by the International Relations Club and Hui O Hawaii, according to Darius Chung, Hui O Hawaii president.

The Kalua Pig dinner, a traditional Hawaiian feast, will begin promptly at 6:30 p.m. Lomi Lomi salmon, Hua Pia, chicken long rice and baked potatoes are included in the dinner.

An hour's entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock, and will consist of nine hula dances by Hui O Hawaii members, three hula lessons to the audience, and numerous skits. Dancing will begin following a short intermission.

Conductor and arranger of the entertainment program is Ida Namanuokawan Gonzalves. Hula dancers are Gladys Farm, Wanda Lokilani Fujiwara, Miss Gonzalves, John Ioane Gonzalves, Helen Ua Mealii Jay, Barbara Leinaala Kahale, Gladys Lopez, Marge Momilani, Janice Ululani Pahia, Norma Kealoha Royer and Shirly Nami Young.

Sixty students, 40 from Hui O Hawaii and 20 from IRC, have been working on the Luau. Heads of committees are Victor Komada, clean-up; Walter Chang, decorations; Mickey Lyman, food; Thomas Chun, publicity; Sylvia Alba, serving; and Earl Cabrinha, social.

Director of musicians is Liz Flores. Francis Cahill is pianist, and Thomas Atou, Sylvia Fernandes and Lyman play the guitar. Ukelele players are Chun, Chung and Miss Flores.

Dress for the Luau is sports. Tickets, which cost $2.50, may be purchased at the door or from Hui O Hawaii or IRC members.

Student Opinion On Mandatory AS Card Law Vital To Leaders

AT THE PRESENT TIME there seems to be a great deal of misinformation among students here concerning California Assembly Bill 3473, which could make student body cards mandatory in all state two-year colleges. We are in favor of the bill, and we believe that additional and correct information on the act will enable each student to form his individual opinion on a bill which will have a very great effect on him and his classmates.

Many have the idea that if such a bill were passed, each two-year college would automatically be forced to adopt the mandatory student card plan. This is not true.

If Bill 3473 is passed, it will give the student and faculty administrations of each two-year college in California the right to decide whether or not they want mandatory card sales. If they decide against it, the matter is dropped there. If they feel that compulsory membership in the Associated Students would benefit the college, they will then put this proposal before the entire student body for a decision. If two-thirds of the body votes for the measure, it will go into effect.

As a further safeguard against forcing mandatory cards on an unwilling student body, a petition may be submitted to the college administration at any time, signed by 35 per cent of the students, requiring the dropping of the compulsory rule.

Another argument against the measure stems from the phrase in the bill stating that "regular students" would be subject to the college's decision. No student carrying under 10½ units would be affected in any way by the act.

The greatest and most violent opposition is against one passage from the bill which states that money earned from the sale of mandatory student body cards would be spent as part of the college's budget subject to the approval of the State Director of Education. Many students object, and rightly, to what they mistakenly think will be a dictatorial power over their money by one administrative officer. What few people realize, of course, is that this is exactly the system in effect now.

Technically, each expenditure by a public two-year college is now passed through the office of the State Director of Education. Thus the passage of Bill 3473 would make no change in the present arrangement.

The delegation which will represent the college at the California Junior College Student Government Association conference in Riverside beginning tomorrow will be closely involved in a resolution, before the State conference, backing the bill now before the California Assembly. So far, Al Kingston, Associated Student president here and head of the college's delegation, is in favor of the bill and the resolution, and we strongly feel as he does. His action at the convention will, however, be guided by the feelings of the students here.

Kingston and the other five members of the group leave for Riverside tomorrow. As a key supporter of the original resolution, City College of San Francisco will have an important voice in acceptance or rejection.

Any student here who is interested in the bill, and every member of the student body should be, may voice his pro or con opinions by writing a note to Kingston today stating his views on the measure. Any such message will help the convention delegates to decide just what stand to take, and will act as "ammunition" in the college's arguments for or against the resolution.

We agree whole-heartedly with Kingston and other student leaders that Bill 3473 is a good sound move and would be of value to many of the state's two-year colleges. It is you, the individual student, however, who will cast the deciding vote. We urge you to take time today to state your views, whether pro or con.

Intellectual Apathy Leads Into Open Manholes; 140 Million U.S. Drones Are Mental Pushovers

By Bob Chrisman

INTELLECTUAL apathy is often mistaken for stupidity. This, of course, is a misconception, for a stupid individual has no capacity for intelligent action, whereas intellectual apathy is a state in which the individual fails to think.

Thinking, in this sense of the word, means thought on a higher level, not merely thinking about what to eat for breakfast and where to buy it, or what to wear today. The mind is more than a simple device necessary for basic human functions such as eating, sleeping, and taking care not to fall into open manholes or get stuck with a restaurant tab—it is the most complex instrument and the most marvelous organ in existence.

When human beings live together, there are bound to be different values, morally, socially, and financially. Naturally, every person is going to try to have things done "his way" and frequently extreme means are used for this end.

This is the danger of intellectual apathy. Persons capable of sharp creative thought let their minds lapse into a state comparable to a bowl of mush—cold mush. These individuals have no intellectual backbone and are ideal prey for any type of thought control.

Having rarely if ever thought for themselves, these great hordes of drones flock together like sheep for the safety that lies in numbers, and if one runs off a cliff, the entire herd follows suit—figuratively speaking.

If this were the extent of the damage, there would be nothing to worry about. But sometimes, these drones get positions of power and influence—either through inheritance, or by playing ball with a well-organized flock of drones, under the leadership of a few sharp people. It is for this reason that political parties select popular public idols who inspire the imagination to run for office, rather than competent persons.

Presidential elections are merely an example of intellectual apathy; advertising is another example. The most disconcerting part of the whole affair is that approximately 140 million persons in the United States are drones. Of the remaining 23 million, about 15 million are out to grind their own axe any way that they can, and exploit the drones and anything exploitable to do so.

And so, dear reader, when you brush your teeth tomorrow morning, ask yourself if you are using Carieident toothpowder because you like the flavor, the colors on the container, the way Jane Russell looked when she modeled it, or because a dentist with 14 gold teeth and three partial plates said that it prevented tooth decay. "The Truth Shall Make You Free." Or miserable.

Campus Politics Rapped

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to The Guardsman as an open letter to Phil Gaal, president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, with the request that it be printed herein.)

Dear Phil:

While there are obviously few people who realize it, the present political set-up at City College can only lead to a decline of student interest in elections, in the individuals that administer the student activity program, and in the Association itself.

You know yourself, Phil, that last term's election was probably the best City College has had in many a year. But without effective interest from all parties, the interest of the "campus individual," the average student, will wane, leaving the Associated Students to once again hit the depths so aptly described in a Guardsman editorial of November 19, 1952: "School spirit, as such, is at so pitiful a level that any curtailment of a thing barely breathing might be its death knell."

While many students would "poopah" the suggestion that our politics are in a bad way, I know you'll agree with me that the current hypocrisy of claiming a two party system when there is none is ridiculous.

Because of this, and because I have great respect for your integrity as a leader interested in the betterment of the Associated Students, I ask that you seriously consider stopping party politics by dropping the I.F.C. convention until such a time as the I.F.C. feels there is a strong second party.

You, as president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, must certainly realize, from your experience as an Independent candidate last semester, the senselessness of I.F.C. party opposition to candidates (Independents on the ballot) who are members of the same party and to an opposition party that last term could put forth only a few candidates for council seats and will be lucky this term to put forth a few party members.

If the fraternities and sororities are truly interested in the betterment of, and service to, City College (as they state in their constitutions), then let them better City College by giving up the I.F.C. party convention, and let them serve the students of this institution by putting forward as many candidates as they wish for student body offices.

In this manner will student interest in elections, in their elected officers, and in the Associated Students, become greater each succeeding semester.

New Hit Is Sh-Boom In Minor Variations

By Bill Boldenweck

DEAR CHIEF: Music this week: Nothing new on the mambo angle, although there was one cute one, "Till Eulenspiegels Merry Pranks Mambo," by Ricardo Strauss. Checked out the latest Rhythm and Blues hit "Gaaah-Oooga," which turned out to be nothing but contrapuntal variations on "Sh-Boom," played in a minor, rather than major key.

Building Walls Harbor Ancestors

After numerous inquiries (one) about the walls of the science building, the truth has been made known to the general public. The facing on the walls is limestone, BUT—

The name limestone is misleading. It is composed of neither (1.) limes nor (2.) stones. This same trick of semantics has fooled thousands of people, who have been led to believe that moonstones came from the moon, also untrue. Fortunately for those who may loose faith in this great language of ours, it is quite true that lodestones (in sufficient quantities of course) are.

The startling truth about the limestone has been revealed by George E. Green, college biology instructor. The limestone, which is quarried around Bedford, Indiana, is composed of fossils and small, round spheres.

These little Hoosier fossils lived about two millions years ago, at a time when most of the central United States (even Texas) was under water. The little crawlies, big enough to be seen through a strong magnifying glass, were crustaceans, but lacked a backbone.

With the science building surrounded by these ancestors of ours (according to Darwin) it is possible that many of the students are close to aunts, uncles, and even grandparents, many times removed, naturally.

More cultured, (I mean this is real high-class stuff), is the opera. This is real fascinating stuff. The best one we ran across was "Carmen." This is the story of a motorman and conductor's union in Spain which goes on strike, so they call in the army, but the cigarette workers and bullfighters local 387 comes to their aid and everybody gets killed in the big fight.

Then there is "Cavelleria Rusticana," about the trial of an Italian cavalry regiment who were courtmartialed for letting their spurs and sabers get rusty. "The Barber of Seville" is pretty good, being about a guy who was making book in (of all places) a Seville tonsorial establishment and gets tangled up with the mafia when he starts laying off bets for Frankie Costello over Mussolini's private wire.

"La Triviata," we discovered, is a musical based on Shakespeare's essay on existentialism, "Much Ado About Nothing." We discovered a rather interesting series of operas about the fight game called "The Ring" by a sportswriter named Honus Wagner or something like that. One of these was called "Longgrin," the story of a fighter who was going pretty good 'till he got married and his inlaws talked him into going in the tank in the fourth, or something like that, I can't understand it too good.

Then there was "Die Walkuring" which was the story of a prelim boy who was named Joe Walkuring who went in the tank when he wasn't supposed to and lost a bundle for the mob. So they sent out a hatchet man named Al Wotan or something like that to wipe him out, and as he slipped a shiv quietly between Joe's third and fourth ribs (just under the heart) he says in a stage whisper, "Die, Walkuring," from which the opera gets its name.

One of the best is a political satire written during the FHA investigations called "Tannhauser" (German for 'ten houses'), in which it is discovered that a ten billion dollar housing project only has ten houses in it.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

ALL in the interests of . . . A student at Renssalaer Polytechnic College in Troy, N. Y., recently "volunteered" to drink a can of beer every 20 minutes for four hours to study auto driving reaction time, vision and steadiness under the increasing effect of alcohol, in connection with a safety week at the college.

In describing the experiment, the Associated Collegiate Press didn't list any results of the "research," leaving room for any number of imaginative conclusions. Picture the guy, after swigging a couple of six-packs, rising to declare stirringly: "I did it for good old Rensselaer Polytechnic!"

PROVIDENCE: A student driving downtown on college business managed to find a parking place in an unmetered 40-minute zone last week, which in itself is newsworthy. He'd gotten maybe ten steps away from the car when up cruised the law on three wheels, making little rear tire chalk marks. Figuring he had better come back in 40 minutes to play it safe, he went about his business.

About 41 minutes later he returned and heard the sound of the motorcycle in back of him. Up the street he raced towards a seeming photo-finish. At this point a city water truck passed washing down the street, and, due to unsteady control, several autos. The cop motored on by the delinquent car. It seems the lumbering water wagon had effectively erased the revealing chalk. No ticket. No kidding.

ONE OF THE MOST challenging problems students in advertising photography here have faced was the recent shooting of models in front of a portable three-way mirror, such as are used in permanent department store installations. The problem was to take the picture without taking a picture of the photog taking the picture of the girl in front of the mirror. Which isn't easy to do. Or to write.

Posing were pretty college models Judy Wills and Daroiyn Donnelly, and Diana Barnard, a Reed College coed. The mirror, a $600 job made specially for the college, is used in business personality training classes.

SHOTS AT RAMDOM: After issuing an illness slip to an applicant last week, the attendance office discovered that not only was the person not registered in the listed classes, but not registered at the college. Checking the address was found to be fictitious as was probably the illness.

Clippers To Rams In One Easy Lesson

Back in the struggling days when this college was trying to find a campus it could call its own, its students were desperately trying to find a suitable nickname for the athletic teams before, as it was said, "some ingenious sportswriter from a city newspaper" did it for them.

As it happened, the students were quicker thinkers than that sportswriter, for within a short time San Francisco Junior College had Red and White for its colors, had a newspaper called The Guardsman, and had a football team named the "Clippers."

Only one of those names, The Guardsman, seemed to satisfy, although all three final symbols were the result of a contest and voting carried on by the entire Student Association. The football team was the first to raise its collective head above the crowd and bellow its disapproval. The players felt that the colors, Red and White, were just too common, and objection to the "Clippers" was merely on "general principles."

All the Clippers meant to the gridiron was a sailing ship, or an airship, or an illegal football block. This would not do; the football players would rather do their blocking as Rams and not as Clippers.

As far as the college colors were concerned, the objection must have gotten lost in the shuffle, for 1955's teams wear the same colors as those of 1935; and if it weren't for some very wise thinking, The Guardsman would be flapping its pages over the college as The Seagull, as if there weren't enough of them around here.

General Motors built and tested the first Gas-Turbine powered car, in 1954. The engine has 370 hp, and top speed is 175 mph.

Baseballers Take Oakland Duo, Split With San Mateo, Play WCC Crucial Saturday

By Mike Berger

Staying in close contention for the Big Eight title, the Ram nine defeated San Mateo, 8-1, behind the five hit pitching of southpaw Ray Warman in a contest last Saturday on the Big Rec diamond.

Stan Johnson's two hits, which drove in three college runs, sparked the eight run onslaught, but the steady hurling of Warman was easily the highlight of the afternoon. The victory earned the Fischermen a split in the series, as the Bulldogs won the first game, 7-1, on April 12 at San Mateo, with Gordon Lewis hurling a sensational two-hitter at the Rams.

In conference activity, the college has now won four and lost two, and is in third place behind Santa Rosa and West Contra Costa. The Rams meet the Comets on Saturday, April 23, in a battle which should clinch a first division berth for the winner.

After the opening Big Eight split with Stockton, the college nine won a pair from the newly named Oakland Thunderbirds, trimming the foe, 15-1, on March 29, as Ed Kraft's four base rabs paced the club. The final game was even more of a slugfest, the winning count being 15-13, with Larry Nissim's relief pitching winning the day.

An exhibition clash with the Alameda Naval Air Station on April 8 found the college squeezing by 7-6 the eventual winning blow being Juan Candler's run-scoring double in the ninth inning.

Sandwiched in between the two recent San Mateo contests was another exhibition game with the 666th Air Force on April 14. Steve Gallagher, Sam Chicos, and John Puill closed the pitching door on the skyboys as the Rams prevailed, 16-0. Third baseman Bob Zucca had a perfect four for four day, while Candler, Don Desburville, and Kraft each collected three hits.

The next three league tilts, one with the West Contra Costa club, and a doubleheader with the league leading Santa Rosa Bearcubs, are of paramount importance to the college nine drive for high conference standing and a possible championship.

Led by ex-basketball ace Sam Hitcher in the batting department, and boasting such top line hurlers as Ray Luce, Ron Roe, and Gene Stang, the defending champion Comets are once again showing their excellent form.

Only beaten for the title on the last day of action last year, the Bearcubs of Coach Cook Sypher have 14 men returning to reverse that score in the 1955 campaign.

In preparation for the West Contra Costa clash this Saturday, the Rams will engage the 6th Army (Presidio) ball club in a practice game on Thursday, April 21, at the Big Rec field.

Double Play Blues Will Be Block SF Dance Next Week

Under the leadership of President Kent Seovil, the college's athletic society, Block SF, will put on a dance entitled Double Play Blues, which will be held in the college auditorium, Building 1, west campus, Friday night, April 29, Bill Fischer, sponsor of the society, announced recently.

Lasting from 8:30 p.m. to 12 midnight, the dance is a sport affair and music will be provided by the Band Association.

Admission to the dance is 50 cents, and tickets may be purchased at the door. Refreshments will be served at the entrance to the auditorium.

Next meeting of the Block SF will be this Friday, April 22, in Room 246 of Cloud Hall during college hour. Ram head basketball coach Ralph Hillsman will be guest speaker at this meeting.

Following the meeting a movie will be shown of the NCAA championship basketball game in which the Dons of University of San Francisco whipped LaSalle and Tom Gola, 77-63, at Kansas City last month to capture the national championship.

The society will be honored with the presence of two sport standouts who helped USF win championship honors, Warren Baxter and K. C. Jones.

Baxter, high scoring All-Conference guard on the City College 1953-54 basketball squad, did his share in helping USF earn the number one rating in the country during the regular season.

Jones, who still has another year of eligibility, was a standout all year, and was voted to the All-Tournament Team.

Refreshments are to be served following the meeting.

As a part of the business proceedings of the organization, there is a move to award a Block SF pin instead of a second block letter to an athlete.

Modesto Scuttles Netmen; Panthers Next For Rams

The overall strength of the Modesto Pirates' tennis squad enabled them to walk the Ram netmen off the Big Eight championship plank, 5-2, on March 26 at Golden Gate Park in the conference crucial for both squads.

Using their second string ladder for two-year college competition, the Pirates presented a strong lineup led by Canadian junior stars George Morfitt and Carmine Bolting, the number one and two men respectively on their team.

Les Jacobson, number one man at the college, defeated Morfitt in two easy sets, 6-3, 6-2. Bob Chrisman defeated Bolting in the number two battle, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3. Modesto clinched the match with victories in the number one and number two doubles contests.

The Rams followed up this defeat with a 7-0 defeat of the Oakland tennis team, fielded for the first time this year.

On Friday, April 29, the college racket squad will play the strong Sacramento team at Sacramento, to wind up round-robin competition in the Big Eight.

Santa Rosa will be the site for the Big Eight Conference Championships on May 6. These championships are staged in the form of a tournament in which players partiepating in the Big Eight round-robin enter.

Scoring is based on individual victories in the tournament, with points awarded for finalists, semi-finalists, and quarter-finalists. Last year, the Rams finished first in team scoring, while Bill Wright, college first man, was runner-up in the singles. Hal Kopp and Wright won the conference doubles.

Following this tournament will be the Northern Section championships, in which the quarter-finalists of the Big Eight tourney will compete in a tourney with members from other two-year college teams in Northern California.

The California State Championships will be held on the weekend of May 20 at a site in Southern California not yet determined.

WAA Members Prepare For Two Sports Days

Representatives from the San Francisco high schools will participate in a volleyball and tennis playday tomorrow afternoon in the women's gymnasium, according to Juanita Hall, Women's Athletic Association volleyball manager.

On Thursday, April 28, there will be a Splash Party Playday, with representatives from nine high schools and all WAA members interested in swimming. Women wishing to participate may consult Lene Johnson, WAA sponsor, in her office in the women's gymnasium.

Spikers Keep Perfect League Mark With Three Big Eight Victories, Meet Undefeated Pirates Friday

By Emil Portale

Two cinderpath titans clash at Richmond this Friday, April 22, when rival Big Eight powerhouses Modesto and City College climax conference dual meet warfare with a crucial track tilt at 3 p.m.

Modesto will be in top shape for the big one, and because of this, the Rams will have their work cut out for them. The most impressive individual effort the Pirates have put forth this year was a early season 14 feet 2 inch pole vault effort by Art Pederson.

Leading the Bue attack against the Rams will be Bob Beatty in the mile, Bob Strangio in the two mile, Larry Connacker in the 100 and Chuck McNeil in the 220. Harvey McCullough has broadjumped 22 feet, and Proverb Jacobs, league record holder, has heaved the shot more than 51 feet.

By comparing times and distances between the two squads, nothing but a nip and tuek affair can be expected. Ram thinelad Ray MacIntyre has stopped the watches at :10.2 in the 100, as opposed to Modesto's Connacker who mastered an early season :10.3. Clint Redus, who trackwise can do no wrong, has turned in a :22.3 tape breaker in the 220, while Pirate spiker McNeil has dashed an early season :22.5.

Ram weak spots in the pole vault and broad jump might lean a few points Modesto-way, but proficiency in distance runs, hurdles and throwing events should offset this to the Rams' benefit, so say the record books.

All sorts of records were seared in a five-way meet at Stanford on April 9. Redus unofficially topped the Big Eight high hurdle record by :0.2 with a blistering :15.1, and John Danner of West Contra Costa snapped the league shot put record by more than seven inches with a toss of 49 feet 10½ inches. Redus also skimmed the low hurdle record, marking up a standard-smashing :24.6. Egan threw the discus 147-7½ but had to settle for second place and the unofficial conference record for good measure.

Final scores in the crowded meet credited City College with 126¾, Stanford Frosh with 93¾, East Contra Costa with 34¾, and Menlo with 30. Five places were counted in each event with the winner receiving 10 points.

HEAD COACH of the college track team, Roy Burkhead, who was a star football linemen and field events expert at USF.

Mile—Graves (SU), Stroughter (SF), Viano (ECC), Benson (ECC), Webb (SF); 4:29.8.

Low hurdles—Redus (SF), Newman (SU), Apperson (SF), Sanchez (SU), Rudometkin (SF); :24.6
Relay—San Francisco (MacIntyre, Morales, Hill, Moorehead), Stanford, Menlo, East Contra Costa; 3:36.7.
Pole vault—Stein (SU), tie Gast (SU) and Williams (SF), Howerton (ECC), Hereford (ECC); 12 ft.
Shot—Danner (WCC), Williamson (SU), Babka (SU), Hart (SU), Egan (SF); 49 ft. 10¾ in.
Broad jump—Hansen (SU), Shea (M), Arterberry (SF), Fukuda (SF), Cotter (ECC); 22 ft. 2¾ in.
Discus—Babka (M), Egan (SF), Danner (WCC), DeWeese (SU), Hart (SU); 156 ft.
High jump—Arterberry (SF), tie between Hooper (SU) and Pressey (M), and tie among King (SF), Danner (WCC), Baker (ECC), and Van Golder (SU); 6 ft.

Spearheaded by Clint Redus' churning victories in the 220, low and high hurdles, and Jack Egan's solid wins in the diseus and shot put, City College tracksters went on to defeat Sacramento and Stockton in a triangular meet held in Sacramento last Friday. Point totals credited the Rams with 72, Sacramento with 57, and Stockton with 21.

Mile—Rush (S), Grover (SF), Stroughter (SF), North (St); 4:30.4
440—Diffenbacher (S), Moorehead (SF), Morales (SF), Dyson (S); :54.0.

Shot put—Egan (SF), Buckman (S), Pellegrini (St), Schepp (S); 45-8.

Six Teams Enter Intra Cage Loop; More Expected

Clubs, organizations and individuals who wish to be represented in the college's intramural basketball tournament should sign up as soon as possible at the intramural office in the men's gymnasium, director Alex Schwarz announced recently.

By last week six teams had entered the tournament, but many more were expected to sign up during the final few days.

Everyone is eligible to partiepate in the tournament, but there only can be one member of last year's basketball squad on a team.

The names of the athletes partiepating who are to coach their respective teams are Les Barros, Dave Davis, Theopolis Dunn, Sam Gellepes and Desha Williams.

The tournament will start within the next week and teams will be paired off against one another. Games will be played on Tuesday and Thursday of each week from 3:15 to 4:15 p.m.

Medals will be presented to each of the players from the winning team. The runners-up to the champions will also receive awards.

College Golfers Win Over Santa Rosa Cubs

Harlan Hayakawa climaxed a stretch drive by the Ram golfers by defeating Jay Turner to give City College a 8½-6½ victory over the Santa Rosa Bearcubs in a Big Eight Conference match held March 25. Other league play saw the Klemmermen trounce Oakland, April 1, 11½-3½.

The scores of two league games on April 12 and April 19 against Sacramento and Stockton were unavailable at press time, but as of now the team is undefeated.

Doug Heidorn was low man for the divoteers with a par 74 beating his opponent, Gary Ronssan, by two strokes. Second low man for the day was Dick Kramer. Kramer, who is also the second man on the ladder, had a 76.

The divoteers were off in the Oakland match with scores ranging from 77 to 98. However, the team did manage to shut out the Acorns with only 3½ points. Dick Derry was low man as he led the tee men with a 77.

After the April 19 match against Stockton, the Rams will meet the highly touted San Mateo Bulldogs April 29 on the Peninsula.

After their Big Eight Conference finale with Modesto at San Francisco, the Rams will enter post-season competition when they participate in the Big Eight Conference Tournament, which has been scheduled for May 13 and 14 at Stockton.

Stars Favorites In Coast League Play

By Mike Berger

SINCE this is the season for exuberantly optimistic forecasts made by baseball writers and managers answering above description, it is entirely fitting that this corner get in its two cents worth in determining the outcome of the diamond's three top races for 1955.

There may be a law passed by American League batters against the pitching staff of the Cleveland Indians, but it won't do much good in long as guys like Bob Feller, Mike Garcia, Bob Lemon, Herb Score, and Early Wynn are still allowed to throw the ball.

Only a complete "el foldo" by the Tribe can keep them from winning their second flag in succession. The best hurling in the majors plus the big bats of Larry Doby, Ralph Kiner, Al Rosen and Vic Wertz figure to take the junior loop pennant, with the only strong opposition coming from the New York Yankees.

The National League, easily the stronger of the two major circuits, presents one of the closest contests in years, with any one of five or six clubs having the potential to take the flag.

All breaks being even, the Milwaukee club gets our nod, mainly because of the presence of Bobby Thomson in left and the greatly improved Hank Aaron in right field for the Braves. If southpaw Chet Nichols can revert to his winning form of two seasons ago, Charlie Grimm's swirling corps needn't take a back seat to any team in the league.

Lack of depth in hurling is the New York Giants' only flaw, and in spite of it the Durochermen don't figure far from the top. The Brooklyn Bums are closer to being just that than many fans realize. Hitting weaknesses at third base and in left field, a slightly over-rated Don Newcombe, and the doubtful durability of Roy Campanella are reasons enough to rate the Dodgers a fading third.

With tremendous power, but little in the way of pitching, the Cincinnati Redlegs might squeeze into the first division. Strong argument for that position will come from the St. Louis and Philadelphia clubs, the former rating the edge because of a superior group of rookies.

Hollywood must be rated the favorite for the Pacific Coast League pennant because of its ties to the Pittsburgh club. The Stars will start slowly, but as soon as the Pirates start cutting their roster to the limit, in about a month, the Twinks will be loaded with minor league talent.

Should the Seals come up with another dependable hurler and a couple of strong hitters, they will make their best showing since the 1946-48 pennant-contending days. If Oakland gets some pitching aid, they could take the blue chips, and when Seattle finds some hitters to go with its excellent hurling, the Rainiers might surprise the fans. These four clubs, Hollywood, Seattle, San Francisco, and Oakland, figure to form the first division.

State Information Service Completes Data; Semi-Annual Chart Ready For Distribution

Questionnaires sent out early this semester have been received from all but five California two-year colleges and the state information chart has been completed, Paul Ortiz, State Information Service chairman, announced here recently.

These questionnaires are sent to each member of the California Junior College Student Government Association at the beginning of every semester, and the information received is compiled and made into a chart. Mimeographed copies of the chart are then distributed to members of the CJCSGA.

PAUL ORTIZ, information Service chairman.

Information on the chart includes enrollment, Associated Student Presidents' names, figures concerning budgets and expenditures, data on college publications, inter-collegiate and intra-mural athletic information, and other pertinent information. Purpose of the chart, according to Ortiz, is to enable each two-year college to receive a cross-section of data from other members of the CJCSGA, and in this way to have at hand any information which might help that college in any way.

The position of State Information Service Chairman is filled by appointment by the Associated Student President here. Ortiz, by virtue of his appointment, automatically became a state officer in the CJCSGA.

Ortiz will be one of six student leaders from the college to attend the CJCSGA state conference in Riverside beginning tomorrow. He expects to distribute the copies of the chart to the member colleges during the convention.

College Hosts NC Political Science Parley Saturday

The Northern California Political Science Association meets at the college this Saturday, April 23, for its eighth annual conference. A guest speaker from Yale University and panel discussions on pertinent world questions will provide an instructive program, according to John M. Selig, instructor here and president of the Northern California Association.

Schedule for the day's activities includes registration in Cloud Hall library at 9:30 a.m., and a panel discussion of The Crisis in the Far East in the library at 10 a.m. with Yale Maxon from Oakland Junior College acting as panel chairman.

Principal speaker for the day is Harold D. Lasswell from Yale University and President-designate of the American Political Science Association. He will speak during a luncheon prepared by the college Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Panel discussions will follow at 2 p.m. Contemporary California Politics will be the first subject under discussion on the afternoon agenda. Dean Cresap from San Jose State College will act as panel chairman.

Discussion of Politics and Ethics in the Time of Crisis under panel chairman Arnaud B. Leavelle from Stanford University, and Problems of Metropolitan Growth from Catherine Bauer, University of California, as panel chairman will conclude the meeting.

College Prepares For Anniversary

Entertainment booths, a pageant parade, and a dance will be some of the features of the college's 20th Anniversary Festival, to be held here on the west campus, Friday, May 13.

According to Associated Men Student President Bob Johnson, in charge of the project, committees have been established and their respective chairmen are the following: booths, AMS Vice-President Dean Woods; king and queen candidate selection, Treasurer Emery Lebonville; and parade, Secretary Marcia Herst.

Booths offering a large variety of entertainment will be erected at designated areas on the west campus.

After being assembled and organized on Eucalyptus Avenue at 6 p.m., a parade consisting of colorful floats, entered by college organizations, and bands, including the California Naval ROTC band, from various groups throughout the city will proceed along Junipero Serra Boulevard and up Ocean Avenue to Phelan Avenue.

Judges, reviewing the parade from a judging stand on Phelan Avenue, are to select the king and queen of the festival.

Applications Ready For Miss SF Title

Women students interested in attempting to follow in the footsteps of Lee Meriwether, City College's Miss San Francisco, Miss California and Miss America, are urged to enter their applications as soon as possible, according to Bill Boldenweck, student here and representative of the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the annual Miss San Francisco contest.

Although the deadline for entries is not until Saturday, April 30, Boldenweck stressed the advantage to contestants of entering early in order to have more time to prepare for the contest.

Contestants must be residents or students in San Francisco, he said, and be between the ages of 18 and 28, single, and must be high school graduates. Applications are available in The Guardsman office.

Zipper Binders, Cases At Ramporium Soon

The Ramporium, the college book store, presently carries a complete supply of college books, outlines, and supplies. Zipper binders and briefcases, ranging in price from $2.50 to $9.00, are going to be available in the near future.

Ordinarily the Ramporium will buy used and even the outdated textbooks. "The outdated textbooks are sent on to other colleges and universities that are still using them," Main said, "and the student receives the same price as the Ramporium is able to resell them."

Used textbooks are mended and resold to the following semester's students. A "drop out slip" or an "O.K." from the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men must accompany the books, Main warned.

AGS Holds Dinner For Members Tomorrow

Traditional semester dinner for Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society here, will be given tomorrow at El Portal, Don Jensen, sponsor of the society, announced recently.

The dinner, held each semester for the purpose of awarding pins and membership cards to the members, will be given for the members and their guests.

The society, Jensen said, is now planning a display soon to be seen in the display window of the library. The display, which consists of a history of the society and a list of names of the graduate members, is scheduled for Public Schools Week.

As yet no definite plans have been made for the Spring Festival. A booth is being planned by a committee of the society but the group is not planning to participate in the parade, Jensen said.

Frog, Politics Among Recent Council Issues

By Don Ball

Student Council approved the formation of a new committee last week designed to aid them in matters pertaining to legislation during their regular sessions. Abandonment of the two-party system of student government and rallies and the lack of them also occupied much of the council's time.

The legislative committee, whose function will be to investigate proposed legislation and expedite its presentation to council, is made up of from three to five council members, the six executive members of the Associated Students and three members of the AS at large.

Changing the political structure of the college's election system was debated after it was pointed out that there is only one political convention still held, the Inter-Fraternity Council Convention. This group, the only political body still active in campus affairs, has had its presidential nominee defeated by an independent candidate for the last two semesters. A measure banning political conventions specifically aimed at the IFC convention was unanimously defeated.

Deane Wylie was chosen chairman of a committee to investigate the feasibility of entering a frog in the jumping contest held annually in Calaveras County. It was pointed out that a frog bearing the college's colors stood to win $1000 if it won. The contest, first brought to national attention by Mark Twain, boasts entries from many other western colleges. Strong interest was shown by the council, who felt that the possible expenses of frog food and care would not be prohibitive.

Cost of using the college band for the Spring Festival dance was thought to be prohibitive by the council after it was found that the band wanted either a flat $150 or a $100 guarantee plus 50 per cent of the take.

Stan Kenton and his band are being considered for the 20th Anniversary Ball. The dance, to be held in either a hotel or country club ballroom, would be one of Kenton's rare dance dates. The Kenton band has limited itself almost exclusively to concert appearances in recent years.

Whether or not this award-winning band will be used will be determined by the interest in the dance shown by the student body as a whole.

Little Theater To Present The Willow April 28, 29, 30

The Willow and I, a play by John Patrick, will be presented by the drama department in the college's Little Theater, April 28, 29, and 30, at 8:30 p.m., Michael J. Griffin, drama director here, announced recently.

Two special invitational performances will be given Wednesday, April 27, in honor of Charter Day and Public Schools Week, he stated. The first performance will be held at 7:30 p.m., and the second will be presented at 9:30 p.m.

Admission will be by show of Associated Student card to members of the AS and $1.00 for non-members, according to Griffin.

The three-act play concerns a triangle created by two sisters in love with the same man, and stars Melanie Mead as Mara, Pat Hickey in a dual role of Robin and Kirkland, and Anne Canellos as Bessie.

Supporting players are Joe Bavaresco as Theodore, Thelma Hawkins as Tinny, George Miller as Bailey, Barbara Raffelli as Millie, Al Allen as Dr. Oliver, Eva Russel as Mabel, Antoinette Mannina as the duchess, and Edwin Brush as Dr. Trubee.

Production staff for The Willow include Don Ball, technical director and promotion chairman; Gail Clark, set design; Nancy Medina, assistant director; Roy Maffei, Ron Tognetti and Gene Kurilow, electricians; Bob Loshuertos, stage manager; Fred Sutter, sound; Edwina Moquin, make-up; and Miss Mannina, publicity.

Parking Violations Average 20 Per Day

The Campus Police force is presently issuing an average of 20 parking tickets per day, and parking permits are still available here at the college, according to Chief of the Campus Police Don Baker.

Associated Students have been issued, upon individual request, 850 parking permits. These permits entitle students to park in the west campus parking lot. Some permits are still available, Baker announced, and they can be obtained at room 120C in Cloud Hall.

"Cloud Circle is reserved for the faculty members," Baker declared, "and no student parking is permitted in this area." Parking is restricted to 10 minutes in all green-marked zones, no parking or stopping is permitted in the red zones, and only limited stopping for the loading and unloading of passengers in the yellow and white zones.

CAB Passes Ruling To Speed Removal Of Clubs' Posters

A resolution governing removal of posters was recently passed by the Club Activities Board, according to Ed Dollard, CAB chairman here.

In an effort to have old posters removed as soon as possible after an event has taken place, a special committee was appointed with Wayne MacFadden as chairman. The resolution proposed to CAB stipulates that a $5.00 deposit be made before posters are put up. The committee would be informed of the number of posters planned and the locations designated. If an event took place on Friday, the posters would be removed by 3 o'clock on the following Monday. If this is not done, the $5.00 deposit would be confiscated and put in the CAB treasury.

Copies of the resolution will be made and posted to notify clubs which are planning activities of these rules, pending approval of the Publications Board and Student Council, Dollard added.

Any club not having its charter petition in will have to report to a special committee in order to obtain the charter. Certificates of clubs which have received their charters are posted with the master charter on the main floor of the Science Building.

3000 Complete Programs For Fall

Registration appointments, which enable students to meet with their respective counselors to plan tentative fall semester programs, have been met with excellent response, Alva McMillan, counselor here, announced recently.

Although slightly more than 3,000 students have responded to these earlier appointments in order to stand a better chance of getting into the courses they prefer or need, approximately 900 have, so far, failed to make the initial appointment at the counselling office located in Room S160.

McMillan warned students that failure to keep the scheduled appointment with their counsellors, unless the counselling office is notified in advance, will result in their registration number being moved to the one following the last one issued.

Meanwhile, the first group of an expected 800 seniors from the public high schools of San Francisco scheduled to take the college entrance examinations for the fall semester, was tested last Saturday. April 23 and May 7 are also being utilized to take care of the rest of these students, according to McMillan.

Club Cavalcade: Groups Active After Vacation

By Joan Anderson

CAMPUS clubs and organizations are getting back into the social swing after the welcomed Easter vacation.

At the Inter-Sorority Council Presents held last Saturday in the college's auditorium, sorority pledges were formally presented to the fraternities.

Pledges presented from Theta Tau were Bev Eckhardt, Barbara Figone, Pat Frodsham, Argie Laves, Barbara Margueless, Carlita Matinez, Ann Mitchell, Pat Parsons and Gail Zeigler.

Sisters of Theta Tau were honored with a dinner given them by their pledges on April 5.

Phi Beta Rho presented pledges Helen Campbell, Annette D'atui, Lorraine Halloran, Gay Neumilier, Teri Ortner, Dot Roscoe and Rose Turchi.

Members and pledges provided the entertainment at Phi Beta Rho's Parents Tea given recently. The sorority met jointly with Tau Chi Sigma last week.

Pledge of Alpha Lamba Chi is Darlene Reitz. A sisters' dinner will be given at Miss Reitz' home tomorrow night. A business meeting will follow the dinner.

Pledging Beta Phi Beta fraternity are Keith Quist, pledge captain, Mario Cassulo, Jack Conway, Tony Panacel, Bill Pfister, Al Raynal, Rich Safely, Bob Stables and Chuck Wood.

The Masonic Club here is cooperating with the Masonic Club of the University of California to present a Barn Dance this Friday. The sale of box lunches is one feature of the affair, which will begin at 9 p.m. at 2590 Bancroft Way in Berkeley. Tickets can be purchased from Masonic Club members for $1 per couple.

Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity on campus, is sponsoring a book drive for Korean colleges. Students are asked to contribute textbooks at the Silver Pole and the library foyer from April 27 through May 6. The drive is nation-wide and the goal is 100,000 by June, 1955.

The International Club will present a movie about Hawaii and two hula numbers this Friday in Room S100. All students are invited free of charge.

Open House Tonight Marks College Public Schools Week Observances; Alumni, Masons Among Visitors

By Emil Portale

Joining the ranks of 126 San Francisco institutions which are participating in Public Schools Week, at 7 o'clock tonight the college will officially begin commemoration of its 20th Annual Charter Day with a dinner sponsored by the Alumni Association, and an open house to which the public is invited.

Open house is scheduled to convene at 7:30 p.m. and terminate at 11 p.m., according to Coordinator of Educational Management Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, chairman of the day. A dinner will be held in the cafeteria for some 300 alumni and friends of the college, who may be present only by special invitation. The A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club will do the after-dinner entertaining. Dr. Louis B. Conlan, president of the college, will preside over the affair.

Special performance of the Willow and I by the drama department will also be presented. Two performances will be given, one at 7:30 p.m. and another at 9:30 p.m. in the Little Theater. With the showing of John Patrick's drama, the college thespians will have the disiinction of being the first group to produce the play on the West Coast.

Visitors, who will include alumni and members of several Masonic lodges and Mission Optimists Clubs, will be shown the actual workings of laboratories and departments in the two main campus buildings.

Holding exhibits or giving demonstrations in the Science Building will be the advertising design, art, dental, biology, chemistry, graphic arts, merchandising, physics, English and journalism laboratories. Counselling offices will be open for the public's information on students' programs and academic accomplishments.

The planetarium will give showings to a number of visitors, the number limited because of the space factor. Campus police, architectural students will give an unexpected whiff of education in action.

Not to be outdone, the criminology department will give the public an example of the efficient workings of its students.

Members of The Guardsman staff have postponed production in order to give their first evening performance for the public.

The engineering department plans exhibits and demonstrations in their mapping, surveying and refrigeration labs.

The A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee Club will represent the music department.

With their extra special skill in filling the stomach, the Hotel and Restaurant division will also play a welcome part in tonight's activity; while the Little Theater group will give a special performance of their coming production, The Willow and I.

Such an outstanding turnout from so many departments, and those mentioned are only a few, speaks well for the college and its system of higher education. The city's taxpayers cannot fail to be impressed.

Parents of all students in attendance here are also urged to discover how their offspring are profiting from a college education. So, a gentle reminder, don't forget to give interested parents a personal invitation to the college's observance of San Francisco's 36th annual Public Schools Week.

Open House Will Impress College Guests

By Bev Swope

VISITORS at the Open House observance of Public Schools Week here tonight should be necessarily impressed with the college's preparation and participation.

The college administration, the Associated Students and the Alumni Association are sponsoring the 20th annual Charter Day event, and day students from departments of the college will be out in numbers to display their knowledge to the city's interested citizens.

Anatomy classes will show their skill in dissection, while the rats and mice in the Science Building's fourth floor animal storeroom will make the supreme sacrifice under the knives of future zoologists.

Students of physics and chemistry plan to continue with scheduled laboratory experiments. Yet we fear that any trace of H_2S in chemistry demonstrations will give touring visitors an unexpected whiff of education in action.

Not to be outdone, the criminology department will give the public an example of the efficient workings of its students.

Doubleplay Blues Dance Here Friday

A spring sports theme will keynote the Doubleplay Blues, Block SF dance to be held on Friday, April 29, in the west campus auditorium from 8:30 p.m. to 12 midnight, according to Kent Scovil, Block SF president.

Admission will be 50 cents per person, with those buying tickets beforehand admitted stag. All persons attending stag and wishing to buy tickets at the gate must produce either a college registration card or an Associated Student card. For a couple to be admitted to the affair by purchasing tickets at the gate, one person must possess one of the aforementioned cards.

Music will be provided by the college band, under the direction of Henry Stroughter.

All arrangements for this dance have been made by the Block SF Dance Committee, composed of Les Barros, Jerry James, Dick Mannini, Jim Pfenning, John Pulli, Scovil, Medford Todd, Desha Williams, and Don Wilson.

Sports dress will be appropriate for the affair, and refreshments will be served in the lobby of the auditorium.

Ram Frogs Enter Calaveras Jumping Contest

Gold rush days of '49 will return again and a famous old Mark Twain tale recreated at the college's Spring Festival and 20th Anniversary celebration Friday, May 13.

At the gala fete onlookers will view the world's most unusual sport —frog jumping. Competition will be held to choose the college's three amphibian entries in the first intercollegiate frog jumping contest at the annual Angels Camp Jumping Frog Jubilee May 22.

The Jubilee, held for the past 28 years to perpetuate the memory of Mark Twain and his story of The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County offers as much as $1000 prize money for the winning frog entrant.

Entries, two from any campus club, for the college's Spring Festival jump-off are presently being accepted by a special Frog Jump Committee.

No fee will be charged for entering frogs in the jump-off, the committee said, and the three frogs who jump furthest will represent the Associated Students in the Jubilee finals at Angels Camp.

The committee also gave pointers to groups who may wish to catch frogs for the contest. All that's needed is a strong flashlight and a rugged constitution to spot frogs in the evening in most any pond or stream. In case of negative results, next best thing, according to the committee, would be the presentation of $1 to the committee, who will then supply a good sized Bullfrog. No fuss.

As far as training of frogs to jump further faster, despite Mark Twain's story, the committee seemed dubious. Best thing, it said, is just to enter the frog and pray he'll jump quick and far. Present world's frog-jumping record is 16 feet 10 inches, held by a Stockton frog named "Lucky Lager."

Entry blanks for the May 13 Spring Festival jump-off may be secured at either the Guardsman office, S304, or the Associated Student office in Building 2. Entry deadline is May 12.

CJCSGA Conference Defeats Mandatory Student Card Move

By Gail Allan Moss, Editor

Two resolutions, both sponsored by City College of San Francisco, were defeated and 12 others, including the acceptance of a new constitution, were passed by the General Assembly of the California Junior College Student Government Association in their semi-annual state conference held at Riverside on April 21-23.

The college was represented by six delegates at the convention. Attending were Al Kingston, Marion Cheader, Paul Ortiz, Bill Cirimele, Gail Allan Moss and Al Niemi. They were accompanied by Robin L. Dunn, Club Activities Board adviser here. Dunn replaced Louis Batmale, acting dean of student activities, after a death in his family forced Batmale to withdraw as delegation adviser.

Most controversial of the resolutions was the measure favoring Bill 3473, now before the California Assembly, concerning mandatory student body cards. Many groups who had formerly fought the resolution, changed their opinions after late caucuses and meetings held by the San Francisco delegation, but the measure was attacked by others, primarily many of the colleges in the Southern Section of the CJCSGA, defeated in the Student Government Workshop, and never reached the floor of the General Assembly.

The other defeated resolution would have, if passed, put the CJCSGA on record as favoring uniform Conference Athletic Codes for the two-year colleges.

The new constitution for the association was passed unanimously by the General Assembly. The constitution was worked out first at the Northern Section convention and was submitted by Alan Milner of Santa Rosa, chairman of the constitutional group.

Important among the 11 other resolutions passed were two directly concerned with student body card sales and financial support. One brought about the appointment of six colleges who had more than 85 per cent card sales to act as a committee to help colleges to increase their percentage of card sales.

At the insistence of Kingston, Associated Student president here and head of the San Francisco delegation,

A Cappella Choir Sings Tonight On TV

By special invitation and arrangement, the college A Cappella Choir will appear in a television presentation of San Francisco Tonight, on KGO-TV this evening between 11 p.m. and 12 midnight.

Having appeared on television several times before, the choir will this time sing Joshua, by Modeste Moussorgsky; The Battle Hymn of the Republic, and The Lord Bless You and Keep You.

The presentation is being held as a part of the Public Schools Week program being conducted throughout this week.

Hickey, Mead And Bavaresco Star In Little Theater Staging Of Willow And I Opening Here Tomorrow Night

The Willow And I, a drama by John Patrick, opens tomorrow night at 8:30 in the college's Little Theater in the Science Building.

Performances of the play will also be held Friday, April 29, and Saturday, April 30, also at 8:30 p.m.

Members of the Associated Students will be admitted by show of AS cards, and non-members will be charged $1.00.

Cast in the leading role of Mara is Melanie Mead. In supporting roles are Pat Hickey as Robin and Kirkland, Anne Canellos as Bessie, Joe Bavaresco as Theodore, Willis Mae Jones as Tinny, Noreen Durehe as Bally, Al Allen as Dr. Oliver, Barbara Raffaelli as Millie, Eva Russell as Mabel, Edwin Brush as Dr. Trubee, and Antoinette Mannina as the Duchess.

Included also in the cast is Beebe, a dog of uncertain lineage.

The play, a three-act drama, is the story of two sisters, Mara and Bessie, in love with the same man. After hearing a gun shot, Mara, the older sister, falls into a complete state of mental blankness which lasts for 40 years. The drama ends with the restoration of Mara's memory and finally secured happiness.

Members of the production staff are Don Ball, technical director; Gail Clark, set design; Bob Loshuertos, stage manager; Roy Maffei, master electrician; Gene Kurilow, and Ron Tognetti, assistant electricians; Fred Sutter, sound technician; Miss Mannina, publicity; Ball, promotion; Edwina Moquin, make-up, and Michael Griffin, faculty director.

Alpha Phi Omega Begins Textbook Collection Today

Books and dimes will be collected for the colleges of Korea starting today and through Friday, May 6, by the Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity. Collection of books and money, part of a nation-wide effort, will be made by the fraternity at the Silver Pole in the Science Building, and in the foyer of the library.

Sponsor of the national drive is the Korean-American Scholarship Committee, which hopes to have 100,000 books by June of this year. It is hoped that ten cents will accompany each book donation, the money to be used to defray the cost of postage.

Only books which are in current use in American colleges are desired. Especially needed are books in the fields of science, medicine, engineering, home economics, law, history, political science, agriculture, economics and forestry. English and American literature, art and music books are also wanted.

Books should be in good condition, having a minimum of marginal notes and other markings.

Floriculture Society Readies Garden Exhibit

After several months of work, the exhibit to be entered by the college floriculture department in the 1955 California Spring Garden Show, beginning tomorrow at the Oakland Exposition Auditorium, has been completed, Harry Nelson, floriculture instructor, said here recently.

A modern outdoor patio, designed by student Norman Holcombe, has already been set into a miniature model, and the life size model of 625 square feet is now being completed by the committee which set up the design at the show yesterday.

Displaying its double swimming pools, one lengthwise and one widthwise, the patio will feature crushed marble walks and floors. Along the sides of the patio there will be flowers, house plants and stones underneath swaying palm trees. The entire patio scene will be accented with large modern lamps.

By noon tomorrow the whole display must be completed and set up within the auditorium.

Delegates Listed For Model UN

Each member nation of the United Nations will be represented by student delegations from all United States Western colleges and universities, including Hawaii, Alaska and Mexico, at the fifth Model UN Assembly "of the Great Pacific West," hosted by San Francisco State College at the Civic Center Opera House, Thursday, May 5 through Saturday, May 7.

Each delegation will present the particular problems and arguments of the nation it represents.

The 16 delegates and alternates from the college include Vic Hebert, delegation chairman, Bob Arago, Phil Braverman, Ernest Goldsmith, Bob Guinasso, Willie Jones, Lawrence Lowe, Corrine Panagakis, Joyce Weaver, Bill Whitney, and alternates Marion Cheader, Bill Cirimele, Ed McClenton, Al Kingston, James Lynch and Al Niemi.

Since the college will represent Poland, it is the responsibility of each member to be thoroughly familiar with the Communist country's present affairs, Hebert stated.

Faculty adviser for the delegation from the college is Thomas H. Dutcher, Political Science instructor here. Official spokesman for the group will be Hebert.

AS Election Success Depends Upon Strong Two-Party System

WITH Associated Student elections coming up next month, one of the most important problems facing proposed candidates, political groups and the entire AS generally is the almost complete lack of support that such elections receive.

In recent years, the average number of voters to decide the AS officers has been about 30 per cent of the eligible AS card holders. Last semester, with a close three-way race for president, the voting percentage rose to 40, a definite improvement but still nothing to brag about.

Prospects for next month's elections now seem poorer than ever. Despite the fine group of candidates who are rumored in the running for important offices, the present AS leaders fear even worse support than in previous years.

There appears to be only one answer to the apathy of the voters—a strong, really strong, second party. For the past two years, the Inter-Fraternity Council has been the only real political party on campus, with the only competition coming from within its own ranks.

Fortunately the IFC officers have been, for the most part, good ones, but the possibility of a poor choice gaining office, virtually unopposed, is a strong one. Without the competition of a second party, this could easily happen.

Al Kingston, AS president this semester, recently suggested that the IFC convention be abolished, "until such a time as the IFC feels there is a strong second party."

The real answer lies here—not in the abolition of the convention, which would at best result in competition of IFC "independents," but in the formation of a "strong second party." The majority of the students here have no fraternity or sorority connections, and certainly enough of them are really interested in good student government to offer competition to what is fast becoming a one-party monopoly.

The college has long been unique among California two-year colleges for its two-party system of politics. This system cannot be allowed to die on the vine for want of the second party.

As good as the IFC has been, there must be a safeguard against any future lack of talent or interest. Only a strong second party, whether it be the now-dead United Student Association or a new organization, can offer that safeguard.

Citizens Observe Education In Action

WITH the huge and varied number of "weeks" observed in the state, county, district, city and so on interminably, one is often lost in the rush by the general populace—the most important one, Public Schools Week.

Public Schools Week, now being observed by the college as well as by the other members of the San Francisco School District, gives each citizen of San Francisco a chance to see just how the schools that he helps pay for are being operated.

Unfortunately, there are a few people who have little interest in the effectiveness or extent of the education that their children are receiving. The majority of the taxpayers, however, are vitally curious, as they should be, about the training that today's young people are receiving.

Activities at the college will include a Charter Day Dinner and an open house tour of the campus tonight. We're sure that the people who are interested enough to attend will be more than satisfied with the facilities of the college, and with the fine education that City College of San Francisco offers to tomorrow's leaders.

Miss Wills was chosen the college cameraman's favorite on the basis of her "sincere interest in modeling and very gracious cooperation." Other models commended by the photography department were Joyce Frazier, Connie Quoranto and Marilyn Tice. Concealing himself behind the center image above was photog Melvin Dollahite.

Tour Of Campus

Four Movements Mark History Of Campus Grounds

By this Fall, the west campus will be a thing of the past. Students daily subjected to the long uphill and downhill trek between classes will breathe a sigh of relief as west campus classrooms close their doors this spring for the last time.

In 1943, the Navy Department leased the grounds, which belongs to the Public Utilities Commission, and erected the barrack-like structures located there to accommodate women naval personnel.

Used as a training station at first, it was later converted into a separation center, processing and discharging women returning from their tour of duty. In 1946, nearly ten years ago, the land improvements were turned over to the college, which utilized the installations for classrooms, student government offices, the placement office, the bookstore and cafeteria.

To accommodate the final change which will be brought about by the completed evacuation, between six and eight portable annexes will be installed temporarily below the faculty parking circle.

Since the founding of the college in 1935, when classes were held in a number of places, from the Extension Building on Powell street to classrooms in Galileo High School, the college and its grounds have grown.

Classes convened at the present site for the first time in the Fall of 1940, when the Science Building and the two gymnasiums were completed.

In 1946, with the expansion of the college, came the settlement of Hurley Village, located to the north of the Science Building, consisting of one-third of the units located there now.

Shots At Ramdom

ALL SHOW and no go last week was the dyspeptic air-raid siren that sits atop the Science Building. The huge basso-growler was found guilty of endangering that which it serves to protect. It was sentenced to stand without its gas tank for a few days, while the object was off having a large hole repaired.

Afterthought on air-raids: While the intent is obvious, there's something incongruous about the often heard announcement, "Remember, tomorrow's air-raid warning is only a PRACTICE alert!" Then there's the old tale of the lad who called "Wolf!" once too often . . .

WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT of a campus run-off, or jump-off, to determine the college's entries in the Jumping Frog Jubilee at Angel's Camp May 22, The Guardsman last week made known its candidate for contest honors—bullfrog dubbed "etaoin shrdlu," which in newspaper jargon stands for "hopelessly jumbled." Also rumored to be contestants are frogs named "Potrzebie" and "Dean Browne."

TIRED OF THE SAME OLD JOB? College Placement Director Joe Amori reports an opening for a "book oiler" at the city's University Club. SPECIAL DELIVERY: An English class discussion recently drifted into discourse of why ships were usually referred to as females, and in the course of things a student asked the instructor if he'd ever seen a "male heliocopter." To his negative answer the comeback was "You must have—the Post Office uses them."

"Oh yes," returned the straight-faced instructor, "and in war time they must use 'V-male' heliocopters."

The Spectator

By Bob Chrisman

THERE are two ways in which matter may be regarded. One may look at a situation in a quantitative light or a qualitative light.

Certain fundamental essences are spiritual and qualitative, in that their existence does not hinge upon matter alone. Love, Beauty, Justice—all are qualitative matters, whose existence is independent of material objects. Examples are individuals who attempt to "buy" love, and appreciate or deprecate beauty in terms of dollars and cents.

On the other hand, the idealist who judges all matters in spiritual scales is going to the other extreme, even though the greatest sources of contentment are qualitative, rather than quantitative.

The first and greatest universal law of man is the will to live, to survive, to exist. From this will to be and to create rather than to stagnate and perish comes the achievements of mankind. There are four outlets for this drive—four hungers which must be fulfilled. Man has an aesthetic hunger, a material drive, emotional hunger, and the desire to be moral.

The aesthetic hunger is concerned with the individual's desire for creative expression. It is not a creativity limited merely to fine arts but exists in athletics, hobbies—in short, in any activity in which the individual accomplishes something which could not have been done had he not done it.

The material drive is simply the will to get enough food, clothing, and shelter to keep the human body comfortable. This material drive is found in businesses and labor—any activity in which gain is received for services performed.

Emotional hunger is the desire to be loved, which every person has. It is met through marriage, children, and companionship.

The desire to be moral is the final drive, and it accounts for the religious and moral codes of men, as well as their desire to fit into and be accepted by their society.

For the individual to attain happiness, all four of these drives must be met. There are examples of persons who sacrifice two or three of the drives for the other one or two hungers. The stereotyped portrait of the businessman who sacrifices his aesthetic drive, moral drive, and love for the sake of making money is an example of overemphasis on one drive. Or the artist who lives solely for his creative drive is another example. It would seem that the greatest artists have sacrificed the other hungers — Beethoven had a twisted emotional life; he was relatively anti-social, and had little money.

Similar examples are Tschaikovski, Wagner, Toulousse - Lautrec, Milton and Keats, to name a few. It would seem that their happiness was limited to their creative activity; as long as they were creating, they were content, for their consuming creative drive sublimated the other three hungers. When they were not creating, the other drives plagued them.

If the person meets all four hungers and satisfies them equally, he achieves happiness, but he evidently does not achieve fame or greatness.

Phelan Avenue New Site Of UC Store

Screw-type house jacks, two house moving dollies and 30 minutes were all involved in moving the California Book Store 50 yards up Phelan Avenue to a new site.

It took eight days in all to move the 60 tons of building from its foundations onto the dollies and to the new lot. The new foundation is 65 cubic yards, 16 inches at the base and 8 inches at the top with one-half inch steel girders reinforcing the concrete. It has taken the men of Pearson and Johnson Contractors 15 days so far and they are expected to put in 15 more working days.

The building will have a complete face uplifting and a completely remodelled interior. The outside will have two sets of swing doors, and the walls will be stuccoed and painted. There will be a 25 foot wide sidewalk extending to the curb.

Although the interior is being completely remodelled the same system of getting supplies will be used. Either 8 inch or 24 inch shelves reaching 15 feet high will be used for stocking supplies.

There will be brand new book bins 12 feet long with a 60 foot capacity for storing books. The store will be able to stock at least 50 percent more books.

Shrew-Taming Medieval Marriage Leads To Utter Confusion In Uncut 'Comber Epic

SO THERE was this rich sort of guy that lived in a town called Padua, some place down Florida way, and he had two daughters. And one was called Katie and the other was called Bianca.

So this Bianca was a doll, real sweet and pretty, the kind like you want to bring home to maw, y'know. But Katie was a real hum-dinger. Yak, yak, yak, from robins to owls, if ya know what I mean, never shut up, never closed her mouth except to chew. Mean? wow! the only one could get near her was her maw and she had to play it pretty careful, because Katie wasn't scared of her.

So anyway, all these guys wanted to tie up with Bianca, but her paw wasn't having any until someone came and got that slob Kate off his hands, 'cause he didn't want to be stuck with her the rest of his life which was getting shorter and shorter and she wasn't helping any.

So all these guys that wanted Bianca decided that Old Ben was right when he comes up with this united we win, divided we lose out bit and they get together.

So one of them, Al Hortensio, meets a friend from upstate, a little burg called Verona. His name is Sam Petruclo, and he's a pretty sharp cookie, so he don't buy the deal at first, 'cause he's heard of this Katie eat, but then Al tells him it's worth a couple G's in dowry to the old man to get her married off. And Sam goes along with the gag, because he's a pretty good sport, after all, and from there, things get kinda confused, and Katie don't know who's story she's in.

Sam, getting off to a fast start (considering the muddy track), drops right in on Katie. She belts him in the gut with a lute which is kind of an old-fashioned ukulele. Then she chews him out at the top of her voice for a half hour or so until she finds out his hearing aid is turned off. Having desrtuonfrvd thrrr mutual etaoinshrdlu they decide to get married next Sunday. So they do.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, the Texas Rangers have taken Tonto away in chains, after determining his guilt in Alice's murder by forty because Katie has been acting pretty good lately anyhow.

So the wedding comes off pretty good except that Sam keeps shouting at the preacher and everybody, and he looks like he was dressed by Lady Draeula or somebody and he got there late anyway, so Katie gets Sam had in mind all the time.

So comes time for the big reception and, Katie is just reaching for the champagne when Sam pulls her out saying "Come on baby, we'll miss the train," and they leave for their honeymoon which they're going in educational writings of a half century ago: "Study of Latin trains the reason, the powers of observation, comparison, and synthesis."

And the servant has let the horse stumble so Sam whops the tar out of him. Katie can't see this, because if there's any whopping going on she figures she should be doing it, on account of her vast experience.

And she wades through the mud and gets him to stop. After they get into inecering, home economics, law, history, political science, agriculture, peace treaty restoring Austria's independence, and western diplomats, lived happily everafter in the sleepy little town of Padua.

Ramblings

By Emil Portolo

AMAZING things have happened to City College in its short but colorful history, but perhaps the most astounding of all was the vaulting of 1952's mediocre track squad into third place in that year's cinder meet. This feat was accomplished with only three men, one of which was far under his usual par, against almost 60 colleges with a dozen or more talented participants competing.

It seemed that typical warm Santa Rosa weather had gone a-visiting on that eventful May 24 evening, a factor which put the San Franciscans in just the right state of mind, for most of the other colleges were used to participating in high temperatures and they were, to say the least, quite uncomfortable.

Harry Wade was the first to jolt the opposing trackmen out of their unaccustomed goose pimples as he scampered away with the 100-yard dash in :10.0, a six inch victory over everybody's favorite, Joe Grafio of Compton.

Miler Ron Bauer then showed that this little group with big talent was to be reckoned with, as he matched Bruce Wood's last lap desperation sprint drive almost stride for stride only to be beaten by three feet at the tape. To this day Wood, the Orange Coast Collegian, holds the meet record of 4:23.6.

"Hurrying Harry" Wade, the night's only double winner, then commenced virtually to sprout wings as the fleet-footed spiker sailed past the 220-yard finish tape in :22.4, a mark that this year's thinclads will try to top.

Supposedly the best man on the squad, Vern Chambers, had the worst time of all. In one of his two races the hurdler entangled his foot in the first hurdle and found himself sprawled between the chalk marks as flying feet passed him by. The determined spiker promptly shook off his misfortune, took up where he left off, and raced into third place. Almost the same thing happened in another hurdle feat, but Chambers ecked out a third in that also.

Thirty-eight points were scored by the Ram threesome in that meet, just a few less than Los Angeles City and Valley Colleges.

The remarkable accomplishments of that trio serve as a shining example of what can be done with a little determination, and just plain guts.

With the Big Eight Conference meet a scant three days away and that all-imposing state meet three weeks away, the college cindermen are going to have their hands full just thinking about them. It's bad enough to have to try to whip Big Eight foes; in the big meet there will be 60 monsters glaring at the Rams.

Dancers Here Next Week

Modern dance groups from Bay Area high schools will travel here on Saturday, May 7, for a dance symposium, according to Lene Johnson, dance instructor here.

Bay Area high schools have been invited to bring a team of dancers with their own creative dances. If the school has a dance problem it will be disscussed at the affair.

Former Ram Athletes, Hess, Daniels, Carlson, Parish Find Success In Bay Area Colleges

One of the many tributes to the fine City College coaching staff is the large number of past Ram athletes that have gone on to star at four-year colleges and universities.

Coach Roy Burkhead, currently on his way to another fine track season, has spread his former charges throughout the Bay Area. Perhaps foremost among the thinclads to come from the college is Van Parish, great Ram sprinter of 1953, who is now a consistent winner for the Santa Clara County Youth Center team, one of the area's strong independent squads.

Another of Burkhead's ex-sprinters, Val Daniels, is now running for the San Jose State Spartans, where he sees action in the 100 and 220 and is a member of the Spartans' mile relay team.

An ex-Ram runner of more recent vintage, Al Carlson, is now teaming with Ed Hersh to give California's Golden Bears a strong one-two punch in the half mile.

On the basketball court, Coach Ralph Hillsman's former charges have shown just as well. Warren Baxter, now with University of San Francisco's NCAA national champions, saw limited action only because of the Don's great personnel.

Frank Hess finished his second year as first string University of California guard and looks forward to his third varsity year next season. Bob Bondanza, always a steady floor man at San Jose State, suddenly blossomed out as a scorer to help the Spartans to a successful season.

A fourth member of former Ram quintets to share university honors was Mike Leaskou, who cracked University of Southern California's veteran traveling squad last season as a sophomore and now looks forward to a starting job for the 1955-1956 season.

A pair of former City College baseballers have gone into professional baseball without the benefit of further college experience, a strong testimonial to Coach Bill Fischer's skill at teaching the horseshide sport. Hal Flinn, a towering pitcher, has seen action in the San Francisco Seals' chain and is rated as a strong prospect by Seals' manager Tommy Heath.

Soccer Coach Roy Diederichsen's primary contribution in recent years has been Joe Hare, former All-American goalie for the Ram booters, who is now saving points for the California Bears.

These are just a few of the athletes who have gone from City College to win important spots on other college squads.

Rams Battle For Big Eight Lead At Santa Rosa Meet

Mighty Modesto, Santa Rosa and City College will battle it out for league supremacy in the Big Eight Conference track meet Saturday, April 30, on Santa Rosa's oval. Trials begin at 10 a.m., and finals break loose at 3 p.m.

Modesto's strength lies in the broad jump, pole vault and shot put. The Pirates' Harvey McCullough has broad jumped over 22 feet to date and if he continues that form, he will have little to worry about. Art Pederson has soared 14 feet 2 inches in the pole vault, an unofficial league record.

Proverb Jacobs has shoved the shot 51 feet 4¾ inches, by far the most impressive effort in that event this year. The Pirates have Larry Connecker in the 100 and Chuck McNeil in the 220, with marks of :10.3 and :22.3, respectively.

Clint Redus and Jack Egan will handle the big chores for the Rams. Redus has season bests in the low and high hurdles and 220, and has done :10.0 in the 100 in practice. Egan has thrown the discus more than two feet further than John Danner of West Contra Costa, the nearest challenger. Ray MacIntyre has tied the season's best 100 yard dash mark with Leroy Leonard of Contra Costa, but has beaten Leonard in competition.

Santa Rosa will cause trouble with Hal Kuha in the mile, two mile and 880 battles. Bob Brodt will be dangerous in the pole vault and Hosea Harper might lead the 440 pack. He has clocked a :50.4 thus far this year.

West Contra Costa might be the sleeper that will wake them all up. X. L. Emerson runs the 440 in :50.3, best in the league, and Leonard does the 220 in :22.4. Danner has broken WCC's discus and shot put records, and should figure in those events this Saturday.

Best timing in the mile this season was done by Bob Rush of Saeramento against the Rams, in 4:30.4.

Stockton's power lies with Charlie Curtis who did an 880 in 2:00.5 against the Rams. Hal Theus is Oakland's only apparent threat. He has consistently high jumped over 6 feet 1 inch, and has a season best of 6 feet 3¾ inches.

Harold Newby of St. Olaf College, Minnesota, seored a touchdown on the first play in four straight games.

Golf, Tennis Squads Both Lose

Santa Rosa Dumps Netmen In Upset

Saeramento's tennis squad and the Ram netmen will climax Big Eight Conference tennis play this Friday at Saeramento in the final match for both squads.

Saeramento's strong showing against the weaker teams of the Big Eight show a potential which might upset the favored City College squad, which suffered its second defeat of the season with a tight 4-3 loss to Santa Rosa's Bearcubs at Santa Rosa.

Les Jacobson, top man on the college ladder, defeated Santa Rosa's kingpin, Don Schaefer, 12-10, 8-6, to win the only singles match for the college, as the well-balanced strength of the Santa Rosa five won the number two through five singles matches.

In loop play, the Rams have won four matches, while dropping two, one to Modesto at Golden Gate Park and one to Santa Rosa, which drops them in to a three-way tie for second with Santa Rosa and San Mateo.

Ram Golfers Face San Mateo Squad

City College's golf team tasted its first defeat in Big Eight Conference play as a strong Stockton quintet stopped the Rams 14-1 last April 19.

The Rams have yet to face San Mateo, April 29, and another championship contender, Modesto, May 6. Prior to the Stockton match, the championship-minded Rams had whipped Saeramento 11-4 on April 12, running their string to four undefeated matches.

Coach Grover Klemmer explained that even though the Stockton score was 14-1, the matches were often decided by one stroke or more, and perhaps a longer putt or shorter chip shot could have changed the tide of defeat.

Bob Oliva led the Stockton divoteers with a four under par 68, while Dave Watkins led the Rams with an 81.

The Saeramento match saw Harlan Hayakawa lead the team's victory with an 80.

Weather Defeats College Nine; Important Clash Due Saturday As Rams Play Strong Bearcubs

Well rested after a rain-filled week, the college baseball squad will journey to Santa Rosa this Saturday, April 30, to engage the league-leading Bearcubs in a twin bill.

Sparked by the hurling of Don Parrott and Bill Modrell, the Bearcubs now reside in first place in the Big Eight standings, and with the Rams now in second spot, this doubleheader could either vault the college nine into the lead, or drop them out of contention.

Santa Rosa also boasts a considerable amount of batting talent, led by infielders Ed Bertotti, Norm Cernac, and Dick Fowness, in addition to the play of catcher John Read and the slugging of pitcher Modrell, who blasted a homer and a double in a recent Cubs win.

In a practice tilt this afternoon, the Rams take on the veteran San Francisco Police baseball squad at the brand new Balboa Field, which is located one block east of the college campus. The game will be the first to be played on the diamond, which is slated next season to be the site for all the Rams' home affairs.

Two contests scheduled to be played last week were rained out, one of them a conference struggle with West Contra Costa, who share second place in the Big Eight with the college nine.

The other game, a practice tilt with the Presidio, has not been rescheduled as yet. The West Contra Costa rainout will not be replayed unless it has some bearing on the standings at the finish of Conference action.

Summarizing his thoughts on this year's ball club during the lull in action last week, Coach Bill Fischer remarked that "we have better all round talent on the team this year, but the only question mark is the pitching." This latter worry of Fischer's might have been solved recently when southpaw Ray Warman turned loose a couple of excellent performances.

In the league opener at Stockton, Warman's relief pitching gained a split in the doubleheader for the Rams, and in the recent San Mateo series, it was Warman again with a steady five hitter which once more earned City College a split in the two game set. Fischer also stated that righthander Larry Nissim's reliable hurling was another bright spot in a doubtful picture.

Latest batting averages revealed an abundance of power. Leading the club at the plate was second baseman Jim Candler with a sparkling .381, followed by Ken Dito and Jim Poppin (.362), Stan Johnson (.352), Bob Zucca (.333), and Ed Kraft (.309).

Rain Stops Sports

Rain forced postponement of two crucials in track and baseball over the weekend. The Rams were to have met Modesto last Friday in a track meet to be rescheduled, and the college nine was to have met West Contra Costa last Saturday.

Schedules Drawn Up For Intramural Playoffs

Schedules are now being drawn up for the playoff of various intramural sports here, Alex Schwarz, college intramural director, stated last week.

The first part of the intramural program finished last week when class championships were decided, and now each class champion will vie against other physical education classes at different hours during the week.

Schwarz said the teams will battle until two clubs in various sports meet for the college championship.

Classes which have been playing football and other outdoor sports will move into the men's gymnasium, and classes which have been competing in various indoor sports will now take over the outdoor facilities.

Bright Futures Foreseen

Redus, Egan Up-End Record Books With Frosh Year Track Action

Two men, whose performances have paved the way for the college's progressing cinderpath successes this year, will go down in Rams track annals as not only record breakers but as vibrant inspirations to the spikemen who will follow in their footsteps. Clint Redus and Jack Egan, both eager freshmen, have turned the record books upside down with their action this year, and both appear to have bright futures ahead in their chosen sport.

Redus, whose hurdle efforts all but terrified opponents in high school, was more often than not the deciding factor in Washington High's once domineering hold on track activities in this city. While his school was winning championships, Redus was calmly smashing the high hurdle record and threatening in the low hurdles and 220, for good measure.

Upon entering this college Redus found that he was not one to forget how to run a race. Throughout the season the churning trackster has broken the college high hurdle standard at :15.1, and has tied the college low hurdle mark at :24.6, a record that has stood for more than a dozen years. Not to let the ups and downs of hurdle skipping mar his straight racing form, Redus has clocked a :10.0 century and a :22.1 furlong. His 100-yard dash timing is :00.1 shy of the Big Eight Conference record.

Egan, another track giant in the Ram fold, seems to find the field events quite friendly this year. The big weight tosser, who aspires to continue college at USC, is another cinder artist who has torn pages out of the record books. To date, Egan has crumbled the Ram shot put record with a heave of 45 feet 8 inches, and has shattered the discus mark by four feet with a fling of 143 feet 7 inches.

Although his performances are impressive, Coach Roy Burkhead commented, Egan's potential greatly surpasses his output in official league play. In practice Egan has winged the official Olympic-type disc at least 147 feet, 12 feet more than his best Balboa High effort with the same type discus.

While sparkplugging their team to gratifying success this year, Egan and Redus have also bolstered team performances as a whole. Teammates Ray MacIntyre, Henry Stroughter, Dennis Moorehead, Talbert Webb and Bob Arterberry, to name a few, have all ably backed up Redus' nine wins and Egan's six victories in four triangular meets.

With the conference meet just around the corner, these two proficient thinclads might just be the deciding factors in who will reign in Big Eight track for 1955.

the colleges concerned admitted that their methods of selling a high percentage of cards were "extra-legal," but the move was passed. Yuba, Hartnell, Coalinga, College of Sequoias, Glendale and Los Angeles Valley were appointed to the committee by R. Howard Harmer, CJCSGA president.

The other measure, passed with discussion immediately closed despite several attempts to argue the pros and cons of the bill, recommended "to the administrators of all junior colleges in California that their districts bear the major share of the costs of athletics, transportation, publication of newspaper and yearbook."

New Admissions Rules Disqualify 40 Students Here

Forty students were refused the privilege of continuing their courses at the college and to register for re-admission as of April 18, because of the new re-admissions program set up last week and announced by John Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

These students were either failing the majority of their courses or their attendance was exceedingly low. They will receive "F's" in all their courses for this semester, Brady said.

All students are required to be in good attendance and maintain a 5 ("C—") grade point average, while at the college.

Brady summarized the necessity for this restriction, saying, "There are so many demands for entrance into the college that only those students who make an honest effort should be entitled to a college education."

On April 22 the second attendance report was referred to a scholarship committee. Another group of programs was cancelled as a result of this report. Likewise at the end of the second midterm period another group may be cancelled as a result of poor mid-term grades.

Skilled Vacation Workers Needed

Students adept in any one of the various skills are needed for part time and summer jobs, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here. Of the jobs offered, 90 per cent of them require a skill. There are part time job openings for stenographers, typists, bookkeepers, office machine operators, and junior accountants, Amori said. There has been an increase in the demand for service station attendants with experience. The job pays $1.30-$1.85 an hour.

In the sales picture, however, there are few if any jobs available in the department stores, Amori stated. One employer has requested a student for part time clerical work. If the applicant satisfies, he would be considered for full-time work.

Summer jobs at the big resort areas, Yosemite, Crater Lake and Tahoe, have been filled for several months. There are jobs open in skills, such as swimming, music, drama and recreation. Jobs available in the public and private camps in Northern California include Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls counselling posts.

To qualify, applicants must be a major in either education, social welfare, physical education, athletics or recreation. The pay ranges from $50 to $75 a month plus room and board, depending upon age and experience.

Administrative, AS Officers Consider Anniversary Ball; Two Rules Influence Decision

Both administration and student officials discussed the 20th Anniversary Ball, scheduled for Tuesday, May 10, at a meeting held last Monday. Stan Kenton and his band were tentatively slated to play for the dance, to be held at the Surf Club. The meeting followed the administration's receipt of a letter written by three members of the Social Committee stating that they felt that the dance would not be detrimental to the best interests of the college.

Two rules are involved in the decision. College policy has been to hold no dances on nights followed by instruction days, and only one dance per semester. the Soph Ball, has been allowed to last until 1 a.m.

The administration had thought that any dance held during the college week would lower attendance the following day and consequently funds based on state average daily attendance records would suffer proportionately.

Kenton and his band were the Student Council's choice. The band's price of $1,000 was more than 50 per cent lower than its usual asking price. Unfortunately, the band's only open date is the Tuesday, May 10, date.

Al Argo was given a vote of confidence by the council as he assumed the post of Election Commissioner. Argo announced that petitions for candidacy would be available until Friday, May 13. Pictures of the candidates must be taken before Wednesday, May 18, for publication in The Guardsman.

Election posters will be approved between May 16 and 20. A rally will be held to introduce candidates Friday, May 20, with voting scheduled two days, May 25 and 26.

Council members approved a budget of $140 for the Model United Nations convention. The college will represent Poland in the assembly.

The track team received an additional $451.20. Roy Burkhead, coach of the track team, thanked the council for its support of the team.

Women's Day has been slated for Friday, May 20, according to Tookie Radillo, president of the Associated Women Students. On this day, AWS members will take over administrative and student government positions for the day. The women will be aided in exercising the duties of their positions by the regular holders of these offices.

Thursday's meeting of the council was presided over by acting President Bob Johnson, whose regular job is President of the Associated Men Students. Miss Radillo acted as vice-president, and Dick Arey took over as parliamentarian.

Regular officers, Al Kingston, Associated Student president, Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, and Al Niemi, parliamentarian, were attending a student government conference in Riverside.

Acting President Johnson spearheaded a move in council to send a telegram to the delegates at Riverside expressing the council's wishes for their success. Johnson's proposal received unanimous approval from the council.

Float Entries For 20th Anniversary Festival Due Today

Entries for floats in the parade that will kick-off the college's 20th Anniversary Festival must be submitted by 2 p.m. this afternoon, according to Bob Johnson, Associated Men Student president and festival head.

Trophies will be awarded to the best floats in guest and college classes. Float entries have been received from the University of California and the Sixth Army, Johnson said, and the Naval ROTC Band from UC will march in the parade.

The parade will enter the west campus on the Festival night, Friday, May 13, after proceeding up Ocean Avenue. Floats and marching units will be assembled on Eucalyptus Avenue at 6:30 p.m. that night.

Festival royalty will be named Thursday, May 12, on the Dorothy Hanson program over KGO-TV at 6 p.m. Candidates for King and Queen of the fete have been sponsored by campus organizations. Award trophies will also be awarded the two rulers.

Concurrent with the outdoor activities will be a dance in Building 2, featuring music by the college's dance band, from 9 to 11 p.m.

Special event of the festival will be frog jumping competition to determine the Associated Students' entries in the Angels Camp Jumping Frog Jubilee.

H&R Students Cook For Masons

Instructors and students from the college Hotel and Restaurant Department packed up their equipment Monday night and gave a full-scale banquet and demonstration of H&R technique for members and friends of Masonic organizations as a part of Public Schools Week observances.

Held at the Parnassus Masonic Temple, Ninth Avenue and Judah Street, the program included a banquet at 7:30 p.m. prepared by the H&R students and instructors, followed by demonstrations of many important culinary techniques in the main auditorium of the temple by the H&R instructors.

Working in cooperation with Irving Berliner, the department "took the school to the visitors," reversing the situation of past years where the public has visited the H&R department here.

Pierre Coste, Edmund Nielsen and Fritz Gerstacker, H&R chef-instructors here, demonstrated the preparation of meats for cooking and the differentiated methods of vegetable preparation.

Baking instructors Ed Nylund and George Muller gave pictorial demonstrations of cake baking and decorating and the preparation of special rolls and breads.

DST Speeds This Petty Pace Up A Bit Or Macbeth Should Live So Long

By Dolores Stoffers

"Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow creeps in this petty pace to the last syllable of recorded time," old Macbeth said, he did.

But that was before the Sacramento big boys gave with this Daylight Saving Time kick.

Well, beside making life miserable for a lot of people Sunday morning, good old DST also puts into work Einstein's Theory of Relativity ($E = MC^2$), in a relative way, of course.

Here are all these little people running around doing things an hour earlier than they did last week, while up in Oregon and Washington, where there is none of that DST stuff, they're doing things an hour later.

Now this really louses things up, especially in the Pacific Coast League. For instance, at 9 o'clock a homer is hit here, but up in Oregon it was hit at 8 o'clock. Neurosis is created within the baseball fans, the worshipers of our national pastime, thus making this great country of ours a nation of psychos.

All this proves nothing but that the human race was never meant to survive within two separate dimensions of time, which leads to a new equation, DST = jru%&ff½°[%½ + One hour less of sleep, signifying nothing.

drafting, typing and business machine departments along with the library, will be open for visitors to Cloud Hall.

To add to the interest and information of the visitors who will be seeing their college in action tonight, 200 extra copies of The Guardsman have been printed especially for the occasion. Students in the graphic arts department will furnish programs for the open house activity.

Tonight's open house and Charter Day events mark the second time in recent years that the college has actively participated in Public Schools Week.

In deciding to hold open house once more, it was felt that there should be no extraordinary demonstrations to distract the public's interest from what is actually studied at the college, Dr. Anderson commented.

Also during Public Schools Week, the photography department will have displays in two downtown stores, Eastman Kodak Company, 216 Post Street, and Brooks Camera Store, 45 Kearny Street.

Students whose pictures are currently being considered for display are Donald Acacio, Raymond Aller, Sharon Au, G. A. Bakhtiari, Mel Dollahite, John Gee, Carol Harley, Lawrence Pellinacci, Thyre Schroeder and Frank Stork.

In charge of the displays is Emmett Smith, also photography instructor here.

Each display will include at least one photograph of Lee Meriwether, Miss America, and principal model for the photography department in 1953-54.

Veterans Reminded To Sign For Checks

All veterans who are attending the college under the G. I. Bill were reminded last week by Robin Dunn, coordinator of Veterans Affairs here, to have their April monthly forms in his office during the week of April 29 to May 4.

Dunn, whose office is in S137, also stated that veterans who wish to transfer to other colleges or universities for the fall semester should have VA Form 7-1995 signed and completed by May 10. These forms are known as change of place of training and may be obtained anytime between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., except between 1 and 2 p.m.

Applicants for summer school under the G. I. Bill who plan to return to the college may obtain a transfer anytime between May 10 and 20, Dunn said. Also, they must have a list of proposed subjects approved by the VA office.

CAB Ban On Poor Club Attendance

In an effort to increase attendance at meetings of the Club Activities Board a motion was carried giving CAB the power to revoke charters if more than three meetings are missed, Ed Dollard, CAB chairman, stated recently.

The motion is to be presented to the Student Council for its consideration.

A special attendance committee, headed by Ruth Jacobs, brought the motion to a vote after discussion was held. CAB voted 16 for, 2 opposed, with 1 abstention.

It was also voted that postcards be sent as reminders of the twice-weekly meetings, Dollard added.

Clubs wishing to obtain their charters were asked to have their petitions and Associated Student card list in as soon as possible. All those applying now are subject to approval by the membership committee, Dollard said.

In the near future Dollard expressed the hope that all the club charters would be on display in the case on the main floor of the Science Building.

Posters, advertising events and put up by organizations, should be taken down 24 hours after the affair has taken place. If the affair takes place on a weekend they must be down by the following Monday at 3 p.m.

Debaters Discuss Juvenile Problem

Juvenile Delinquency will be the subject tomorrow of a round-table discussion by the debate teams of this college, San Francisco State College and the hosting college, University of San Francisco.

Eight men will go to Los Angeles a week later, May 5 and 6, to participate in a debate, the subject of which is the admission of Red China to the United Nations. This subject is being debated throughout the United States this year.

While part of the debate team is in Los Angeles, another group will be representing the college as Poland in the Model United Nations meeting.

Club Cavalcade

Clubs Initiate New Members, Elect Officers

By Joan Anderson

NEW members of campus organizations are rapidly being initiated into the social whirl.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting last week at which they welcomed their new members. A pledge dinner is being planned for them. The fraternity won the contest for the clean-up drive during Heli Week.

Pledges of Delta Psi sorority are Virginia Anderson, Ellie Binner, Dorothy Dankworth, Ginger Fontaine, Arlene Fox, Gayle Hughes, Elsa Hill, Denise Joseph, Marilyn Johnson, Harriet Koehler, Mary Ann Klineman, Bev Linsey, Lynn McKown, Janis Rystad, Steffie Rosenthal, Diane Scott, Mel Thoney and Marilyn Weder. The sorority played a baseball game April 17 at Golden Gate Park with Kappa Phi.

New pledges of Zeta Chi are Marlee Dumas, Corinne Castellucci, Janet Clark and Joanne Castellucci.

Newly elected officers of the Drama Club are Frank Anderson, president; Carole Waugh, vice-president, and Jan Sobieski, secretary - treasurer. Meetings are held in the Little Theater during college hours.

Hanako Satsuno and Yoriko Kawamura, Japanese student members of the International Relations Club at the college, will sing at Grison's Steak House on Van Ness Avenue tonight at 7 p.m. They will be guests, for dinner, of the Marina Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority held a business meeting last Thursday at the home of sorority historian Susan Herrington. Plans for the Spring Festival and a family dinner were discussed.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon. All information should be submitted to The Guardsman office, S304, before that time.

8 Campus Police Qualify In Shoot

Requiring a score of 218 to qualify, eight campus policemen passed a course set up at the San Francisco City Police Range on April 17, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here, said last week.

Under the supervision of James Martin, range master, the men received safety instructions and fire-arms training lasting from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Receiving a total of 30 shots, the men fire 10 slow, 10 time, and 10 rapid at the target with 38 caliber revolvers.

Highest score of the season is 272, made by William Traner, a member of the campus police force first team.

Competing against more than 60 entrants, Philip Moore, campus policeman, won a third place medal with a score of 269 in the Oakland Police Pistol Matches April 3.

On April 24, three pistol teams from the college were entered in the San Mateo County Police Matches. They competed against Peninsula Police Departments.

An inter-departmental pistol match will be held on Monday, May 16.

Chinese Students Club Scholarship Eligibility Continued Through Today

Students of Chinese descent wishing to make applications for the Chinese Students Club scholarships, have through today to do so, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

To become eligible for consideration, a student must have a "B" average or better and must be returning to the college next semester. Applicants will be judged on the basis of scholarship, need and service to the college, Dean Golding said.

Because of the success of the Sweetheart Ball and other club activities, the group has set up a $1000 scholarship fund; $300 to be used each year. An award of $50 each will be made to one man and one woman student here and a like award will be made each semester, to one outstanding public high school graduate who is planning a college education here.

Letters of application may be submitted to Dean Golding in Room S150 or to Edwin C. Browne, dean of men in Room S148.

Hearts, Jack Hit Sour Note In Fountain

By Bev Swope

IN RENO, Las Vegas and certain other places the rattle of dice and the shuffle of cards are not out of tune with the surrounding environment. But at City College these sounds strike a definite sour note.

Yet, sadly enough, Tina Hearts and Blackjack Sam are taking over west campus lounging spots. The whispered shuffle of cards over tables in the fountain and cafeteria and the hushed voices of Tina and Sam with "hit me again" or "shoot the moon" are rapidly becoming accustomed sounds to campus citizenry.

Since Tina and Sam are students of average and better-than-average mentality, it is not a lack of gray matter that prompts them to pass away an hour or two with their friends from the houses of spade, club, heart and diamond. Then what is the reason?

Perhaps they do not yet realize that the college is part of a HIGHER EDUCATIONAL system. Or maybe they feel that City College needs more publicity, such as it would get from a visit by Captain English and his storm-troopers. Or again they might be unlucky in love and looking for a field in which to display their prowess.

Whatever excuse Tina and Sam give for their behavior, it is our opinion that no reason is good enough.

Objection is not leveled against the game of cards itself, as it is a socially accepted and relaxing form of recreation. The objection, however, is laid against the time and place where cards are put on the table.

If students are the least bit concerned about the reputation of the college as an educational institution, they cannot fail to realize that card playing does not add to its prestige. Visitors passing by fountain and cafeteria will not be impressed. And how about our own faculty and administration. What would they think of their classroom geniuses, if they saw them during off hours?

Distinguished scientists, teachers and businessmen are among the college's laudable graduates. Never, however, has this institution produced a second Nick the Greek or a Bet-A-Million Gatsby. So don't let it start now—put away those cards, Sam, and you'll be a better man.

AS Election Bid Deadline Friday

Candidate petitions for the coming elections of Associated Student officers for the fall semester must definitely be submitted by Friday, May 13, Alex Argo, election commissioner, said yesterday.

The AS officers, to be elected Wednesday and Thursday, May 25 and 26, are as follows: AS President and Vice-President; AMS President and AWS President; and Sophomore President and Freshman President.

Argo last week appointed a staff to supervise the elections. Ruth Jacobson and Abe Virden will concurrently perform the secretarial duties of the recently established committee, Argo announced.

Other members selected by the Election Commissioner include Dick Cury, John Grest, Ken Henry, Al Mowery and Joan Rettus.

Only those authorized members of the committee are allowed to regulate the registration of voters and to govern the voting polls that will be set up at the Silver Pole in the Science Building and at the cafeteria, Argo warned.

An election rally in which the contesting candidates will be introduced to the voters will take place here on Friday, May 20.

Veterans Attendance Report Forms Due Today

Deadline for all veterans who are attending the college to sign their April report forms is today, Robin Dunn, veterans' adviser here, said yesterday.

Dunn also reminded veterans to sign their summer session transfer forms between May 16 and May 27.

Transfer forms to enter another college for the Fall semester under Public Law 550 may be filed any time after May 20.

ISC Brings Spring Fantasy Ball To Palace Hotel Friday Night; Bud Williams' Band Entertains

With a Spring Fantasy theme, the Inter-Sorority Council presents its annual dance this Friday, May 6, in the Concert Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, according to Marylou Reidy, ISC president.

Music will be provided by Bud Williams and his five-piece band, and appropriate dress for the affair is semi-formal, with cocktail dresses for the women and suits for the men.

Admission to the dance is $2.50 per couple, and tickets may be purchased at the student bank in the Science Building or at the door before the dance, Miss Reidy added.

Presidents of the campus sororities make up the committee working on preparations for the dance. They include Valerie Bertone, Kappa Phi, tallies; Mary Daily, Phi Beta Rho, invitations; Connie Panagakis, Delta Psi, publicity; Miss Reidy, Theta Tau; Joan Rettus, Alpha Lambda Chi, music, and Sally Yudnick, Zeta Chi, tickets.

Group pictures of each sorority and their escorts will be taken at the dance.

Official hostesses for the evening will be the presidents of each group, and acting as patrons and patronesses for the dance will be the parents of the presidents of each sorority, sorority sponsors, and Mr. and Mrs. John Ross, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Petersen.

Midterms Cancel Films For Friday

Mid-term examinations will replace college hour and prevent the showing of a film on Friday, May 6.

Macbeth, the National Broadcasting Company-Television production, with Maurice Evans, will be shown the following week, Friday, May 13, Madison Devlin, Audio-Visual Aids instructor here, said.

The film will start at college hour, 10:40 a.m., and continue until approximately 12:30 p.m. Friday's showing will be in the Science Building, Room S136.

On the previous day, Thursday, May 12, the film will be shown in Cloud Hall, Room C246, primarily for students in English studies, but it is open to all who wish to see it.

The Election Rally, to be held Friday, May 20, will cancel the film on that day.

Last films to be shown this semester will be on Friday, May 27. Rainbow of Stone, a story of the Navajo Indians, and Colorado River, showing a trip down that colorful river, both color films, are scheduled.

Tropical Patio College Entry In Garden Show

Representing weeks of work by students of the floriculture department here is A Tropical Patio, their entry in the 1955 California Spring Garden Show in progress at the Oakland Exposition Auditorium through Saturday, May 7, according to Norman Holcombe, student and co-chairman of the project.

Under the direction of Holcombe, who designed the set, and Ron Halverson, co-chairman, the set was built by a student work committee with John Herman, architectural landscape instructor here acting as adviser. The set will occupy 625 square feet of floor space.

This year's indoor exhibit will feature exclusively tropical and subtropical plants, most of which were grown in the college greenhouse. The model patio shows two swimming pools laid out in a cross-like fashion surrounded by crushed marble walks. Palm trees, large rocks and patio furniture accented by huge modern lamps complete the exhibit.

Furniture used in the set was donated by Podesta and Baldocchi, florists. Japanese cushions and lamps were lent by the Takahashi Trading Company, importers.

Most helpful in reflecting authentically a true tropical scene was Linnia Kay, a student who has previously lived in the Philippines, Holcombe pointed out.

For the past seven years the department has entered the show and has emerged a blue ribbon winner each time. The college will be competing against nurseries and professional garden clubs.

Unique in college history is the floriculture curriculum here, started in 1946 by instructor Harry Nelson.

Included in the curriculum is preparation and care of the soil, growing and caring for plants and flowers, flower arrangement, design, retail flower shop operation and landscaping.

Administration, Students Approve Anniversary Ball On May 10; Kenton Band To Play

By Don Ball

Stan Kenton's band will play for the 20th Anniversary Ball and Concert Tuesday, May 10, at the Surf Club.

Permission to hold the dance is the result of conferences between administration and student leaders. They have agreed to end the dance by midnight since there are classes on the day following the dance.

Admission to the dance will be by presentation of an Associated Student or registration card from this college, or an Associated Student card from any other college and a ticket.

Price of the tickets will be $1.50 per couple for Associated Students from this college and $3 for non-AS members here and couples from other colleges. This measure has been stressed by the administration who feel that the dance should be a college affair and not a public dance. Members of the college's Alumni Association will be admitted for $3 with presentation of a membership card in the association.

Kenton's band will present a one-hour concert starting at 8 p.m., with dancing beginning at 9.

Decision to hold the dance followed agreement between student leaders to hold the 20th Anniversary Festival on Friday, May 20. It had been felt that the proposed dance and the festival originally scheduled Friday, May 13, would crowd the social calendar to a point detrimental to the best interests of the college.

Tickets for the dance will be available at the Silver Pole, the student bank, the student office and from all members of Student Council.

Kenton has long had a reputation for fronting controversial bands. On more than one instance he has threatened to quit the music business entirely, and has several times disbanded bands that failed to satisfy his requirements.

Only recently has Kenton been playing dances again. For several years he devoted his efforts to the presentation of jazz concerts, especially his experimental series, Innovations in Modern Music. The group used in his Innovations was augmented by a large string section.

Kenton is well-known to jazz fans through his Capitol recordings. His most recent efforts in this direction have been a series of standards known as Sketches on Standards and Portraits of Standards.

Twentieth Year Celebration Set Ahead To May 20

Because of conflicting dates of social events, the date of the college's 20th Anniversary Festival has been moved ahead one week from May 13 to May 20.

King and Queen candidates were judged here April 27, and the winners will be announced soon.

Competing for queen were Patricia Baroni, Barbara Batmale, Diane Culbertson, Joy Frazier, Pat Frodsham, Kay Grillin, Diane Lundin, Sandy Martinsen, Dolores Stoffers, Jean Vachon, Karin Walker, Judy Wilson and Gail Zeigler.

King candidates were Rich Amico, Frank Anderson, Bob Bliss, Joe Canepa, Bill Chrimele, Dan Corsetti, Bob De Marta, Tom Faenzi, Martin Ford, Don Frolli, Warren Jaklevick, Jerry James, Ray MacIntyre and Bob Peters.

The judges were Louis Depelo, representing Ocean Avenue Merchandise; Nerice Fugate, from The House of Charm; Dottie Hansen of Radio Station KGO; Don Pitts, of station KYA; and Barbara Stack, a fashion coordinator at Macy's Department Store.

Altman and Lester's clothing store will give a new suit to the man elected king.

Plans for the festival are almost completed. Dance decorations under the supervision of Marion Cheader, Associated Student vice-president, are going to be of the carnival type.

One of the highlights of the parade, a dragon, will be entered by the Chinese Students Club.

Students from the hotel and restaurant division will handle the food and refreshments for the festival.

Guardsman Receives Highest Award In Collegiate Newspaper Ratings

In overall quality, The Guardsman was rated as "superior," and an All-American certificate is included with the evaluation book.

Pencilled comments on the guidebook were varied. Criticisms of the paper included a lack of news coverage on events occurring outside the college, while the objectivity of the news copy and its directness were commended. The overall comment of the ACP judge was, "A splendid paper of professional quality showing well-directed effort and good use of news judgment and imagination."

Members of last semester's Guardsman staff were Al Moss, editor; Deane Wylie, managing editor; Beverly Swope, assistant managing editor; Bob Chrisman, sports editor; Joan Anderson, Bill Boldenweck, Paul Girard, Don Osborne and Dolores Stoffers, editorial assistants; Dave Barr, Therese Brychta, Clark Smith and Emil Portale, reporters.

Other staff members are Melvin Axelrod, Mike Berger, Jackie Cooper, Bob Jones, Robert Jourdan, Antoinette Mannina, Tora Minor, Dick Moore, Diane Stratford, Douglas Strohl, Joan Wilson, Carole Zabriskie, Walter Zoschke, cub reporters; John Sherry, chief photographer; Joe Gee, Dick Grimelli, Harry Gorman, Frank Stork and Larry Pellinacci, photographers.

The Guardsman received its twenty-first All-American rating in 26 semesters of Associated Collegiate Press membership when last semester's volume earned the highest award, a rating received by only four other two-year college weeklies in the nation.

Each semester college papers in the United States which are members of the ACP are analyzed and rated in comparison with papers of other colleges of approximately similar enrollment. ACP headquarters is at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

Evaluation of the Fall 1954-55 issues was received last Wednesday by Editor Al Moss, making the third straight semester that the college's weekly has been rated All-American, having earned the same accolade for the Spring '54 and Fall '53 semesters.

A minimum of 1700 points was necessary for the rating, which The Guardsman surpassed with a score of 1805.

Policy, coverage, news, feature, sports, editorial, column, printing, makeup, typography and photography were judged by ACP Director Fred L. Kildow's judges, who are professional journalists. Rankings were made in comparison with the other papers submitted for judgment.

Behavior Of Student Leaders Argues Against Delinquency

WITH so many arguments against the competency, morals and general behavior of young people, we were very proud to take part recently in one of the greatest arguments possible in favor of the college students of today.

The event was the California Junior College Student Government Association state conference in Riverside, and the delegates, representing some 60 two-year colleges from all over California, conducted themselves in a manner that was a credit to their colleges and their generation.

Nearly 400 student delegates attended the convention, forming a cross-section of races and religions. Yet among them, it was impossible to find any representative of the tough "punk" element that is supposedly running rampant among the young people of America.

Each one of these people is, in one way or another, a student leader, not just in name but in fact. They are the ones who form and represent the opinions of their fellows, just as they will, in the future, form and represent the ideas of their countrymen.

Perhaps the most heartening attribute shown by the delegates was their ability and eagerness to express their own views. There were many controversial questions brought before the gathering, but no one hesitated to form and express his own viewpoint, whether or not it agreed with the majority. This willingness to fight for their opinions is what will make each of these delegates leaders in their future endeavors.

The entire spirit and purpose of the convention was expressed adequately by Reverend Robert Richards in his excellent convention-opening speech. He greeted the young people present as the leaders of tomorrow who will keep the United States the democratic leader of nations that it is.

The representatives at the convention were not just students playing politics. They were delegates involved in the very vital business of administrating student activities and policies, and they deserve all the thanks and all the help that they can get.

This is one answer to juvenile delinquency. Anyone who is that interested in the good management of government, whether on a college or national level, has neither the time nor the inclination to go wrong.

Hoss Play, Sense Mix In Animal Tale

By Bill Boldeneck

ONCE upon a time, long, long ago, things were getting pretty terrible in the world, and one day word came down from the front office that there was going to be a big flood to wash everything down. And the word came for a man to build a very large boat, which he did.

And to help him run the boat he hired a first mate. And just before the flood began they called all the animals in the world down to the docks and took two of each kind aboard.

And the waters came and they sailed away. After they had been at sea for a week or so, some of the animals came to see the captain and said "Captain, this looks like a long trip, and although we have plenty to keep us busy what with chipping paint, swabbing decks and so on, all work and no play, you know . . ."

And the captain said, "All right, we will plan some social life for all you little animals down there below decks. We can call it an activity program and I will appoint the first mate to watch out for you and help you plan things." "OK," said the animal delegation and they went back to their quarters.

When they got there they decided to elect some officers. They elected a giraffe to be the leader and a chipmunk to be assistant leader. Also a collie to be in charge of the male animals and a magpie to be in charge of all the females.

The giraffe didn't think that was enough to do everything, so he appointed a fox to see that everyone followed the rules, a panther to take care of the funds, a hippopotamus to carry the news, and an otter to try to get in touch with any other ships that might be around. And they planned a schedule of activities with something going on practically every night.

One day the giraffe was talking to the fox and the panther. "Things are going all right I guess," he said, "but we haven't any class." "You're right," said the panther, "things have been dragging around here too long." "Let's have a dance," said the fox, "a real fancy one," "That's all we do," said the giraffe, "this one would have to be different, like maybe we could have music or something." Suddenly the otter ran down the ladder. "There's a blip on the radar, a raft or something," he shouted, and they all ran on deck.

They looked and looked but saw nothing. Suddenly the giraffe spotted the raft and it was all loaded to the scuppers with musical instruments. "Ah," he exclaimed, "at long last, we'll have music at one of our dances." But he was the only one who could see the raft, because he was the tallest.

"I'll go see the captain and see if we can sail over and pick them up," the fox said, "No, don't bother him," said the giraffe, "he's busy steering the ship. Besides, we can handle this ourselves." "That's right," said the panther, "but we ought to tell someone, just in case." "OK," said the otter, "whatever you boys think is all right with me." So they went to see the purser. "Looks all right to me," he said, so the giraffe and the panther jumped overboard, swam to the raft with a rope, and tied the raft to the boat.

"All set," said the fox, "now let's go tell the chipmunk." "Let's not bother her," said the panther, "she's busy talking to the other animals and they won't really care as long as the dance is fun." "I know," said the giraffe, "let's take the helicopter and go see if we can find some other ships, so we can have even more animals at the dance, then on the way we can work out the plans. The collie and the magpie can watch things until we get back."

So the giraffe, the chipmunk, the fox, the panther, the hippo, and the otter got into the 'copter with the pilot, a robin, and flew off in search. As they flew, the chipmunk suddenly realized that they were all only looking in one direction. "Let's look all around," she said. "I guess you're right," said the hippo. "Aw, what do you guys know," said the panther, "pass the orange juice." So they returned to the ship, having seen very little except some bits of floating driftwood.

When they got back, they found the captain and mate waiting with the collie and magpie. "You can't bring all those instruments aboard," said

College Sits On Hill 29

THE COLLEGE WAS OFFICIALLY designated "Hill 29" in 1949 when the San Francisco News numbered the forty hills of this city. To those who scale its height every day, it should probably be numbered "1." Not to be outdone by the hill, the college's adjoining streets also claim interesting aspects.

Campus Locale Recalls Solon, Mission's Dependable Swallows On Signposts Of Area Arterials

While numerous outstanding civic and business leaders have attended the college and brought a considerable amount of fame to it, the area surrounding the campus contains many streets named for other illustrious people, and some roads nearby merely have intriguing names.

The very thoroughfare that handles the traffic in front of City College, Phelan Avenue, is the namesake of one of San Francisco's and California's famed citizens, James D. Phelan, former mayor of this city and onetime senator from this state.

Known as the "first civilized Californian" by his Senate colleagues, Phelan was one of the first great national figures to emerge from the Golden State. His most notable deed in Congress was the obtaining of the Hetch Hetchy water rights for the city of San Francisco in 1906. This was indeed an important move, for as the city grew so immensely in proportion to its former size after the earthquake and fire of that year, that water rights of some magnitude were imperative to this area.

An interesting and slightly ironic group of streets are found a few blocks north of the Hill 29 campus. Hearst Avenue, named for the noted journalist, oddly intersects with Circular Avenue just a couple of blocks to the east, and then come perilously close to Delano Avenue, the middle name of one of W. R.'s frequent targets.

From latest reports the swallows have returned to you-know-where, and a check has revealed no strays flitting about Capistrano Avenue, located a few blocks east of the college grounds, and apparently named after the famed mission in San Diego. Further checking reveals residents of the namesake avenue mumbling something about a change to "Sea-gull Vista" or the like.

A little pull in the right places might have made a life-long monument for one of the ablest of all Ram gridders, Ollie Matson. Unfortunately, the project for changing the name of nearby Marston Avenue to that of the pigskin star never did reach paydirt.

Although Phelan Avenue disclosed a wealth of information, the other half of the City College corner location has revealed nothing, not even a clue.

After more than 15 minutes of exhaustive examination of the records, not one scrap of information leading to the identity of the man for whom Ocean Avenue is named turned up. Most interesting of all the guesses was the proposition that maybe he was the guy who didn't get water rights for San Francisco in 1906.

The Spectator

THE versatility of a motion-picture star is indicative of his ability as an actor. There are two types of performers in Hollywood today: there are those who are versatile and capable of playing any type of role realistically, and there are the actors who embody certain types of characters—Peter Lorre is a good example of a man who has been used as a type actor for the greater part of his career. He always portrayed the sinister, stiletto-stabbing hatchet man.

On the other hand, the versatile stars are performers such as Jose Ferrer, William Holden, Marion Brando, Humphrey Bogart, Joan Crawford, Ingrid Bergman, Deborah Kerr, and Jennifer Jones. These actors and actresses have proved themselves as artists through their adaptability. William Holden and Humphrey Bogart have switched from one type of role to another successfully, from drama to comedy. In successive movies, Brando has portrayed a revolution's hero, an East Side bum, a crazy mixed-up motor-cyclist, and a Roman general. Jose Ferrer's versatility has been proven through Cyrano, Moulin Rouge, and The Caine Mutiny, in which he portrayed different characters each time—a romantic, a frustrated idealist, and a cynical lawyer.

The "type" actors are usually ineffectual if their type is changed. Richard Widmark and Jack Palance have become famous as villains, and when cast as heroes, fail to "get through" to the audience. Rather than creating character through their ability as actors, they are cast in the same stereotypes, frequently based on physical appearance.

Judging whether or not this is a good practice is a question of what a movie should do. For most people attending a movie, the film represents nothing more than a pastime or light entertainment. Stars like Karl Malden, Richard Widmark and Victor Mature have become famous for a type which they play, and when the movie fan wants to see that type of a role or movie, they see a film in which these actors appear.

For those who attend movies as a form of art, this is not a good practice, this casting in "types," or in the final analysis, the best movies are judged as artistic vehicles, not "pastimes." The best actors are judged as artists capable of creating any type of role, and not on their ability to fit into a stereotyped mold.

A look at the recent academy award winners proves that the best actors are the most versatile—Marlon Brando, William Holden, Jose Ferrer, Humphrey Bogart, and Gary Cooper.

Hallowe'en is a survival of ceremonies of the old Celtic calendar when October 31 was the last day of the year, and spirits and witches were abroad in Europe.

WHAT'S your rushes?

The college's photography and drama departments have been working for the past three semesters on a full-length motion picture entitled "Nightscene." Working on location in Stonestown recently, the crew was accosted by suspicious police who wanted to know just what in the name of Ben Alexander was going on.

With college photo instructor Emmett Smith doing some fast explaining, the neglected matter of police clearance was settled and the interested officers stayed on to view the company at work. Nothing like watching a movie being shot . . .

HARSH CRITIQUES of local TV originations have been often justified in the past, but a nightly show revitalized this week should soon grab a large percentage of late evening viewers.

Don Sherwood, oft-mentioned here and justly so for he's a funny man, replaced bumbling Bill McGraw as MC of "San Francisco Tonight" last Monday, and the KGO-TV production (10:50-12 p.m.) appears saved, if audience can take Phil Bovero & his Blatant Blowers. Historic Papers Recall Earlier Cupid And Corn

By Dolores Stoffers

Way back there in the spring of '28 when this college wasn't even a whisper, Cal's Daily sheet was celebrating its 60th anniversary with a special edition, poking fun at the ads of 25 years back when Aunt Belle and Uncle Oscar went to college and handle-bar mustachios were all the rage.

Adorned with cupid-like illustrations and copy reading like a page from Life Magazine or Bret Harte were the discreet and dignified advertisements.

Dad's Place claimed: The quality of Dad's famous choc malts will be remembered long after the price is forgotten—for your stomach's sake drink the best. Thick malts are not usually the richest. We do not use any adulterant such as filler; gummed ice cream powdered milk or frozen milk.

The prices were unbelievable, too. No college swain would be caught dead without his cords which cost him four bucks a throw, and a real togger got you a two-pants suit, for $40.

Elberta's Dining Room featured a 65-cent dinner, 35-cent lunch, and a chocolate malt and two-decker sandwich for 25 cents. After showing down, the average student charged down to the local movie house to see Douglas Fairbanks and the newest screen find, Lupe Velez, in The Gaucho.

Well, if the Daily Californian can cite the past, so can The Guardsman. Away back in '33, when The Guardsman was called Emanon and the college was called Junior, all the co-eds were patronizing salons where they paid $2.50 for a permanent wave, milkshakes were 10 cents, everyone was raving about Rogers and Astaire in The Gay Divorcee, and they paid $25 for Scotch tone pleat back suits.

NC Junior Colleges Compete At Sacramento Matches Saturday; Big 8 Stars Picked To Win

Individuals from four different conferences will tangle this Saturday, May 7, in the Northern California Junior College Track Meet at Sacramento to determine who is to compete in the State Meet to be held at Modesto on May 21. Trials for the north state meet start at 10 a.m., finals at 3 p.m.

Big Eight thinclads figure to prevail in the affair. From available records the league cinder artists hold almost every best time and distance among the competing leagues. Members from the Golden Valley, Coast, and Central Conferences will supply the opposition for the metropolitan trackmen.

Reports have it that the only event in which a non-Big Eight performer excels is the broad jump. L. C. Taylor of the College of the Sequoias of the Central Conference has broad jumped 22 feet 4½ inches this year. This mark tops the best Big Eight effort by at least four inches.

With Clint Redus and Jack Egan leading the way, City College will have the strongest chance in recent years to annex the coveted north state title. Redus owns the best time in the low and high hurdles and the 220-yard dash in this region. Egan has consistently racked up points in the shot put and discus. Henry Stroughter's efforts will be aimed at the 880 and two mile runs.

Ringing down the curtain on one of the most successful dual meet track seasons this college has had, Modesto provided the locals with the first and only jolt of the season, a 64-58 victory on Modesto's windswept oval on April 25. The win brought Modesto the conference crown and dropped the Rams to second.

Field events spelled the downfall of the valiant Rams. Redus captured the 100, 220 and high hurdles and Stroughter took the mile and 880, but Modesto's Proverb Jacobs took the shot put with a heave of 51 feet 9¼ inches, Art Pederson captured the pole vault, and Harvey McCullough won the broad jump.

The relay was a fight to the finish in which anchor man Ray MacIntyre eeked out a two-yard win after exchanging the lead all through the final 440 lap.

The low hurdles proved to be the back breaking straw. John Apperson and John Rudometkin ran one-two throughout the race when all the last desperate moment Modesto's Ed Looper lunged past the churning Rams, won the event, and, as it turned out, provided the deciding points in the meet.

Mile—Stroughter (SF), Cuvlez (M), Heppner (M), Tillson (SF); 4:41.9.
440—Lindsley (M), MacIntyre (SF), McNeil (M), Emerson (WCC); 52.1.
100—Redus (SF), Morales (SF), Connacher (M), Baker (M); :10.3.
High hurdles—Redus (SF), Mathis (M), Carlisle (SF); :15.4.
880—Stroughter (SF), Webb (SF), tie between Williams (M) and Pederson (M); 2:04.6
220—Redus (SF), Connacher (M), Emerson (WCC), McNeil (M); :23.8.
Two mile—Cuvlez (M), Strangio (M), Stroughter (SF), Heppner (M); 10:29.4.
Low hurdles—Looper (M), Apperson (SF), Rudometkin (SF), McCullough (M); :27.5
Relay—SF (Moorehouse, Connell, Hill, MacIntyre); Modesto; 3:32.2.
Pole vault—Pederson (M), tie for second between Lunn (M) and Moore (M); Williams (SF), 12-0.
Shot put—Jacobs (M), Danner (WCC), Egan (SF), Fidler (M); 51-9¾.
Broad jump—McCullough (M), Arteberry (SF), King (SF), Sheppard (WCC); 20-10.
High jump—Tie between Smith (M), Ball (M); Arteberry, tie between Garber (M) and King (SF), 5-11½.
Discus—Danner (WCC), Egan (SF), Freed (M), Jacobs (M); 143-8½.

Thinclads Win Big 8 Meet As Redus, Egan Star

Led by Clint Redus' record-breaking effort in the low hurdles and Jack Egan's standard smashing discus toss, the Rams amassed 102 points while capturing the fifth annual Big Eight Conference track meet in Santa Rosa last Saturday.

Redus, high point man and only triple winner of the day, clocked a record tying :15.3 in the high hurdles, broke the low hurdle mark of :24.5 in the morning trials with a :24.4 effort, and ran away with the 100 in :10.1.

Egan surpassed all his early season attempts with a discus toss of 154 feet 2½ inches, crumbling the old mark of 147 feet 1¾ inches set last year.

Henry Stroughter surprised many with a 1:59.5 victory in the 880. It was the best conference timing this year.

The Ram relay team cracked the four-year-old record of 3:24.0 with a 3:22.8 clocking but was topped by the Santa Rosa quartet who raced away with a 3:21.0, a flat three seconds faster than the old record.

Mile—Koha (SR), Bush (Sac.), Grover (Sac.), Bronson (SR), Strangio (M), Heppner (M); 4:27.3.
440—Harper (SR), Collins (SR), Diffenbacker (Sac.), Emerson (WCC), Dado (SR), Lindley (M); :49.6.
100—Redus (SF), MacIntyre (SF), Robbins (SR), Baker (M), McNeil (M), Bio (Sac.); :10.1.
High hurdles—Redus (SF), Mathis (M), Jackson (S), Schmidt (Sac.), Schdelhaer (SR), Kashian (SF); :15.3 (ties league record, set by Vern Chambers, CCSF, in 1951.)
880—Stroughter (SF), Grover (Sac.), Curtis (SR), Brown (O), Amsbaugh (SR), Putnam (Sac.); 2:09.5.
220—MacIntyre (SF), Diffenbacker (Sac.), McNeil (M), Emerson (WCC), Baker (M), Bryant (Sac.); :22.0.
Two mile—Koha (SR), Bush (Sac.), North (S), Cuvlez (M), Cappelli (Sac.), Stroughter (SF); 9:59.6.
Low hurdles—Redus (SF), Robbins (SR), Apperson (SF), Looper (M), McCullough (M), Rio (Sac.); :25.3 (ties league record, set by Redus in 1954; Redus ran :24.4 in morning heat to break league record of :24.5, Larry Robbins in 1954.)
Relay—Santa Rosa (Collins, Amsbaugh, Dado, Harper); San Francisco, Sacramento, Modesto, San Mateo; 3:21.0 (new league record, old mark 3:24.0, by Modesto in 1953.)
High jump—Tie between Smith (M), Arteberry (SF), tie between Rutmanodo (SR) and Ostler (SR); Ball (M); 6-2. (ties league mark, set by Don Walters, Santa Rosa, in 1954.)
Shot put—Jacobs (M), Danner (WCC), Egan (SF), Pellgrini (S), Burkman (Sac.), Wiggins (SR); 50-3. (new league mark, old mark 49-3¾ set by Jacobs in 1954.)
Broad jump—Campbell (S), McCullough (M), Arteberry (SF), Smith (Sac.), Linn (M), Brown (O); 21-10½.
Pole vault—Pederson (M), Bradt (M), tie between Webb (Sac.) and Ives (SR), Smith (Sac.), tie between McClary (Sac.), and Ostler (SR); 13-6.
Discus—Egan (SF), Danner (WCC), Allain (SM), Litts (SR), Freed (M), Boles (SR); 152-2½. (new league record, old mark 147-1, set by Don Malinoff, Modesto, in 1954.)

the captain. "We're loaded to the gunnels as it is, and any more weight will sink us!" "Besides," said the collie, "if everyone goes to the dance they won't have time to come to my party."

"I guess youre right," said the fox, "Guess so," said the panther, kicking at a loose board. "May I quote you?" said the hippo. "Well, I guess we COULD do something else," said the chipmunk. "Whatever you boys think is all right with me," said the otter, "but the giraffe was very angry. "You never want us to do anything," he said, "I thought you were going to let us make up our own minds. What are you, anti-animal?"

But they all talked it over and it was decided that maybe the instruments would be too heavy after all, and everyone was happy, except maybe the giraffe, and the boat sailed on and on until the waters went down.

Modesto, College Golfers Clash This Friday In Crucial

Modesto's highly-touted golf team will visit San Francisco and Harding Golf Course this Friday as City College's golf team hosts the Pirates in a match that could determine the Big Eight Conference Championship, which the Rams are now defending.

Sporting the best one-two golfing punch in California in John McMullin and Alf Bartelson, who recently finished one-two in the Northern California Collegiate Golf Championships, Modesto appears to have an edge on the Rams, whose scores vary from the middle seventies to middle eighties. However, Coach Klemmer is optimistic about his divoteers' chance of winning.

Harlan Hayakawa, the only tee-man on the squad to score a hole-in-one, and Doug Heidorn, Rich Kramer, Dave Watkins and Rich Derry are among the men on whom Klemmer bases his hopes of grabbing the title.

Post-season tourneys include the Big Eight Conference Tourney May 13-14 at Sacramento and the State Golf Tourney, May 16, also in the Solon City.

Scoring will be by medal play. Five golfers will play 36 holes apiece and the team with the lowest accumulative score wins.

The Rams had a match scheduled for April 29, but at press time the score was not available. Bearing a possible defeat by the San Mateans, the only mark in the defeat column made by the Rams was the loss delivered at the hands of Stockton.

Although the score was 14 to 1, it was not any indication of a runaway by the Mustangs. More than one match was decided by one stroke with the winner receiving three points to the losers none.

Six Teams Vie For Championship In Intramural Basketball League

Organized by Coach Alex Schwarz, the newly formed Intramural Basketball League is now in its third week of progress. League games are played every Tuesday and Thursday at 3:30 in the men's gym.

League play started on April 21 and will continue to play until May 19. After a round robin system of play a championship game will take place.

The league is made up of six teams. These teams are designated by a number and nickname. The team numbers, nicknames and captains are as foilows: 1, Trotters, Desha Williams; 2, Diablos, Theopolis Dunn; 3, Hornets, Dave Davis; 4, Spiders, Sam Gellepes; 5, Aces, Don Brooks; 6, Highpockets, Otis Hightower.

Below is the schedule for the Intramural Basketball League:

Date	Team	Nickname	vs.	Team	Nickname
May 3	3	HORNETS		5	ACES
May 3	1	TROTTERS		6	HIGHPOCKETS
May 5	4	SPIDERS		5	ACES
May 5	2	DIABLOS		3	HORNETS
May 10	1	TROTTERS		5	ACES
May 10	6	HIGHPOCKETS		3	HORNETS
May 12	4	SPIDERS		2	DIABLOS
May 12	1	TROTTERS		3	HORNETS
May 17	5	ACES		2	DIABLOS
May 17	6	HIGHPOCKETS		4	SPIDERS

Ram Nine Splits Twin Bill With Santa Rosa Baseballers; Play WCC Today At Richmond

By Mike Berger

Lefty Ray Warman came through with a brilliant six-hit effort to lead City College to an 11-2 rout of the league leading Santa Rosa nine last Saturday in the opener of a doubleheader, but the wildness of hurler Larry Nissim enabled the Bearcubs to take the nightcap, 9-7.

The Rams' win in the first contest pulled them to within a game of the Big Eight leaders, but the loss in the second tilt allowed Santa Rosa to keep their comfortable two game edge in the race.

A parade of 13 Ram hits meant the downfall of Cub pitcher Gary Modrell in the opener. Ken Ditz, with four safeties; Jim Poppin, with four RBI's and three hits; Stan Johnson's double and triple, and Jim Doherty's timely homer led the attack.

Although Santa Rosa belted only five hits in the final game, the erratic control of Nissim offset the ineffectiveness of the Bearcub bats. The Ram righthander walked two in the first inning and three more in the third, and all five of the free tickets were turned into tallies.

The college nine battled back to a 7-6 deficit by the fourth stanza, but never could overcome the locals' lead, despite outhitting Santa Rosa, 10-5.

A final threat in the last inning was snuffed out in sensational style by Ed Bertotti, shortstop for Santa Rosa. With runners on first and third and two out, first sacker Bob Zucca blasted a hot liner that seemed to be a hit, but Bertotti raced deep into the hole and snagged it for the final out.

The Ram nine engages West Contra Costa today at Richmond in a battle for second place. Following the Comet clash, the baseballers will host Modesto in a twin bill this Saturday, May 5.

Tennis Play Ends This Weekend

Santa Rosa will be the site of the Big Eight Conference Tennis Championships, an elimination tournament composed of Conference players, which will be played this weekend on May 6 and 7 to culminate the Conference's tennis schedule.

Players who have competed in the Conference round robin, which was captured by the Modesto Pirates' team, will be eligible for this tourney. Because of their two ladders, one for two-year colleges and one for four-year colleges, Modesto will enter any sophomore or any out of state or foreign player from either team. Alex Olmedo, Peruvian star, and sophomores Don Stensaas and Ray Samson are expected to compete, but it is doubtful if Mike Green and Gerry Moss, the top Modesto players, will enter the championships because of conflicting tournaments.

Strong threats in this year's tourney will be George Morfitt, Carmine Boltine, both of Modesto, Les Jacobson, number one man at the college, Don Schaefer, number one Santa Rosan, and Cliff Vickery of San Mateo.

City College will be represented by Jacobson, Bob Chrisman, Don Wing, Walt Zoschke, Alan Matsumoto, and Lee Anderson.

The quarter-finalists in the singles and doubles of this meet will attend the Northern California Sectional Championships, which includes representatives from all the two-year college leagues in Northern California. This tourney will be held at Modesto on May 13 and 14.

Bay Area Dancers Meet At UC Sunday

A folk dance festival will be held at the University of California this Sunday at 1:30 p.m., according to Lene Johnson, Women's Athletic Association adviser here.

Representatives from all colleges in the Bay Area will be in attendance. Any students of the colleges interested in attending are asked by Mrs. Johnson to sign a list in the Women's Gymnasium.

A swimming playday is scheduled for Saturday, May 21, at Napa Junior College. Interested swimmers should contact Mrs. Johnson.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

HAVING the best all-around sports program in the Conference is both an advantage and a problem for City College, as in the case of the boxing team. The Ram ringsters are the only such group in the Big Eight, and this situation forces them to meet larger colleges in competition.

One of these schools, USF, was met and defeated, 3-2, by the Rams some weeks ago. Prior to the matches some valuable advice to all novice boxers was offered by USF ring coach Joe Carlo, prominent Bay Area fight manager.

Although it is commonly believed among inexperienced hands that the first thing to do when training is to put on a pair of gloves and flail away at the bags, Carlo insists quite logically that if the legs cannot hold up to the rigors of a long bout, then all the power and prowess with the fists is useless.

When his USF boys began the training effort, Carlo saw that they were distressed at the amounts of weight that were dropping off their frames. This, Carlo stressed, was merely "baby fat," put on through too much eating and not enough exercise.

"After a few weeks of the daily roadwork and some strenuous effort on the pulleys, there soon appeared new weight on the fighters. This poundage was in the form of hard muscle instead of useless fat.

Next step in the moulding of the new boxers was teaching them to relax. "They stand up straight like a picture on the cover of 'Police Gazette' some 40 years ago," Carlo said. "The classic style doesn't work anymore. You're dead if you don't bob and weave."

Tenseness caused the arms of the young boxers to stiffen due to lack of blood. A similar condition in the diaphragm also caused the men some difficulty in breathing while in competition. The morning roadwork ironed these problems out.

After licking the relaxation problem, Carlo was free to teach the students how to "use" the ring, and how to move the head in coordination with the body.

Because of lack of equipment at school, the USFers have been training at the Dolph Thomas gym downtown. This brings the collegians into contact with the numerous pros who work out at the same place. After the Don boxers learn the fundamentals from Carlo, the pros help them to put into practice what they have learned. The pros are "nice guys, of all colors" as one of the college boxers described them.

Apparently, the USF pugilists are not only learning much about boxing, thanks to Joe Carlo, but are receiving a valuable bit of experience in human relations as well.

Talentless Soph-Prof Tilt Scheduled June 3

Undoubtedly two of the most skilled teams in the history of the college will take part in a game that doesn't require any when the Sophs meet the Profs in their annual softball game at spacious Men's Gymnasium Field during the double college hour on Friday, June 3.

This attempt at a softball game will replace the basketball game, played in the fall, which badly needs replacing. The teams have yet to name their coaches, and the coaches refused to comment on their team's chances.

Second Midterm Grade Check Due Here Next Week

Students who are failing two or more courses or whose attendance is under par will be asked to discontinue their studies here before the end of this semester, Jack Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, announced last week.

Seventy-two students have been dropped without chance for re-admission since the customary college regulations began to be rigorously enforced, Brady said.

Students' records and grades will be carefully examined at the end of this second midterm and judged accordingly, he added.

Students should not be inclined to believe that these suddenly enforced regulations are arbitrary, Brady said. On the contrary, the rigorous enforcement of regulations has always been a standing requisite of the college.

"Some students have a tendency to regard the three unexcused absences permitted as a basic right instead of a privilege which should not be abused," Brady said.

The third of the four attendance reports submitted each semester to the Student Welfare office is now being studied.

State AGS Groups Meet Saturday At East Contra Costa

The State meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society will be held Saturday, May 7, at East Contra Costa Junior College, Don Jensen, sponsor of the society here, announced recently.

The meeting is held annually for the students and sponsors from two-year colleges all over the state. Its primary concern, Jensen said, has to do with improving public relations for the colleges in their communities, not just with the society.

The general session of the meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. with registration and coffee hour. The afternoon session will begin with a luncheon and there will be a workshop period and program in which all students will be able to participate.

After the meeting a banquet and a dance will be given.

"We are sending a delegation of students," Jensen said, "who have expressed an interest in the society."

Alpha Gamma Sigma also passed a resolution, approved by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, that Thomas J. Guzzetti be given a posthumous associate in arts degree with honors. Guzzetti, a criminology student here, was killed in the line of duty with the San Francisco Police Department recently.

Delta Psi Omega Organizes Stage Society Here

The college's chapter of Delta Psi Omega, National Drama Society, recently organized at the college by the Drama Department, held a formal initiation of new members, Michael Griffin, faculty director, announced recently.

Membership in the organization is determined by the number and importance of roles or technical positions such as stage manager or technical director which make the student eligible.

Membership in the society permits a student to return to the college after commencement and act in one play a year along with the drama department.

New members this semester include Frank Anderson, Dick Barulich, Toni Mannina, Roy Maffei, Edwina Moquin, Warren Smith and Janet Sobieski.

Plans are in progress for the next production which is to be The Heiress, a play in two acts by Ruth and Agustus Goetzs, to be presented June 2, 3, and 4 in the Little Theater with curtain time at 8:30 p.m.

The story concerns a plain young woman who is to inherit a large fortune from her domineering father. At the age of 25 she has her first suitor who is believed to be after her fortune, and when she plans to elope her father cuts her off with only a small amount to test the young man's love for her.

100 Delegates Open Model UN Tomorrow

Student delegates from over 100 colleges and universities in ten western states, Alaska, Hawaii and Mexico will convene here in San Francisco tomorrow, Friday and Saturday for the fifth consecutive annual Model United Nations assembly.

Each college will represent one of the United Nations or one of the countries seeking admission to the world organization. The primary purpose of the meeting is to acquaint students with the problems of the world today and "to show future leaders and citizens in action."

The first Model UN was held at Stanford University in 1951, with 240 delegates. San Francisco State College will host this year's meeting, with an expected 1200 students in attendance.

The Model General Assembly will convene at the Opera House on Friday morning at 9 a.m., and the model International Court of Justice, new to the model UN this year, will be in session from Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. on the State College campus.

City College will represent Poland in the assembly with a group of 16 delegates and alternates headed by Vie Hebert. Admission to the general assembly meetings will be $1 to the public and 50 cents to students; admission to the Court of Justice meetings will be 75 cents to the public and 25 cents to students. Proceeds will cover the cost of staging the meeting.

Several legal advisers, including a San Francisco Municipal Judge, the clerk of the California Supreme Court, and Bay Area lawyers will assist in the workings of the model court.

The Opera House meetings will be held on Friday and Saturday only.

Three Here Help To Bring Back UN

Three men connected with the college are among the members of a committee instrumental in bringing the United Nations to San Francisco for its tenth anniversary session.

The men are Dr. Archibald Cloud, president emeritus of the college, George Mullany and William Eckert, journalism and commercial art instructors respectively. They are members of the Press and Union League's United Nations committee, responsible for bringing Andrew Coudier, second in command of the UN, to San Francisco to study the possibilities of holding the anniversary session here.

Selective Service Exam Next Week

Another Selective Service College Qualification Test will be given on Thursday, May 19, the Veterans' Office announced yesterday.

Any student here who is registered for the Draft in I-A or I-S classification, and who has not previously taken the test is eligible to file an application.

Forms may be obtained from any local draft board and must be postmarked not later than midnight, Monday, May 9.

10 O'Clock Classes Recessed To Attend Joint Concert Of College Choir, Army Band

All one hour 10 o'clock classes will be excused here next Tuesday so that students and faculty members may attend a special concert of the Sixth Army Band and the college A Cappella Choir in joint presentation, to be held in the Building 1 auditorium on the west campus at 10:15 a.m.

This will be the fourth time that the band has appeared here in three years, the past three times with great success. The concert is the first of two being presented jointly by the band and the college A Cappella Choir, the second of these being held at the Presidio.

Among other classical and "pops" presentations, the band will present the premier performance of a symphony composed in its entirety by Robert Morton, director of the choir and Men's Glee Club here at the college.

ROBERT MORTON, A Cappella Choir and Men's Glee Club director, and composer of a symphony.—Guardsman photo by John Gee.

First movement of the symphony, composed in four movements by Morton in 1952, and dedicated to the band which will present it on Tuesday, was presented by the band as a part of its 1952 annual Fourth of July concert held at Sigmund Stern Grove. The annual concerts have habitually drawn from ten to twelve thousand listeners each performance.

The band, under the direction of Louis Ferraro, commanding officer, and the choir, under the direction of Morton, will present a well-balanced program of classical and semi-classical or "pops" music.

Heading the selections to be sung by the choir will be Joshua by Moussorgsky. The choir will also sing four movements from The Peaceable Kingdom by Randall Thompson.

All students and faculty members have been invited to the occasion, which is being sponsored by the college music department. The choir will be decked out in its new robes for the first time here, having just received them.

Following the concert, the choir will on Sunday, May 15, go to the Presidio, where it will present the same program, with two additional selections, The Battle Hymn of the Republic and Maddy's Festival Finale, written for band and chorus.

The Presidio presentation will be a part of the band's regular Sunday afternoon concert series, held every other weekend. The 2 o'clock concerts have for many years attracted steady audiences of from 400 to 1,000 listeners.

Choir Appearing At Downtown Church

Concluding a series of off-campus appearances, the college A Cappella Choir will perform at the First Congregational Church, Post and Mason Streets, on Sunday evening, May 22. The program will include one hour of music by the choir and several soloists.

Appearing by special request of the church, the choir will sing Moussorgsky's Joshua, four movements from The Peaceable Kingdom, by contemporary composer Randall Thompson, and The Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Also scheduled for presentation by the choir will be four Bach chorales, headed by Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring. Choir soloists will be Jo Anne Bedell, vice-president of the choir, tenor William Haber, secretary of the choir Vivian Price, and baritone Edward Williams. A featured part of the program will be a duet by Miss Bedell and Williams.

Rally Committee Posts Left Vacant By Resignations

Rally Commissioner Glen Allen and his assistant Bob Frick officially resigned their positions as of last Thursday.

It appeared that both Allen and Frick resigned because of after college work and out-of-college activities. Allen summed this up by stating, "I quit because of outside work."

Associated Student President Al Kingston wrote an open letter to The Guardsman two weeks ago criticizing the "two-party" system of student government and college spirit. He also said, "Putting in new spirit" was important and needed.

The resignation was made official at last Thursday's Student Council meeting, and since then Kingston has been in charge of the committee with assistance from Parliamentarian Al Niemi. Until a new committee head is chosen, Kingston will preside as Rally Commissioner.

Kingston said that he would appoint new committee members tomorrow, and if the council approves them they will be officially the new Rally Commissioner and assistant.

Four Students Here Chosen For NROC

Bill Chisum, Phil Gaal, Al Kingston and Jim Nichols, students at the college, have been selected for special Naval Reserve officer's training during this summer and next at Newport, Rhode Island, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here and personnel officer of Air Wing Staff 87 of Oakland Naval Air Station, from which the four were selected.

The four were among 300 chosen from more than 1,500 applicants, Amori said, and upon completion of the training and graduation from a four-year college or university, they will be commissioned as ensigns in the Naval Reserve Corps.

Auto Road-E-O Rolls Saturday At Cow Palace

Young San Francisco motorists will display their automobile maneuvering talents in the fourth annual National Road-E-O competition to be held this Saturday, May 7, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Cow Palace.

Primarily sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Road-E-O is offered to young people between the ages of 16 and 20, and endeavors to give these motorists an opportunity to prove and improve their driving habits and attitudes. The local competition is open to anyone in the above age group who has a California driver's license.

Scholarships amounting to $3,000 and other prizes are offered for the winners in the national finals to be held in Washington, D. C. in June. To achieve these awards the top motorists must score high in the community (San Francisco) and state Road-E-Os.

The Road-E-O consists of a written test to examine the motorists driving knowledge, and a test of actual driving skill with exercises on specially prepared obstacle-type courses.

Seven students of the college are competing for the honors; they are: Daniel Crawley, Paul Hanes, Edgar Lehmann, Edward Leong, Anthony Pullin, Harold Stein and Clay Zananiri. Contestants will be behind the wheel of a 1955 Chevrolet in the tests.

Don Pitts will be master of ceremonies and KOVR, Channel 13, will televise a re-creation of the action.

Televiewers will be given a preview look at the Road-E-O function on Dottie Hansen's show on KGO-TV, Channel 7, tomorrow, May 5.

Exams Cancel Social Functions

By Joan Anderson

ALL social activities of campus have ceased this week to allow students to spend evenings boning up for their midterm examinations.

Last week Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting to discuss plans for their float and booth for the Spring Festival.

Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity on campus, held a bowling meet April 23 between the active members and the pledges. The mighty actives swept the match from the lowly pledges and walked away with the honors and the winner's trophy.

Parents of Phi Beta Rho sorority members were honored recently at a coffee and tea hour. Members of the sorority provided the entertainment.

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity and Delta Psi sorority held a second bicycle party at Golden Gate Park last Sunday after the success of a similar affair the preceding Sunday.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority and Beta Tau fraternity held a joint meeting last Wednesday night. Members of the sorority are planning a family dinner for May 19 and a sister's dinner for June 2.

Theta Tau sorority met jointly with Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity last Wednesday evening.

Members of Delta Psi sorority held a business meeting on April 26.

Deadline for all club news to appear in The Guardsman is Wednesday, at 12 noon, the Science Building, Room 304. Items can be turned in at CAB meetings or brought directly to The Guardsman office. Club news arriving later will not appear in the following edition.

Frog Jubilee Jump-Off Date Moved To May 20

College organizations have been given an extra week to enter frogs in the jump-offs to determine the Associated Students' entries in the Jumping Frog Jubilee at Angels Camp Sunday, May 22, it was announced last week, when the 20th Anniversary Festival was postponed until May 20.

The jump-offs, originally scheduled to be held on the May 13 Festival date, will now be held on the evening of the new date, Friday, May 20, the AS jumping frog committee said last week.

This year marks the first time that a special inter-collegiate contest has been held at the annual Jumping Frog Jubilee. The competition offers a top prize of $1,000 for the amphibian setting a new world's record, which is presently 16 feet 10 inches.

Two entries from any campus club or organization are being accepted for the jump-off contest by the jumping frog committee, and the three frogs jumping furthest will represent the Associated Students in the Jubilee finals at Angels Camp.

The committee repeated pointers listed last week for the capture of likely jumping frogs. A nighttime expedition with a bright flashlight with which to spot and hypnotize the jumpers is the best plan, they said, and hinted that trips to the bogs of Merced Lake or to Steven's Creek on the Peninsula might yield good prospects.

If all hunting trips fail, the committee said, next best (and easiest) method would be to hand over $1 to the committee who will then supply a large frog, purchased from an undisclosed source.

While Mark Twain's character "Smiley" in his famed tale had a frog that could somersault and do all manner of wonderful tricks, the jumping frog committee was seen to openly snicker at reports of trained frogs in this present day. Best thing, it said, is to enter the frog and hope that he'll leap further faster.

Entry blanks for the May 20 20th Anniversary Festival jump-offs may be secured at either The Guardsman office, S304, or the AS office in Building 2. No entry fee is required, the committee said. Deadline for entries is noon, May 20.

Independents One Hope For Second Party

By Bev Swope

ELECTION TIME approaches again, and it is anybody's guess how and what will take place before the last Associated Student vote is cast on May 26.

With the disappearance last semester of the United Students Association, the college's only other party, the Inter-Fraternity Council, would seem to have a monopoly on all student government posts.

Yet to express a widely-known fact, the IFC will not fail to have competition from a number of independent candidates. As illustrated by last semester's election results, the power of the independents is not to be underestimated.

If the independents are so successful in capturing student government positions, a question follows. Why don't they organize to preserve the college's two-party system?

Yet this question poses a problem, since the majority of independent candidates comes from within the IFC itself.

The advantages of organization would be many, however, for both the independents and the voters. Organization would mean increased support and vote-gaining strength for the independent candidates. Their individual popularity would add to the prestige of the group and make the venture profitable.

Such action would also make a majority vote possible for the highest AS offices and eliminate voter confusion when faced with too many candidates for too few high government positions.

Although these advantages should be considered, what about the division in the IFC? For the third consecutive election the signs point toward a split in IFC ranks.

The council must be given credit for its unfailing interest in student government. It is unfortunate that nearly all of its competition must come from within the group. Nevertheless a united front must be presented. If the only alternative is a division within a party to form a new party, perhaps it is the only way to preserve the college's unique two-party system.

It is not for one person to say; the group must decide. In the words of Davy Crockett, frontier hero recently immortalized in song, "Be sure you are right. Then go ahead."

Batmale, Amico Win Royal Titles In Festival Race

King and Queen of the 20th Anniversary Festival, Richard Amico and Barbara Batmale, were crowned last night at the Surf Club by celebrated bandleader Stan Kenton.

The royal pair will lead the festival parade, which will travel up Ocean Avenue from Junipero Serra to the college on the day of the festival, Friday, May 20. The parade begins at 3:30 p.m., and will include marching units from the armed forces and entries from the college, Bob Johnson, Associated Men Student president and festival chairman, announced yesterday.

Sixteen clubs have submitted entries for floats in the college's 20th Anniversary Festival parade, Johnson added.

Music for the Anniversary Festival will be provided by the college dance band. They will also play at the festival dance to be held in the auditorium, Building 1, west campus. According to Johnson, there will be an admission charge. The theme will be Spring Festival Dance.

Judges will award trophies to the best float, guest parade unit, club entry, booth and the king and queen.

At the present time 17 entries have been submitted by campus organizations for booths, Johnson said.

Entries for the title of queen of the 20th Anniversary Festival were announced by Johnson as follows: Pat Baroni, Miss Batmale, Diane Culbertson, Joy Frazier, Pat Frodsham, Kay Griffin, Diane Lundin, Sandy Martinsen, Jean Vachon, Karin Walker, Marilyn Williamson, Judy Wilson and Gail Zeigler.

Johnson announced the entrants for the title of king of the 20th Anniversary Festival as Amico, Frank Anderson, Bob Bliss, Joe Canepa, Bill Cirimele, Dan Corsetti, Bob de Marta, Tom Faenzi, Martin Ford, Don Frolli, Warren Jaklevick, Jerry James, Ray MacIntyre, and Bob Peters.

Altman and Lester's clothing store will give a new suit to the king of the Festival.

Carnival type decorations for the dance to be held in the auditorium in connection with the festival are under the supervision of Marion Cheader, Associated Student vice-president.

Johnson said that this year's festival would end at 11 p.m. He also extended an invitation to the general public to attend the festivities.

Ortiz Wins Fraternity Nomination For AS Presidency In Close Race

Friday Deadline Put On Election Petitions Here

Petitions for candidacy in the upcoming Associated Student elections must be submitted to Alex Argo, election commissioner, by this Friday, May 13, or they will not be accepted, Argo announced here yesterday.

All candidates must have passed at least 12 units with a 1.0 grade average by the end of the second midterm period. The president and vice-president must have satisfactorily completed a political science course. Other rules require that at least 12 Associated Student members sign a character reference petition favoring the prospective candidate.

The students who aspire to become candidates for AS office may pick up the petition from Argo at the student office located in Building 2. Applicants are directly affected by the regulations which accompany each petition, according to Argo.

The Election Committee will soon begin to judge, approve, and set up election posters in the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

Only members of the committee will be allowed to put up the election posters in these two buildings.

Ed Emig, not Abe Virdeh as previously announced, will act as joint secretary of the Election Committee, whose members received a vote of confidence from the Student Council here recently. Virdeh is a candidate for a Sophomore seat on the council.

Campus Police Visit San Quentin Tuesday

Forty students from the criminology department at the college will go on a field trip to San Quentin next Tuesday, May 17, Don Baker, campus police chief, said recently.

The trip will be part of the criminology department studies and the students will spend half a day at the state prison in San Quentin.

On that same afternoon the 40 students will go to the Marin Town and Country Club for the semi-annual campus police picnic.

PAUL ORTIZ, a present member of the Associated Student cabinet, is Inter-Fraternity Council nominee for AS President.

Woods Beaten In Final Vote; IFC Picks Full Slate

Paul Ortiz received a simple majority on the fifth and final ballot to receive the Inter-Fraternity Council nomination for Associated Student president at the IFC convention held in the Building 2 student lounge on April 29. He and the other 19 candidates chosen will represent the group in the AS elections on May 25 and 26.

Others nominated by the delegations, representing every fraternity and sorority on campus, were Tookie Radillo, AS vice-president; Vie Hebert, Associated Men Student president; Joyce Weaver, Associated Women Student president; Bob Johnson, Sophomore president; Don Garrison, Freshman president.

The seven chosen as candidates for Sophomore seats on Student Council are Bob Bliss, Arleigh Greenblat, Walt Martenson, Charles Smith, Abe Virdeh, Noel Vivion and Judy Wilson. IFC candidates for Freshman council seats are Eleanor Benner, Annette D'Atri, Percy Everhart, Barbara Firpo, Pat Frodsham, Earl Fuller and Darlene Reitz.

Ortiz defeated Dean Woods for the presidential nomination on the last ballot after failing to receive the necessary two-thirds majority on the first four votes.

Three nominations were uncontested. Miss Radillo received a vote of confidence as the vice-presidential nominee, as did Hebert and Johnson for their respective offices. Hebert and Lawrence Lowe were last-minute choices for the AMS job, as the IFC had no nominations prepared. Lowe withdrew his name from consideration, leaving Hebert the unanimous choice of the convention.

Two guest speakers from the college opened the convention, presided over by IFC President Phil Gaal. Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, and Louis F. Batmale, dean of semiprofessional courses, spoke to the assembled delegates and emphasized the experience gained from holding student government offices and the responsibilities of such positions.

H&R Hosts Hotel Group's Monthly Meeting Monday

For the fifteenth year, the California Northern Hotel Association will hold its regular monthly May meeting at the Hotel and Restaurant Department here next Monday, May 16, at 12 noon.

Each month the association holds its meetings at different locations, alternating between many northern California hotels, and each May coming here to the college. The association itself is composed of the managing staff members of member California hotels. Several alumni of the college H&R department are active members of the organization, which takes a part in helping and placing students graduated from the department.

Beginning with a reception in the department's west campus faculty dining room at 12 noon, the meeting of the organization, headed by President of the association and operator of the Manx Hotel, Vance Huckins, and Secretary of the association Harry Troupe, will follow with a luncheon in the cafeteria.

A Bon Voyage setting will be the luncheon's theme, conceived by six third-semester H&R students here. The nautical decoration will herald the department's oncoming move to the new Student Union and Cafeteria Building, scheduled for completion on or about the end of this month.

After the luncheon, the visitors will tour the new building, which will house the improved facilities of the department.

General manager of the day's events will be Marvin Alldaffer; Leonard Briggs will act as assistant manager. Paul Abee will hold the position of catering manager, and Leonard Thorvald will be chef. Tony Albini will act as pastry chef, and the decorations and promotion will be handled by Robert Hail.

Macbeth Film Shown At Friday College Hour

Friday the 13th college hour will feature the film version of Macbeth with Shakespearean actors Maurice Evans and Judith Anderson in the leading roles, and a discussion of the Asia-African Conference by the Indian Consul for San Francisco, S. K. Banerji. The conference began April 18, 1955, at Bandung, Indonesia.

Macbeth, a special television production that was on station KRON-TV last year, will be shown in the Science Building, Room S136.

The Asia-African Conference locale is Room S100 and the discussion is sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

Three Ad Art Students Sweep Design Contest

Three students in the college's advertising art department won first, second and third places in a catalogue-cover design contest conducted by Golden Gate College, results announced last week by William J. Eckert, department instructor, revealed.

Dick Young, a 20-year-old advertising art major, was awarded first prize in the city-wide contest, submitting the winning cover design for the new Golden Gate College catalogue. In ceremonies held Monday at the downtown college he was presented the $75 first prize, and will also receive a free-lance fee for doing engraving reproductions.

Second and third place winners were Robert Wong and Ed Schoenstein.

College Photog Wins In Amateur Contest

Michael Kosinski, a photography student here, was one of 40 winners in the first half of the Herm Lenz amateur photo contest, as announced in the May 8 San Francisco Examiner.

Winners will be flown around the Bay Area by United Airlines and will take photos during the flight, to be entered in later competition.

First prize in the contest is more than $200 worth of photo equipment, including a Voightlander 35mm camera, a BEWI exposure meter, and a VIEWLEY slide projector.

Lack Of Competition Hinders Associated Student Elections

IN TWO WEEKS, members of the Associated Students will go to the polls to choose their leaders for next semester. Unfortunately, unless there is a drastic improvement in that short 14 days, the voters will face the same problem that they have faced in the past—too few candidates to offer much of a choice.

Admittedly, there has been an improvement in the unhealthy situation this year, but there still seems to be a shortage of interested, eligible people to run for AS office.

The office of AS president has been the only position where a good choice of candidates has been consistently offered to the voters. Certainly it is an important job and one worth trying for, but there are others just as important and just as worthy of good competition.

Each semester, too many elective positions go uncontested, or with so little choice that the ballot offers little more than a vote of confidence. Whether the fault lies with the college's political system or with the students is open to debate. In our opinion, it is some of both.

The recent Inter-Fraternity Council convention offers several good examples. The battle for the IFC presidential nomination was close, but after that the proceedings were almost automatic in many cases. Two offices went uncontested, with the nomination falling by default to the only contestant. For the seven Freshman seats on Student Council, there were only eight candidates seeking nomination.

The lack of competition for another important office, that of Associated Men Students president, left the IFC delegates with a collective blush. The lone prospect had withdrawn his name from consideration at the last minute, and the group was left without a nominee. A hurried conference found a candidate who received the nomination, even though his original aspirations were to a Student Council seat. The IFC must consider itself fortunate that a good candidate could be found on such short notice.

True, this is only one party. However, at the present time it is the only party worthy of mention. A huge majority of all candidates seeking election try first for the IFC nomination.

As we have already mentioned, the situation has improved. Independent victories in the last year have inspired more participation, but there are still too few candidates for too many positions.

Qualifications for AS offices are not rigorously high—standards are. The Associated Students have been fortunate enough, in the past, to have the few candidates competing well-qualified for the jobs they sought.

The same is true this semester, but only more qualified candidates actively seeking office can protect the fine student government that the college has had in the past.

Woman Student Aspires To Olympics

Previous Experiences Help Prepare Athlete For National AAU Meet

With an impressive record of athletic achievements dating back to junior high school, Zoraida Lopez, a 21-year-old student here, is aspiring next to a foothold in the Olympic games.

Interested in sports since childhood, Zoraida was a member of the Girls Athletic Association while attending junior and senior high schools, taking part in all athletic activities, and winning, in 1953, the Polytechnic High School bowling college.

Marylou Reidy Vies For Title Of Rodeo Queen

Marylou Reidy, a 19-year-old sophomore here, was chosen last week by the Associated Women Students and the Inter-Sorority Council to be the college's candidate for the Guardsmen Rodeo Queen contest.

Miss Reidy is presently serving as president of the Inter-Sorority Council and has been an AWS board member. She is a dental hygiene major.

The Guardsmen, a group of 150 San Francisco businessmen who each year send more than 5,000 needy children to summer camps, are sponsoring the famed Christianson Brothers rodeo in a two-day performance June 4 and 5 in the buffalo paddock in Golden Gate Park.

Queen of the event will be chosen on the basis of the amount of tickets sold by each contestant. Top ticket sellers in the first week of ticket sales will receive an ensemble from Ransohoff's, a leading San Francisco fashion house. Winner of the Rodeo Queen title will receive a trip to Hawaii for two.

Rodeo tickets at one dollar apiece may be secured from Miss Reidy this week. All profits from the Rodeo will go into the Guardsmen camping fund.

Specializing in track and field events, she is a member of the Women's Athletic Association here and belongs to the Laurel Track Club, an independent San Francisco organization, headed and coached by Mrs. Roxanne Andersen, chairman of the Pacific Amateur Athletic Union.

Last February, she was chosen by the club for her sportsmanship and outstanding athletic ability, to represent San Francisco and the state of California, at the National AAU track meet which was held at the University of Chicago Field House. Helping her to meet the expenses of the trip, half of the proceeds from the college's Varieties of '55 were turned over to her.

Pitted for the first time against national competition, she was entered in the discus and javelin throwing events. Her performance and record at the meet has warranted for her a place in the second National AAU meet which comes up this summer and which will be held in Oklahoma.

If she succeeds in placing first, second or third, consideration of her will be assured for Olympics competition.

Graduating this spring, her plans for the future include a career in the Women's Air Force where she hopes to have the opportunity of teaching and furthering interest in athletics among women.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

DON BAKER, popular chief of campus police, ran afoul of an hour-limit parking meter last week and wound up on the receiving end of that which he often doles out—a two-buck ticket. Now granted this is not too startling, but here's the tag: The citation was Baker's first, parking or otherwise. Latest reports indicate they've talked him out of turning in his badge.

IN WHAT PROMISES to be an interesting affair, City Collegers will present a preview of the 20th Anniversary Festival tomorrow night on the Dottie Hanson Show, KGO-TV, at 6 p.m. Twelve couples, including the festival king and queen finalists, will give an exhibition of the dance in such classic forms as the jig, bop, cha-cha-cha, etc., which naturally ties in with the 20th Anniversary theme.

Also starring on the show will be Dean Browne, Shane and Etaoin Shrdlu, in all their amphibian glory. They're frogs, that is, and will be among the leapers in the Jumping Frog Jubilee jump-offs Friday evening.

RISING OVATION: Glancing casually at the wall clock every few tenths-of-a-second, a Cloud Hall class waited for its instructor last week. Usually prompt, the lecturer hadn't shown at the bell and the group feared the worst: he wouldn't come at all. Fifteen minutes after. Sixteen, seventeen, eighteen, nineteen. Rising as one and turning towards the door, they came face-to-face with the tardy instructor.

Hissing politely, the class reseated itself. "Thanks for the ovation," he said underwhelmed. "I'm at a loss for words." Managed to search pretty effectively for the next 40 minutes, though.

IT'S OFTEN REMARKED piteously, "It's not me she likes—it's my car!" but overheard in the cafeteria one lunchtime awhile back was this sad lament: "It's not me he likes, it's my enchiladas!"

ONE OF THE FEATURED performers in Stan Kenton's band last night at the 20th Anniversary Ball was sax man Dave Kreidt. If the name has a familiar ring to college students who took French two semesters back, the reason is this: it was he assisted in the French from San Francisco State with a teaching credential and a minor in French.

Kreidt, a happy fellow who played with Dave Brubeck before his studies at State, presided over daily French lessons here for six months, then went on to teach in Truckee, Life in the small Sierra town evidently proved a little slow.

Is This The Ship That Launched Etc. . .

THIS MOTORIZED WING TANK is exemplary of some of the unusual types of transportation that students have resorted to using to get to and from Hill 29. The owner of this vehicle was an astrology major. Comments such as, "Stand back, it may explode any minute!" were common.

Campus Parking Areas Graced By Spectacular, Odd, Prosaic Vehicles In College's History

By Don Ball

Through the years the college has seen some modes of transportation, not only unusual, but sometimes questionable as far as the sanity of their owners was concerned.

The above picture, found yellow with age in Guardsman files, is representative of the strange vehicles that have invaded the campus. Although appearing at first glance like Tommy Tomorrow's cradle, it is actually a three-wheeled motor scooter with an aircraft wing tank for a body. The owner, an astrology major, had rather unusual anatomy, necessitating the unconventional shape of the machine's body.

Parked on the west campus this motorized tricycle prompted many comments such as, "My, wouldn't that look nice with vines growing out of it," or "Stand back, it may explode any minute!"

Flashing across the campus on a pogo stick was a young engineering student many years ago, whose slogan inspired a comic strip. The strip—why, Moon Mullins, of course. The young engineer, whose fellow students looked upon him with high admiration, progressed through the college by leaps and bounds.

Some of the more ingenious students have cleverly solved their transportation problems in the past, as evidence the Flexy Racer, trimmed in bright purple and undoubtedly something Santa Claus left, that used to be parked daily by the Science Building.

Beloved by many students is the noble eight-wheeled chariot sometimes known as the street car. (Sometimes known as other things, too.) With the comic of the "Mural" to all parts of the city, cars of former times hued in green and white or blue and gold have disappeared and the many lines merged into one friendly unit, whose colors of green and cream stand for service and courtesy wherever they are seen.

Democracy in action is exhibited by comparing the faculty parking areas with those of the students. Dirty, unpolished new cars give the student area a dingy look, while the faculty areas look resplendent with the glistening antiques of the faculty shining brightly like diamonds and/or zircons.

Surveyors Plot Mystery Lot

Every morning at eight o'clock at least one early-bird student will be found rubbing his chubby little hands together with unrestrained glee, staring with misty eyes at some forlorn section of land surrounding the college grounds.

For this typical civic-minded student will have surely seen one of the survey crews plotting sections of land behind Cloud Hall, over by the west campus cafeteria, or perhaps on the hills of Hurley Village. With overflowing jubilance the happy spectator will realize that a new building is surely being raised for the furthering of the college's facilities.

Ah, poor misled student. Dreams of grandeur float hastily out of reach as you observer is informed that the surveyors are not planning a new football stadium or bocce ball court, that they are not marking off the boundaries of a new and larger swimming pool, but that they are engaged in a more aesthetic activity, mainly learning how to survey.

Over since the college was founded the eager eyes above have been dissecting the grounds in this area owned by the city and the government.

They cover the hills and flats alike, starting in the earliest hours of the morn, and every morning at eight o'clock at least one early-bird student will be found rubbing his chubby little hands together with unrestrained glee . . .

Competitive Practices Pose Choice Of Values

By Bob Chrisman

IN any country where the citizens have freedom to pursue their desires within the limits of the law, competition becomes the keystone of success.

The United States' Constitution provides social, economic, religious and intellectual freedom for the individual. To be judged successful in one of these fields, the aspirant must prove his merits as being superior to those of his rivals; hence, the element of competition.

This competition leads to a will to win, to succeed. This is where the difficulty enters. Should the individual try to win at any cost, i.e., loss of dignity, breaking the law, betraying the trust of associates and friends, or should he place these values before success?

The answer is not as easy as it seems, for entering into competition is like jumping onto a freight train going 20 miles an hour. The speed of the train increases and increases until the individual no longer has control of it—he cannot jump off if he wishes, or regulate its speed; he is just borne along in the rush. The train becomes a juggernaut to anything which stands in its way. If it reaches its destination or a depot where the rider can get off without being hurt, well and good, but frequently obstacles arise and they are run down.

Competition is not an evil in itself; it is merely a way of exacting quality and outstanding performance. If an individual or a business product did not have to prove its mettle, the mediocre would receive the same consideration as the excellent, which is not right. However, the evil comes when excelling becomes such an obsession that it is a law unto itself or a moral criterion, or the end itself, rather than a means to an end.

Success can be achieved through "clean" competition, but the way is so exacting and so long that relatively few make it.

Once the person has made up his mind and chosen one of the two paths, he cannot waver or turn back—if he tries to jump off the train, he will suffer severe injury, and if he tries to board the train, he will fall by the wayside.

Thinclads Win North State Meet

Teammates Choose 3 To Pilot Tracksters

Ray MacIntyre, Clint Redus and Henry Stroughter, three of the men instrumental in the Rams' fine season and Big Eight Conference championship, were named co-captains of the City College track team by vote of their teammates.

Redus, the only freshman of the trio, was a consistent triple winner and racked up a new league record in the 220 yard low hurdles with a mark of :24.4. He also tied the high hurdles mark of :15.3 and captured the 100 yard dash in the Big Eight meet.

MacIntyre and Stroughter both accounted for wins in the conference meet and turned in the year's best times in their events. MacIntyre, in addition to running a relay lap, took the 220 yard dash in :22.0 and Stroughter turned in a 1:59.5 winning half mile.

Redus Scores 7th Triple As Rams Conquer 24 Foes

By Emil Portale

Despite wind, rain and the best of 24 north state track teams, Clint Redus captured the 100, low and high hurdles as he led the Rams to a stirring victory in the Northern California Track Championship last Saturday in Sacramento.

Redus, Ray MacIntyre, Jack Egan and the Ram relay team, by virtue of performances in the meet, qualify for state competition at Modesto, Saturday, May 21. The threesome will appear in five different events, the 100, 220, low and high hurdles, and discus.

In every race Redus ran in the north state competition he broke a meet record, he clocked a :09.8 in the 100, a :15.1 in the high hurdles, and a :24.2 in the low hurdles. Because of a seven to nine mile an hour wind at his back none of Redus' records was allowed. In the morning trials Redus scampered to a windblown :09.6 hundred and skipped a :23.4 in the low hurdles.

Egan qualified for the state meet by flinging the discus 151 feet 6½ inches. He was second to Rink Babka of Menlo who threw 158 feet 10½ inches, which is an official meet record.

The Ram relay team exchanged the lead back and forth for three laps only to have their old nemesis, Santa Rosa, squeeze out a four stride victory at the tape.

Mile—Glover (Sac), Gonzales (Grant), Rush (Sac), Kuha (SH), Viano (ECC), Arcod (San Jose), 4:28.2. (new record, old mark 4:33.6)

Rams Enter Finale With Improved 7-4 Mark

College Nine Opposes Contra Costa Today At Big Rec; Sacramento-Ram Twin Bill Saturday Ends Big 8 Play

After a 15-2 licking at the hands of the Comets last Wednesday, the college baseball club takes on the same West Contra Costa team at Big Rec Field in Golden Gate Park this afternoon. The last regularly scheduled Big Eight action, a doubleheader with Sacramento, will be played on the same diamond this Saturday, May 14.

A close affair was broken wide open in the fifth inning by West Contra Costa as the visitors plastered Ram pitching for 10 runs to sew up the contest.

Comet hurler Gene Stang limited the college nine to seven widely scattered hits, but the combined efforts of five Ram pitchers could not hold back the hot Comet bats.

Sacramento, which now resides in last place in the Big Eight standings, is paced by the hurling of Dave Borges, Jim Champas, Gene Mabry, and Dick Pollock.

The Panther pitching evidently wore a little thin recently, for in a practice contest with Mather Field Coach Carl Boyer hurled five effective innings of relief ball. Should the Rams continue their excellent hitting of late, it is a possibility that Boyer will make his second appearance of the season.

Leading the hitting attack for the visitors will be third baseman Bob Rose, first sacker Wally Predovich, keystone man Mal McKenzie, and outfielder Dick Alejo. Handling the catching chores will be either Bob Martinelli or Jim Ringle.

In recent Ram exhibition tilts, the college nine led the Moffett Field baseballers, 3-1, but in the third inning the rains forced a cancellation of the game. The contest, played on April 25, was not rescheduled.

Another practice affair on April 27 found the strong San Francisco Police outfit downing the Rams, 2-1. The college nine outhit the opposition, 11-3, but untimely walks and timely hitting spelled victory for the police. Ironically, the winning run in the encounter was driven in by Charlie Sandovich, who once played for Coach Bill Fischer when the mentor was at Commerce High School.

Unless somebody knocks off the league-leading Santa Rosa ball club, Saturday's doubleheader with Sacramento will be the final diamond action for the year.

The Big Eight baseball winner will compete in the California Junior College baseball playoffs, to take place on May 17, 20 and 27.

BILL FISCHER, veteran baseball coach of the Rams, has led this season's City College nine to their most successful record in recent years.

Block SF To Meet During College Hour

Mardi Gras and the annual athletic awards dinner will be discussed at the next Block SF meeting, to be held this Friday, May 13, during college hour in room 107 of the men's gymnasium, Kent Scovil, president of the group, announced recently.

The lettermen's society has set tentative plans for participation in the Mardi Gras. "Our plans for this occasion are still developing, but we hope to set up a booth and also have a float," Scovil said.

At the awards dinner, attended by many high school coaches, block awards will be presented to qualifying athletes.

Men who helped out in planning the Block SF dance were Rich Martucci, Desha, Williams, Jerry James, Bill Canihan, Shirlee McCormick, Al Chatman and Jim Hickey.

Pitching Shines As Diamondmen Sweep Modesto

By Mike Berger

Keeping first place hopes alive, the college baseball club twotimed the Modesto nine, 5-1 and 7-4, in a doubleheader last Saturday on the Big Rec diamond.

The bats of Ken Dito and Stan Johnson again spoke with force in the first game, as the former knocked across three tallies and the latter socked a triple and two singles to lead the eight-hit Ram attack. Hurler Ray Warman scattered five Pirate safeties to gain his fourth conference victory against one loss.

The Rams got to Modesto hurling ace Dave Warnock early in the second affair, as four runs scored in the first inning built up an insurmountable lead. Outfielder Bob Mannini belted two doubles which chased across four runs to lead the onslaught.

Bob Zucca's timely single in the third brought in two more markers and made the score 6-1 at that point. The visitors reached pitcher Stan Johnson for a pair of runs in the fourth inning and another score in the fifth, but were held scoreless the rest of the route.

The double win lifted the college nine's Big Eight record to seven victories and four defeats. This leaves City College in third spot in the standings, a game behind West Contra Costa and two tilts behind the league leading Santa Rosa club.

This afternoon's game with the Comets at Big Rec will start at 3:15 and should decide not only the second place finisher, but what team will still have a chance to catch the Bearcubs on the last day of action.

The Saturday doubleheader with the Sacramento Panthers will start at 12:30 on the Funston diamond, Bay and Laguna Streets.

As the Big Eight race nears its end, much the same kind of situation exists as last year. The only clubs with a chance to squeeze in ahead of the leader must win all of their remaining games while the leader, Santa Rosa, must drop all its contests.

This same Bearcub team was dropped out of the top spot in this fashion in 1954, and the club that did it, West Contra Costa, plus the improved college nine of Coach Bill Fischer hope for a repeat of events.

Golfers Handed Second Defeat

College of San Mateo dealt the college's golf team its second loss in a row as they whipped the Rams 12-3 on April 29.

Although this loss doesn't eliminate the team from the title race, it does put a dampening effect on the Klemmermen's morale.

Averaging in the middle seventies, the Bulldogs managed to shut out the Rams three out of five matches. Low man for San Mateo was Charles Blackburn with a 73.

Dave Watkins of the San Francisco Cams sported a 77, while Rich Derry and Harlan Hayakawa each scored an 81.

The Rams have yet to play in the Big Eight tourney May 13 and 14 and the State Golf tourney May 16. Both meets will be played in Sacramento.

Ram's Big Eight Tennis Finale Rained Out

Rain provided an anti-climactic finish for the college's 1955 Big Eight tennis finale at Sacramento on April 29 when a steady drizzle cancelled the match after the Ram netmen had captured four out of five sets.

The results of the match will be presented to the Big Eight Athletic Commission, and the match may be rescheduled, tennis coach Roy Diedcrichsen stated. On May 6 and May 7, the Ram tennis squad, represented by Les Jacobson, Bob Chrisman, Alan Matsumoto, Don Wing, Lee Anderson and Walter Zoschke, participated in the Big Eight Conference Tournament at Santa Rosa, but the results were unavailable at press time.

The college squad has a conference record of four wins and two losses, which earned them a third place standing in the Big Eight.

RAMBLINGS

Athletic Fields Sought For Rams

By Emil Portale

SHADES of USF! What is this world coming to if the University of San Francisco, the nation's number one basketball team, must answer eager questions about where they hold practice with, "We have to practice at St. Ignatius High when the fellas over there are not using their gymnasium." That is obviously a pretty disgraceful situation, but it cannot be said that USF's plight does not compare with City College's trackless track team.

Let no one say that the Rams are not appreciative of Riordan High's graciousness in allowing the college cindermen to practice on the Crusader oval, but this college has been in business for 20 years now and it doesn't have one decent athletic field (even with a few splinter infested wooden bleachers) that our athletes can proudly call their own, and they can't be blamed for not liking the situation.

This Spring the Ram horsehiders have come up with a more than strong group and are currently battling for the league lead. They also are, at present, orphans as far as owning a decent home diamond is concerned.

What of the Ram track team which two weeks ago crumbled all the powers in the Big Eight by capturing the conference meet? If that is not enough, must they be patted on the head, told they had done nice work, and booted over to Riordan, after the squad had beaten every Big Eight team except Modesto in dual competition?

The Big Eight is the strongest league in its class in northern California and it has been said more than once that any team may fall prey to another in any given game. So, why shouldn't responsible officials, if nothing else, consider the psychological effects on an athletic team with no home. Why couldn't a combination track and football field be built?

Don't think we are not aware of the financial difficulties the new installation would incur, but there is always a legitimate means to an end—we only hope that that end comes before the homeless feeling of athletes from the highest scholastically ranked two-year college in the state destroys the incentive to produce equally high ranked sport teams for the college.

Council Approves New Poster Laws; CAB To Fine Violators; Palmer Council Seat Vacated

Because eight members of the Student Council were participating in the Model United Nations at San Francisco State College last week, the regular Thursday session of the council was cancelled.

In last Tuesday's meeting, council members gave their approval to the new poster regulations. The rules, designed to speed the removal of posters, empowers the Club Activities Board to levy a fine of $5 upon anyone, excluding election candidates, whose poster is not removed in the specified time. Election posters will be the responsibility of the Election Commissioner.

More disciplinary powers for the president were proposed by the chairman of the legislative committee, Dean Woods.

Under the proposed legislation the president would have the power to regulate the political science G-5 grades of the council and cabinet members, and in the event of continued failure on the part of the offender the president would be able to request the offender's resignation before the council.

Associated Students will have the opportunity of voting on the proposal during the next election since the disciplinary powers are in the form of a constitutional amendment.

Plans to move the Redwood Ram currently entrenched on the west campus in front of the auditorium, were discussed at length by the council. Among the suggested sites are the front of the Science Building; between the sidewalks; behind Cloud Hall; and near the new Student Union and Cafeteria Building.

It was reported that Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator of Educational Management, whose duties include supervision of the campus grounds, has stated that he feels that the Ram should not be placed too close to any of the buildings since the Ram is subject to vandalism by less well-mannered colleges during their pre-game festivities.

The council reached no conclusion on moving the Ram so it still sits as something of a white elephant with Rams' horns.

Expenditure of $60.64 for expenses for the 20th Anniversary Ball was approved by the council. Included in this amount is $7.50 per man for the use of the campus police at the affair.

Freshman member Jann Palmer's council seat was declared vacant by AS president Al Kingston. Miss Palmer, who had not been present for the last three council meetings, has withdrawn from college and is soon to be married.

DICK MEISTER, former Guardsman editor, and winner of Sigma Delta Chi Scholarship.

Former Guardsman Editor Honored With Scholarship

Dick Meister, Guardsman editor in Fall 1953 and Spring 1954 and now a journalism major at Stanford University, was awarded a $100 scholarship last night by the Northern California chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity.

Ten men were considered for the scholarship, three from Stanford and University of California, respectively, and four from San Jose State College. All received certificates in recognition of "distinction and promise."

Others winning $100 scholarships were James Bennison, University of California, and Robert L. Johnson, San Jose State. Those winning the certificates were Larry Jensen and Robert Iacopi, Stanford; Carroll Clark and William Mackey, University of California; and Gerald E. Olsen, Simon R. Steinreich, and James B. Eggert, San Jose State.

Members of the judging committee of Sigma Delta Chi were James Bales, chairman of the undergraduate activities committee of Sigma Delta Chi; Dr. Chilton R. Bush, Stanford; Phillip F. Griffin, University of California; Dr. W. E. Gould and C. V. Kippen, San Jose State; D. P. Marin, East Contra Costa Junior College; and George Mullany, secretary of the committee and journalism and graphic arts instructor here.

Bob Rezak, Guardsman editor in Spring 1952, won the Sigma Delta Chi scholarship two years ago while he was a student at Stanford. Rezak was graduated from Stanford in June 1954, and is now with the Stockton Record.

Choir Sings At Presidio Sunday

More than 1,000 students and faculty members turned out yesterday for the joint concert of the college's A Cappella Choir and the Sixth Army Band held in the Building 1 auditorium.

This Sunday, May 15, the choir will travel to the Presidio, where it will be featured in a program similar to the one presented here yesterday. The presentation will be a part of the Sixth Army Band's regular Sunday afternoon 2 o'clock band concert series, held successfully for many years every other weekend.

Yesterday's concert was the first of two being presented by the band and choir, the second to be held at the band's home base.

Highlight of the performance was the premier presentation of a four-movement contemporary style symphony, written in honor of the band by Robert Morton, director of the college choir.

Horticulture Group Wins Eighth Blue Ribbon

College's Entry Takes Laurels At Oakland Exhibition

The college's Horticultural Society won its eighth straight first place blue ribbon in this year's California Spring Garden Show at Oakland, which ended May 6.

The society's entry was entitled A Tropical Patio. In that only one type of blooming flower was visible in the patio of white crushed marble, offset with two elevated miniature swimming pools, the setting was very unusual. Birds of Paradise were the only flowers visible among the tropical and sub-tropical plants arranged by Norman Holcombe and Ron Halverson, co-chairmen of the project.

This year's indoor exhibit at the Oakland Exposition Building had for its general theme Rainbow Waters. Furnishings for the patio were donated by Podesta, Baldocchi, florists; and Takahashi Trading Company, importers who furnished Japanese lamps and cushions.

Oakland Junior College and the University of California Landscape Club were the only other colleges entered in the division. Judging was conducted on the afternoon of April 29 at 2 p.m. Awards were made according to special entry. The college was awarded its first place ribbon for a tropical display; using tropical and sub-tropical plants; suitable accessories; general appearance.

Second place award went to Oakland Junior College and the University of California Landscape Club earned a first place ribbon and the award for Best in Design. This was the 23rd annual showing of the California Spring Garden Show in Oakland.

Exhibits covered approximately 12 acres of land, inside and outside inclusive. The spectacle is a drawing card for both amateur and professional gardeners.

Scholarships To Be Voted May 12

Scholarship winners here will be determined when the college's award committee meets tomorrow in the office of Mary Golding, dean of women, to process applications.

Three men and three women students will be selected to receive $50 each from the Dr. A. J. Cloud and the Jane Cloud Class of '54 scholarship funds.

Petitions will be judged on the basis of scholarship, 40 per cent; need, 40 per cent; and leadership or service to the college, 20 per cent. The leadership qualification does not necessarily have to include service to the college, Dean Golding pointed out, and may include work or leadership in the community.

One outstanding graduating woman student will also be named at the meeting to receive the $25 Dougherty scholarship.

Presentation of the awards will be made at a pre-graduation assembly to be held during the first week of June.

Making up the award committee are Dean Golding, Edwin C. Browne, dean of men; Jack Brady, co-ordinator, Division of Student Welfare; and Maurice Power, engineering instructor representing the faculty.

Phi Rho Pi Debaters Compete At Pepperdine

Four students of the college, members of Phi Rho Pi debate team, left for Pepperdine College in Los Angeles last Thursday to attend the annual National Debate Tournament held Friday and Saturday.

College debaters were Klaus Arons, Pat Mahoney, Norman McLeod and James Mullins.

Topic for the national debate centered around the Recognition of Red China. America's Educational System was the subject discussed extemporaneously.

Resolution Gives CAB Committee Responsibility For Poster Removal

Responsibility for the removal of posters was officially put into the hands of the Club Activities Board by the unanimous approval of Student Council to a resolution submitted last week by Ed Dollard, CAB chairman.

The resolution requires that a $5 deposit be made before posters are put up, with the deposit being confiscated if the posters are not taken down by the appointed time.

Deadline on the time allowed for the posters to remain up cannot exceed a 24-hour period after the date set for the affair. If an event occurs on a Friday, Saturday or Sunday poster date, the deadline is 3 p.m. Monday.

If posters are not removed by the designated time the $5 deposit will be forfeited and the committee will take down the posters.

All posters will be listed in numerical order, with the poster committee receiving one copy. When posters are removed they will be checked off the list. When the posters are completely removed the sponsoring organization will turn their list over to the poster committee.

If sponsoring organizations fail to remove all the posters the deposit will go into CAB funds. The $5 deposit must be made by official transfer of funds and will be held in reserve until the deadline is met or missed.

Amendments added to the CAB resolution are (1.) The poster committee will work under the auspices of the Publications Board chairman; (2.) this resolution would pertain to all posters, with the exception of campaign posters for Associated Students elections. In this case, the election commission will be held responsible; (3.) posters must be hand stamped by William Eckert of the Advertising Art department in order that the committee can determine their legality.

These rules will go into effect immediately and organizations not complying are subject to having their posters removed, Dollard stated.

Women's Day Preparations Extended As Twentieth Anniversary Festival Pushes Event Up Week To May 27

Because of a change of date for the 20th Anniversary Festival to May 20, Women's Day has been set for Friday, May 27, according to Tookie Radillo, Associated Women Student president here.

Women students will take over all the administrative and Associated Student positions on that day.

Women students holding administrative offices include: Marion Cheader, president of the college; Amy Lee, co-ordinator, Division of Educational Management; Joan Rettus, co-ordinator, Division of Instruction; Judy Wills, dean of Semiprofessional Courses; Joy Frazier, dean of women; Roberta Singer, registrar; Margaret Hysted, librarian; Melanie Mead, placement director; Joyce Weaver, co-ordinator, Student Welfare; Barbara Batmale, dean of general college courses.

Associated Student offices will be managed with Jan Sobieski as Associated Men Student president; Miss Radillo, AWS president; Pat Harris, Club Activities Board chairman; Mary Terwilliger, Rally Commissioner; Gloria Temkin, Finance chairman; Antoinette Mannina, Publicity chairman; Marilyn Sicotte, Freshman president; Nancy Medina, Sophomore president; Barbara Jones, Women's Athletic Commissioner. Miss Cheader will also hold the office of President of the Associated Students.

Other highlights of the day will be the selection of the ideal man and woman, a cake sale, and entertainment during college hour, Miss Radillo said.

Each sorority is asked to bring two dozen cookies to be sold on the west campus and in the courtyard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building. All women students are asked to participate in the event, which is the first of its kind at the college, Miss Radillo said.

Frogs Offered For Jubilee Jump

Complaints of a frog shortage in the San Francisco area were received last week by the Associated Student jumping frog committee, who immediately came to the fore with an offer to supply frogs for the 20th Anniversary Festival jump-offs on Friday, May 20.

The jump-offs, preliminaries to the Jumping Frog Jubilee at Angels Camp Sunday, May 22, will decide the three AS amphibian entries in the Sierra contest. Campus organizations may enter two frogs in the jump-offs.

For the fee of $1, the jumping frog committee said last week, groups interested in entering frogs will be supplied with a good sized bullfrog. Entry blanks for the contest may be secured from the AS office in Building 2 or The Guardsman office, S304.

No fee will be charged for organizations securing their own entries. Deadline for return of the blanks is noon, May 20, to either The Guardsman office or the telephone operator by the Silver Pole in the Science Building.

The population of the United States at the time of the first census, in 1790, was only 3,929,214, or less than the 1950 population of any one of the dozen most populous states.

Second Grade-Check Nears Completion

Examination of all students' second midterm grades will be completed by the end of this week, according to Jack Brady, co-ordinator of Student Welfare here.

As a result of the third attendance report examination conducted here last week, 103 attendance offenders have received notice to appear before Brady to present suitable justification for their numerous absences. Twenty-five students have been interviewed so far, Brady said, and 15 have been cleared. The remaining group have been granted leaves of absence.

Students who were notified to appear and neglected to act before May 6 will be dismissed from the college and will not be eligible for readmission, Brady stated.

Clubs Still Plan Social Functions

By Joan Anderson

CAMPUS clubs and organizations are planning social functions right up until the end of the semester as is evidenced by this week's club news.

Theta Tau sorority will hold its initiation dinner Saturday at El Nido Rancho.

Zeta Chi sorority held a business meeting last Monday at sponsor Ruth Inskipp's home.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority held a business meeting last Thursday to discuss their social affairs. Their future calendar includes joint meetings with Beta Phi Beta and Phi Beta Delta, a sisters' dinner on June 2 and a float and booth for the 20th Anniversary Festival.

A Sabella's will be the site for Delta Psi sorority's pledge dinner Saturday.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity held its pledge initiation April 30 at Bermuda Palms.

Women's Athletic Association swimming classes were host to seven San Francisco High Schools for their semi-annual Splash Display. Included in the program were relays, water aquacade and refreshments.

Seventy-five members of the International Relations Club will have a picnic Sunday at the Marin Town and Country Club in Fairfax. A fee of 50 cents for members and 75 cents for non-members will be collected before departure to pay for the transportation and admission to the club.

Parade Raises Curtain On College's 20th Anniversary Festival Friday Night

King Richard And Queen Barbara Reign Over Colorful Evening Of Booths, Entertainment, Dancing

Raising the curtain on the college's 20th Anniversary Festival, sponsored by the Associated Men Students, a cavalcade of floats will begin their promenade from Junipero Serra Boulevard up Ocean Avenue to the west campus at 6:30 p.m. this Friday.

Twenty-two floats have been entered in the parade and more than 25 clubs are expected to have booths at the fete.

Presiding over the festival will be Richard Amico and Barbara Batmale as King and Queen, selected over many contestants by a board of San Francisco celebrities and fashion experts and crowned by bandleader Stan Kenton at the 20th Anniversary Ball last week.

A dance will be held in the Building 1 auditorium starting at 9 p.m. Tickets for participation in booth activities will be available to festival-goers at four special booths at ten cents per ticket.

Lined along the edge of the west campus parking lot, booths will include a "Marrying Sam" concession where couples will be able to participate in mock wedding ceremonies, run by Alpha Sigma Delta members; balloon shaving, nail driving and many of the typical carnival type activities.

One of the special features of the evening will be a jumping frog contest to determine the Associated Student entries in the Angels Camp Jumping Frog Jubilee. Starting at 9 p.m., the frog jump will match entries from most of the college organizations.

Food concessions will be run by the Hotel and Restaurant department.

Among the outside organizations and concerns contributing to the festival are the Marine Corps, an AFROTC drill team from the University of California, and Altman-Lesser's and the Jay Vee Shop, who awarded outfits to the King and Queen.

Members of the festival committee include Bob Johnson, AMS president and festival chairman, Emery LeBonville, Dean Woods, Marion Cheader and Antoinette Mannina.

Candidates Chosen For Ideal Man And Woman Contest

Candidates for the ideal man and woman contest scheduled for Women's Day, Friday, May 27, were chosen last week, according to Tookie Radillo, Associated Women Student president here.

They were selected on the basis of their contributions to the college. Candidates for the ideal man are Dan Corsetti, Don Wilson, Kent Scovil, Robert Hare, Ed Williams, and Willie Quan. Ideal woman candidates are Carolyn Fisher, Juanita Hall, Bobbie Mathias, Marylou Riedy, Judy Wills and Penny Young.

More enthusiasm and cooperation on the part of the woman students will be needed to make the affair a success, Miss Radillo said. Any woman student interested in partiepating is asked to apply to Miss Radillo or Dean Mary Golding.

All administrative and student positions will be taken over by the women students on the first Women's Day to be held at the college.

Students holding administrative positions for the day are Marion Cheader, as president of the college; Amy Lee, as coordinator, Division of Educational Management; Joan Rettus, as coordinator, Division of Instruction; Judy Wills, as dean of Semiprofessional Courses; Joy Frazier, as dean of women; Connie Panagakis, as dean of men; Roberta Singer, as registrar; Margaret Hysted, as librarian; Melanie Mead, as placement director; Joyce Weaver, as coordinator, Student Welfare; Barbara Batmale, as dean of general college courses.

Associated Student offices will be managed by Marion Cheader, as Associated Student president; Jan Sobieski, as Associated Men Student president; Miss Radillo, as AWS president; Pat Harris, as Club Activities Board chairman; Mary Terwilliger, as Rally Commissioner; Gloria Temkin, as Finance chairman; Antoinette Mannina, as Publicity chairman; Marilyn Sicotte, as Freshman president; Nancy Medina, as Sophomore president; Barbara Jones, as Women's Athletic Commissioner.

Frog Jump Featured In Friday Festival

Celebrants at the 20th Anniversary Festival this Friday evening will view one of the world's most unusual sports — frog jumping.

From entries of many college organizations, the Associated Students will choose three official contestents to compete in the Jumping Frog Jubilee at Angels Camp on Sunday, May 22.

Entry blanks for the Friday night jump-offs are still available in The Guardsman office, S304. For groups who hesitate to hunt for frogs, the AS jumping frog committee will supply frogs at $1 apiece. Persons interested in making the trip to Angels Camp should contact committee members in the newspaper office.

Festival Tops Long AMS List Of Successes

By Bev Swope

THE Associated Men Students have sponsored a variety of events from a series of boxing bouts to a Silver Ball, but this Friday the AMS plans one of the largest celebrations to date, the 20th Anniversary Festival.

In an attempt to discover the date of the first Mardi Gras by leafing through back issues of The Guardsman, we were startled to discover the number and variety of activities sponsored by the AMS, since its organization way back when.

One of the first activities was an AMS banquet for fathers in 1939. The slogan for the father and son meal was "Pop and me are going to eat!" The group was then under the leadership of AMS President Lee Scarlett and Adviser Joe Amori.

During World War II, when the shortage of men was acute, the AMS gave a picnic and dance. The program for the day included sack races and a picnic supper of hot dogs, spaghetti and Pepsi-Cola. Members of the Women's Service Society (the women must have run the show in those days) served the meal in the women's gymnasium.

We never did discover when the traditional Mardi Gras made its first appearance, but it became a big thing when its location was shifted from the student lounge to the auditorium in 1946.

In 1947 the Mardi Gras climaxed Gung Ho week, translated "to work in harmony."

The Mardi Gras carnival was originally a semi-annual affair, and splashed out bigger than ever in January, 1949, with a Silver Ball and variety show. The Hotel and Restaurant division at this time had a popular French Pastry Booth for the public.

A masquerade ball was held in the auditorium, along with booths such as "Hit the Rolling Record," at the following semester's Mardi Gras. Everyone was required to appear in costume, and those who failed to do so were apprehended and deposited in Kangaroo Court until fined a sum befitting the crime.

The May parade that year was led by five bands, including the Alameda National Guard, the American Legion and Boy Scout Troops 20 and 134. Horsetrader Ed and his antique Ford also made an appearance.

Now in 1955 the AMS has put aside the Mardi Gras title to celebrate the college's 20th anniversary. So go to it, men, you've got quite a record of accomplishments behind you.

Speeches And Introductions Of AS Office Candidates Featured At Election Rally This College Hour

Students will have an opportunity to meet the candidates for Associated Student offices at an election rally in the Building 1 auditorium this Friday, May 20. Prime purpose of the meeting is to introduce each candidate to the students.

Featured speakers at the rally will be presidential candidates Paul Ortiz of the Inter-Fraternity Council, and Dean Woods, Independent; Associated Men Student presidential aspirants Emery LeBonville, Independent, and Vic Hebert, IFC; and candidates for the position of Associated Women Student President, Joyce Weaver, IFC, and Barbara Batmale, Independent.

Unopposed candidates to be introduced are Tookie Radillo, IFC vice-presidential nominee, and Bob Johnson and Don Garrison, IFC candidates for Sophomore and Freshman president, respectively.

Despite the fact that many students will be attracted and occupied by other student activities also occuring Friday, Alex Argo, election commissioner, expressed his anticipation for good student attendance at the election rally.

(Editor's Note: Two other candidates for top AS offices handed in petitions after the press deadline. Lee Carol Lombard will be an independent candidate for vice-president, and Bill Cirimele is campaigning for the AMS presidency, also as an independent.)

Posters will be approved and placed by the Election Committee until Wednesday, May 25.

Each candidate will be allowed three posters in the Science Building and two in Cloud Hall. Posters may not exceed 12 by 18 inches unless permission is granted by the committee, and only its members may post or remove candidate posters prior to the elections.

No poster signs will be permitted on any walls, doors or windows of the two main buildings. Permission to set up posters on the auditoriums lounge and fountain windows must be obtained from the Election Committee.

Mimeographed copies of the complete election regulations, including schedules, poster rules and campaigning restrictions, are available in the Associated Student office in Building 2, Argo said.

Preparations Begin For Annual June Commencement

Plans are now well under way for the 20th annual commencement exercises to be held Friday, June 17, at 8 p.m. in the Riordan high school auditorium, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman of the commencement committee.

Beginning at 8:15 p.m., the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, will offer a 15-minute program of musical selections. The exercises are tentatively programmed as follows:

Processional, college concert band; National Anthem, The Star Spangled Banner, college concert band; Greetings, Mrs. George A. Hindley, president, Board of Education; Address, Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent, San Francisco Public Schools.

Scholastic Awards, Dr. John J. Brady; Address, graduating student (not yet selected); Service Awards, Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus; Address, graduating student (not yet selected); Presentation of Candidates for Degrees, Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction; Conferring of Degrees, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president. Selections, A Cappella Choir; Alma Mater, A Cappella Choir and graduates; Recessional, concert band.

Immediately following the exercises, a reception will be held for the graduates, their friends and families in the cafeteria of the high school.

Marshal for commencement is Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management.

Card Players Bow To Administrative Bid

College card players were warned Friday to dent their decks elsewhere than the west campus cafeteria and fountain and Science Building snack bar, or any other campus spot.

Students found participating in any form of card game will be up for administrative discipline, according to Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne, and, if the offense involves gambling, will be eligible for arrest by campus policemen.

The no-card playing rule will be strictly enforced, Dean Browne said, and indicated that part of the reason for the crackdown was the pointing up of the problem in a recent Guardsman column.

Satire, Death Subjects Of Forum Manuscripts

Satire, death and tales of the woes of math classes will vie for reader interest in this spring's edition of Forum, the college's annual magazine of student writing, according to Catherine Connolly, Forum sponsor. The magazine is scheduled to appear the week before finals.

A translation of the Spanish writer Azorian and a veteran's experiences on guard duty in Korea are among other stories already selected for publication in Forum. The magazine is expected to emphasize prose heavily this spring.

The main problem facing the Forum Club in the editing and selection of manuscripts is a large number of well written but long stories. Ninety-two articles were submitted by student writers, of which one-quarter will be published.

All members of the Forum Club read all manuscripts submitted at least once. Letter grades were assigned, and results were tallied in the same way a student figures his grade point average.

Six cover designs have been submitted by student artists. Spot art work will be needed as selections continue.

A budget of $450 was allotted Forum by Student Council, about half of which will be returned through advertising and sales revenues. The magazine will be distributed free to Associated Students but will cost 50 cents to non-members.

The majority of staff positions will be given to those members who show the most interest in compiling and editing the magazine. Edwin Brush is the editor-in-chief, while Alan Wendroff is managing editor and Margaret Shour is advertising manager.

Among members of the Forum Club this semester are Al Argo, Don Ball, Bob Chrisman, Barry Coekerill, Michael Hallinan, Earl Hess, Fred Hill, Dorothy Rader, Melbourne Lockey and Joanne Thor. The Forum Club meets each Friday during college hour in Room C222.

Thanks To Administration On Rigid Enforcement Of Rules

WITH the college becoming more and more crowded every year, the administration has wisely started to rigidly enforce the existing attendance and scholarship rules.

Many, all of them directly affected by the pressure, consider this an arbitrary, unfair rule instituted suddenly to their detriment. Others, on the brighter side of the academic ledger, are happy that a rule is finally in force to rid the college of its non-working students and give the brighter and more industrious ones fuller use of the facilities.

The latter is true to an extent; for the hard-workers always deserve better than those who refuse to study and consequently receive poor marks. But the ruling is made too complicated by too many students.

This new enforcement of old regulations concerning grade point average and attendance is simply an attempt, by the administration, to rid the college of the "deadwood" that has piled up over the recent semesters, and to make way for the thousands of new students, pouring into the college yearly, who really desire and deserve an education.

Unfortunately, there are too many so-called students here who know little and care less about what any college should do for them. They are simply taking advantage of a free education with no desire other than to go through college, get out, and claim a college education to the first employer who makes the mistake of hiring them.

It is high time that these leeches on the instructors' efforts and the taxpayers' money were dismissed from college, where they didn't belong in the first place. The real students, willing to work and use their intelligence, certainly deserve first call on the facilities and instruction offered here.

The administration deserves a vote of thanks for their decision to cut the "deadwood" and give the students presently here and those to come a chance for a real education.

Good Luck To Track Team In Finals

A DESERVING City College coach finally came up with the spirited material necessary to give him his first track and field championship at the college. Roy Burkhead, the soft-spoken leader, was rewarded when his proteges won the Big Eight Conference Meet on April 30 and followed up with a close win in the Northern California Meet on May 7.

There is no doubt that every man participating contributed his share to the success. The talent was there in sufficient quantity and the spirit, or hustle, was magnificent. Each and every member of the squad deserves credit for the team victory.

Each of the men who had the pleasure of working under him, however, will agree that much of the credit should go to Burkhead. He has taught his charges soundly for years, and has received some part of his well-deserved payoff.

We are sure that we speak for the Associated Students when we heartily congratulate Coach Roy Burhkead and the members of the 1955 Ram track team for their past victories and wish them the best possible luck in this Saturday's California State Meet at Modesto.

College Environs Were Once Home Of Horse, Hound Race Courses

From the devastation and holocaust of the 1906 San Francisco disaster, a new city in spirit and appearance was born, but the memories of the "good old days" still linger.

Even the relatively small amount of ground which houses City College has a wealth of history and color . . . for those who can remember.

In the days around the turn of the century when the area was as wild as the desert, what should flourish on this ground but as unscholarly an establishment as a race track!

Upon probing his mind, a reminiscing old San Francisean should remember not one but two tracks within hailing distance of each other. Both bore the name Ingleside; the only difference was that one track was for thoroughbred horses, and the other oval was used for the smaller but equally exciting greyhounds and whippets.

The folks who ran the dog track were certainly ones for realism. Think of the great expense involved in keeping a full corps of live jackrabbits just to lead a bunch of four-legged canine thoroughbreds a merry but unfruitful chase.

The jacks would dash down a little enclosed track of their own while the greyhounds sped after them and a young man with a handlebar mustache and a celluloid collar tried to look relaxed as his mutt (and his two dollars) faded in the stretch.

There were those who objected to such establishments, however, and about '06 or '07 a move to outlaw all racing in California was initiated. A vote of the populace was taken, and the Ingleside tracks were no more. Racing was dead in this state for more than 20 years afterwards.

Racing is back now, but some of the color will never return. A realistic side must be seen in every story, though.

Whenever a reminiscing gentleman speaks of "the good old days" and says that he's glad some of it has returned, there will be protest from his better half, a righteous wife who likes a new dress now and then and mutters that she wishes the blamed thing had never come back.

'Dean Browne' Prepares

ANXIOUSLY AWAITING Friday night's jumpoffs, and possibly the Calaveras Frog Jumping Jubilee, is Etaoin Shrdlu (kneeling, front), or is it Shane? No, his eyes are narrower. Or is it Dean Browne? Yep, it's he, come to think of it. It's against Etaoin Shrdlu's ethics to appear in a picture, and Shane's too tough to handle. With eyes gleaming from thaughts of the thousand dollar prize given at Calaveras are Al Kingston, Associated Student president, and Beverley Swope (left) and Carolyn Fisher, jumping frog committee members.—Guardsman photo by Bill Hamilton.

Frog Training Camp Shocks Etaoin Shrdlu, Deane Browne, Shane Into Mile-Long Jumps For Meet Title

By Dolores Stoffers

Well, Ma, we showed them high fallutin' city slicker guys, we shore did.

Can't train a frog, huh? Ha!

Well just let me tell you something about them smart aleck City College kids' prides and joys, namely Etaoin Shrdlu, Dean Browne, and Shane, jumpers extraordinaire.

At first them little rascals just didn't want to jump for anyone—not even us old time frog trainers. But us old California mountaineers have been a long time trainin' frogs for competition, and aside from know-how handed down from our grandpappys, we've also inherited that special touch that makes them froggies sit up and beg.

That's what them city fellas lack, so they say "you can't train 'em." They got no business invadin' this Calaveras meet, anyhow. Lessen they get a good trainer, that is.

Anyway, the frogs wouldn't jump, so we kinda figgered they was homesick. So we set up a training camp and brought their home to them, and them little rascals just perked up to beat the band and hopped around like sixty.

Now the only trouble was to get 'em to hop in a straight line and at the right time.

First thing we did was to read 'em excerpts from that story by Mark Twain three times a day for a week. Then came the hard work.

We took some suggestions from them college whippersnappers and used the scientific method here and there. Gotta admit them college kids have the ideas, but they just ain't got the touch.

Yep, them frogs are great little fellers. Down at City College Shane is the tough guy. Sits there and sizes everything up, he does. All we gotta do is whisk a High Noon, and his eyes narrow, and he jumps out of sheer jealousy. Dean Browne is the comedian. He takes off in a long, graceful leap, and never fails to do a somersault in mid-air. Don't know how we're gonna get him to stop and that little Etaoin Shrdlu, all he does is sit and watch everything.

Anyway, they're all set for Friday night's jumpoffs, but we're pretty confident about beating the student-trained frogs in the May 22 finals. Them college kids just ain't got the touch.

Ahoy, Farallones!

Islands Rise In Blue Pacific On Clear, Bright Day

By Carolyn Fisher

Gazing into the blue Pacific Ocean on a clear bright day from the third floor of the Science Building, a speck of rocks can be seen rising up on the edge of the horizon.

They are commonly termed Islands. But does anybody live on them? Yes. How big are they? How far away are they? And what did you say the name of these rocks is? Oh, they're called Farallones, F-A-R-A-L-L-O-N-E-S. And there are seven of them according to an out-dated map. Well, who named them and who were they named after? We are getting pretty deep here. So we consult a volume and here is what we find. Quote:

"A group of seven small rocky islands and several islets off the coast of California, about 30 miles directly west of San Francisco and included as a part of that city. Their extreme points—NW and SE—are about seven miles apart.

"On the southernmost island stands an important lighthouse, in 37° 41' 58" N., 123° 14" W., having a flashing light of the first order, 358 feet above the sea and visible 26 miles, and also a steam siren. There are rookeries for myriad sea gulls and murres, and in 1909 the islands were created a Federal bird reservation, assuring full protection of these birds for all time. Great numbers of sea lions and rabbits are also found. The rainfall is heavy."

More research finds that Cabrillo named them the Farallones, Sir Francis Drake named these islands for St. James in June, 1579. What the name Farallones has to do with St. James you'll have to ask Sir Francis. Cabrillo got there first. But then maybe Drake didn't know that they were already named Farallones and named them Farallones again. What a coincidence.

Wonder how they got out there? Do you want to know how to get out there? You wouldn't? Well, why don't you find out anyhow and report immediately to the Guardsman office, because we WOULD like to know how to get out there.

The Spectator

By Bob Chrisman

EVENTUALLY, every artist faces the problem of whether to pursue his artistic ideals, i.e. art for art's sake, or to commercialize them and "cash in."

Somerset Maugham in his work, The Summing Up, states that the writer's greatest enemy is success implying that success corrupts the drive which brings about the success. A similar statement is made later, in which he implied that he could sell any book which had his name as author.

This is where the real danger lies. Once a writer has established a reputation, he wins a large following, and eventually his works are read not for their artistic merit but merely because they were written by him.

Ernest Hemingway, an established fiction writer, had two plane crashes in Africa, and wrote his impressions and details of his trip in a 10 page splash in a nationwide magazine. If Joe Citizen attempted to do the same thing, the reaction of the magazine firm is "not commercial." However, in Hemingway's case, the magazine snaps up the article, for it sells, as does anything written by Hemingway. Even The Old Man and the Sea.

The strongest and most energetic works of Maugham and Hemingway came in their younger days, when both were rising novelists, not established lions of the field, as they are now. It would seem that the drive for success, the hunger to excel, which inspired these novelists in their early days has been satiated, and their creative powers lessened.

This presents the question: What is the motive for creative work—what makes a writer write? There are several answers. For the Mickey Spillane type of writer, the answer is money, the same motive which prompts the writers of pulp westerns, detective stories, and science-fiction. Most likely, these writers would not write westerns and detective stories if they were not paid for them.

Another reason is propaganda—the attempt of the author to put across a certain idea for purposes of social reform, or to aid some faction. During the depression, novels were written with the intent of slanting conditions a certain way to favor certain groups. Sinclair Lewis, as a satirist, is primarily a propagandist, for he is attempting a social reform against hypocrisy and prejudice in man's institutions.

The best art, however, is that which is written for art's sake alone—the creative expression of the individual. As a creative activity, the pleasure and reward is intrinsic in art, for the creation is its own joy, per se. Public presentation comes from a desire for approbation and a desire to make money.

If the writer writes for the sake of creative expression alone, his urge to create can never be dulled. A good test of this is whether or not the writer has turned out improved works after achieving success. Hemingway and Maugham have shown no improvement since their earlier works brought them the success which they now enjoy. Of these novelists, the only one who has shown improvement is John Steinbeck, who turned out his best novel in 1952, East of Eden.

The best way to test a writer's work is to ask this question: Would the writer have written this novel, or work, if he had not won success in this way, if he had not had an axe to grind or financial gain at stake? If the answer is yes, the writer will continue to improve, despite success.

The state of Michigan is so surrounded by water that no point inland is located more than 100 miles from one of the Great Lakes.

Students Shoot 'Night Scene'

There's a bit of Hollywood deep in the west campus—for the last two semesters drama and photography students from both day and night divisions here have been shooting a full length movie on different locations in San Francisco.

The screenplay, written by Allen Addlestone, a night school student here, is called Night Scene. It concerns a typical boy-girl breakup with an unusual twist. Joy Frazier and Warren Jaklevich are cast are lovers, while Ron Boltz enacts the role of a criminal. Stan Miller will assume the role of a drunk. Warren Smith, who co-directs the picture with Beverly Pasqualetti, photo instructor here, and Harold Hockett are cast as policemen.

Bad weather and illness of cast members have plagued the movie makers. Special clearance had to be obtained from San Francisco police in the shooting of outdoor scenes.

After final shooting the movie will be sent to Hollywood for magnetic stripping, a new process which facilitates the dubbing of sound effects music and dialogue.

Rehearsals and camera work are done on Thursday nights, during the motion picture photography class. Special effects are shot by a crew under the direction of Emmett Smith on Monday nights.

The movie is expected to be shown during the last activity college hour of the semester.

Not to be outdone by their more advanced colleagues, students in the elementary motion picture class have embarked on another movie, to be shot in color.

Ram Nine Ties For Big Eight Title

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

PROBABLY the most significant factor in the success of any baseball organization is the effectiveness of that club's general manager, the fellow who handles the buying, selling and development of all players.

The foremost diamond outfit, the New York Yankees, has one of the shrewdest men in the game as its front office boss, George Weiss. What success the Bronx Bombers now enjoy is a result of the farm system dealings of Weiss. Therein lies the key to prosperity for any club.

Too much emphasis has been placed by too many general managers upon buying experienced players to bolster a team rather than expanding the farm system to meet the same end.

The basic success of the Yankees has been a direct result of the club's lucrative farm system, which has been handled for more than a decade by Weiss. It is true that the Yanks have made their share of deals in an effort to build a winner, but rarely for more than one player a season. The main portion of the front line Yankees was born and raised in the New York farm system.

Fans of other teams point to their favorites with pride, but many of these performers were developed in the Yankee farm loop. Prime examples are Jim Finigan, star third baseman for Kansas City; Bill Virdon, rookie outfield standout for St. Louis; and Hal Smith, outstanding young catcher for the Baltimore Orioles. The fact that all these performers are young proves that the Yankee farm system is still producing the most and best of the new players.

If the major league teams would spend a little dough in the right place, namely for the development of an effective farm system, two purposes promoting better baseball could be served.

First, the major league team in question would ultimately have a stronger team at a lower cost through the development of its own talent. Second, in keeping a farm system the club would help prevent the minor loops from a collapse which is uncomfortably close at present.

In the American League, only the Yankees, Cleveland, and Detroit have farm systems which are at all extensive. In the National League, the St. Louis, Brooklyn, and Pittsburgh clubs have the only large stock of minor league teams. All three of the latter group of farm systems were developed by one man, Branch Rickey, the first person in baseball to realize fully the potentialities of the farm system.

One sure sign of a healthy major league team is the fruitfulness of its farm developments, and in all but six cases, the results of same have been negative. Unless the majority of general managers stop sitting on their hands and get to work building sturdy farm systems, the majors will continue their trend toward two and three team pennant races, a most unhealthy situation for the national pastime.

Modesto Beats College Golfers

John McMullin and his Modesto golfing mates teamed up to trounce the City College tee-men soundly, 12-3, in the Big Eight Conference finale played at Harding Park Golf Course on April 5. The win gave the Pirates the league championship.

This defeat, coupled with earlier losses to the strong Stockton and San Mateo quintets, dropped the Rams into third place in the final loop standings.

McMullin, who recently captured the Northern California Collegiate Golfing Tourney, coupled with Alf Burtleson in downing the Rams. Burtleson, who finished second behind McMullin in the Northern California affair, is rated, along with McMullin, among the top college golfers in the nation.

Grover Klemmer, acting as golf mentor while Ralph Hillsman, the regular coach, serves as athletic director, finished his freshman season at the helm with victories over Santa Rosa, West Contra Costa, Oakland and Sacramento, and a triumph over non-league member Menlo.

STAN JOHNSON, powerhitting centerfielder for the college horsehiders, is pictured in a spectacular catch by Guardsman photographer Michael Kosinki. Johnson, in his first year of college baseball, has been instrumental in the college's drive for the Big Eight Championship.

42 North Track Stars Face Favored Southerners In State Meet At Modesto Saturday

Forty-two of the top runners, jumpers and throwers in Northern California move on Modesto this Saturday, May 21, to battle their numerically equal but, according to past records, skillfully superior cousins from the south, with the North State champion Rams represented by Clint Redus, Jack Egan, Ray MacIntyre and the mile relay team. Starting time for the State Meet is 7 p.m.

This season's high mark in the pole vault, one of only three events where the northerners dominate the records, is held by Modesto's Art Pederson with a 14 feet 2 inches leap. Joe Rose of Glendale, with a best of 13 feet 10 1/6 inches, will offer top competition among the southlanders.

Rink Babka of Menlo and Ram Egan have topped Ray Nowack's (Santa Monica) 153 feet 3 inch discus throw by at least four feet. Even though Nowack has the best discus effort, Dick Nelson of Los Angeles Valley is considered the stronger threat because of consistency in throwing over 150 feet.

Carey Black of Los Angeles Harbor leads the list of southland high jumpers who will press Hal Theus of Oakland, who holds the state best of 6 feet 3¾ inches. Black has leaped 6 feet 3½ inches thus far this year.

Redus will do triple duty for the Rams, in the 100 and low and high hurdles. His opposition in the 100 includes Compton's Ralph Butler, who recently broke the national record with a :09.5 (aided by a 12 mile an hour wind) and Santa Monica's Dick Dorsey, who has clocked a :09.6 century. Redus has done :09.6 with an eight mile an hour tailwind.

Phil Swisshelm of Santa Ana claims the best southern state low hurdle clocking at :23.2 while Redus has timber-topped a windblown :23.4. Redus' season best of 15.1 in the high sticks will be put on the line when he opposes Everett Jackson of L. A. Harbor, and Paul Kinder of L. A. Valley, both of whom have stopped the watches at :14.9.

MacIntyre, who placed third to a :21.9 timing in the North State meet, will have his work cut out for him when he faces Dorsey, who has scampered a :20.7 in the 220, and Warren Eisenberg of L. A. Harbor who has done the furlong in :21.1.

Top mark in the relay belongs to the Los Angeles City College quartet, with a 3:19.5 time.

Balboa Park Field Ready For 1956 Use By Horsehiders

Balboa Park will be the site of next year's home games for Coach Bill Fischer and his baseball squad. The field, which is being completed at the present time, will have four diamonds.

Although it was thought that the field would be ready by April, the Park and Recreation Commission stated that there is no definite date set to open the new park. It is expected to be opened sometime this year.

The main reasons that the new park is not being used at present is that the clubhouse and dressing rooms have not been completed. Another reason is that the turf is too soft to permit use at this time. The new grass would be ruined by the players' spikes.

With the baseballers' Big Eight Conference season completed, it will be 1956 before a Ram club takes the field at Balboa Park.

One practice game was scheduled to be played on the field against the S. F. Police Department on April 27, but was shifted to Big Ree in Golden Gate Park. Big Ree has been the site of all the other games.

The new field was built at a cost of $800,000 which was received by the city from the sale of Father Crowley Playground to allow room for the new free-way.

Despite the fact that the new diamonds have been built near the campus, the park will not be for the exclusive use of the college. The diamonds will be run by the City Recreation Department, and other schools will be able to use it. Concessions will be made to the college for the use of the field for games and practice.

Baseballers Deadlock For First Place With West Contra Costa Ball Club After Twin Victory Over Sacramento

By Mike Berger

Lightning struck in the same place last Saturday as the City College nine tied for the Big Eight championship by walloping Sacramento twice, 17-1 and 17-0, at Big Rec, while West Contra Costa shared the top spot with the Rams by two-timing Santa Rosa.

For the second year in succession the Bearcubs were dropped out of first place in the standings by the same team, only this year an improved college nine is there to share the laurels. After the weekend contests, a playoff game was scheduled for Monday. The score was not available at presstime.

Ray Warman caged the Panthers in the first game, pitching six innings and allowing but five hits. Steve Gallagher finished on the mound for the Rams, giving up two safeties in three rounds.

Twenty hits, a season high for the Bill Fischer nine, were highlighted by the slugging of Bob Mannini. The outfielder blasted a homer, triple, and single, which chased across four runs. Third baseman Jim Doherty, continuing his fine hitting of late, rapped a pair of doubles, a triple, and a single, also knocking in four runs. Stan Johnson contributed a three for six afternoon to add to the rout.

Denting the plate for 17 scores again in the nightcap, a seven inning affair, the college nine collected 15 hits and rounded out an errorless day afield with nary a miscue.

Johnson left his hitting for a while to do some pitching in this contest, and hurled five scoreless innings, as Gallagher again finished the game. The two pitchers limited the silent visitor bats to five bingles.

Mannini hit for the distance again in the final game, as he belted a grand slam homer in the second inning to send the Rams on the road to their fifth straight conference win.

The baseballers eased into what was then a second place tie with West Contra Costa last Wednesday at Big Ree by downing the Comets, 6-3, behind the hurling and hitting of Johnson and the slugging of Jim Poppin, who highlighted a four run-fifth inning rally with a bases-loaded double. A pair of pitcher ills was dropped last week, as the Rams bowed to Alameda Naval Air Station, 7-6, and the Presidio, 5-2.

Unofficial final standings of the top Big 8 clubs found the Comets and Rams deadlocked for first place with 10-4 won and lost records, and Santa Rosa and Stockton in a second place tie with 9-5 marks.

2 Ram Netmen Will Play In Visalia Tourney

Les Jacobson and Bob Chrisman will represent the college tennis squad in the California State Junior College Tournament, to be held at Visalia on Friday, May 20, and Saturday, May 21.

Jacobson and Chrisman, the top doubles team at the college, reached the quarter-finals of the Northern California championships played at Modesto last weekend to qualify for the state tourney. Jacobson met the singles and doubles requirements, exploiting the weaker ground game of College of Sequoia's Randall Bryant to win 6-1, 6-1, gaining a quarter-finals berth. Cliff Vickery of San Mateo used his high-powered "big game" attack to defeat the number one Ram player, 6-0, 6-3, in the quarter-finals. Chrisman reached the finals of the Consolation singles only to lose to Tony Russo of Monterey, 7-5, 9-7.

The Northern California Regional Championships, played for the first time this year, proved to be little more than a replay of the Big Eight Conference Tournament played a week earlier, as the Big Eight players dominated representatives from other two year college leagues in Northern California.

In the Big Eight Conference Championships, which were played at Santa Rosa on May 6 and 7, Chrisman and Jacobson reached the semi-finals of the doubles before the steamroller attack of Modesto's Ray Sampson and Don Stensaas flattened them, 6-0, 6-0. The same doubles team battered the Rams, 6-0, 6-1, in the Northern California tourney.

Jacobson reached the semis of the Big Eight tournament before Sampson's net-rushing tactics dumped him, 6-4, 6-4. Gordy Ferguson of Stockton defeated Ram player Don Wing in the first round of the Conference Championships. The number three man at the college, was defeated by San Mateo's Jerry Raffo, 6-2, 6-3, in the second round. Chrisman lost to Stensaas, 6-3, 6-0, in the first round. Wing and Matsumoto lost to the fifth-seeded doubles team of George Moffitt and Wally Izumi of Modesto, 6-0, 6-0. Lee Anderson and Walt Zoschke, City College players, were unable to attend and defaulted.

Napa College Site Of WAA Swim Playday Saturday

Swimmers from all Northern California two-year colleges will meet at Napa Junior College this Saturday, May 21, for a swimming playday. Lene Johnson, Women's Athletic Association adviser, announced recently. Any swimmers who are interested in going should inform Mrs. Johnson in the women's gymnasium.

Approximately 175 women from 10 Bay Area high schools participated in the Modern Dance Symposium on May 7 here in the women's gymnasium.

Those schools from the East Bay that participated are Fremont, Hayward, Oakland, Technical, Castlemont and Albany. Those from San Francisco were Mission, Lincoln, Washington, and Balboa, besides a large group from City College.

A master dance lesson was given by Ethel Pyatt from the University of California.

A co-ed archery tournament that will take place sometime in late May or early June is being planned by Mrs. Johnson and her Women's Athletic Association Committee.

Beta Phi Beta Hoop Team Leads Fraternity League

With only two weeks of play remaining in the Associated Student Night Basketball League, Beta Phi Beta fraternity is leading the loop.

Paced by Joe Canepa and Don Baroni, Beta Phi Beta has won four games and lost none. Canepa and Baroni are the two top point makers in the circuit.

The league, which consists of ten fraternities, has been in progress since April 5. The last regularly scheduled game is Wednesday, May 25. Playoff games are set for Tuesday, May 31, and the championship game will be played Wednesday, June 1.

All games are played in the men's gymnasium on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Two games are played each of the nights with the first game starting at 7 p.m. and the second one at 8:15 p.m.

Two games are scheduled for tonight. Beta Phi Beta plays Zeta Phi Sigma at 7 p.m. and Tau Chi Sigma plays Alpha Sigma Delta at 8:15 p.m.

League standings are:

TEAM	W	L
Beta Phi Beta	4	0
Alpha Phi Epsilon	3	1
Zeta Phi Sigma	3	1
Phi Beta Delta	2	2
Beta Tau	2	2
Gamma Phi Ypsilon	2	2
Alpha Sigma Delta	0	4
Tau Chi Sigma	0	4

Individual high scorers are Joe Canepa, Beta Phi Beta, 63; Don Baroni, Beta Phi Beta, 62; Wally Gottesman, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 59; Eugene Brown, Alpha Phi Epsilon, 56.

Heiress Next Play Offered By College Dramatic Group

The Heiress, next drama production, is now in rehearsal under the direction of Michael J. Griffin and will be presented in the Little Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 2, 3 and 4, at 8:30 p.m.

Cast in the starring role is Joyce Cody, who will portray Catherine Sloper. The leading male roles, that of Dr. Austin Sloper and Morris Townsend, will be played by Joe Bavaresco and Warren Smith, respectively. Others in the cast listed in order of appearance are Joy Frazier as Maria; Edwina Moquin as Lavinia Penniman; Barbara Raffaelli as Elizabeth Almond; Ron Boltz as Arthur Townsend; Carol Waugh as Marian Almond, and Janet Sobieski as Mrs. Montgomery.

Frank Anderson was appointed Associate Director. Costume design and production will be handled by Miss Frazier who will also act as house manager.

Suggested by the James Street novel, Washington Square, The Heiress, a two-act drama, was written by Ruth and Augustus Goetz. The play tells the story of a plain young woman of 25, about to inherit a fortune from her domineering father. When her father learns that she is planning an elopement with a young man suspected of seeking her fortune, he devises a plot to test the man's love by giving his daughter only a small pittance.

Admission to the play will be by Associated Student card to AS members, or $1.00 to non-members.

College Celebrates 20 Years Of Growth

THE EVER-INCREASING SIZE of the college's present Balboa Park campus, shown above in an aerial view photographed from the west, typifies the growth of the college, now celebrating its 20th anniversary. After spreading its classrooms among some 26 campuses all over the city, San Francisco Junior College (as it was then called), finally settled on Hill 29. The Science Building, shown in the foreground, was completed in 1940 and was the first permanent building on the campus, along with the gymnasiums. The women's gymnasium is located to upper right. Added to the permanent campus in 1946 were the buildings of Hurley Village, quonset huts for veterans' housing, shown here in the upper left. The college's latest pride and joy completed the campus (until the Student Union is opened) in 1954 when Cloud Hall, immediately behind the Science Building, was dedicated and opened for use.

Council Defeats College Band In Attempt To Juggle Budget For Anniversary Ball Admittance

By Don Ball

Student Council's feud with the college band flared into the open during last week's council meetings.

Proposed by a representative of the band was a plan to use funds from the band's budget to pay the musicians' way into the 20th Anniversary Ball held May 10. The band reasoned that since they had made money in their budget for a trip to Napa which they had not made, they should be allowed to spend the money as they saw fit.

It was pointed out that the budgets submitted at the beginning of each semester were for specific appropriations and not transferable. Vic Hebert, freshman council member, stated that he thought "someone over in the band department has a lot of gall."

Associated Student President Al Kingston pointed out that "if the band was participating in the 20th Anniversary Festival parade their proposal would be received in a more favorable light." The band has refused to participate in the parade.

The council voted unanimously to defeat the band's proposal. Kingston asked that the representative from the band "convey the council's regrets to Meyer Cahn," the band instructor.

Council members passed, over Kingston's objections, a measure to restrict the powers of the executive branch of the AS government. The new rule makes it mandatory for all legislation which legally binds the AS in any way to be approved by President Louis G. Conlan, Dean Louis Batmale and the council as well.

Opponents of the law felt that it was unnecessary and would bind the executive in even the smallest of matters.

Plans to award a council key to Jann Palmer were defeated after two ballots resulted in a deadlock. Under the plans, Miss Palmer, who is no longer a member of the council, would be accorded full recognition for her services and given a key even though she has not served on the council for a full semester. The balloting, which twice ended in a tie, was declared not passed under Robert's Rules of Order which states that tie votes should be considered a defeat.

Nominations for Miss Palmer's seat were opened with Arleigh Greenblatt, Robert Frick and Earl Fuller receiving nominations. There is some question as to whether or not the vacancy will be filled since there are not many meetings left during the semester.

Regulations regarding the Sophomore King and Queen election were announced. All on-campus organizations were urged to submit a candidate. To do so they must present a 5 by 7 photo of the candidate along with the candidate's name, signature, affiliation and the signature of the organization's sponsor.

Television Watchers Get Festival Preview

San Francisco television viewers got a preview of the college's 20th Anniversary Festival last Thursday night when 24 students appeared on the Dottie Hansen show on KGO-TV.

The 12 couples, presided over by festival king and queen Dick Amico and Barbara Batmale, gave exhibitions of swing and jig dancing.

A special preview of the jumping frog contest scheduled for Friday evening was also presented along with the carnival booths set up as an example of the festival activities.

New Enrollment Increases Again

Seven hundred and ninety-eight high school senior students have taken the entrance examination for the next semester, which is an increase of 200 over any previous semester, Alva McMillan, counselor here, announced last week.

Counselors have started visiting the high schools for programming interviews and four or more will be visiting every school day through June 3.

Approximately 3,400 returning students have made appointments to plan their programs while 800 to 1,000 students who are expected to return have not consulted their counselors yet.

Postcards will be sent to these students urging them to make appointments as soon as possible. The longer the delay, the higher the registration number will be.

Appointments may be made throughout the semester, and McMillan urged students to visit their counselors before finals week.

Schedules will be posted on the bulletin board of the counseling offices stating the dates the counselors will be absent from the college.

Foreign Policy Talks Billed For College Hour

Impromptu talks on American Foreign Policy set the pace for the semi-annual alumni speech award contest to be held during college hour, Friday, May 27.

The contest is open to all members of the student body. Thomas H. Dutcher, political science instructor here, urged all students who are interested to register in Room C335B anytime before Thursday, May 26.

Winner of the talk contest will have his name added to the gold trophy on which names of all previous winners of the semi-annual alumni speech award contest have been engraved.

9 Students Form Nucleus Of Staff At Crater Lake

Nine students from the college will form the nucleus of the working staff of the Crater Lake National Park Company in Crater Lake, Oregon, this summer, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, said recently.

While more than 50 men and women students filed applications for summer employment at this world renown geographical site, Amori declared, only nine were successful and were selected. They include Al Kingston, president of the Associated Students, and Max Pierce, who will work as desk clerks; Dean Woods, boatman and general utility worker; Robert George, bartender; Harold Hockett, bus driver; Gerald Rohlfes, storeroom supervisor; Kathyrn Perkins, dining room hostess; Joan Warner, waitress; and Mac West, cabin maid.

Because the resort season will commence on Sunday, June 12, these students will take their final examinations one week early.

Depending upon the type of work performed, the pay scale ranges from a weekly salary for waitresses of $25 plus tips and room and board to $250 per month with all expenses paid for the desk clerks and the bus drivers.

S.F. Law School Offers 5 Awards

Five scholarships are now being offered to pre-legal students graduating this spring, according to an announcement received from Dean John P. McFarland, of the San Francisco Law School.

To become eligible, a man or woman student must have completed 60 units of work and must be of high scholastic standing. Awards will be made on the basis of scholastic achievement and need.

Students of four other colleges in the Bay Area are also eligible to make application and Dean McFarland stated that one or all five scholarships may be given in any one college.

Instituted several years ago by the San Francisco Law School, the awards are designed to help the working individual obtain an education in law. Scholarships may be renewed at the end of each semester if the student meets the Law School standards.

Students interested in filing letters of application may write for full particulars to Helen Wilson, registrar, San Francisco Law School, 431 Sutter Street, San Francisco 8, California.

Vet Office Advises Of GI Schedule Limits

Veterans who are planning their fall semester programs are reminded by Robin Dunn, assistant to the coordinator of veteran affairs, to be sure and take only those courses that lead to their approved training objective.

Any veteran who will have more than 60 units completed at the end of the semester would normally not be eligible for benefits if he returns to City College. He should attend a four-year college, according to Dunn.

Camera Students Will Participate In Photography Day

The Northern California Council of Camera Clubs will combine with the Park and Recreation Department in presenting the seventh annual Photography day at Sigmund Stern Grove this Sunday, May 22, according to Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor here.

Photography students here will participate.

Beginning at 10 a.m. and ending at 5 p.m., the activities will include modeling, ballet, music, folk dancing, exhibits, and color slide shows.

Feature event of the day will be the photo queen contest in which the Junior Chamber of Commerce will present the top contestants of the Miss San Francisco Pageant to compete for the photo queen title. Last year's winner was the glamorous Lee Ann Meriwether who went on to be Miss San Francisco, Miss California, and finally Miss America.

One of the judges for the contest, chosen by Fred Levy, Supervising Director of Photographic Activities of the Park and Recreation Department and chairman of the Photo Day is Pasqualetti. Contestants will be judged on the point system as to general appearance, poise, posture, and personality.

Entering an exhibit in the affair, Pasqualetti's camera students will catagorize the pictures, showing what photography can do when a photographer has the proper training. The exhibit is entitled Photography at City College.

Last Chance Today To Drop Courses

Students wishing to drop classes or take leaves of absence must do so today, according to Jack Brady, coordinator, Student Welfare here. Petitions must be accompanied by attendance verification slips.

Thirty-one of the 103 students who were asked last week to appear before the Student Welfare office came forward with acceptable excuses for their numerous absences and have been reinstated. Another 28 students are on authorized leaves of absences.

Forty-nine students disregarded the interview request; these have been immediately disqualified without possibility for reinstatement, according to Brady.

The second midterm period reports have revealed a number of new attendance violators, and these students will be shortly interviewed here by the Student Welfare coordinator.

"As of now, 148 students have left the college because of poor attendance and scholarship records," Brady said last week, "and re-admission will, of course, be denied them."

Counselors here report that the enforcement of these two college regulations has provoked students to visit their counselors more frequently.

The Canary Islands were known as the Fortunate Islands in ancient times. They were originally inhabited by a race of people allied with the Berbers of Africa. Gaucho is the native language.

Dougherty Day Luncheon May 24, Fetes Former Dean

In honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women at the college, the semi-annual Dougherty Day luncheon will be held Tuesday, May 24, in the faculty dining room, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced recently.

The purpose of the luncheon is to present a trophy to the sorority averaging the highest scholarship rating at the end of the second mid-term period.

Established in Fall 1953 to honor Miss Dougherty, the luncheon is held each semester and Delta Psi has captured the trophy for the past two semesters.

The trophy is awarded, Miss Golding added, to encourage good scholarship within the sororities.

Awards committee will include Louis G. Conlan, president; Dean Golding, Jack Brady, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, and Gertrude Somerville, assistant registrar.

Sororities will be represented by their presidents and sponsors. They include Alpha Lambda Chi, Joan Rettus and Carolyn Riedeman; Delta Psi, Connie Panagakis and Martha Scott; Kappa Phi, Valerie Bertone and Valerie Phillips; Phi Beta Rho, Mary Daily and Evelyn Kerkhof; Theta Tau, Marylou Reidy and Gertrude Norgard; Zeta Chi, Sally Yudnick and Ruth Inskipp.

Name of the winning sorority will be announced at the luncheon, Dean Golding said.

Students In Military Service Granted Leaves

Any student whose entry into the armed forces makes it necessary for him to leave the college during the final midterm period may be granted a military leave of absence, according to Jack Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare.

A student should make application for military leave in the usual way through his counselor. This will be certified as a military leave of absence when the student presents his orders to active duty at Room 130, Science Building.

When a student has been granted a military leave of absence instructors will report his final grades to the registrar in the usual manner at the end of the semester, Brady said.

Club Cavalcade

Final Activities Planned By Clubs

By Joan Anderson

WITH only four weeks of semester left, campus organizations are planning their final activities. Many clubs are working on their floats and booths for the 20th Anniversary Festival on Friday.

The formal initiation of the spring pledge class of Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity was held at the home of sponsor Clement Skrabak on Sunday, May 7. A banquet was held following the ceremonies at the Ranch House and members and their dates attended a dance at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel afterwards.

The Chinese Students Club will sell chow mein and fortune cookies in their booth at the Festival. Two Chinese Sweetheart Ball Queens will participate on the club's float in the parade before the Festival.

Students interested in Christian Science are invited to attend a meeting in C268 during College Hour on Friday. Purpose of the meeting will be to form a Christian Science organization at the college.

Members of Alpha Lambda Chi sorority are completing their float for Friday's festivities and plans for their booth are rapidly taking place. The sorority will hold a joint meeting with Phi Beta Delta fraternity next Wednesday.

Theta Tau sorority and Tau Chi Sigma fraternity held a roller skating party at Skateland on Wednesday, May 10.

Zeta Chi sorority had a joint meeting with Tau Chi Sigma Sunday. Members are finishing plans for their entries in the 20th Anniversary Festival.

Associated Students To Vote Today, Tomorrow For Fall Semester Offices

Ortiz, Woods Head Ballots In Try For Presidency; 18 IFC Candidates Compete Against 12 Independents

Associated Student voters will go to the polls here today and tomorrow to chose 20 AS officers from among 30 candidates.

Eighteen of the nominees represent the choice of the Inter-Fraternity Council convention which met here April 29.

Independent candidates total 12, with none running for freshman posts on Student Council.

Paul Ortiz, IFC candidate, and Dean Woods, independent candidate, are vying for the office of AS president.

Three candidates, Earl Cabrinha, Independent; Lee Carol Lombard, Independent; and Tookie Radillo, IFC nominee, are running for the office of AS vice-president.

Competing for the office of Associated Men Student president are Bill Cirimele, Independent; Vic Hebert, IFC candidate, and Emery Lebonville, Independent.

Barbara Batmale, Independent, and Joyce Weaver, IFC nominee, are running for the office of Associated Women Student president.

For the office of Sophomore president, Bob Johnson, IFC candidate, is running uncontested.

Also running uncontested is Don Garrison, the IFC's nominee for Freshman president.

Twelve candidates are competing for the seven Sophomore Student Council seats. The six IFC candidates are Bob Bliss, Arleigh Greenblat, Walt Martenson, Charles Smith, Noel Vision, and Judy Wilson.

Independent nominees for Sophomore Student Council are: Robert Frick, Wayne McFadden, Marilyn Sicotte, Rose Thurmond, Robert Tucker, and Jean Vachon.

All six candidates for the seven Freshman Student Council seats are IFC nominees. They are Eleanor Benner, Annette D'Alti, Percy Everhart, Barbara Firpo, Pat Frodsham and Darlene Reitz.

Paul Ortiz

AS PRESIDENTIAL candidate with the endorsement of the IFC and other organizations on this campus, I assure you that my utmost desire is to serve you, the Associated Students, as your president for the fall semester 1955.

My varied activities of the past which have been Freshman president, Sophomore member of Student Council, member in good standing with the Rally Committee and Social Committees, a representative of the college at three regionals and one state student government conference, and at the present time, chairman of information service on the President's Cabinet, have given me a great deal of practical experience which has aided me in securing the qualifications necessary to hold the office of Associated Student President.

Speaking for myself and my running mate, Tookie Radillo, we feel confident that we can carry out the duties of the offices for which we are running in an intelligent and advantageous manner for you, the students of City College of San Francisco.

PAUL ORTIZ.

Dean Woods

AS THE INDEPENDENT candidate for AS president, there were several factors to consider. Foremost of these factors was the question of whether Associated Students were really interested in seeing the college move ahead in support of the extraeurricular activities that should include the majority rather than a selected few.

The second of these factors was whether the majority wishes to move ahead — are they willing to come out and support—really support—a candidate who believes that the way toward a bigger and better college is through participation in the academic, athletic and social aspects of the college.

The qualifications I have in my background are experiences as AMS vice-president, a member of the President's Cabinet, and a member of the Student Council.

I am asking for the office of AS President because I believe that the desire is present in the students and I have the ability and the experience necessary to bring about participation and advances the students wish to see effected.

With these ideals and your support I ask for your vote.

DEAN WOODS.

Four Poll Sites Open Today And Tomorrow

Elections of Associated Student officers for the Fall semester of 1955 will be held today and tomorrow, Alex Argo, election commmissioner here, announced last week.

Polls located by the Silver Pole and in the Snack Bar in the Science Building will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., he said, and polls in the west campus cafeteria will be in operation from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

All voters must be members of the AS and will be required to show an AS card and sign a register before voting.

Only members of the committee may handle polls and registers, Argo said, and any complaints must be submitted in written form.

3 Amendments On Election Ballot

Three proposed constitutional amendments appear on today's election ballot. They would change sophomore class presidential requirements, add the Campus Police Chief to the President's Cabinet and make permanent the temporary office of Campus Affairs Co-ordinator.

Requirements for candidates for sophomore president would be lowered from 45 to 30 units. This amendment would make it possible for low sophomores to run for the class presidency.

Addition of the Campus Police Chief to the cabinet would recognize an already existing condition. The chief has been liaison officer with the student cabinet for more than a year and has received a cabinet key in recognition of his service to the college.

Recognition of the Campus Affairs Co-ordinator will in effect lighten the burden of the president. The duties of the post, established this semester, will be to expedite matters of student government which have in the past unnecessarily occupied the president.

Band Gives Court Concert Friday

A courtyard concert will be given by the college concert band this Friday, May 27, during college hour. According to Meyer M. Cahn, instructor of instrumental music here, the concert will take place in the courtyard between the Science Building and Cloud Hall.

Among the selections that the band will play are selections from Porgy and Bess, by Gershwin; Pavane, by Faure; Ballade in D Minor, by Brahms; Prelude from L'Arlesienne Suite, by Bizet; Air and Variations with a trumpet trio, and the Fall of Jericho with a solo by Douglas MacEachern.

There is also a possibility that some more music will be added to the program.

After playing the concert the band will concentrate on rehearsing for the commencement exercises to be held on Friday, June 17.

Theta Tau Sorority Wins Dougherty Trophy

Theta Tau sorority won the Dougherty scholarship trophy which was presented here yesterday at the semi-annual Dougherty Day Luncheon.

The trophy goes to the sorority with the highest scholarship rating at the end of each second mid-term period. Delta Psi sorority has held the title for three consecutive semesters.

Established in Fall 1953, the trophy honors Margaret Dougherty, former Dean of Women at the college. Theta Tau was represented at the luncheon by Marylou Reidy, president, and Gertrude Norgard, sponsor.

Students Enjoy Seaside Trips At Own Peril

By Bev Swope

SUPREME effort will be required of all students for the remainder of the semester. Why? Because the call of the beaches is loud and strong at this time of the year, and so are attendance regulations.

Recent enforcement of attendance requirements spells doom to Fairfax and Adobe Creek enthusiasts, unless, of course, they have planned for the future. But sad as it is, those who cut classes during March and April will find themselves out on their embarrassed red ears if they decide to take a midterm vacation in May or June.

Also yellow slips won't always work when an instructor notices that his student has returned to class with the deep, golden tan of an outdoor life.

Is there no remedy, the anguished student cries, as he wistfully gazes out class windows during warm May days. Why, of course. What better place presents itself for sunning while resting and relaxing (when fog does not obscure the sun's rays) than our own Hill 29?

After the college gardeners have just slaved to put in a green, grassy plot, we are sure that they would be overjoyed to see students take advantage of their surroundings. And appreciative students will of course oblige by leaving no trash behind them, such as papers, cigar butts and so forth.

What better way is there to spend those 10 and 11 o'clock breaks? Just so drowsiness doesn't overcome us so that we sleep through 12 and 1 o'clock classes, too. And the tan—we'll be mad brown if we do this every day before June 17.

So now that the Spring attendance problem is licked, and instructors are pleased to see students in class, and students are pleased to be there—well—what more do we want?

Winners Of Ideal Man And Woman Contest Will Be Announced Friday As Women Take Over Campus Posts

Highlighting Women's Day this Friday will be the announcement of the winners in the Ideal Man and Ideal Woman contest.

Because each contestant was "ideal" as an individual, it was difficult to choose a winner, Tookie Radillo, Associated Women Student president, stated last week.

Finalists in the Ideal Man contest are Dan Corsetti, Kent Scovil and Don Wilson. Finalists in the Ideal Woman contest are Juanita Hall, Judy Wills and Penny Young. Judges in the contest were Miss Radillo, Joan Rettus and Amy Lee.

Winners will be presented trophies at a special entertainment rally during college hour in the auditorium, Building 1, this Friday.

Darrolyn Donnelly, Joy Frazier, Jane Latt, and Melanie Mead, students from the college who are in the semi-finals for the Miss San Francisco contest, are tentatively scheduled to present their respective acts from the contest. The International Relations Club is also scheduled to present some numbers on the program.

Another feature of Women's Day will be a homemade cookie sale to be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the courtyard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building.

Women students will assume the duties of all administrative and Associated Student offices on Women's Day.

Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, will assume the role of AS president and president of the college. Others having administrative positions are Amy Lee, as co-ordinator, Division of Educational Management; Joan Rettus, as co-ordinator, Division of Instruction; Judy Wills, as dean of Semi-professional Courses; Miss Frazier as dean of women; Connie Panagakis as dean of men; Roberta Singer as registrar; Margaret Hysted as librarian; Miss Mead as placement director; Joyce Weaver as co-ordinator, student welfare; Barbara Batmale as dean of general college courses.

Women students taking over AS positions will be Jan Sobieski, AMS president; Miss Radillo as AWS president; Pat Harris as Club Activities Board Chairman; Antoinette Mannina as Publicity chairman; Marilyn Sicotte as Freshman president; Nancy Medina as Sophomore president; Barbara Jones as Women's Athletic Commissioner; Mary Terwilliger, Rally Commissioner; and Gloria Temkin, Finance chairman.

Women's Day was originally scheduled for May 20, but was re-scheduled for this Friday when the 20th Anniversary Festival date was moved ahead one week. This is the first time a program of this kind has been enacted on campus.

Student Lack Of Interest Shows In Minority AS Vote

PERHAPS one of the most important Associated Student elections in recent years is taking place here today and tomorrow, and unfortunately, if past elections are any criterion, the voting turnout will hardly be sufficient for a good vote of confidence.

Despite the fine group of AS officers who have governed this semester, there has been a great deal of controversy in student activities. This is, in many ways, a good thing, for there are two points of view to everything, and continual agreement is usually the sign of indifference.

From other sides, however, the controversy has put AS activities in a precarious position. The consistent interest in more and better functions by this semester's officers was heartening, but unless as good a slate of leaders is elected to serve in the Fall, the great interest will die too suddenly and the student activity program that has always been so active will be greatly hampered.

Fortunately for the Associated Students, the candidates for office in the present election are, as usual, generally good. We have been fortunate in having good candidates and good officers in the majority of elections here.

The only thing that stands in the way of good government next semester, then, is lack of interest by the students. If there is to be good interest and support, as there must be if there is to be a good activities program, then there is no better place to start than at the current elections.

In the past year, the AS elections have seen a turnout of only some 40 per cent of all eligible voters, certainly not a high mark. Yet it is the highest percentage ever recorded in any AS election here. These past two elections were spiced with the addition of independent candidates to the slate, and even with this incentive only 40 per cent of the AS members were interested enough in college affairs to take a minute to vote.

It is impossible for any elected officer, from AS president to Student Council member, to act comfortably, in the knowledge that he is serving the majority of the college students, when elected by a mere small plurality. More convincing support, however, is impossible without a strong majority of eligible voters casting a ballot.

Everything is conducive to a large turnout for the present elections. The candidates are good and there is a strong necessity to give the winners a working margin, whoever they may be. We strongly urge every member of the Associated Students to take the one minute necessary to vote, and thus insure continuance of the fine student activity program that the college has enjoyed in the past.

The Spectator — US Institutions Must Catch Up With Ketchup

By Bob Chrisman

AMERICAN ketchup (or catsup, katsup) has become a national institution, like the hot dog, the hamburger, and Little Orphan Annie. It is typically American, and has connotations of red-headed, freckle-faced, typical American lads using ketchup, which automatically makes it an American institution, for anything connected with a tousle-headed, freckle-faced, wide-eyed redhead is typically American, including zip guns, stilletos, and arson.

As a seasoning, ketchup is mediocre, but in habit-forming characteristics it ranks with opium, marijuana and television.

Ketchup brings the case down to brass smacks—ketchup is used not as a seasoning, like salt, or pepper, but because of its flavor. Since it is enjoyed because of its taste, it is used on anything from filet mignon to scramhled eggs. The confirmed ketchup-enter cannot be moderate in his use of ketchup. To receive the full body of ketchup's tang, one must not be content with a few drops on a beefsteak, but the beefsteak, vegetables, and table must be hopelessly drowned in the red tide.

Perhaps the main reason for ketchup addiction on the part of so many American citizens who have no other vices is the obsolete container in which it is bottled. Ketchup is a heavy, viscous fluid, almost like a paste, and it is difficult to pour freely, which means that it gets stuck in the bottle. So the intrepid typical American, in order to enjoy his beefsteak, must bring a tool kit consisting of a jack-hammer, air-compressor, dynamite and caps, pickaxe, or a siphon hose, plus determination, before he can saturate his food with ketchup.

The typical American now starts up the air-compressor, blasts with the dynamite to get the ketchup loose in the bottle, inverts the bottle, and applies the rubber-tipped jack-hammer. If this method is successful, the diner finds his steak, his plate, his table, and his shoes immersed in ketchup, and he is exhilarated (in ketchup-eating circles the moment when the ketchup commences to flow is called the "Moment of Truth").

The siphon method was condemned by committees designed for the Moderation and Stabilization of Ketchup Usage because the ketchup-eater would frequently forget all about his beefsteak and just pull on the ketchup bottle.

The flood of ketchup that inevitably results from the blasting method results in a dependency of the addict on equal quantities of ketchup on all his food. The addict never has a chance to get a few drops on his steak, but ends up with half the bottle's contents on his plate or in his friend's eyes. The result is a conditioned reflex something like Pavlov's dogs suffered—when the addict sees ketchup he envisions about eight fluid ounces on his food, and there is a wild-eyed, impassioned clutch for the bottle.

Hagen Prof Tours

Bonn Guest Lists Contrast In US, German Schools

Differences between America and Germany in the field of secondary education were pointed out by Dr. Theodor Diemel, of Hagen, Germany, during his recent visit to the college.

Dr. Diemel, deputy headmaster of the Gymnasium at Hagen, is in this country at the invitation of the Foreign Leader program sponsored by the United States Department of State. Under the program, outstanding leaders from all professions and from all countries are invited to America for the primary purpose of furthering better foreign relations. After a brief orientation period in Washington, D. C., the leaders are free to tour the country as they wish for a period not to exceed three months.

Dr. Diemel, in addition to visiting the college here, has made trips to colleges and schools in Texas, Tennessee, Colorado and Los Angeles. He explained that in Germany, as contrasted with the United States, a gymnasium is not a place for athletic activities as it is in this country, but rather a classical school, preparatory to the universities. Of four years duration, the program includes the last two years of high school and two years of two-year college level work. The curriculum provides for an entire year devoted to the study of American customs and ideals. Students are required to learn United States history, geography and government.

Cement Heaven Only Leads To Washing Cars

Early-to-schoolers were treated to a startling sight as they approached the college parking lot one day last week.

It seemed, at a casual glance, that the parking lot was deserted. Not a car was in sight, leaving vast expanses of wonderful space. Just plain ordinary space to the uninitiated observer, but to the student who had just washed his car and did not want to park in the collegiate version of the Gobi Desert, it was solid paved Heaven.

Hark! The villain enters the picture. A cordon of campus police surround the area as only a seven man cordon can. The students pleaded, cajoled, and in some instances threatened the college's finest with violence, but the men in blue stood firm. No one can park here, they said. "But I bought an Associated Student card just so I could park here," one student complained. It did him no good, for the police were adamant in their refusal to let any students use the student parking area.

The young law enforcers had a reason for their apparent stubbornness that was unknown to most of the disgruntled students. The Hotel and Restaurant department was fulfilling its annual obligation as host for the monthly luncheon of the Northern California Hotel Association.

For this reason it was obvious that 30 per cent of the parking lot area had to be cleared in the early morning for the noon-time feast.

The Beachcomber — Memorial Meaning Missed By Revelers

By Bill Boldenweck

TUESDAY night; 11:00. Deadline first thing in the morning. Column due. Nothing comes. Write something funny, 'Comber. Can't use the same old tricks again. Not right away anyhow. No dialect stuff, bop talk, mixed up lines, backward printing, animal parables. So what's to use for material? Come on, quit stalling.

More coffee, another smoke, think it over. Something will come. What's happening when the next issue comes out? Memorial Day.

Memorial Day. "A day appointed for commemorating dead soldiers and sailors, in most of the states a legal holiday, May 30." Nothing very funny about that. But there are a lot of other things that go on that day. Should be something there. Go on, be funny.

Picnics, trips to the beach, three-day weekend, sport car races, boat races, horse races, THE BIG RACE. There's something. Two dozen drivers in the biggest, fastest cars there are spend the day trying to prove which one of them can go fastest round and round a mile long circle in Indiana. And hundreds of citizens come from miles around to watch and see if maybe one of them will get killed. And sometimes one does. And then at next year's race they have a moment of silence in his honor. After all, it is Memorial Day.

Of course, the best show of all is on the highways, but being spread out, it's hard to see more than a little bit of it. Really spectacular. A dozen million, give or take a few million, citizens pile into their foam and chrome chariots and enter the three-day race to see who can get to eternity first. Sometimes whole families get there at once. But whatever happened to the "dead soldiers and sailors" that the dictionary mentioned?

I guess they're still sleeping in the softly rolling, verdant cemeteries, peaceful at last in the long rest that is reward enough for valiant efforts in the chaos of battle.

Still nothing comes, 'Comber, nothing witty strikes home in the middle of the night. Memories get in the way. The places: Inchon, Wonsan, Koto-ri, Hagaru, Hongchon, Hungnam, Reville Ridge, Icebox Hill, Iron Triangle. The names: Don Torres, Ray Smith, Gil Alvarez, Dick DeVilliers, Robert Drennan, Walter Monegan. All dead. All gone, all forgotten, save by a few. And more places, peaceful now, the mute tale the land tells ignored, the horror the names once reflected, dulled, gone. Tarawa, San Lo, Cassino, Crete, El Alemein, Corregidor, Meuse-Argonne, San Juan Hill, Bull Run, Harper's Ferry, New Orleans.

And newer places, the blood still fresh in the soil, creep slowly into oblivion, even as the headline ink dries: Hanoi, Haiphong, Singapore, the Israel-Egypt border. As the citizens rush on in their frantic flight to "economic survival" as "more important" things occupy their minds.

So the dead are the ones that rest. And they deserve it, and the homage that a few accord them. And the ones who live the "American Way of Life," for which they gave what they had, go on and on, without an apparent thought of why that life is free and good, or what must be done to preserve it. And that is a way of life, and it seems it always will be. "The tumult and the shouting dies . . . still stands thine ancient sacrince . . . be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget."

But forget it, 'Comber, join the crowd at the beach and be "happy" like the rest. Go to bed, sleep it off. Be funny next week.

Shots At Ramdom

By Deane Wylie

MUCH upheaval last week in the fountain and cafeteria as the administration and campus police chukked card players from the two spots . . . A large-sized panic occurred when City police in squad cars rolled up to the campus on a matter entirely apart from the card crack-down, and the budding Scarnes, sensing a raid, flew in all directions.

DURING THE HEIGHT of the frog jumping activities last week, the Associated Student jumping frog committee sent letters to all campus clubs and organizations, urging them to submit entries in the 20th Anniversary Festival jump-offs. With tongue-in-cheek, it's hoped, the playful committee started the notes with "Fellow Club Heads . . ."

The committee also announced that it had available frog badges, that would glow at night, "in case you don't already."

HONORABLE THIEF: A journalism instructor at the University of Texas, reports the ACP, received a test completed under the honor system with the student's pledged signed like this:

"I have neither given nor received any aid on this quiz, nor have I seen anyone doing so. However, I stole the paper on which it is written." Which reminds of the old (very) crack about the honor system: The instructors have the honor, the students have the system.

ATTENTION ALL MALE BUSRIDERS: Betty Schultzen, Joe Amato's girl Friday in the placement office, received a call last week from a lady who said she'd had a pleasant conversation on a Mission Street bus recently with a "nice young City College man," and would like to locate him here so she could speak to him again.

She didn't know his name and couldn't recall what he looked like but was sure that the college could find him, "because he was carrying a large bundle of books." After hearing that the present enrollment here was pushing 6,000, the caller admitted it might be a bit difficult . . . But come to think of it, not too, not too.

College Photographers Shoot 'Night Scene'

First Showing Due For Final College Hour On June 3

WARREN JAKELEVICH plays the leading male role in Night Scene, movie under production by the college's photography and drama departments. — Guardsman photo by Robert Frick.

Rehearsals for Night Scene, the movie being produced by the college's photography and drama departments, are on Thursday nights. But every Monday night Emmett Smith and his hard working camera crew are busy shooting the endless details that make a movie successful.

Most of the film's scenes are being shot in front of the auditorium on the west campus, but it is impossible to get the desired closeups at that location.

Smith's crew shoots these closeups in the photography workshop in Building 9 on the west campus. Matched lights are used to coincide with the somber mood of the picture.

It is expected that the movie will be shown during the last college hour Friday, June 3. After the photography is completed the film will be sent to Hollywood for magnetic striping, a new process which facilities the dubbing of sound effects, music and dialogue.

The screenplay, which was written by Allen Addlestone, a night school student here, concerns a usual boy-girl breakup with an unusual twist. Joy Frazier and Warren Jakelevich are cast as lovers, and Ron Boltz is expected to assume the role of a criminal. Stan Miller will play a drunk, while Warren Smith, co-director of the picture with photography instructor Beverly Pasqualetti, and Harold Hackett are to be policemen.

The movie has been in progress for two semesters. Injuries and illness have plagued the cast, and special clearance had to be obtained from the city police for shooting and screaming scenes.

Elementary motion picture students, not to be outdone by their more advanced colleagues, are planning a movie called Buck Fever, to be done in color.

Redus Takes High Point Cup As Mates Tie LACC For Third In State Track Championships

By Emil Portale

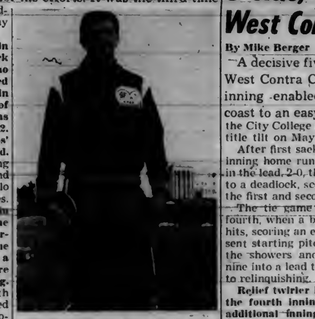
Paced by Clint Redus' record equaling victory in the high hurdles, second in the lows and fourth in the 100, the Rams collected 36 points and bolted into a third place tie with Los Angeles City College in the State Track Meet last Saturday in Modesto.

Redus amassed 22 of the Ram point total and was awarded the state meet's high point trophy for his efforts. It was the third time in the last four years that a Burkhead-coached Ram thinclad has taken away the coveted prize.

By capturing the high hurdles in :14.6 Redus equaled the year old mark of Compton's Lionel Daniels who pulled up second in the hotly contested event. Redus also topped Daniels in the low timbers but Bill Swisshelm of Santa Ana was too much for either as he took the event in a blazing :23.2. Swisshelm's clocking beat Daniels' 1954 state record by a half a second.

With a 146 feet 5 inch discus fling Jack Egan took place money behind his old nemesis Rink Babka of Menlo who tossed the disc 154 feet 2 inches.

Ray MacIntyre shot into fourth in the 220 behind three talented foes, one of whom was tape-breaker Dick Dorsey of Santa Monica who erased the year old state record by .0.4 with a :21.0 effort. In the 100 MacIntyre placed sixth to Dorsey's :09.7 timing.



The Ram relay team finished sixth to a Los Angeles quartet who stopped the watches at 3:16.4, eclipsing Compton's year old national standard by a full :0.6.

Santa Ana annexed the state title with 55 points earned primarily through non-winning efforts. Santa Ana's only victories were in the broad jump and low hurdles. Compton turned up with 47 points which boosted them to second place in the meet competition.

Iron man Denny Schweikert accounted for all Fullerton's points with gruelling double wins. He broke the 18-year old national record in the mile and cracked the seven year old national two mile standard both by more than two seconds. The southland taskmaster was voted the most valuable performer.

Chopping down records nearly became a habit in the cinder action for Art Pedersen of Modesto and Jesse Garcia of Los Angeles City College both felled state marks. Pedersen blotted out the six year old national pole vault mark by half an inch and topped the state record by eight inches. Garcia annihilated the former state 440 mark with a blazing :47.7, bettering the two year old standard by a full second.

Perennially strong southland clubs dominated meet action, for only three north state teams finished in the top ten. The class of the Big Eight, San Francisco, Modesto, and Santa Rosa man," and would like to locate him here so she could speak to him again. did the honors. Modesto's 25½ points brought them seventh place and Santa Rosa's 17½ finished them tenth.

JACK EGAN, massive discus thrower of the college, took first place in the Fresno Relays with a toss of 155 feet, 11 inches, his best effort of the season. — Guardsman photo by Robert Frick.

June 3 Date For Soph-Prof Battle

During a double college hour Friday, June 3, the sophs and the profs will do battle against each other in a game that requires brains, skill and stamina—baseball. According to Lou Batmale, dean of semiprofessional courses, the game will probably be a double shut-out. It will be played on the college's athletic field.

Tentative starting line-up for the profs is Jack Brady, Roy Burkhead, Roy Diederichsen, Thomas Dutcher, Bill Fischer, Ralph Hillsman, Grover Klemmer, Thomas Nesbitt and Alex Schwarz. Not much chance is given for any of these men finishing though.

Any interested sophomore who wishes to play in this colossal show of strength may sign up in the Associated Student office in Building 2 on the west campus.

Fraternity Basketball League In Three-Way Tie For First Place

The college's Associated Student Night Basketball League was thrown into a three-way tie for first place when Alpha Phi Epsilon defeated Beta Phi Beta, 52-45.

Eugene Brown led the Epsilon club with 25 points to annex high point honors for the evening.

In the other game of the twin bill, Zeta Phi Sigma overwheimed Gamma Phi Ypsilon by a score of 55-45.

Last Thursday, Beta Tau defeated Tau Chi Sigma with Bill Mullen sparking the Beta Tau offense with 13 points.

In the second game, Alpha Sigma Delta forfeited the game to Phi Beta Delta.

Current won and lost records are: Beta Phi Beta, 4-1; Alpha Phi Epsilon, 4-1; Zeta Phi Sigma, 4-1; Phi Beta Delta, 3-2; Beta Tau, 3-2; Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 2-3; Tau Chi Sigma, 0-5; Alpha Sigma Delta, 0-5.

Hayakawa Leads Ram Golfers In Tournament Play

John McMullin and Alf Burtleson led the Modesto Pirates over Big Eight competition and 27 colleges in golf tourney play over the weekend of May 13, 14 and 15.

In Stockton, for the Big Eight tourney, Bob Blackburn of San Mateo led the pack for the first 18 holes but was finally overtaken by McMullin on the final day of play. Ram golfer Hal Hayakawa was third at the end of the final circuit with a sparkling 77. This was Hayakawa's lowest score to date, even surpassing the round in which he scored a hole-in-one.

In the State tourney on May 16 in Sacramento, City College finished in the middle of the scramble for high honors among 36 other colleges, including Modesto.

Staying cool in the face of stiff competition, McMullin was tops among the field, although he was closely followed by Clinton Airey of El Camino who shot a 70 for the 18 hole grind.

Hayakawa again led the Rams with an 82 while Dick Kramer followed with an 84. Coach Grover Klemmer said that his college golfers played better than usual, mainly because they didn't fold under pressure as many others did.

Last season, the Big Eight champion Rams failed to place in this tourney.

Horseriders Nab Second

College Loses Big 8 Title, 17-5 To West Contra Costa

By Mike Berger

A decisive five-run outburst by West Contra Costa in the fourth inning enabled the Comets to coast to an easy 17-5 victory over the City College nine in the Big Eight title tilt on May 16 at Oak's Park.

After first sacker Al Reynolds' first inning home run had put the Comets in the lead, 2-0, the Rams battled back to a deadlock, scoring single tallies in the first and second stanzas.

The tie game held until the fatal fourth, when a barrage of five Comet hits, scoring an equal number of runs, sent starting pitcher Ray Warman to the showers and put the Richmond nine into a lead they never came close to relinquishing.

Relief twirler Larry Nissim put out the fourth inning fire and fired two additional innings of good baseball, but the seventh stanza brought those five run woes again. Sam Hitcher, also a standout on the basketball court, was the hero for the Contra Costans in the final five run outburst, as he deposited a grand slam homer into the short right field bleachers, a poke of around 310 feet.

Longest blow of the day was outfielder Jim Poppin's circuit clout for the Rams in the fifth, a drive that left the park in deep left center at the 375 foot mark while still climbing.

Although the Comet win was well earned, the score might have been a good deal closer had the men of Bill Fischer been able to hit oftener with men on the bases. This lack of clutch stroking is evidenced by the 12 men left on base for the entire game.

Rocco Garidiano hurled effective ball for five innings, weakened in the sixth, and finally was relieved in the seventh by Ray Luce, who finished the pitching chores for the Comets.

Final home run of the game was hit in the ninth by Contra Costa catcher Al Williams, who put the slug on a 360 foot blast over the left field fence to drive in the final trio of runs for the victors.

By virtue of winning their second successive Big Eight championship, the West Contra Costa nine qualified for entry in the State junior college diamond playoffs, held at Visalia last week.

Line score:

W. Con. Costa	2	0	0	5	1	8	1	0	—	17	17	3
City College	1	1	0	0	0	2	0	0	1	5	10	3

Team pacers in final batting marks were Johnson (.481), Dito (.460), Kraft (.364), Doherty (.353), Candler (.340). Runs batted in leaders were Johnson, Mannini, and Poppin with totals of 15. Johnson also starred on the mound with a flawless 4-0 mark, followed by Warman with 5-2.

Rams Finish Baseball Season With 10-5 Record; Show Most Progress Through Season Of All League Clubs

Having had an entirely new ball club this season, Coach Bill Fischer can look back at the Ram diamond accomplishments for 1955 with the knowledge that the college nine showed the greatest improvement in the Big Eight picture of all other clubs, a 10-5 record.

After entering the conference slate of game with a 6-7 won and lost mark, the horsehiders had given evidence of considerable progress over the 1954 outfit that finished last and won only one league contest.

The class of the circuit figured to be West Contra Costa, Santa Rosa, and Stockton.

With an even divide in the Stockton set and a sweep of the Oakland duo, the Rams entered into serious pennant contention.

Gordon Lewis of the San Mateo nine hurled the finest game of the season for his club, and beat the Rams while allowing them only two hits in doing so. The college diamondmen took the final game of the series for a split, but dropped a vital contest as the season was nearing the midway point.

Although the baseballers beat the then league leading Santa Rosa nine in the first game of a crucial twin bill, some wildness on the mound in the second tilt cost the Rams a chance to move into a tie for first place.

The first meeting of the year with the defending champion Comets resulted in lop-sided defeat, but from there the college nine began its whirlwind stretch drive.

Modesto had its title hopes dashed when the City College club dealt the Pirates a double defeat. The men from Richmond who had easily beaten the baseballers a week before were nearly as easily beaten themselves. Cellar dwelling Sacramento was plastered twice on the last regular day of action, and the combination of a pair of double losses for Santa Rosa in the space of seven days meant a deadlock between the Rams and the Comets.

Bob Zucca at first, Jim Candler at second, Ed Kraft at short, Jim Doherty at third, Bob Mannini, Stan Johnson, Jim Poppin, and Don DeSurville in the outfield, and Ken Dito behind the plate all formed the heart of this year's Big Eight darkhorse, with able assistance on the hill from hurlers Ray Warman, Steve Gallagher, Larry Nissim and John Puili.

Faculty Racqueteers Take Varsity Team

A duo of racqueteering ringers by the names of Harry Buttimer and George Stewart paced the faculty tennis team to a 4-1 victory over the college's varsity squad, May 12, as Buttimer beat Les Jacobson, 6-4, 6-1 in the number one singles, and Stewart tromped Bob Chrisman, 6-3, 6-2.

Roy Diederichsen and Ralph Hillsman rounded out the faculty squad, as Diederichsen unleashed Budge-like ground strokes to whip Alan Matsumoto, 6-4, 6-2 in the number three match, and Hillsman succumbed to racket wiles of Lee Anderson in the number four match. Buttimer and Stewart defeated Chrisman and Jacobson, 6-3, 6-2 in the doubles.

Coach Klemmer Was Three Letter Man At UC

Grover Klemmer, who today breaks records by proxy as City College's football and golf coach, recently saw his 14-year-old 880 mark smashed by a willowy Cal freshman trackster named Don Bowden.

Although Bowden's 1:51.1 effort surpassed not only the freshman but the university mark of 1:51.7 which Klemmer held, the losing of that niche in the record books hardly dents the stack of sports accomplishments that Klemmer has left behind.

The former Galileo thinclad holds the city prep record in the 440 at :49.2, set in 1939, and the city 880 mark which stood until 1951.

While at Cal in 1941, Klemmer aided in boosting his college's cinder squad into second place in the national track ratings by breaking the world record in the 440 at :46.4 and clocking a 46.0 in the 400 meter run, both unbroken University of California records.

Klemmer was not entirely an individual standout for he bolstered team performances in the one and two mile relays by sparking the two groups to world records which stand today. Surprisingly enough, all this was accomplished in his sophomore year.

Why, then, wouldn't such an outstanding performer improve still more with at least two more years of competition remaining? While not preventing Klemmer from keeping his unbeaten string intact at Cal, an unfortunate injury prevented him from becoming any faster.

Track did not dominate Klemmer's athletic life entirely, for he was also an avid participant in basketball, soccer, crew and football. He is today one of the few athletes in the history of the University of California who has earned letters in three sports—football, basketball and track.

GROVER KLEMMER, one-time holder of the 440 world record while attending U. C.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

BY TURNING back pages in the record books it can be found that never in the history of this college have Ram athletic squads done themselves more proud than in the 1954-1955 scrambles, even though having the championship door closed in their faces at almost every turn.

Final reckonings in soccer, baseball and track found the Rams uncomfortably grabbing at last straws only to be photo-finished at the wire in league play. Troublemaking basketball, football and tennis aggregations saw last ditch stand hopes fade in the waning games of their respective title races and had to settle for place money in the standings. Currently the Ram golfers are in the last heat for Big Eight laurels.

Although no Ram team further crowded the trophy cases with spoils from a regular season championship, each outfit did its part in electrifying each member of the notoriously strong Big Eight circuit.

The Ram soccermen were booted out of the coveted first niche by all-powerful USF who paralyzed the Rams in the playoffs, 2-1 and 2-0. Although these setbacks deprived City College of the big glory, the team boasted a much sweeter triumph in its earlier season 5-4 victory which halted USF's prodigious win string at 56.

Sneaking in the back door by capturing their last four games while Santa Rosa was losing their last four, the Ram horsehiders climaxed their regular season in a tie for the first slot. In the playoff contest West Contra Costa unleashed a merciless 17-hit attack and chased three Ram hurlers to the showers in eclipsing the college's title aspirations with a 17-5 shellacking.

The Ram tracksters found themselves unbeaten when the final dust-mert rolled around. Sticking to the script, Modesto played villain while eking out a 64-58 decision which ushered the Pirates into the winner's circle. The Rams went on to annex the conference and Northern California meet prizes, but still entertained thoughts of what could have been.

City College's hot and cold basketeers put all their eggs in one basket too late in their season to earn the league cup and were found trailing Stockton and West Contra Costa when official play had ended.

Two points wrote finis and frustration in Ram grid records last year when Santa Rosa squeaked out a sardine-tight 14-12 decision which marshed the college's footballers and dropped them to third place. The Rams had but one tie blotting their record up to that time and were nestled on the top rung in the standings.

Early this year Modesto edged the Rams, 5-2, on the tennis courts and retained its long standing net supremacy. City College surrendered only two matches all season long and when the fireworks ended they were firmly imbedded in third place.

It seems that fate in her own way decided that City College's athletic teams were not to champion the Big Eight the past two semesters.

In commending players and coaches alike for bringing well deserved success to the hilltop, it must be said, all things considered, that each sports participant was a champion in his own right.

Student Council Post Vacated By Palmer Will Be Left Open For Remainder Of Semester

No move will be made to fill the vacancy in Student Council caused by the withdrawal from the college of council member Jann Palmer.

This action followed the suggestion of Dean Louis F. Batmale that since there is such a short time remaining in the semester, filling the council seat is unnecessary.

Tuesday's meeting of the council was presided over by Associated Student Vice-President Marion Cheader. In the absence of Ai Kingston, AS president, Miss Cheader ruled with a heavy gavel and showed complete familiarity with the procedures of the council meetings.

Transfer of $81 from the boxing team budget was approved by council. Reason for the re-apportionment of funds was the fact that the tennis team was sending two players and a coach to the state two-year college championship matches in Visalia.

Twenty-eight candidates are running for AS offices, according to Al Argo, election commissioner. Of the 30 candidates only six are running for the freshman seats on council. This is one less candidate than there are seats. Argo also reported some instances of vandalism in relation to campaign posters in Cloud Hall.

Scene of the council dinner will be the California Hotel. Date of the semesterly banquet has been set for Wednesday, June 1.

Appointment of Mike Pease as acting Rally Commissioner was announced by Kingston. His selection fills the vacancy left by the resignation of Glenn Allen.

Associated Women Students will have cookie stands during Women's Day, according to Tookie Radillo, president of the AWS. Miss Radillo reported that although she had at first feared her day would not be completely successful, she now felt confident that it would be an unqualified success.

Club Cavalcade

Clubs Return To Usual Activities

CAMPUS organizations are settling back into their normal routines after the rush and excitement of the 20th Anniversary Festival.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity held its pledge dinner May 14 at the Ranch House.

The Chinese Students Club will hold their fifth annual Memorial Day picnic on May 29 at Adobe Creek Lodge. Admission will be $1.25. There will be refreshments, games and swimming and dancing from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. All members are urged to attend the affair which will start at 9:30 a.m.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity met at member Bob Kelleher's home recently to package text books, collected in the Books For Korea Drive, for shipment. A barbecue dinner followed the packaging.

The pledge dinner of Kappa Phi sorority was held at El Nido Rancho May 14. The sorority had a business meeting on May 12 at the home of member Barbara Firpo.

Fisherman's Grotto No. 9 was the site on May 21 of Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity's pledge dinner. Pledges were presented with their membership pins at the dinner and afterwards went to Fairfax for an evening of dancing.

Phi Beta Rho sorority held its formal pinning and initiation last week at the home of Sharon Johnston. The sorority will meet jointly tonight with Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity.

The 11 pledges of Gamma Phi Ypsilon who officially became brothers on May 12 are Tom Apaian, Lee Anderson, Bill D'Brea, Bob Green, Mike McGinnis, Tom McReynolds, Fred Muller, Kevin O'Connell, Ron Rahmer, Bill Tillson and Don Wilkes. The affair was held at the home of Cal McFarlands.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority met jointly last night with Phi Beta Delta fraternity.

Theta Tau sorority will have a sports joint with Beta Tau fraternity tonight.

Five Honor Awards Go To June Graduates

Five honor awards, in addition to the Associate in Arts degrees received by all graduates, will be presented at the June 17 commencement exercises in Riordan auditorium.

The President's Award Plaque is presented to the man and woman graduates who have contributed most in service to the college.

One outstanding business major is selected to receive the Wall Street Journal award which consists of a silver medal and a one year subscription to the Wall Street Journal. The recipient is chosen on the basis of scholastic standing and promise in the field of finance or business.

Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society students will receive certificates and pins. The Scholastic Cup will go to the graduate achieving the highest scholastic standing.

Two outstanding floriculture students will be selected to receive the Alice Eastwood award of $100.

Veterans' Monthly Reports Due June 3

Dates for filing the May monthly report for veterans has been announced by Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of Veteran Affairs, to be May 31 to June 3.

Veterans were urged by Dunn to sign a transfer transcript if they plan to enter another college in the fall.

Veterans who encounter difficulties during June and July will be able to consult Dunn in his office, as it will be open in those months.

Soph King, Queen Petitions Due

Petitions for the title of Sophomore King and Queen are due this Friday at 3 p.m.

Completed petitions may be turned in either to Joe Graham, Sophomore president, or class vice-president Lois Mantel. They can be found in Building 2 or the coffee shop on the west campus.

Crowning of the King and Queen will take place at the Sophomore Ball. The semi-formal dance will take place on Saturday, June 11, at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. Paul Law and his orchestra will provide the music.

Candidates for the regal titles were warned that their completed petitions must contain the signatures of the candidate, the group sponsor, and Dean of Women Mary Golding. Also in the petition must be a picture of the candidate, preferably 5 by 7 inches in size.

Winners of previous contests of this type are not eligible and all contestants must be sophomores.

Election of the King and Queen will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, June 8 and 9, with voting to be open to all Associated Students.

Forum Out June 7; Magazine Features Humor And Satire

Release date for Forum, the college's traditional literary magazine, is Tuesday, June 7, according to sponsor Eugene Connolly. The magazine will emphasize humorous and satirical writing this semester.

Staff positions will be given as rewards to those students showing the most interest in compiling and editing the magazine. Edwin Brush was elected editor-in-chief at the beginning of the semester, and Alan Wendroff is managing editor.

Members of the Forum Club read all of the 92 manuscripts submitted at least once. Letter grades were assigned, and results were tallied in the same manner as a student figures his grade point average.

The cover, which will be in keeping with this college's 20th anniversary, was designed by Dick Young, winner of Golden Gate College's cover contest.

Ad Art Contest Winners

DICK YOUNG, first place winner in Golden Gate College's catalogue-cover design contest, admires his prize-winning design, held by Nagel T. Miner of Golden Gate College. Looking on are the second and third place winners, Robert Wong and Ed Schoenstein. The three winners are advertising art students here.

Northern California Job Outlook Good; Most Demand For Majors In Business, Scientific Fields

June graduates who have received training in specialized fields will find excellent employment opportunities in the Northern California labor market this year, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

"With the expansion of business and industry during the past year," Amori declared, "many new positions have been established. Students who are trained in engineering, sales, accounting, chemistry, secretarial employment, office machines and transportation will have no difficulty in obtaining employment."

Defense industries, many of which are located in the San Francisco Bay Area, are in special need of engineers, laboratory technicians and individuals with special aptitudes in mathematics and science. The salaries range from $275 to $350 per month, and both male and female applicants are needed.

"Young men with business administration backgrounds and specialization in accounting and sales are also in demand," Amori confirmed, adding that there are excellent openings in petroleum, foods and insurance.

Two year majors in chemistry, engineering and mathematics are in constant demand," Amori said, "both in private industry and governmental agencies."

Stenographers, typists and office machine operators are especially wanted. Depending upon training, previous experience and special aptitudes, the salaries range from $300 to $300 per month.

In summarizing, Amori said that potential graduates interested in permanent employment should file their applications immediately at the placement office which is located in Building 2 on the west campus.

Clippings Requested For Veep Handbook

Dance bids, drama programs and newspaper publicity clippings are needed for the Associated Student vice-president's handbook, according to Marion Cheader, this semester's AS vice-president.

Students holding these items are requested to bring them to The Guardsman office, S304, or to Miss Cheader in the AS office in Building 2.

Boxing Tourney Deadline Today

Today is the deadline for entries in the semi-annual Intra-Mural Boxing Tourney held here, with the finals of the tournament to be held next Tuesday, May 31, at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Roy Diederichsen, head boxing coach here.

Weight divisions will be 118 pounds, 127 pounds, 132 pounds, 139 pounds, 146 pounds, 156 pounds, 169 pounds, 178 pounds and heavyweight. Any beginning fighter may sign up with Diederichsen in the gymnasium, and may weight in tomorrow.

Four members of the varsity boxing team are handling the boxing classes now taking place. Ted Floyd and Wayne McFadden are working with the Monday-Wednesday groups and Ken Turner and Al Scialanca are coaching the Tuesday - Thursday classes.

There will be two bouts between members of the varsity team, in addition to the finals in each division, Diederichsen said. The added bouts on the May 31 card will feature Mike Hueman vs. Roscoe Jones and Herb Davis vs. Scialanca.

Medals will be awarded to tournament winners and runners-up in each weight division.

College Nursing Program Clarified By Administration

Continuation of the college's nurse training program was confirmed yesterday by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, despite misconceptions created when Children's Hospital announced discontinuation of its nurse training program.

The college program will continue with its one-year program, which includes anatomy, physiology, microbiology, nutrition, psychology, public health, and first aid. A course in history of nursing is planned for Spring, 1956.

Hospitals for which the college offers the first academic year of nurse training are Mount Zion, Mary's Help, St. Luke, St. Francis, French and Franklin.

During the coming academic year, Dr. Luckmann said, the Board of Directors of nurse training at Children's Hospital will study the problems involved in conducting their present program, and may work out a suitable solution toward which the college could make a valuable contribution.

Students enrolling in the nurse training program here must also meet college requirements, namely six units of English and four units of American History and institution.

H&R Society Holds Dinner, Dance At San Mateo Friday

In honor of its graduating fourth semester students, the college Hotel and Restaurant Society will hold its annual spring formal dinner dance this Friday, May 27, at the Chukker Restaurant in San Mateo.

Prime Ribs of Beef and Lobster Thermidor will be served as entrees at the banquet-dance which has been tradtionally held for each spring graduating class. A similar affair is held for the fall graduates each year.

The dance will begin at 8:30 p.m. and last until about 1 o'clock the following morning, with music provided by Phil Bovero and his orchestra, according to H&R Society President Bob Schofield.

As a part of the 20th Anniversary Festival, the H&R Society entered a float bearing the society shield on either side and displaying as its main feature an oversize replica of a cake.

A booth was also sponsored by the society in the west campus fountain. Hot dogs, coffee, cake and chili were served.

Speech Contest Has Diplomatic Theme

Impromptu talks concerning American Foreign Policy will highlight the theme of the semi-annual alumni speech award contest being held this Friday during college hour, 10:40 a.m.

Winner of the contest will have his name added to the gold trophy bearing the names of all previous winners of the event. All students interested in participating are urged by Thomas H. Dutcher, sponsor of the group, to sign up in Room C335B before tomorrow.

Dutcher, a political science instructor here, was recently chosen president of the Forensic Association, which finds its membership in ten colleges in his area. The election took place at San Jose State College.

Margaret B. Owen of New York holds the women's professional typing speed record with a total of 170 words a minute with no errors.

A Cappella Performs For Kiwanis May 31

Following a special invitation, the college's A Cappella Choir will perform for the Ladies' Day Luncheon of the Downtown Kiwanis Club at the Fairmont Hotel next Tuesday, May 31, at 12:30 p.m.

On Wednesday, June 1, the group will hold its semi-annual banquet at 5 p.m. in Building 2.

Installations of new officers to be chosen in next week's choir elections will take place at the banquet, with a new president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, concert manager, publicity manager, two property managers and two librarians to be presented.

General Alumni Meeting Called For June 6

Election of four new directors, annual election of officers and the distribution of an Alumni Bulletin are on the agenda of the general meeting of the college Alumni Association to be held on Monday, June 6, at 7:30 p.m. in Building 2 on the west campus, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here.

Edwin Frediani, president of the Alumni Association, has called for the meeting of the entire membership in accordance with the alumni constitution, Amori declared. Several candidates have filed to compete for the four director positions to complete the 16 member Board of Directors. The director's term of office is for four years.

As soon as the directors have been selected, the annual election of officers will be held for President, Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer.

Among the candidates for the officer posts are Bill Boldenweck, Pete Chevrier, Don Constine, George DeLrioste, Maury Schwarz, Ralph Vetterlein and Robert Weingardner.

Also on the agenda is an Alumni Bulletin to be published by the Publications Committee. It will consist of items of general interest to all the alumni, and the first issue will be distributed at this meeting.

Vetterlein, AS President here in 1953 and at the University of California in 1954 and currently Production Manager of George Reproductions Company in San Francisco, is the Chairman of the Publications Committee. He is assisted by Bill Boldenweck, AS President last semester.

Schwarz, AS President in 1936 and presently the managing-owner of the Bridge and Rio Theaters in San Francisco, is the chairman of the membership promotion committee. Working with him are Boldenweek, Pete Chevrier, AS President in 1931, and Don Constine, editor Guardsman in 1943 and currently an attorney with the U. S. Attorney General's office in San Francisco.

Independent Sweep Overpowers IFC As Voters Choose Lombard, Cirimele, Batmale To Top Jobs

By Gary Alexander

Winning a large percentage of the 504 votes cast, executive officers for next semester's Associated Student offices, running independently and led by Dean Woods, AS president-elect, were chosen here May 25 and May 26 by AS voters.

With a ballot count of 306, Woods, an Independent, gained a 126 vote victory over Inter-Fraternity Council nominee Paul Ortiz, who had 180 votes in his favor for the AS presidency.

The deciding margin of votes narrowed in the race for the office of AS vice-president and saw Lee Carol Lombard, Independent, win with a vote of 197 over two other candidates. Losing to Miss Lombard were Tookie Radillo, IFC candidate with 148 votes; and Earl Cabriaha, Independent, who gained a vote of 146.

Another executive position which had three aspirants, Associated Men Student president, was won by Bill Cirimele, Independent, with 215 votes. Vic Hebert, IFC candidate, followed behind Cirimele by netting a vote of 142 while the second runner-up, Emery LeBonville, Indepeudent, polled 120 votes.

Barbara Batmale, Independent, who won the office of Associated Women Student president with a vote of 307, had the largest margin of votes over a rival candidate, Joyce Weaver, IFC nominee, lost with 178 votes, 127 less than Miss Batmale.

For the Sophomore president office, IFC's candidate Bob Johnson, who ran uncontested, gained a 429 vote of confidence. The vote Johnson received was the highest that any aspirant to office acquired.

The second largest vote amassed was by IFC's candidate Don Garrison, who tallied a 415 vote of confidence for the office of Freshman president.

In the race for Sophomore seats on Student Council the margin of victory narrowed with the voting becoming close. Of the seven council members-elect, five are Independent and two are IFC candidates.

Marilyn Sicotte led the Independents for the Sophomore seats with a vote of 322. The other Independents were, in order of descending numbers of votes, Jean Vachon (306), Robert Frick (257), Wayne McFadden (248), and Rose Thurmond (247).

IFC nominees elected as Sophomore members of Student Council were Judy Wilson with a vote of 288, and Bob Bliss with 254 votes.

Only one of the defeated candidates for Sophomore seats was an Independent. Robert Tucker, Independent, lost with 242 votes. The losing IFC nominees were Arleigh Greenblat (235), followed by Noel Vivion (224), Walt Mortenson (195) and Charles Smith (178).

Uncontested IFC nominees for Freshman seats on Student Council were elected by AS voters. Barbara Firpo led the vote with 391 and following her were Annette D'Atri (389), Percy Everhart (388), Eleanor Benner (383), Darlene Reitz (382), and Pat Frodsham (378). The three amendments were passed.

Friday Double College Hour Changed To June 2

The double college hour scheduled for Friday, June 3, has been changed to tomorrow beginning at 10:40 a.m. and lasting to 12:10 p.m., eliminating the 11 a.m. classes, Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semi-profession Courses, said Friday.

Friday, June 3, will be a regular class day because of the shift, and no college hour is scheduled for Friday, June 10, to conform to college policy of having no activities in the week before final examinations.

'65 Commuter Will Ride In Lap Of Luxury

By Bev Swope

PROBLEMS of the Bay Area commuter are numerous and nerve wracking. Before he enters college doors at 8 a.m. on a weekday morning, he has either battled a ~~nose-to-fender line of autos, or he~~ has been jostled from front to rear on a rocking Muni bus.

The commuter of 1955 might have to face these difficulties in order to attend a superior educational institution, but the commuter of 1965 will ride in the lap of luxury, or so says the Bay Area Rapid Transit Commission.

In a recent article in a San Francisco daily newspaper, the commission boasted that in ten years, with adequate funds it could make it possible for a person living in Orinda (listen to this, Dean Browne) to commute to the city in 20 minutes. Also, 42 minutes would be all the time it would take to make it into town from Palo Alto, not to the depot mind you, but to within three blocks of the required destination.

One appealing feature of this rapid transit system, in our opinion, is the frequent service during peak hours. Every minute and a half a sleek, 12 car train would roll up to the station, deposit and pick up passengers in a short 20 seconds, and then zoom off again at a speed soon reaching 70 miles per hour.

This idea has great potential. Just think, it would be impossible to be late for those oh-so-early morning classes—no black marks in the little white book for 10 o'clock scholars and no class-wide sighs of disappointment for tardy instructors.

The two-minute service would also eliminate the 11 o'clock grouch or breakfast skipper, because even if he oversiept the traveling transit would get him to college on time and with breakfast.

As for beauty, comfort and modern design, the transit cars are guaranteed to have everything. Splashy colors and large windows with purposely plotted scenic views make the ride enjoyable; while seeing-eye electronic devices at central offices many miles away control the trains.

Residential train stations would have to be established, but there would be ample parking space around them.

But then we might have another problem. With City College so accessible, the enrollment would undoubtedly quadruple, and our classrooms would overflow with knowledge seekers.

Still progress must go on, and today's plans promise tomorrow's commuters unparalleled convenience.

Student Council Holds Banquet Dinner Tonight

Present Associated Student officers will welcome newly elected officers at the semi-annual Student Council dinner to be held tonight at the California Hotel, O'Farrell and Taylor streets, Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, announced recently.

Admission to the affair is estimated at about $1.50, Miss Cheader said, and AS members are invited to attend.

Vandals In Library Ruin Reference Material; College's Open Stack System In Jeopardy Through Abuse

Vandalism has sprung up in the college library, according to recent investigation by Clement Skrabak, library staff member here, with students tearing pages from the Book Review Digest and the bound reference magazines and razoring out sections of an encyclopedia set.

This destruction of reference material, Skrabak declared, is the first appearance of vandalism since the library moved from its Science Building quarters to Cloud Hall.

The library is the largest and most complete two-year college library in California and the only college library in the Bay Area operated on the honor code, Reference rooms in the library are unsupervised, leaving the student free to take notes and study. Few other libraries in the state offer such complete reference material, he said.

The volumes that have been mutilated are irreplaceable, and such destruction prevents other students from obtaining material. Skrabak added that since the library staff has to go through much red tape to obtain these bound volumes, replacement of the destroyed ones is virtually impossible.

There is no excuse for this vandalism, he emphasized, and students who resort to this method of obtaining reference material are ruining library privileges for the rest of the student body.

Commencement Committee Names Student Speakers

Margaret Shour and Norbert Nizze were chosen as speakers to represent the graduates at the 20th annual commencement exercises to be held Friday, June 17, in Riordan auditorium. The pair was selected at a meeting of the commencement committee held last week, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman of the committee.

Miss Shour is a graduate of Polytechnic high school and is majoring in Letters and Sciences here. Nizze is a graduate of Fichte high school in Berlin, Germany. He is a business major.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will preside at the activities and will present the Associate in Arts degrees to the graduates.

The program will include addresses by Mrs. George A. Hindley, president, Board of Education, and Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent, San Francisco Public Schools.

Presentation of candidates for degrees will be made by Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction. Scholastic awards will be presented by Jack Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare, and Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus, will make the presentation of the President's Award Plaque, service awards.

Selections by the A Cappella choir and by the college concert band are also included in the program.

Spring Graduates Assemble Tuesday In Student Union

First activity to be held in the new Student Union building will be the pre-commencement assembly, which is called for next Tuesday, June 7, at 11 a.m. in the cafeteria, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Jack Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare, will preside at the meeting and Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, will extend greetings to the graduates and will present the University of California scholarship awards.

Recipients of University of California scholarship awards are Grace Finegnarl, State of California award, $800; Martha Goldsmith, Alumni award, $300; Wing Lee, the Rose Sternheim scholarship, $300, and Marian McTigue, the Honorary award which carries no stipend.

Don Jensen, president of the Cloud Foundation, will name and present to one man and one woman student the Dr. Archibald J. Cloud scholarships. The Cloud scholarship awards each winner $50.

John Stafford, sponsor of the Chinese Students Club, will name and make the CSC awards. One man and one woman of Chinese descent will each receive $50.

Dean Golding will name and present to one outstanding woman student the Dougherty scholarship of $25, which is given by the Faculty Wives Association.

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, will name and present to the winners the Graduating class of '54 scholarships.

Anka Perisich, business education instructor here, will address the graduates on The Significance of Graduating.

Housing Available To Early Applicants

Living quarters for out-of-town students are available for those who apply early, according to an announcement from the dean of men's office.

Nearly 100 students need accommodations, while more than 150 persons have offered housing. Unfortunately, some of the rooms advertised are in such remote locations that they would be impractical to rent. Also some of the other rooms available, some of which are completely furnished, are so expensive that few students could afford them.

August 25 to September 10 has been selected as the favorable period to apply for living accommodations, Dean Edwin C. Browne declared.

Veterans who want housing in Hurley Village will have to apply early because the housing units in the village are being decreased.

Time Schedules List Late Classes

For the first time in recent years, afternoon lecture classes will be held between 3 and 4 o'clock next semester, bringing lecture facilities here into full use.

Time schedules denoting the hours at which all lecture and laboratory classes and conferences will meet next semester are currently being prepared, and will be printed during the summer. They will be available to students at the Ramporium on or about September 1, according to Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

In previous years, the schedules have sold at an average of 15 cents before the actual time of registration, although they are free when registration begins.

An addition of more members to the faculty will be made to accommodate the constantly increasing enrollment here, Dr. Luckmann added, and when the late afternoon lecture classes begin, use of lecture classrooms will have reached the optimum 35 hours per week.

Editorial

No Room Here For Vandalism

VANDALISM in Cloud Hall library proves that, unfortunately there are students here who have neither the intelligence nor manners which college students should display.

The recent mutilation of expensive volumes in the library is inexcusable. Undoubtedly this defacing was done by students intent upon their own wants. They do not realize that a continuance of this vandalism can greatly curtail library privileges for both the offenders and the student body.

This is one of the few colleges that allows students such free use of reference facilities. Many schools permit only those students with high grade point averages to handle valuable reference material, and then under faculty supervision.

Our privileges are now in danger of being revoked. Because of the selfishness of a few, the administration may be forced to put these volumes under lock and key.

If the stupid actions of a few are to hamper many, these actions must be stopped. There can be no room for vandalism among mature and intelligent college students.

Student Government Officers Deserve Backing Of College

THE Associated Students have elected their officers for the Fall semester, and as usual it is a good group. Now it is up to the students to give their new leaders a chance to prove just what they can or cannot do.

Too often student officers are blasted as poor leaders before they are given any chance to do anything, good or bad. In most cases, the few who take the negative stand are just the ones who care little or nothing about student government and, sooner than participate or attempt to better college leadership, they merely sit on the sidelines and scoff.

To do any kind of a good job, the student officers must receive the support of the students. Without this support, nothing can be accomplished and the administration is caught in the middle—they have no support to plan student activities, and without a full program of actvities, they are in line for even more derogatory remarks.

It is quite true that there are cases of mis-government, although the college has been fortunate to have few of them in the past. If, in the course of the semester, one or more of the elected or appointed officers fails to do his job or, worse, uses his position to the detriment of the students, then he should be condemned. Not before!

These officers have already been elected. Nothing can change that now. The fair and necessary thing to do is to support the elected officers, whether or not you approve of them. There is no room for adverse criticism at this early date.

We are quite sure that any helpful criticism would be welcomed by the members of student government. Helpful suggestions are always welcome, but derogatory criticism for the sake of criticizing is unfair, unsportsmanlike, and certainly does nothing to better the situation.

The officers have been elected, by the majority, and nothing will change the results. Now every student of the college must forget personal and political differences and back the new student government if anything constructive is to be accomplished.

Four Reach Miss SF Semi-Finals

COLLEGE SEMI-FINALISTS in the current Miss San Francisco contest are Darolyn Dannely, Jane Lutt, Melanie Mead and Joy Frazier (left to right, above). They will compete with 12 other girls this Saturday, June 4, at Basilone Hall, Treasure Island. Among the 12 other semi-finalists are Julie Honan and Dee Hill, two former co-eds at the college. From the semi-finalists nine finalists will be selected. The final winner will be chosen June 15 and will represent San Francisco in the Miss California competition in Santa Cruz, June 24, 25 and 26. Contestants in the Miss San Francisco contest will not be judged on beauty alone. Selection will be based on a talent competition, appearance in bathing suits, and appearance in evening gowns.—Guardsman photo by W. N. Brunson.

ENGLISH INSTRUCTOR, explaining new grading system as he handed quiz papers back in Cloud Hall class room: "Since it was impossible to grade the tests on an 'A' to 'F' basis I've employed a 'plus or minus' system—a plus means good, a plus and a minus means average, and a minus alone means poor.

"However, in correcting the papers I underlined some of the plusses and these are not to be confused with minuses. Also some of the plus minuses are underlined, the first mark being the minus." Any questions? He announced that the tests would not count heavily.

OTIS-MAGIC ELEVATOR: A college visitor walking down a third-floor Science Building corridor last week stopped short when the elevator door on that floor opened and out walked several instructors and four or five students with an assortment of cages, carts and assorted machinery—a group that would have crowded a small classroom.

Slightly shaken, the observer investigated more closely and discovered the secret of the five by five elevator: It opens two ways, of course, and serves as a handy shortcut between the biology lab and the hallway.

FRESHMAN DOG WALKERS, please note: A while back there was reported here a story about a Stonestown gent who wanted a college student to walk his pedigreed dog, one dollar per hour for one hour a day. Just any student wouldn't do, for first the applicant had to be interviewed by the dog—to make sure their personalities would "blend."

The same fellow called the placement office again last week, said the walker hired had been satisfactory, but that he was graduating in June. He now wants a freshman student who will stay for two years as walker—so that the dog will not have to relearn himself to a new one each semester.

JOAN RETTUS, a 20-year-old L&S student bound for Chico State, caused a minor sort of sensation during the vote-counting for the AS elections last Friday.

Before the election Miss Rettus, reportedly feeling that something was lacking in the presidential candidate's campaign platforms, outlined a new and highly novel AS card plan that she felt should be included in the candidates' promises. Final tally: Woods 306; Ortiz, 180; Rettus 1 (a write-in).

Personalities Clash In Academy Award Flicker

By Bob Chrisman

THE Country Girl presents an interesting study of strength and weakness in three central characters portrayed by William Holden, Grace Kelly and Bing Crosby.

Crosby is cast as Frank Elgin, an alcoholic, washed-up actor who is needed by the director, Holden, for the lead in a musical drama. Elgin becomes the focal point of the conflict between the director and Grace Kelly, who portrays Elgin's strong-willed wife. Their problem is to get Elgin to have enough confidence in himself and his ability to accept responsibility. Thusly he would quit drinking and become a reliable actor and a real man, rather than a jellyfish dominated by his wife.

Although their desire is to have Elgin "stand on his own two feet," they have different attitudes toward Elgin. Holden thinks he is an honest, timid man who has been browbeaten by his wife into his present low state. Mrs. Elgin refers to him as a "cunning drunkard" who is afraid of responsibility and employs clever, devious methods to avoid it.

The clash is between Holden, a strong-willed director who is competing for dominance over Elgin with an equally aggressive Mrs. Elgin, who seems to be perpetually tearing down the actor's confidence, acting more like a strict mother than a mate. This is where the element of strength and weakness enters. As a man, Elgin should be dominant, act with confidence, and have the courage of his convictions. Instead, he is weak, lacking in confidence, allowing himself to be dominated by others; he seems to take perverse pleasure in being bullied. As a consequence, his wife must be the protector and guardian, a role which Elgin should have assumed.

As his director, Holden is searching for the reason behind Elgin's weakness, and fixes the blame on Mrs. Elgin, who appears to be a domineering wife who has beaten Elgin down to the state of a spineless alcoholic because of envy of his talent.

The battle commences between the director and Mrs. Elgin for domination of Elgin; and the two approach the problem of rehabilitating him as an actor and a man from the two different standpoints. Their subsequent feud ends in infatuation for each other.

Actually, there is no love on the part of Elgin's wife for the director. She finds in the tough, hard-driving director qualities which are completely opposite from her husband's. He is a completely, dominant male who beats down the stilted strength which she must assume as Elgin's guardian, because as a woman, she has a desire to be controlled and mastered.

In a sense, however, the director's complete strength, which makes him unneedful of any outside sources of strength, is a weakness. He is not as lovable a man as the weaker, more human Elgin. This quality denies him chances for being really loved, because he does not need a woman's love as much as Elgin.

On the other hand, Elgin's weakness is a form of strength, because he is ever haunted by the spectre of fear, even when he is successful. This weakness makes him more lovable, proving his need for the affection of other people.

This movie shows that strength is self-sustaining, and that conversely, fear is self-sustaining. The basic element of fear in Elgin is ever-present, and will beat down his confidence at the first opportunity, while the director's strength feeds itself; it is reflected in his work and in his private life, as is Elgin's weakness.

The rehabilitation of Elgin as an actor makes him a more confident, aggressive man, winning his wife's admiration for him as a man and a dominant protector, the natural role of the male.

The action of this film never lags. Its strength is in the characterization, with setting secondary to close-up studies of the actors; there is a clever flashing of light and shadow across their countenances to heighten the effect of the actor's portrayal.

Top-flight performances by the three central characters are instrumental in the excellence of this movie. Holden and Miss Kelly turn in better performances than Crosby, whose portrayal seems studied and less spontaneous than the acting of Miss Kelly and Holden.

Blackboard Jungle Riot Of Vivid Color In Cloud Hall Classrooms

By Emil Portale

It seems everybody wants to get into the act! We have green toothpaste, blue Cheer, flair-fashioned Dodges, multicolored Martians, beige band-aids, Rainier in jubilee cans and Cherry Pink and Apple Blossom White—so, but don't look now, Cloud Hall's blackboards aren't black.

New splashings on Cloud Hall's walls resemble more the pot of uranium at the end of the rainbow than places to use hard-earned taxpayers' chalk. Even the colorblind student is shocked when he is confronted by a grizzly green, a ludicrous loganberry, or a fire and ice flamingo (black) board upon entering a sleepy 8 a.m. class. If they have no other use, these remnants from compatible-color TV serve to keep a student awake in the unearthly morning hours.

It seems that there is conspiracy on all sides to keep a Cloud Hall class on its toes. In one of those rarely overcrowded morning classes there is unfailingly only one chair remaining for the inevitable straggler.

Earthshaking as this may not be, more often than not the chair is one of those especially made for southpaws. The question arises then, whether it is right to write on a lefty's chair or to write on a righty's if he were a lefty, and would it be wrong if he writes on a left-handed desk which he shouldn't have gotten in the first place if he had stood in bed? This situation creates a psychological manifestation of frustration and brings about a mental block which culminates in confusion and indecision.

So, it must be warned that if a student prefers to be well adjusted and to live happily ever after, he must not look at the black, taupe, beige boards in Cloud Hall and not sit in left-handed seats because it would be wrong to write in the wrong chair when the price of bleached rice in outer Mongolia is 34 rubles a pound.

Culinary Talent Discovered In Cooking Contest

PROOF IN THE EATING—A few participants in the May 20 finals of a contest to find the "Foremost Home Economics Student in Northern California Schools," held at City College, sample their entrees hot from the oven. Senior high school girls representing 27 counties in the northern part of the state took part. Besides the title, they were "cooking" for a $1,000 and a $600 home economics scholarship to be awarded by the contest sponsor, Foremost Dairies. Above, left to right, are Joan Clark of Yolo County; Marjorie Noble of San Benito County; Carolyn Weisgrom of Tehama County; Sandra Rugh of Monterey County; Yuri Saito of Santa Clara County; and Sherry Simpson of Amador County.

High School Seniors Win Scholarships In College Event

The college played host to 27 senior high school girls representing as many counties in the northern part of the state May 20 as a contest to find the "Foremost Home Economics Student in Northern California Schools" reached its final phase.

Besides "cooking" for the title, the girls whipped up their best Chicken Souffle in hopes of being awarded scholarships to carry on studies in the home economics field.

Winners were Marjorie Panter, a student at Glenn County High School, who won a $1,000 scholarship award; and Alice Missling, a student at Berkeley High School, who won a $600 award.

The two girls will travel to Sacramento within the next two weeks to receive their prizes at an official awards ceremony. Other finalists will receive a certificate of merit attesting to their proficiency in the cooking arts as well as a merchandise award.

Phi Beta Rho Takes Festival Honors

Legs and wishing wells helped win a double victory for Phi Beta Rho sorority at the college's 20th Anniversary Festival held May 20.

The sorority placed first in the float competition with its depiction of a wishing well conveying hopes for a "Happy 20th" to the college.

Best booth trophy also went to Phi Beta Rho for its "garter toss" concession. The booth consisted of a backdrop on which were painted three dancing girls. Legs, supplied by sorority members, added a realistic touch and a most compelling target for the tossed garters.

Beta Tau fraternity placed second in the float contest with its portrayal of a familiar backhills scene, titled "20 years of progress."

Awards were announced and presented by Bob Johnson, Associated Men Student president, at a dance held in the auditorium during the celebration.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

EASILY the most determining factor in the success of any organization is the effectiveness of that group's publicity, and for a conference as outstanding as the Big Eight, this important facet is being almost completely ignored.

Any league that has produced such sports stars as Ollie Matson in football, Bob Matheny in basketball, Pancho Segura in tennis, and Joe Kirrene in baseball, deserves to be in the public eye, and the Big Eight certainly fits into that class.

It seems to us that $500 per year, or less than $65 from each school in the conference, would be a nominal fee to pay a publicity man for his services in squeezing the Big Eight into the spotlight with the much-ballyhooed Pacific Coast Conference and the larger independent univpralties.

The job would demand time commensurate with the fee paid to the press agent, or only a few hours per week around the sports year. For the time and money spent, this conference would reap benefits far beyond its present scope.

First and foremost, the welfare not only of the Big Eight, but of all other two-year college conferences as well, would be furthered greatly. This would be achieved through pointing out to prospective university candidates that the two-year college is not just a stepping stone to glory somewhere else, but a proving ground, and a highly competitive one, for all sports aspirants.

As soon as the two-year college is raised to the point where it means something besides making up grades to the student, a whole new level of sports success will be on the horizon. Increased interest means increased crowds at sports events, a happy situation for the players, coaches, and students in the long run. Increased crowds mean more money in the rather thin tills of the small colleges, and there is no need to express the kind of situation that breeds.

This is not to say that the two-year colleges are dollar hungry groups, just waiting for a nice, juicy fullback to come along to fatten the pocketbook. On the contrary, the small schools only want the breaks in publicity which they deserve, ample notices of their sports and other activities in the papers and over the air.

These breaks can be given only with the aid of money, however, so the little colleges are going to have to ante their share of the dough into the kitty if they wish to move forward.

We realize that most of the Big Eight colleges, with their limited budgets, are going to wince if and when this publicity fee business is brought up at the yearly meeting in June, but if they expect to prosper in the future, we believe that the colleges must be willing to risk a few bucks this year so that success might ultimately be assured.

Let's plant our crop now, so that the harvest may be reaped as soon as possible.

Football Signup Begins Tomorrow

There will be a football signup in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium tomorrow, June 2, at 3 p.m., according to head Ram football coach Grover Klemmer.

All men at the college interested in participating in football in the fall are requested to attend, Klemmer said, and movies of last year's University of California-University of Southern California football game will be shown.

The 1954 Ram gridders went into the season's final game against Santa Rosa with only a tie blotting their record and a strong chance for the Junior Rose Bowl bid, but the Bearcubs edged through to a 14-12 win to knock the Rams out of the title.

Klemmer emphasized that practice will start about two weeks before classes begin in the fall, and for that reason this spring meeting is important. A strong nucleus from last year's team will probably return, but virtually every position is now open.

Bob Hope was out-wisecracked in a visit to the camp of the Cleveland Indians. Early Wynn, Tribe hurler and a holdout, gave Sir Robert some sage advice. "If you want to see a good joke," the athlete quipped, "just take a peek at the contract the Indians are offering me."

College Athletes Honored At Banquet In Campus Cafeteria Tomorrow; Sixty-Nine To Receive Block Awards

Sixty-nine of this college's most proficient athletes will receive awards at the semi-annual Block SF banquet tomorrow in the west campus cafeteria at 6 p.m., Bill Fisher, sponsor of the athletic honor society here, announced last Friday.

Letters for the best spring sports participants and trophies for the most valuable player of each sport will be presented. Spring sports included in the activity are baseball, basketball, boxing, golf, tennis and track.

RALPH HILLSMAN will lead a mighty prof aggregation against the sophs tomorrow.

Receiving awards in baseball will be Jim Candler, Sam Chicos, Ken Dito, Jim Doherty, Steve Gallagher, Bill Johncoxs, Stan Johnson, Ed Kraft, Bob Manuini, Lee Meckey, David Negherbon, Larry Nissim, Jim Poppin, John Pulli, Don de Surville, Ray Warman and Bob Zucca.

Basketballers stepping to the stand for awards will be Ed Atkins, Don Brooks, Dave Davis, Theoplis Dunn, Sam Gellepes, Flemen Hardy, Doug Hom, Norman King, John Rudometkin, Ike Walker and Desha Williams.

Five pugilists will be honored: Mike Huffman, Roscue Jones, Wayne McFadden, Al Schianca and Ken Turner.

The quintet of divoteers receiving awards are Harlan Hayakawa, Jim Carlisle, Dick Derry, Diek Kramer and Art Pira.

From netdom, Lee Anderson, Bob Chrisman, Les Jacobson, Alan Matsumoto and Don Wing will pick up blocks.

California's third best track squad will receive well earned awards. John Apperson, Bob Arterberry, Bob Atkins, Bill Canihan, Frank Carroll, John Connell, Hal Crockford, Jack Egan, Bob Frick, Sam Fukuda, Harold Hill, Jim Kunihun, Norman King, Ray MacIntyre, Dennis Mooreland, Martin Morales, Will Pinkston, Clint Redus, John Rudometkin, Kent Scovil, Jimmy Smith, Henry Stroughter, Bill Tilson, Medford Todd, Tal Webb and Clay Williams will receive the awards.

Admission is limited to lettermen and those guests receiving special invitations.

Sophs, Profs In Softball Battle Here Tomorrow

An epic battle to be fought with softballs on the football field tomorrow during a double college hour starting at 10:30 a.m., will ultimately decide the place of youth and age in the stately college halls, when the grayheard profs oppose "them sophomore whippersnappers." Eleven o'clock classes will not meet, administration officials said.

Probably anticipating a disastrous routing, patriarchal Ralph Hillsman, the prof coach who calls the sophs "19 cent hamburgers," said, "We haven't lost in nine years, and we're getting pretty old."

Toeing the slab for the profs will be Roy Diederichsen, while Joe Amori will receive his underhanded delliveries.

Although Hillsman has not released the official lineup as yet, it is rumored by spies who have attended the prof training camp located in the faculty dining room, that the "Grand Old Men" of baseball will offer up "Jolting" Jack Brady, "Bashing" Lou Batmale, Alex "The Great" Schwarz, Bill "Sinker Ball" Fischer, "Clouting" Grover Klemmer, and "Titanic" Thomas Dutcher.

The Sophs will retaliate with Al "Monster" Moss, Stan "Slugger" Lee, "Gorgeous" Joe Graham, Al "King Kong" Kingston, "Luscious" Emery LeBonville, Don "Pops" Baker, Bill "Clutch" Clirimele, "Rapid" Robert Chrisman, Don "Basher" Baroni, and Bob "Jammer" Johnson.

Ram Netmen Take Fifth At Visalia

The Ram tennis squad racked up enough points in the California State tennis tournament to tie for fifth place. The tourney was held at Visalia on May 20 and 21, with Modesto coming out the victor.

In the first round, Les Jacobson defeated Jim Cooley of Pasadena City College, 6-4, 6-4, but lost in the second round, 6-1, 6-3, to net-rusher Ray Sampson of Modesto, who had won the Big Eight Conference Singles championship and the Northern California Regional Championship on successive weekends. In the doubles, Jacobson and Bob Chrisman lost to Jim Cooley and John Jett of Pasadena City College, 6-3, 6-4.

Last season the Ram squad, led by Bill Wright, tied for third place in the State tourney with Mount San Antonio College, as Modesto romped to the championship again, paced by nationally ranked Jerry Moss.

CLINT REDUS, state 120 yard high hurdles champion, runs through a practice heat. College Tracksters Have Proud Memories As Team Finishes Third In California Track Race

With the season finally tucked under their belts, Ram tracksters sit back and reminisce of conquests which have rocketed the group to the third rung of California trackdom. Edwards Stadium was the scene of the Rams' initial test, a three team contest, with the California Frosh and Oakland supplying the opposition. The Rams ran away from Oakland 98-17, but had to match wits with such stellar performers as Monte Upshaw and Leamon King and settled for a 76-65 setback.

On March 26 Santa Rosa's sun lovers were struck dumb when the Rams marched to a 73-49 triumph over the locals and routed San Mateo, the third corner of the triangular meet, 112-8.

Clint Redus cinched up his sixth straight win in the Ram-Stanford Frosh-West Contra Costa tussle on April 9. He surpassed both the college low and high hurdle records with times of :24.6 and :15.1, respectively. Menlo and East Contra Costa entered the meet just for the sake of safety in numbers. Needless to say, City College topped everybody by amassing 126½ points.

The following week in Sacramento the Rams were found playing villain to the home squad and Stockton. Redus added three more tape-breakers to his string, and Jack Egan marched up league with number three and four with victories in the shot put and discus. The Rams went away with 72 points to Sacramento's 57 and Stockton's 21.

Almost everyone went according to script on April 25 when the Rams grappled with Modesto for the league crown. Everyone, that is, except Pirate Ed Looper who adlibbed an upset victory in the low hurdles which provided Modesto with the push that sent them to a 64-58 win. Relibble Redus all but stifled a yawn as he picked up his fourth straight triple adding his 12th league win to an already impressive record.

In the first of post-season play, the Big Eight Meet, the Rams were for the initial time seriously considered underdogs. Displaying the punch that means survival in the long wars of the past two months, Redus captured the 100 and low and high hurdles, Henry Stroughter wrapped up the 880, Ray MacIntyre took the 220 and Egan won the discus event to help bring the title to the foggy towners.

Roy Burkhead's superior coaching was the basis for the team's success at Sacramento in the Northern California Championships.

Egan tossed his way to second in the discus, and MacIntyre turned up third and fourth in the 220 and 100, respectively. The Ram relay squad took place money in their event which qualified them for the State Meet a fortnight away.

The college thinclads appeared before 7,000 cinderfans in Modesto two weeks ago and scampered off with the third place spot in the State Championships. Redus ran off with high point laureis as he won the high hurdles, placed second in the lows, and finished fourth in the 100.

Egan turned up second in the discus, and MacIntyre rode home fourth and sixth in the 220 and 100 dashes, respectively. The relay squad finished sixth to Los Angeles City College's new national record timing of 3:16.

Fraternity Cage Championships Decided Tonight

The championship game of the Associated Student Night Basketball League will be played tonight in the men's gymnasium.

At press time, the four leading teams were Beta Phi Beta, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Zeta Phi Sigma and Beta Tau. Two of these quintets will battle for the title tonight.

The leading scorer in the league was Eugene Brown of Alpha Phi Epsilon with 108 points. Other top point makers were Don Baroni of Beta Phi Beta with 96 points, Mike Dunne of Zeta Phi Sigma with 90, and Joe Canepa of Beta Phi Beta with 80.

Two other intramural sports ended their season's activities during the last week. Completion of the Intramural Basketball League left the six team league with a tie for first place. The Trotters and Diablos, captained by Desha Williams and Theopolis Dunn, respectively, ended in a tie.

Intramural boxing finals were held last night. The winners were not known at press time. The finals were part of a new boxing league formed here by Coach Roy Diederichsen.

Ram Baseball Team Improved Over 1954 Club

One of the main reasons for the success of the 1955 Ram baseball squad was tremendous improvement in the hitting and fielding departments.

For nearly the entire season, the infield was composed of all new men, and the outfield situation was similar, with one exception. Outfielder Bob Mannini was the only returning player who was in the front line for the Rams in the past season.

The fielding picture was brightened considerably with the addition of Ed Kraft at the shortstop slot and Jim Candler at second base. Although being slowed down for some time with an arm injury, third sacker Jim Doherty closed with a rush to nail down the hot corner spot with fine fielding and good clutch hitting. Bob Zucca did exceptionally well at first base after changing over from the hot corner in mid-season.

Coach Bill Fischer recently had kind words to say about the improved play of Doherty. The Ram mentor was pleased with the way in which Doherty was able to make the play to his right, a difficult chance for any third sacker. A quick pair of hands is essential for success in the infield, and Fischer commented that the Mission High grad has the tools for such success.

Catcher Ken Dito gave a steady performance for the season behind the plate, and when in the batters' box made himself known as well. Dito's dependability had much to do with the overall steadiness of the hurlers and consequently achieved a valuable cohesion in the middle of the infield.

Jim Poppin split the catching chores with Dito for nearly half a season, but the final games of the Big Eight slate were played with Dito the first string receiver and the long-ball hitting Poppin in the outer garden.

Easily the most versatile of all the Rams was Stan Johnson, who performed well on the mound, in the outfield, and at first base when needed. Johnson's hefty .485 batting mark is a fitting exclamation mark to punctuate his other achievements.

Ironically, the one strong point of the 1954 nine was the one department in which this year's club was lacking in depth, the pitching staff. Southpaw Ray Warman was the most consistent hurler in the corps, and the versatile Johnson plus righthander Larry Nissim both showed to advantage.

Sparse as the hurling talent was, had it not been for a couple of sore arms on the staff at the end of the season, that disastrous playoff loss to West Contra Costa might have had a happier ending. The hard-throwing Johnson had beaten the Comets only a week before, and was slated to twirl the title decider, but came up with an aching arm to dampen City College hopes for victory. Reliefer Sam Chicos also had arm troubles in the closing days of the campaign to further the woes of the depleted staff.

Regardless of the sad sighs of what might have been, what did occur during 1955 on the diamond was quite pleasing to the Rams and equally distressing to their foes for the most part. With improvement on the hill and a new crop of players even half as good as the ones who came this season, the baseball future here looks bright indeed.

AS Executive Powers Gain Confidence Vote

After three unsuccessful attempts, the executive powers of the Associated Students finally won a vote of confidence.

Marion Cheader, AS vice-president, requested the vote of confidence for herself and AS President Al Kingston, as a matter of policy over the handling of the semesterly Student Council dinner.

"I felt that my executive powers as Vice-President had been usurped by members of the cabinet and the AS President was failing to back me up," Miss Cheader stated. "I asked for the vote, not because of petty, personal motives, but because I feel that the office of Vice-President should be protected for the future."

Nominations for the student performing the outstanding service, excluding AS officers and cabinet members, were opened. Receiving nominations were Carolyn Fisher, Bob Florer, Emery LeBonville, Janet Mowll, Joan Rettus and Bev Swope. The winner will be announced at the council dinner.

Bill Boldenweck, last semester's AS president, was also nominated, but asked that his name be withdrawn. Boldenweck stated that he felt that since he was a former AS president he should be ineligible.

"Social Committee has decided that although the 20th Anniversary Festival parade was a financial loss, the co-operation among the various campus organizations was unequaled," Miss Cheader reported. She also suggested that in the future the Social Committee, Rally Committee and the Club Activities Board work more closely in coordinating the student activities program.

Club Activities Board's request for an additional $40 for their budget was whittled down to $30 at the recommendation of Finance Chairman Bill Cirimele. The council voted to approve the addition after CAB Chairman Ed Dollard said that upon reconsideration the CAB would be able to get by on only $30.

Clarification of the proposed constitutional amendment to add the post of campus police chief to the cabinet was made by Al Niemi, parliamentarian, last week. Although not in the printed copies of the constitution, the title of campus police liaison officer has been in the constitution since its passage in June of 1953. The proposed amendment would merely be a rewording of the June '53 amendment.

Profit on the 20th Anniversary Festival was estimated at $1,000 by Bob Johnson, Associated Men Student president. He also announced that Phi Beta Rho sorority had won first place trophies for both their float and their booth.

Honorable mention went to Beta Tau fraternity for their float and booth, the Filipino Club's float and the Women's Athletic Association's booth.

"I was happy to see the large number of people giving the time and effort it took to make the festival a success," Johnson said in praise of the many participants.

PT&T Interviews Engineers Today

Graduating engineers will be interviewed for full time positions by R. Koncke, personnel director for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, today at 9 a.m. in the placement office, Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, announced yesterday.

This includes students who are graduating and majoring in electronics, radio, electrical and mechanical engineering, Amori said that the students have been notified.

William K. Mayo, engineering instructor here and the chairman of the engineering division, has served as the coordinator for the department. His staff consists of engineering instructors Angelo Bertucci, Rex F. Harris and Arley Laverne Tripp.

The employment opportunities for secretarial trainees will also be discussed by Frances Feehan. Miss Feehan is the personnel director of women for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company in San Francisco. She is working closely with the faculty members of the business department here, Amori declared.

The Heiress Opens Tomorrow Night

Little Theater Casts Cody In Star Role Of Two-Act Play

By Therese Brychta

The curtain goes up in the Little Theater here tomorrow night at 8:30 p.m. on the first performance of the drama department's final production of the season, The Heiress, a play in two acts.

Based on the novel, Washington Square, the drama tells the story of a plain young woman about to come into a large inheritance. When her domineering father learns that she is planning to elope with a man whom he suspects of seeking the girl's money, he devises a plan to test the young man's love by giving his daughter only a small pittance.

Cast in the starring role is Joyce Cody, who will portray Catherine Sloper. The leading male roles, that of Dr. Austin Sloper and Morris Townsend, will be played by Joe Bavaresco and Warren Smith, respectively. Others in the cast listed in order of appearance are Joy Frazier as Maria; Edwina Moquin as Lavinia Penniman; Barbara Raffaelli as Elizabeth Almond; Ron Boltz as Arthur Townsend; Carol Waugh as Marion Almond and Janet Sobieski as Mrs. Montgomery.

Production staff members for The Heiress include associate director, Frank Anderson; props, Jim Nichols; costumes, Miss Frazier; master carpenter, Ed Farnsworth; master electrician, Roy Maffei; decor, Gail Clark; program, Miss Waugh; promotion, Antoinette Mannina; stage manager and sound, Al Allen.

Performances of the play will continue through Saturday, June 4. Admission will be by Associated Student card to AS members, or $1.00 to non-members. Tickets may be purchased at the Student Bank or at the door.

Faculty Votes To Continue Coffee Hour; Barbecue And President's Luncheon Scheduled For June 2, 16

At a recent Faculty Association meeting, held in Room S204 and presided over by President Edward W. Larson, the student-faculty coffee hour was voted to be continued with the faculty bearing expenses.

Other events approved are the Faculty Association barbecue to be held at Flood Park tomorrow and the President's luncheon at Ricky's Red Chimney Thursday, June 16.

Three progress reports were given by faculty members Joseph Amori, Social Committee; Mervin R. Slosberg, Public Relations Committee; and John French, Student - Faculty Committee.

Larson opened the meeting with a discussion of the Faculty Association's nature and purpose which was, he said, "to study the needs and problems of the college; to aid in civic educational undertakings; to further educational advancement; to foster a spirit of friendship and loyalty among its members."

In the Public Relations department, Slosberg stressed the growing need of unity between students and faculty. He emphasized the necessity of continuing the semester-opening student rally and suggested that proposals to find better ways to establish more permanent student - faculty relations be sought.

"Never forget that credit given to students for initiating programs for increased student - faculty relations cannot be underestimated," Slosberg said in summary to his Public Relations report.

French, speaking on student-faculty relations, said the task of bringing together the student body and the faculty was tremendous.

"In a turn-out of approximately 2,000 students, serving coffee and doughnuts and trying to establish some bond of communication is difficult to both parties and we don't want the affair to degenerate into a meeting where faculty members 'jell' together while students 'clam' in a group to themselves, thus defeating the purpose of the coffee hour."

College Puts Nix On Pedal Pushers

A current trend among women students came under official ban last week when administrative officers frowned on the wearing of pedal-pushers on campus.

During last year's spring semester a virtual epidemic of pedal-pushers broke out, particularly during finals week, giving women students a resort appearance inappropriate to the campus, according to Dean of Women Mary Golding.

Slips of paper handed out at the beginning of this semester listed the code of dress appropriate for campus wear. The paper also stated that any woman student wearing pedal-pushers during finals week would be ineligible to take examinations.

Counselors Step Up High School Visits

With entrance examinations already administered to nearly 800 high school seniors, an increase of 200 over last year, four or more of the college's counselors will be visiting high schools every school day through June 3, to make programming interviews, Counselor Alva McMillan said yesterday.

So far, more than 700 postcards have been sent as a reminder to those students who have not yet made registration appointments, but who expect to return here next semester, McMillan asked that students not planning to return disregard the card notice.

Although appointments may be made throughout this semester, McMillan advised students to meet with their counselors before finals week.

Schedules, stating the dates and names of the counselors who will be absent from here, are now posted on the bulletin board in the counseling office, S136.

Between 3,600 and 3,700 returning students have already been programmed, and the counselors are about half finished with programming the high school seniors who have completed the entrance examination tests.

An additional 300 students are expected to take the next entrance tests Saturday, June 4. Other set dates are August 10, 24, and 31, with September 6 the last day scheduled before registration begins next fall.

Forum Magazine Released June 7

Release date for Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, is Tuesday, June 7, according to Catherine Connolly, Forum sponsor. The publication will be distributed to Associated Students at the Silver Pole in the Science Building, from a table in the courtyard and at the Ramporium. Charge for non-AS members will be 50 cents.

Satire, both on campus institutions and the world in general, is the keynote of the magazine, but some serious work will be included. The evils of the K ear and the serenade of the bells in college halls are among subjects discussed.

Members of the Forum Club who comprise the Editorial Committee are Al Argo, Don Ball, Helen Brewer, Sally Fleming, Virginia Keen, Mike Hallinan and Dorothy Rader. Edwin Brush has been serving as editor-in-chief this semester, while Alan Wendroff has been managing editor and Margaret Shour was advertising manager.

The cover, which is in keeping with the college's 20th anniversary celebration, was designed by Dick Young, winner of Golden Gate College's cover contest.

Stairway To Stars Chosen Theme For June 11 Soph Ball

Stairway to the Stars was chosen last week as the theme for the June 11 Sophomore Ball, marking the first time that the event has been given a title. The ball will be held in the Empire Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel.

Paul Law's orchestra will provide music for the semi-formal dance, scheduled from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., with admission by an Associated Student card per couple or $2.50 for tickets for non-card holders.

AS members will vote June 8 and 9 for selection of Sophomore King and Queen at voting booths in the west campus cafeteria and by the Science Building Silver Pole.

Winners in the traditional contest will be crowned during the ball, and will receive trophies presented by Beta Tau fraternity and Theta Tau sorority.

In other Sophomore class activities, the date of the annual Soph-Prof softball game was changed from Friday, June 3, to Thursday, June 2. Administration spokesmen explained that the reason for the change was to avoid a double college hour on Friday, in that in the past all double college hours have cancelled 11 o'clock classes on that day. The Thursday date will allow students to miss a different class.

Ted Huggins Shows 3-D Arabian Film Thursday

Ted Huggins, public relations representative of the Standard Oil Company of California in San Francisco, will address students here tomorrow at 11 a.m. in C246 on the subject, Ancient Arabia — Now Oil's Richest Region.

His presentation will feature exclusive three-dimensional color photographs showing Middle East scenes as of a thousand years ago, the miraculous modernization of Arab countries and the development of oil therein, and activities of the United States Navy in the Persian Gulf.

Huggins' 30-minute illustrated talk is the first of its kind featuring the new photographic medium — three-dimensional color stills.

Club Cavalcade: Final Social Activities Of Semester Planned

By Joan Anderson

WITH two and a half weeks of classes left in the semester, clubs on campus are rounding out their activities with elections, initiations and dinners.

Theta Tau sorority held a business meeting on May 26 to elect their fall semester officers. The sorority met with Lambda Phi fraternity last night at the home of Pat Parsons.

Delta Psi sorority will hold their installation dinner tomorrow night at Veneto's Restaurant. The sorority is donating $20 to the Heart Fund and $10 to the University of San Francisco Basketball Fund.

Alpha Lambda Chi sorority had a party in honor of President John Rettus last Wednesday at the home of Rose Thurmond. A joint meeting with Phi Beta Delta fraternity followed. An Italian dinner will be given tomorrow night for the sisters of the sorority at the home of Darlene Reitz. A business meeting will follow at which next semester's officers will be elected.

Zeta Chi sorority discussed plans for their Memorial Day weekend trek to Marin County at a business meeting last week at sponsor Ruth Inskipp's home.

Napa Junior College was the site of the Napa-City College swim meet, Saturday, May 21. Glenda Ortlip came in first in the 50 yard freestyle, 50 yard breast stroke and 25 yard breast stroke. Other swimmers included Carol Fanning, Cherie Kiser, Mae West, Pat Sullivan and Lenore Thompson.

The Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society coaching service is offering coaching in Spanish, English, music, chemistry, French, philosophy, sociology, mathematics and biological science. Interested students should consult Ted Jensen, Barbara Bawden or sponsor Don Jensen in S130E.

On Sunday the Men's Glee Club will have its semi-annual banquet at the home of Robert Morton, director of the club and the choir. Newly elected President Yet Wah Lee and Librarian Robert Debernardi will be installed at the meeting. Associated Student members of the club who have excelled in the club's work this semester will be awarded pins.

Petitions Due For Fall Social Calendar; First Bids Receive Priority

Petitions for dates on next semester's social calendar are now available in the Associated Student office in Building 2. All petitions must be returned before or on Friday, June 3.

Those petitions which are received first will be given first consideration. Each of the petitions must be accompanied by a $5 transfer of funds, which will be returned to the payee if the Social Committee rules regarding college social events are met.

The social calendar will be completed by the end of this semester and no organization is expected to receive dates after the final printing.

ISC Plans For Closer Unity Of Sororities

By Bev Swope

BY THE END of next week a few will be graduated, some will just be gone, and others will have made their decision to return to the college for a semester or more.

The paths of life for those who leave will be many and varied and untraceable here. But for those who shall return, the future promises many new improvements and additions to campus life.

The Fall opening of the newly-completed Student Union Building with cafeteria classrooms for the Hotel and Restaurant division, and student store is one outstanding example. At the same time all west campus facilities will be abandoned, and on that plot the city will lift the first shovelful of earth in preparation for its reservoir.

Another group concerned with social welfare, the Inter-Sorority Council of Spring 1955, is also looking forward to next semester and semesters after. The council, guided by Presi- Marylou Reidy and Dean Mary Golding, adviser, thinks it has found a way to stimulate closer unity among the six sororities and perhaps end confusion for sorority rushees.

In a joint meeting of sorority presidents and sponsors, the council is preparing a booklet of completely new rushing rules for aspiring pledges.

Recently-formulated plans include a one dollar registration fee requirement for women interested in entering rushing activities. This added demand on the pocketbook should eliminate pledge pretenders who string along just for the fun of it.

Registration and payment of the fee will automatically enable the rushees to attend the first formal affair, a tea sponsored by the ISC. This event is intended to increase cooperation and discourage any rivalry among sororities.

The first informal affair or Open House will be given at a private home by each of the six sororities. Coke and cookies will be the only refreshments served and campus dress will predominate. These restrictions are imposed to decrease the advantage of the larger sororities in their ability to "put on the dog."

No limitations are put upon the final affair, a dinner, and the sororities can unloose all their talent for super salesmanship and impression making. By this time it is hoped that rushees and members are acquainted with each other as individuals and not ornaments.

A most important part of the new plan includes a neutral board of one woman from each of the six sororities, who will manage the mechanics at preferential rushing and answer impartially all questions put to them by the rushees.

The Inter-Sorority Council has moved towards greater harmony this semester, and plans for following years promise closer unity as the women add to and improve their methods of operation.

Such action in a small way illustrates development and foresees a healthy progress for generations of students to come.

Forum Distributed Here This Week

Tales of math class, the K ear and the serenade of the bells in the college halls are among satirical subjects discussed in this spring's Forum, the college's magazine which was released yesterday.

The magazine emphasizes prose heavily this spring, but some poetry is included.

Forum can be obtained at the Silver Pole in the Science Building, from a table in the courtyard, and at the Ramporium. There will be no additional cost to members of the Associated Students, but 50 cents will be charged non-members.

Members of the Forum Club who have been elected members of the Editorial Committee are Al Argo, Don Ball, Sally Fleming, Virginia Keen, Mike Hallinan and Dorothy Rader. Edwin Brush was editor-in-chief this semester, and Alan Wendroff and Margaret Shour were managing editor and advertising manager respectively.

Special Awards Given To Three Graduates Here

Three special awards are being presented this year to outstanding students in the graduating class. Ina Bik and Lou Teucher will be awarded the annual Alice Eastwood Memorial scholarship of $50 each. The award is presented to outstanding students in the field of horticulture by the San Francisco Garden Club in memory of the late Miss Eastwood.

Joe Schauer, a second year student of business here, will be awarded the Wall Street Journal award. The award consists of a silver medal and a year's subscription to the business publication.

Schauer was chosen on the basis of scholastic success and promise in the field of business.

The holder of a 2.3 grade point average at the college, Schauer hopes to work for Coastwise Lines Incorporated after graduation this June.

The Coast Guard veteran settled in San Francisco two years ago. He was graduated from Hughes High School in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Bik was graduated from Lowell High School here in 1940 and was enrolled at the college for a year in 1941. Originally, Mrs. Bik was a Letters and Science student here but since her return to the college she has been enrolled as a floriculture student.

An evening student here, and also a winner of the Alice Eastwood Memorial Award is Teucher. A graduate from high school in Burlington, Iowa, in 1918, Teucher has been in the U.S. Navy since 1919. He will split the $100 scholarship given by the San Francisco Garden Club with Mrs. Bik.

Student Grades Can Be Obtained Through Mail

Students wishing copies of their grades at the end of this semester rather than at registration next fall may secure them through the mail by leaving a stamped, self-addressed envelope with the registrar's office, preferably before the end of finals week.

Students who do not file an envelope in the office will receive transcripts of their grades when they register in the fall. Graduating students will be able to pick up their grades at the registrar's office after July 1.

Registration for the fall semester will commence on Monday, September 12, and is to take place for three days in the southernmost end of the reserve book room in the library.

Returning students register as follows: Mon., Sept. 12 at 10 a.m., registration nos. 1-249; 11 a.m., nos. 250-599; 1 p.m., nos. 600-1099; 2 p.m., nos. 1100-1599; 3 p.m., nos. 1600-2099. Tuesday, Sept. 13, at 8 a.m., nos. 2100-2599; 9 a.m., nos. 2600-3099; 10 a.m., nos. 3100-3599; 11 a.m., nos. 3600-4099.

New students: Tues., Sept. 13, at 1 p.m., nos. 1-199; 2 p.m., nos. 200-499; 3 p.m., nos. 500-799. On Wednesday, Sept. 14, at 8 a.m., nos. 800-1099; 9 a.m., nos. 1100-1399; 10 a.m., nos. 1400-1699; 11 a.m., nos. 1700-1999; 1 p.m., nos. 2000-2299; 2 p.m., nos. from 2300.

Residents of other California Junior College districts must file permits secured from the junior college president of the district of residence before they may attend here next semester. Other California county residents must file permits secured from the County Superintendent of Schools. A high school principal's statement will not suffice. Permits must be filed before the time of registration.

Voting For Sophomore King And Queen Here Today, Tomorrow; Ball Held At Sir Francis Drake Hotel Saturday

Voting for the King and Queen of the Sophomore Ball takes place today and tomorrow at booths located in the west campus cafeteria and at the Silver Pole in the Science Building.

Balloting is open to all members of the Associated Students. The King and Queen chosen by AS voters will be announced at the Sophomore Ball, according to Joe Graham, Sophomore Class president.

Candidates for King and Queen and their sponsoring organizations have been announced by the sophomore class vice-president, Lois Mantel.

They are Don Baroni, Beta Phi Beta Phi Gal, Beta Tau; Emory Lebonville, Alpha Sigma Delta, and Bob Peters of Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

Vieing for Queen are Peggy Alexander, Theta Tau; Darolyn Donnelly, Kappa Phi; Carolyn Fisher, Delta Psi; Barbara Fong, Chinese Students Club; Juanita Hall, Women's Athletic Association; Judy Loerya, Phi Beta Rho; Joan Rettus, Alpha Lambda Chi, and Sally Yudnich from Zeta Chi.

Traditional trophies, donated by Theta Tau sorority and Beta Tau fraternity, will be presented to the winning King and Queen at the ball to be held this Saturday, June 11, in the Empire Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel. Paul Law and his orchestra will provide the music for the dance starting at 9 p.m. and lasting until 1 a.m.

AS members will be admitted to the dance without additional charge. Students without AS cards wishing to attend the ball may purchase tickets to the semi-formal affair at the Student Bank, S188, at $2.50 per couple.

Alumni Offer Free Benefits To Grads

Commencement ceremonies for the first time will be filmed as part of the college Alumni Association's program of activities for graduating students, Edwin Frediani, retiring president of the group, announced this week. The color films will have their first showing at the alumni theater party, Monday, June 20, at the Rio theater, which is being turned over to the association by owner Maury Schwartz for the affair.

Tickets to the event, featuring two top foreign films, will be given free to graduates who join the association, Frediani said, adding, "It should be interesting to them to see themselves on the screen."

Additional tickets may be obtained at the placement office in Building 2 for one dollar. Any alumni or student is welcome to attend regardless of whether or not he is graduating.

A more permanent memento of the graduation, also free to graduates becoming members, are the individual cap and gown portraits to be taken at the ceremonies.

708 Graduates In 20th Annual Commencement

By Theresa Brychta

Associate in Arts degrees will be presented to a grand total of 708 Fall and Spring graduates at the 20th annual commencement exercises in Riordan auditorium on Friday, June 17, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman of the commencement committee.

Rehearsals for the exercises will be held the same afternoon in the auditorium from 2 to 4:30 p.m. The commencement exercises are scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will preside at the activities, and will present the Associate in Arts degrees to the graduates.

Margaret Shour and Norbert Nizze, representing the graduating class, will be among the speakers for the event.

Also speaking at the exercises will be Mrs. George A. Hindley, president, Board of Education, and Dr. Herbert C. Clish, superintendent, San Francisco Public Schools.

Presentation of candidates for degrees will be made by Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, and Scholastic awards will be presented by Jack Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare. Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus, will make the presentation of the President's Award Plaque and service awards.

Selections by the A Cappella Choir and by the college concert band are also included in the program.

Immediately following the exercises, a reception for the graduates, their families and friends, will be held in the Riordan cafeteria.

Those graduates who will be unable to attend the commencement exercises may obtain their degrees personally at the Registrar's office, Dean Browne said.

Each graduate is entitled to five invitations and these may be secured at the Student Bank, S187. Cost of cap and gown rental is $4.00 to non-Associated Student members, but no charge will be made to AS cardholders.

Ceremonies In New Building Honor 9 Students

Nine scholarships, in addition to the University of California awards, were presented at yesterday's pre-commencement exercises held in the cafeteria of the new Student Union Building.

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men here, awarded the Graduating Class of '54 scholarships to Lauher Distler, Jo Ann Haight, Gail Allan Moss and Eva Russell. Each of these students received $50.

Don Jensen, president of the Cloud Foundation, awarded the Dr. A. J. Cloud scholarships to Edwin Brush and Betty Moriguchi. Each received $50.

John Stafford, sponsor of the Chinese Students Club here, made the CSC award presentation of $50 each to Tai C. Lam and Esther Wong.

Garnet Hung was selected as an outstanding woman graduate and was presented with the $25 Dougherty award by Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Winners of the UC scholarships, who were presented with the awards at the exercises, but who were named by the committee earlier, included Grace Fimognari, Martha Goldsmith, Wing Lee and Marian McTigue. Each of these students received $500 with the exception of Miss McTigue. Her scholarship was an Honorary Award and carried no stipend.

Honor Students Feted At AGS Dinner Next Week

Potential honor graduates and their families will be feted at the traditional dinner sponsored by Alpha Gamma Sigma on Thursday, June 16, at 7 p.m. at Simpson's Pennsylvania Room, according to Don Jensen, honor society adviser.

Prominent guests at the dinner will be Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, and Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

"Students graduating with honors from the college as life members of Alpha Gamma Sigma will be awarded gold pins," Jensen said. Their parchment certificates will be presented to them at the commencement ceremony, and their diplomas will be marked with gold seals.

Graduating Students Test Of College Educational Success

WITH the end of each academic year, there is one question that is of vital importance to both the faculty of the college and the graduating students—Was the time spent in instruction worth while, and did it attain the desired ends?

The answer must be yes, if the college is to consider itself successful. Every graduate must accept his Associate in Arts degree with the knowledge that he has gained an education, the best education that City College of San Francisco can offer him. He must have an aim in life, a desire to make something of himself and succeed in any endeavor he might attempt.

To the faculty and administration, each student who is graduated from the college is a test. If he leaves here as an educated, complete social animal, and goes on to make his mark in life, then and only then has the instructor passed the test.

If either of these two fail, in any respect, then that much of the college, that much time and money, has been wasted.

There are, of course, those who fail. Occasionally a student will attend the college, graduate and, for one reason or another, gain nothing academically or socially. Occasionally, too, an instructor will fail to completely reach a student. In that isolated case, he is unable, in some way, to pass the test. It is to the credit of the college that these cases of failure are few.

Graduates of the college are, for the most part, educated, well-ordered people who go on to economic and social success. For this the administration and faculty, and the students themselves, deserve a vote of thanks for making and keeping City College an educational success.

Rare Talent Found In Alibis Of Reporters

DEAR Chief: Wal, boss, this here's the last one. Hate to pass up the chance to see the 'Comber in print one more time, but guess you know how it is. As I peer over the covers at the assorted nostrums (ebereacol, suerets, vapo-rub, hot lemonade, etc.) and shift my thermometer over to the left, it pains not to be up in the office with thee to help get out that last issue. However, in the interest of not upsetting the whole staff and beginning an epidemic of bad colds which would tend to shut down the whole operation, it would seem better to stay at home with both heads on the pillow.

'Fore I bow out, however, thanks to you and the nice lady in the corner, and the feature boss, and the other bosses for being so nice and understanding when the copy was not forthcoming at deadline time. Speaking of such things, in the search for a new 'Comber, research was made in the back files of alibis received by the news editor when copy was not turned in on time or missed completely. There appears to be an unlimited amount of talent among the reporters for this sort of thing. Some examples, if I may quote: this is known as plagarism, or how to write a column without doing any thinking of your own):

From Jones: "Seeing as how the meeting is tomorrow, and the deadline is today, and the preview was covered in this issue and since there are no more issues and since there are no more meetings, I just happened to figure out that there was no story here. But if you come back next semester and I do too, I swear by the hair on my chinny chin - chin I will cover all my assignments honestly and faithfully to the best of my A*B*I*L*I*T*Y."

Or this one from Smith, who must be a near relative of the famed guest columnist Sukiaki Sam Shinto: "Mushi-mushi. Humble reporter leave house of nix. He see otter. He say: you speak, girl-san, dai jobu publicity story. Otter say: nebba hoppen, wassa malla you? You hear. You know. Reporter go back to home of Jack London, get takusan stinko, pass out on copy desk. End of tale. Moral? Reporter have no morals."

Then there was this gem. The guy must be playing it straight, but that just goes to show that he's a natural: "Pasqualetti told me that he knows nothing of the photo day. He referred me to Fred Levy and gave me a number at which Levy could be reached but Levy was not at the place that I called and I do not know where to reach him." Like I said, a natural.

Or Ball on Dutcher: "I cannot find this man and am beginning to think he does not exist. I have cut classes twice in order to pursue this wild goose chase. If this is your idea of a practical joke please cease and desist. My G-d man! Don't you realize that I have a club foot. It's hard to limp after a figment of your imagination. Thanking you in advance for your future consideration, I remain . . ."

One of the prime candidates has kept the desk in stitches with little items like this: "My fault, as you know, Kingie was staring us in the face for a couple millyun hours yesterdie but I was busy grinding out a vicious story and couldn't stop to chew the fat with him. Also I had a tremendous visitation with him when I called him last night, nachully he weren't home nowhere. My goof but I kin still zoom down and see him if you like, today. He probably has thousands of interesting tidbits that everybody want's to hear about (but he won't release nachully)."

This could go on for pages and pages, chief, but let's close for now with this hit from Anderson: "Mr. McMillan, boss-man, he say no print story this week. All cause too much many low-number-happy students make much confusion and too-long line in office of counseling. Thus, counsel office workers no can handle so many people. Lay off week he say. Let low-number-happy students cool off for instant."

So thee see, chief, no lack of 'Comber material here. As Mr. Gilbert said (or was it Mr. Sullivan), "He never will be missed, he never will be missed," Bye.

Highlights Of Spring Semester Listed

20th Anniversary Festival Keynote Of Semester

By Don Ball

Biggest event in the college's 20th year was the 20th year itself. A semester of celebration commemorated the event, with the 20th Anniversary Ball keynoting the festivities.

Stan Kerton and his band came to town for the event and got more of the college's students under one roof than anything since the war-time air-raid drills. Students found the Surf Club jammed for the event which had Associated Student leaders worried when the advance ticket sales were negligible. Actually the advance sales were terrible.

Barbara Batmale and Dick Amico reigned over the 20th Anniversary Festival. Miss Batmale received a congratulatory kiss from Kenton as the noted band leader crowned the monarchs at the 20th Anniversary Ball. Two weeks later Miss Batmale received the largest plurality of votes of any candidate as she won the election for AWS president.

"A New Deal" in the Rally Committee was announced by Glenn Allen shortly before he resigned as commissioner of the group.

Jann Palmer left the college to be married, after gaining fame while a member of Student Council when she protested a ruling which would prohibit girls who had been elected queen of any function of the college from running for queen again. She said she felt that this ruling would narrow the field too much.

Tightening of already existing rules by the administration and formation of some new ones led to a marked increase in attendance as some students feared expulsion and the thought of having to get a job.

Zipper binders were made available at the Ramporium, and Manager Dick Main expressed the conviction that they would be of invaluable aid to the students here.

Vacation Near

Feature Editor Succumbs To Spring Fever

(Editor's Note: A few balmy days plus the approach of summer vacation seem to have affected our Feature Editor deeply, and it looks as if the weight of the whole semester has finally taken its toll. No remedy for the situation in sight, and the readers will just have to struggle along and try to understand the article.

Ho-hum. Here goes the last paper of the semester, then only nine days to go.

Plenty of activity is being planned for the semester's end, but who wants to expend the energy to find out all the details? William Randolph would frown on this attitude, and the public must be informed, so write something informative.

The soph-prof game was—boy, that double college hour was sure welcome. First chance we'd had to rest in a long time. There's nothing like sitting back and watching a lot of people exert themselves.

Then there's finals week and graduation, which is remindful of studying, which we just can't bring ourself to think about: Just means more exertion, and we're tired.

Guess the whole thing is a lost cause. There are too many things connotative of vacation and rest going on about us. The green slope in front of the Science Building is too remindful of the country, the courtyard in front of Cloud Hall is too remindful of a nice, warm patio in which to sleep, and the Student Lounge speaks for itself.

Well, at least we're not the only one afflicted with this warmed-over spring fever. The cars in the parking lot seem to be filled with sleeping students, and the courtyard is occupied by the laziest looking crew we've ever seen. When the sun shines nowadays, you can always find students eating lunch on the lawn in front of the Science Building, and resembling picnickers.

All of, this makes us sleepy, and now those nine days seem like 900 days. We're tired.

Letters to the Editor

• Credit Is Due

Editor, The Guardsman:

Since starting City College a short time ago, I and a group of my friends have read The Guardsman faithfully. We feel that it is one of the finest student edited papers we have come in contact with, but we feel your columns have in one way not given a certain group on our campus enough publication.

City College is extremely fortunate in having a police training school on the campus. The men of the school are available for our dances, giving protection and keeping them orderly; they do a fine job of directing traffic which certainly would be an extremely congested mess on Phelan Avenue at 8:00 a.m. class time; the parking restrictions are kept in order by them.

These men give up much of their personal time in training that no one ever hears about. How about giving them some recognition; why not print an article explaining their training course? Printing a group picture of the student officers would be a good move. We have pictures of our dances and athletic events; why not one of our police force? It would let students know who they are and give credit where credit is due. There is still time to do so before the end of the term; we have a few more weeks in the term, why not get a picture and article in?

Sports, Socials Show Active Place Of Women In Athletics

WAA Offers Six Sports, Archery, Co-ed Badminton

By Joan Anderson

Not to be outdone by the athletic activities of the men of the college, women here express their athletic abilities in the various sports offered them by the Women's Athletic Association.

Though the campus he-men may classify such sports as volleyball, tennis, badminton, archery, swimming and folk-dancing as being "patsyish," the women who participate in them will argue the point strongly.

As is evidenced when watching the women in action, each has a great deal of skill. This skill is further evidenced at sportsdays held with other colleges when City College players are frequently in the winners' circle.

So that high school women students may get an advanced look at the WAA, the association, led by President Barbara Jones, plans several playdays for them throughout the semester. Although the college players usually come out on top in these events, everyone benefits from the experience, has a good time, and especially enjoys the refreshments served afterward.

Working with Miss Jones to keep the WAA active this semester were Yvonne McFarlin, vice-president; Ann Smith, treasurer, and Eloise Marshall, secretary. Sponsoring the organization is Lene Johnson, women's physical education instructor here.

Although the title of the organization specifies it as for women, two of the sports offered are co-educational. Badminton and archery are open for male participation, and more than one Robin Hood can be seen on the archery field diligently stringing the bow, taking careful aim and then climbing half-way up the hill to retrieve an arrow that was "carried there by the wind."

The WAA takes an active part in college social affairs, recently taking honors for their booth and float in the 20th Anniversary Festival. The organization had taken second place in the Mardi Gras of 1954 for their booth, Sherwood Forest. The same popular theme was used this year.

All these activities lead to the fact that women certainly have a place in college athletic life. So step aside hemen, the women are no patsies.

TWO MAJOR ACTIVITIES of the Women's Athletic Association, traditional athletic society of the college, are demonstrated in candid photos here by Guardsman photographer Michael Kosinski. In addition to archery and tennis, participants also play badminton and volleyball, supplemented by swimming and folk dancing.

WAA Elects New President, Presents 15 Athletic Awards At Tea Today

Announcement of the new Women's Athletic Association officers for the Fall semester, and presentation of WAA awards will be the two main features of the association tea, scheduled today at 3:15 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

In the race for President are Norene Phillips and Juanita Hall. Carol Goldenberg and Carolyn Tanning are running for Vice-President, while Martha Lozar and Anne Hanely are running for Secretary and Missie Pitts and Donna Bowman for Treasurer.

Besides election returns, 15 women will receive awards for partiepating at lenst 9 out of 12 times in one sport during the semester. For volleyball, Marion Crandall receives a star, Miss Hall, a Block SF, and Miss Pitts a shield. In swimming Ann Smith receives her Block SF, Miss Tanning, Lee Earl and Lenore Thompson all receive shields.

For badminton, shields will go to Chico Fujii, Miss Phillips, Nancy Thomas and Darlene Pasch. Barbara Bawden receives her block. For tennis, Miss Hanely will be awarded a shield.

For archery, Miss Lozar will be awarded a Block SF and Miss Goldenberg a shield.

Voting for officers started yesterday and will close today.

Prof Gun Scares Kids; Woods MV To Gent's Cause

By Emil Portale

Those atrophied and decrepit Ram professors hobbled to a 8-4 victory here last Thursday against a somewhat hesitant field of sophomores who cringed at the gun totin' antics of Dean Eddie Browne stationed on the first base foul line.

An official protest by the sophs was to be filed with the commissioner of the league to which neither team belongs. The dispute concerns the 8-4 final count and the use of ageless athletic instructors who haven't lost the traditional battle in 10 years.

Surprisingly enough the tussle, called at the end of five innings because of no rain, was a relatively low scoring affair. Roy (Demon) Diederichsen led off for the antiquated gents in the initial canto with a feeble bouncer that ushered him to first.

Alex (Swatter) Schwartz then floated a single past short, (Rocket) Roy Burkhead banged into a fielder's choice and Diederichsen seampered home with the initial tally of the game.

The young 'uns went wild in the third and fifth stanzas after hopped-up Diederichsen had paced a four-run faculty rally with a two-run triple in the second. The damage was done when Don Baroni slashed a 475-foot single to short and (Dustin') Bob Mannini slammed (and this ain't no kiddin') a prodigious two-run four ply swat.

In the fifth, Em Lebonville one moment found himself perched on first after a fielder's choice and in another was found skipping across the plate by way of Jim Thomas' two digit four base swat.

A distinct "honor" was presented to new AS President Dean Woods by the faculty. The profs named Woods their most valuable player, for the sterling starboard-sider allowed the oldsters four runs and was shelled off the mound before getting a man out.

RAMBLINGS

By Emil Portale

WHEN cleats have been hung up and athletic togs have been stored to await the conquests of a season yet to come, eyes turn from the past and look to successes just around the corner. What's going to happen next season? No one knows, all we can do is put veteran and rookie together and hope they add up to victory in coming campaigns.

On the football front only five first stringers have left for other wars. All-Conference Bob Palma, and fullback Ray Schweizer are the only returning first stringers. Tony Questeno might possibly return. Although the fortunes of 1954's second place squad would not serve as an example, 1955 Ram boosters will have their hands full, in a league entirely composed of four-year colleges.

1956's Ram horsehiders should be a formidable outfit, that is, if the potential returnees come through. At present there are seven possible returning first stringers. If Ed Kraft, Jim Candler, Jim Doherty, Ken Dito, Stan Johnson, Jim Poppin and Ray Warman are on the diamond next year, the well-stocked Ram horsehiders will be ready to avenge West Contra Costa's playoff defeat of this year which left the local nine in second place in the standings.

At the moment the baseball picture is uncertain as far as returnees are concerned, but there are hopes that incoming prep diamond men will accommodate for any lack of manpower.

If all goes as is hoped, California's third best two-year college track squad will have its triple threat cinder artist back again. Clint Redus of hurdle and dash notoriety will team with Bill Tillson, Martin Morales, John Rudometkin, Will Pinkston, Dennis Moorehead and Tal Webb in 1956's running event scrambles. Returnees in the field chores include Norm King, Bob Arterberry, Hal Crockford, Franklin Carroll, Clay Williams and Bob Frick. With all this talent the Ram tracksters will certainly have something to say in the way of continuing to be one of the most feared and respected cinder teams of their class in the state.

Although the curtain has dropped on 1954-55 sports the picture for next season seems promising, with the impressive array of returning talent, and all.

Coaches Hope For High School Talent

from last season's cage squad are expected to return. Doug Hom, Norman King, Don Brooks, John Rudometkin and Odis Hightower are the talented remnants of last year's club. There is a possibility that Ed Atkins will return, but his sights are aimed UCLA-way. Two returning service veterans, Don Rothfos and Al Martino, will serve to bolster the now skimpy roll call.

Roy Diederichsen's soccermen will also be hit hard by graduation and Uncle Sam. All-American Filo Molina, All-Conference Bob Palma, and fullback Ray Schweizer are the only returning first stringers. Tony Questeno might possibly return. Although the fortunes of 1954's second place squad would not serve as an example, 1955 Ram boosters will have their hands full, in a league entirely composed of four-year colleges.

Sportsmanship, Spirit Mark College Athletics This Year, Prove Factors In Real Success

The sports cycle has ended at the college, the gamut has been run from the early autumn sports of soccer and football to the spring's events of track, baseball, golf and tennis.

As sports editor for the entire cycle, we have experienced, now that the seasons are over, a fulfillment attained quite successfully by the college's teams, which did not take a place lower than third in any sport this year.

However, in writing sports coverage, all the significant human factors which go into a team's success cannot be included in the facts. These elements are not tangible qualities; they are feelings, atmospheres, attitudes, and states of mind.

These indefinable qualities shape the difference between unified team effort and disorganization; between hustling and rising to the occasion under pressure or quitting and folding up; between accepting defeat as an inevitable bitter pill to be swallowed, or being unable to take the "gaff"; between a sense of comradeship and team harmony or bitter individualism and egotism.

These factors are the essence of success in athletics and are the fascination of sports.

The presence of these human elements or their absence is what makes a team successful; the statistics in the won-lost column do not indicate real success in athletics. Even if a player or team has superior talent, it will not be utilized to the maximum by faulty attitudes, though their factual record indicates achievement.

All the qualities of society are portrayed in athletics, and the same intangible elements of sports parallel the development. The team leader is a social leader; the elements of individual brilliance in sports parallel those in intellectual or spiritual attainment; the courage to come from behind, to turn in fine performances under pressure — these elements are found in all realms of endeavor, not just the sports world.

In covering City College's sports, in talking with the coaches and the players, we have seen these intangible essences in the college's teams as a whole and in individual performers.

This "spirit," which is sportsmanship on a broader plane, has been manifest in all the college's teams. It has been possible only through conscientious effort by the coaches, who realize the significance of athletics, and the athletes themselves, who have been receptive vessels for leadership of this type. This phase of education has proved fruitful and redeemed itself not only on the athletic fields, but in society as well. — By Bob Chrisman.

Intramural Loop Finals Wind Up Boxing Season

The Reds beat the Whites 4-3 in the Intramural Boxing finals last week to end this semester's boxing activities.

All bouts were limited to three rounds. One of the eight bouts ended in a draw. Two other matches were added as exhibitions and no winner was picked in these bouts. Varsity boxing students took part in the exhibition bouts.

Gold and silver medals were awarded to boxers who took part in the matches.

Student managers were Wayne McFadden for the Reds and Ted Floyd for the Whites. Lee Eisan, John Hamilton and Grover Klemmer were judges with Walt Giacomini acting as referee and Tom Wilson as timer. Alex Schwarz was the announcer.

The weight and bouts are listed in order: 125, Charles Hawkins defeated Jim Moolem; 132, Ron Romiquire defeated Bob Palopz; 129, Frank Williams defeated Bob Whitelock; 147, Stan Howell lost to Dick Evangelista by default; 156, Mack Calhoun defeated Connie Giafkides; 178, Sid Lewn defeated Leo Viahos; Vasco Bigongiori defeated Jim Gade, and Ron Battoglia and Phil Hendrichs fought to a draw.

Contra Costa Wins State Baseball Title

Big Eight baseball stock took a sharp rise on Saturday, May 28, as the West Contra Costa team downed Orange Coast College, 4-3, to win the California Junior College diamond championship.

The Comets had taken a lead in the best two out of three series by walloping Orange Coast, 24-5, the day before. Contra Costa had qualified for the finals by twice besting the East Contra Costa nine earlier in the week.

By losing to the Comets in a play-off battle, the Rams just missed being the Big Eight representative for the championship.

Graduating Students Test Of College Educational Success

WITH the end of each academic year, there is one question that is of vital importance to both the faculty of the college and the graduating students—Was the time spent in instruction worth while, and did it attain the desired ends?

The answer must be yes, if the college is to consider itself successful. Every graduate must accept his Associate in Arts degree with the knowledge that he has gained an education, the best education that City College of San Francisco can offer him. He must have an aim in life, a desire to make something of himself and succeed in any endeavor he might attempt.

To the faculty and administration, each student who is graduated from the college is a test. If he leaves here as an educated, complete social animal, and goes on to make his mark in life, then and only then has the instructor passed the test.

If either of these two fail, in any respect, then that much of the college, that much time and money, has been wasted.

There are, of course, those who fail. Occasionally a student will attend the college, graduate and, for one reason or another, gain nothing academically or socially. Occasionally, too, an instructor will fail to completely reach a student. In that isolated case, he is unable, in some way, to pass the test. It is to the credit of the college that these cases of failure are few.

Graduates of the college are, for the most part, educated, well-ordered people who go on to economic and social success. For this the administration and faculty, and the students themselves, deserve a vote of thanks for making and keeping City College an educational success.

The Beachcomber
Rare Talent Found In Alibis Of Reporters

By Bill Boldenweck

DEAR Chief: Wal, boss, this here's the last one. Hate to pass up the chance to see the 'Comber in print one more time, but guess you know how it is. As I peer over the covers at the assorted nostrums (cheracol, sucrets, vapo-rub, hot lemonade, etc.) and shift my thermometer over to the left, it pains not to be up in the office with thee to help get out that last issue. However, in the interest of not upsetting the whole staff and beginning an epidemic of bad colds which would tend to shut down the whole operation, it would seem better to stay at home with both heads on the pillow.

"Fore I bow out, however, thanks to you and the nice lady in the corner, and the feature boss, and the other bosses for being so nice and so understanding when the copy was not forthcoming at deadline time. Speaking of such things, in the search for a new 'Comber, research was made in the back files of alibis received by the news editor when copy was not turned in on time or missed completely. There appears to be an unlimited amount of talent among the reporters for this sort of thing. Some examples, if I may quote: this is known as plagerism, or how to write a column without doing any thinking of your own):

From Jones: "Seeing as how the meeting is tomorrow, and the deadline is today, and the preview was covered in this issue and since there are no more issues and since there are no more meetings, I just happened to figure out that there was no story here. But if you come back next semester and I do too, I swear by the hair on my chinny chin - chin I will cover all my assignments honestly and faithfully to the best of my A*B*I*L*I*T*Y."

Or this one from Smith, who must be a near relative of the famed guest colmnist Sukiaki Sam Shinto: "Mushi-mushi. Humbie reporter leave house of nix. He see otter. He say; you speak, giri-san, dai jobu publicity story. Otter say; nebba hoppen, wassa malla you? You hear. You know. Reporter go back to home of Jack London, get takusan stinko, pass out on copy desk. End of tale. Moral? Reporter have no morals."

Then there was this gem. The guy must be playing it straight, but that just goes to show that he's a natural: "Pasquale!!! told me that he knows nothing of the photo day. He referred me to Fred Levy and gave me a number at which Levy could be reached but Levy was not at the place that I called and I do not know where to reach him." Like I said, a natural.

Or Ball on Dutcher: "I cannot find this man and am beginning to think he does not exist. I have cut classes twice in order to pursue this wild goose chase. If this is your idea of a practical joke please cease and desist. My G-d man! Don't you realize that I have a club foot. It's hard to limp after a figment of your imagination. Thanking you in advance for your future consideration, I remain . . ."

One of the prime candidates has kept the desk in stitches with little items like this: "My fault, as you know, Kingle was staring us in the face for a couple milllyun hours yesterdie but I was busy grinding out a vicious story and couldn't stop to chew the fat with him. Also I had a tremendous visitation with him when I called him last night, nachully he weren't home nowhere. My roof but I kin still zoom down and see him if you like, today. He probably has thousands of interesting tidbits that everybody want's to hear about (but he won't release nachully)."

This could go on for pages and pages, chief, but let's close for now with this bit from Anderson: "Mr. McMillan, boss-man, he say no print story this week. All cause too much many low - number - happy students make much confusion and too-long line in office of counseling. Thus, counsel office workers no can handle so many people. Lay off week he say. Let low-number-happy students cool off for instant."

So thee see, chief, no lack of 'Comber material here. As Mr. Gilbert said (or was it Mr. Sullivan), "He never will be missed, he never will be missed." Bye.

Highlights Of Spring Semester Listed

20th Anniversary Festival Keynote Of Semester

By Don Ball

Biggest event in the college's 20th year was the 20th year itself. A semester of celebration commemorated the event, with the 20th Anniversary Ball keynoting the festivities.

Stan Kenton and his band came to town for the event and got more of the college's students under one roof than anything since the war-time air-raid drills. Students found the Surf Club jammed for the event which had Associated Student leaders worried when the advance ticket sales were negligible. Actually the advance sales were terrible.

Barbara Batmale and Dick Amico reigned over the 20th Anniversary Festival. Miss Batmale received a congratulatory kiss from Kenton as the noted band leader crowned the monarchs at the 20th Anniversary Ball. Two weeks later Miss Batmale received the largest plurality of votes of any candidate as she won the election for AWS president.

"A New Deal" in the Rally Commission was announced by Glenn Allen shortly before he resigned as commissioner of the group.

Jann Palmer left the college to be married, after gaining fame while a member of Student Council when she protested a ruling which would prohibit girls who had been elected queen of any fungtion of the college from running for queen again. She said she felt that this ruling would narrow the field too much.

Tightening of already existing rules by the administration and formation of some new ones led to a marked increase in attendance as some students feared expulsion and the thought of having to get a job.

Zipper binders were made available at the Ramporium, and Manager Dick Main expressed the conviction that they would be of invaluable aid to the students here.

Riverside, scene of the semesterly conference of the state's two-year colleges, proved to be an unpleasant area for the college's delegation. They had left with high hopes of getting the conference to adopt a positive standing on the proposed mandatory student body card law, but they were never able to get the measure out of committee and on to the floor for a vote. "We made many friends for the college," said AS President Al Kingston, when reporting on the conference.

For the first time in the college's history, a Women's Day was held. On this day all the important positions in the administration and student government were taken over by the ladies. They also sold cookies.

Music-wise, the college rocked to the dulcet strains of rhythm and blues while those students of a more serious nature whiled away the time reading the Bhagavad-Gita. Students in general received a salute from movieland when the film makers accurately portrayed school life in the Blackboard Jungle.

A crime wave struck the college when bad guys broke into the HAR headquarters, but the good guys struck a blow for law and order when it crushed "organized" card-playing on the campus.

Tradition was thrown to the winds this semester when the carefree gamboling of fraternity and sorority pledges which had characterized Hell Week was abandoned in favor of Help Week and an adult job of janitoring by the pledges.

Spring of 55's student election saw the IFC place people in 10 out of a possible 20 offices. Eight of these seats were uncontested.

HIGHLIGHTING THE SEMESTER was the 20th Anniversary Celebration and Ball. Elected to reign over the festivities as king and queen were Richard Amico and Barbara Batmale, who were crowned at the ball by orchestra leader Stan Kenton.—Guardsman photo by Robert Frick.

Vacation Near
Feature Editor Succumbs To Spring Fever

(Editor's Note: A few balmy days plus the approach of summer vacation seem to have affected our Feature Editor deeply. And it looks as if the weight of the whole semester has finally taken its toll. No remedy for the situation in sight, and the readers will just have to struggle along and try to understand the article.)

Ho-hum. Here goes the last paper of the semester, then only nine days to go.

Plenty of activity is being planned for the semester's end, but who wants to expend the energy to find out all the details? William Randolph would frown on this attitude, and the public must be informed, so write something informative.

The soph-prof game was—boy, that double college hour was sure welcome. First chance we'd had to rest in a long time. There's nothing like sitting back and watching a lot of people exert themselves.

Then there's finals week and graduation, which is remindful of studying, which we just can't bring ourself to think about. Just means more exertion, and we're tired.

Guess the whole thing is a lost cause. There are too many things connotative of vacation and rest going on about us. The green slope in front of the Science Building is too remindful of the country, the courtyard in front of Cloud Hall is too mindful of a nice, warm patio in which to sleep, and the Student Lounge speaks for itself.

Well, at least we're not the only one afflicted with this warmed-over spring fever. The ears in the parking line in office of counseling. Thus, counsel office workers no can handle so many people. Lay off week he say. Let low-number-happy students cool off for instant."

So thee see, chief, no lack of 'Comber material here. As Mr. Gilbert said (or was it Mr. Sullivan), "He never will be missed, he never will be missed." Bye.

US Cycle Cops Compare With Bubonic Plague

By Bob Chrisman

EVERY age, every locale, every nation has its pestilence which makes life generally unbearable, and so it is with the United States.

This nation has incredible technical knowledge, and we have been able to harness natural forces so that living becomes a pleasure. In order to keep the US from getting carried away with their happiness, supernatural forces have designed a diabolical machination to torment us. Motorcycle cops.

Up to the 1900's, the Russians had a similar nemesis, the cossacks. The cossacks were merely mounted on horses, and would roar down a village's streets in troops, flogging people and nonchalantly beheading them with three-foot meat cleavers. There were limitations, of course, to the cossack's effectiveness; he was mounted on an animal, not an efficient machine. Flight and safety were possible if outside the range of the whips and swords, and the poor peasants could even fight back!

Our motorcycle cop is a real lulu. His mode of transportation is a vehicle which can accelerate up to 100 miles an hour within 30 seconds, his striking range is as far as the eye can see, there is no fighting back because these creatures are well-organized, there is no vaccination against them, and septic tanks are no solution. The method of inflicting pain that this species uses is also indicative of our advanced age. It is mental and emotional anguish—the screaming sob of the siren, the futility of flight, the relentless pursuit, the grim cold face, the predatory sneer, the hooded eyes, the ten dollars; all are psychological torments.

Although this pestilence does not physically smash or maim its hapless victims, it is equipped with all the fierce emotions that inspire such practices; it is like a snow-starved wolf in a flock of sheep, a Bengal tiger at the moment of slaughter, the blind viciousness of a wounded rattlesnake, the torpid cruelty of a rhinoceros, the frenzied anger of a Gothic berserker, and the calculated rage of a storm trooper.

There is no evident solution to this Cerebrus; it dominates us; it is superior in strength to that which molded it. We end with an invocation for locusts, jack rabbits or small pox, but no motorcycle cops.

Letters to the Editor

• Credit Is Due

Editor, The Guardsman:

Since starting City College a short time ago, I and a group of my friends have read The Guardsman faithfully. We feel that it is one of the finest student edited papers we have come in contact with, but we feel your columns have in one way not given a certain group on our campus enough publication.

City College is extremely fortunate in having a police training school on the campus. The men of the school are available for our dances, giving protection and keeping them orderly; they do a fine job of directing traffic which certainly would be an extremely congested mess on Phelan Avenue at 8:00 a.m. class time; the parking restrictions are kept in order by them.

These men give up much of their personal time in training that no one ever hears about. How about giving them some recognition; why not print an article explaining their training course? Printing a group picture of the student officers would be a good move. We have pictures of our dances and athletic events; why not one of our police force? It would let students know who they are and give credit where credit is due. There is still time to do so before the end of the term; we have a few more weeks in the term, why not get a picture and article in?

Sports, Socials Show Active Place Of Women In Athletics

WAA Offers Six Sports, Archery, Co-ed Badminton

By Joan Anderson

Not to be outdone by the athletic activities of the men of the college, women here express their athletic abilities in the various sports offered them by the Women's Athletic Association.

Though the campus he-men may classify such sports as volleyball, tennis, badminton, archery, swimming and folk-dancing as being "patsyish," the women who participate in them will argue the point strongly.

As is evidenced when watching the women in action, each has a great deal of skill. This skill is further evidenced at sportsdays held with other colleges when City College players are frequently in the winners' circle.

So that high school women students may get an advanced look at the WAA, the association, led by President Barbara Jones, plans several playdays for them throughout the semester. Although the college players usually come out on top in these events, everyone benefits from the experience, has a good time, and especially enjoys the refreshments served afterward.

Working with Miss Jones to keep the WAA active this semester were Yvonne McFarlin, vice-president; Ann Smith, treasurer, and Eloise Marshall, secretary. Sponsoring the organization is Lene Johnson, women's physical education instructor here.

Although the title of the organization specifies it as for women, two of the sports offered are co-educational. Badminton and archery are open for male participation, and more than one Robin Hood can be seen on the archery field diligently stringing the bow, taking careful aim and then climbing half-way up the hill to retrieve an arrow that was "carried there by the wind."

The WAA takes an active part in college social affairs, recently taking honors for their booth and float in the 20th Anniversary Festival. The organization had taken second place in the Mardi Gras of 1954 for their booth, Sherwood Forest. The same popular theme was used this year.

All these activities lead to the fact that women certainly have a place in college athletic life. So step aside hemen, the women are no patsies.

TWO MAJOR ACTIVITIES of the Women's Athletic Association, traditional athletic society of the college, are demonstrated in candid photos here by Guardsmon photographer Michael Kosinski. In addition to archery and tennis, participants also play badminton and volleyball, supplemented by swimming and folk dancing.

WAA Elects New President, Presents 15 Athletic Awards At Tea Today

Announcement of the new Women's Athletic Association officers for the Fall semester, and presentation of WAA awards will be the two main features of the association tea, scheduled today at 3:15 p.m. in the college cafeteria.

In the race for President are Norene Phillips and Juanita Hall. Carol Goldenberg and Carolyn Tanning are running for Vice-President, while Martha Lozar and Anne Hanely are running for Secretary and Missie Pitts and Donna Bowman for Treasurer.

Besides election returns, 15 women will receive awards for participating at least 9 out of 12 times in one sport during the semester. For volleyball, Marion Crandall receives a star, Miss Hall, a Block SF, and Miss Pitts a shield. In swimming Ann Smith receives her Block SF, Miss Tanning, Lee Earl and Lenore Thompson all receive shields.

For badminton, shields will go to Chico Fujii, Miss Phillips, Nancy Thomas and Darlene Pasch. Barbara Bawden receives her block. For tennis, Miss Hnnely will be awarded a shield.

For archery, Miss Lozar will be awarded a Block SF and Miss Goldenberg a shield.

Voting for officers started yesterday and will close today.

Block SF Honors Six Ram Athletes

Six Ram athletes, outstanding in their respective spring sports, were honored by coaches and teammates and received the Most Valuable Player awards at the semi-annual Block SF awards dinner held here on June 2.

Those receiving the trophies that went with the honor were Ike Walker, in basketball; Ken Turner, in boxing; Harlan Hayakawa, in golf; Les Jacobson, in tennis; Clint Redus, in track, and Stan Johnson, baseball.

Walker, a 6-4 forward, was named to the first team All-Big Eight selections as he sparked the Ram quintet to title contention and a final strong third place finish.

Although the college's inter-collegiate boxing competition was limited, Turner starred and was also a valuable help to Coach Roy Diederichsen in the intra-mural boxing tournament.

Hayakawa and Jacobson were standouts in their sports, and both led their teams to good Big Eight seasons. Hayakawa was the only Ram golfer to qualify in the conference meet, and Jacobson went into the state tennis tournament in both singles and doubles competition.

Redus was the sparkplug in the college thinclads' Northern California championship drive as he consistently collected three wins per meet and captured the state high hurdles title and high point trophy.

Johnson was outstanding in the outfield and on the pitching mound for the baseballers, as he posted a .483 batting mark and a 4-0 pitching record.

Prof Gun Scares Kids; Woods MV To Gent's Cause

By Emil Portale

Those atrophied and decrepit Ram professors hobbled to a 8-4 victory here last Thursday against a somewhat hesitant field of sophomores who cringed at the gun totin' antics of Dean Eddie Browne stationed on the first base foul line.

An official protest by the sophs was to be filed with the commissioner of a league to which neither team belongs. The dispute concerns the 8-4 final count and the use of ageless athletic instructors who haven't lost the traditional battle in 10 years.

Surprisingly enough the tussle, called at the end of five innings because of no rain, was a relatively low scoring affair. Roy (Demon) Diederichsen led off for the antiquated gents in the initial canto with a feeble bonneer that ushered him to first.

Alex (Swatter) Schwartz then floated a single past short, (Rocket) Roy Burkhead banged into a fielder's choice and Diederichsen stampered home with the initial tally of the game.

The young 'uns went wild in the third and fifth stanzas after hopped-up Diederichsen had paced a four-run faculty rally with a two-run triple in the second. The damage was done when Don Baroni slashed a 475-foot single to short and (Bustin') Bob Mannini slammed (and this ain't no kiddin') a prodigious two-run four ply swat.

In the fifth Em Lebonville one moment found himself perched on first after a fielder's choice and in another was found skipping across the plate by way of Jim Thomas' two digit four base swat.

A distinct "honor" was presented to new AS President Dean Woods by the faculty. The profs named Woods their most valuable player, for the sterling starboard-sider allowed the oldsters four runs and was shelled off the mound before getting a man out.

Crystal Ball Sees Good Fall Sports

WHEN cleats have been hung up and athletic togs have been stored to await the conquests of a season yet to come, eyes turn from the past and look to successes just around the corner. What's going to happen next season? No one knows; all we can do is put veteran and rookie together and hope they add up to victory in coming campaigns.

On the football front only five first stringers have left for other wars. Although the services of Ken Orcadi, Jim Frank, Gus Bagatelos, Rich Oliver and Don Baroni will be missed, there will be some 30 members from last year's third place squad back to team up with a healthy crop of high school aspirants. Coach Grover Klemmer is pleased at the expectations of 1955's pigskin outfit, and well he might be; this year's footballers will be gunning for big stakes, and it would do no harm to keep our collective eye on them.

Coach Ralph Hillsman's third place basketballers are on the other side of the fence in relation to returning lettermen. At present only five members from last season's cage squad are expected to return. Doug Horn, Norman King, Don Brooks, John Rudometkin and Odis Hightower are the talented remnants of last year's club. There is a possibility that Ed Atkins will return, but his sights are aimed UCLA-way. Two returning service veterans, Dog Robbins and Al Martino, will serve to bolster the now skimpy roll call.

Roy Diederichsen's soccermen will also be hit hard by graduation and Uncle Sam. All-American Fito Molina, All-Conference Bob Palma, and fullback Ray Schweizer are the only returning first stringers. Tony Queteno might possibly return. Although the fortunes of 1954's second place squad would not serve as an example, 1955 Ram booters will have their hands full, in a league entirely composed of four-year colleges.

1956's Ram horsehiders should be a formidable outfit, that is, if the potential returnees come through. At present there are seven possible returning first stringers. If Ed Kraft, Jim Candler, Jim Doherty, Ken Dito, Stan Johnson, Jim Poppin and Ray Warman are on the diamond next year, the well-stocked Ram horsehiders will be ready to avenge West Contra Costa's playoff defeat of this year which left the local nine in second place in the standings.

At the moment the baseball picture is uncertain as far as returnees are concerned, but there are hopes that incoming prep diamond men will accommodate for any lack of manpower.

If all goes as is hoped, California's third best two-year college track squad will have its triple threat cinder artist back again. Clint Redus of hurdle and dash notoriety will team with Bill Tillson, Martin Morales, John Rudometkin, Will Pinkston, Dennis Moorehead and Tal Webb in 1956's running event scrambles. Returnees in the field chores include Norm King, Bob Arterberry, Hal Crockford, Franklin Carroll, Clay Williams and Bob Frick. With all this talent the Ram tracksters will certainly have something to say in the way of continuing to be one of the most feared and respected cinder teams of their class in the state.

Although the curtain has dropped on 1954-55 sports the picture for next season seems promising, with the impressive array of returning talent, and all.

Sportsmanship, Spirit Mark College Athletics This Year, Prove Factors In Real Success

The sports cycle has ended at the college, the gamut has been run from the early autumn sports of soccer and football to the spring's events of track, baseball, golf and tennis.

As sports editor for the entire cycle, we have experienced, now that the seasons are over, a fulfillment attained quite successfully by the college's teams, which did not take a place lower than third in any sport this year.

However, in writing sports coverage, all the significant human factors which go into a team's success cannot be included in the facts. These elements are not tangible qualities; they are feelings, atmospheres, attitudes, and states of mind.

These indefinable qualities shape the difference between unified team effort and disorganization; between hustling and rising to the occasion under pressure or quitting and folding up; between accepting defeat as an inevitable bitter pill to be swallowed, or being unable to take the "gaff" between a sense of comradeship and team harmony or bitter individualism and egotism.

These factors are the essence of success in athletics and are the fascination of sports.

The presence of these human elements or their absence is what makes a team successful; the statistics in the won-lost column do not indicate real success in athletics. Even if a player or team has superior talent, it will not be utilized to the maximum by faulty attitudes, though their factual record indicates achievement.

All the qualities of society are portrayed in athletics, and the same intangible elements of sports parallel the development. The team leader is a social leader; the elements of individual brilliance in sports parallel those in intellectual or spiritual attainment; the courage to come from behind, to turn in fine performances under pressure — these elements are found in all realms of endeavor, not just the sports world.

In covering City College's sports, in talking with the coaches and the players, we have seen these intangible essences in the college's teams as a whole and in individual performers.

This "spirit," which is sportsmanship on a broader plane, has been manifest in all the college's teams. It has been possible only through conscientious effort by the coaches, who realize the significance of athletics, and the athletes themselves, who have been receptive vessels for leadership of this type. This phase of education has proved fruitful and redeemed itself not only on the athletic fields, but in society as well.—By Bob Chrisman.

Intramural Loop Finals Wind Up Boxing Season

The Reds beat the Whites 4-3 in the Intramural Boxing finals last week to end this semester's boxing activities.

All bouts were limited to three rounds. One of the eight bouts ended in a draw. Two other matches were added as exhibitions and no winner was picked in these bouts. Varsity boxing students took part in the exhibition bouts.

Gold and silver medals were awarded to boxers who took part in the matches.

Student managers were Wayne McFadden for the Reds and Ted Floyd for the Whites. Lee Eisan, John Hamilton and Grover Klemmer were judges with Walt Giacomini acting as referee and Tom Wilson as timer. Alex Schwarz was the announcer.

The weight and bouts are listed in order: 125, Charles Hawkins defeated Jim Moolem; 132, Ron Romiquire defeated Bob Palopz; 129, Frank Williams defeated Bob Whitelock; 147, Stan Howell lost to Dick Evangelista by default; 156, Mack Calhoun defeated Connie Glafkides; 178, Sid Lewn defeated Leo Vlahos; Vasco Bigongiorl defeated Jim Gade, and Ron Battoglia and Phil Hendrichs fought to a draw.

Contra Costa Wins State Baseball Title

Big Eight baseball stock took a sharp rise on Saturday, May 28, as the West Contra Costa team downed Orange Coast College, 4-3, to win the California Junior College diamond championship.

The Comets had taken a lead in the best two out of three series by walloping Orange Coast, 24-5, the day before. Contra Costa had qualified for the finals by twice besting the East Contra Costa nine earlier in the week.

By losing to the Comets in a play-off battle, the Rams just missed being the Big Eight representative for the championship.

Conlan Lauds Student Activities Participation And Cooperation In Traditional End-Of-Year Roundup

Outstanding achievements accomplished by the college during the past year and the advent of architectural innovations on the campus formed the basis for President Louis G. Conlan's traditional end of semester summary.

In an interview held here last week, Dr. Conlan commented favorably on the following five highlights of the semester:

PRESIDENT Louis G. Conlon, who listed outstanding achievements accomplished by the college in the past year.

1. The first anniversary of Cloud Hall; "The utilization of the library was most gratifying, and it will reveal itself vital to future scholastic attainments."

2. The fall Homecoming ceremonies and festivities which played host to 25 former Associated Student presidents and the now renowned Lee Ann Meriwether was acclaimed by Conlan as "the most successful to date, and resulted in a revival of interest in the Alumni Association."

3. The 20th Anniversary Festival held May 30 on the west campus was pronounced by Conlan "one of the most successful of such events ever to be held at the college."

4. The Guardsman's 22nd All-American rating was awarded by the Associated Collegiate Press: "I am pleased with The Guardsman's record and the service that the paper has been rendering to the students. The paper has always acted in the best interests of the college."

5. On sports: The season was one of the most triumphant in the history of the college. The record is as follows: The track team won the Northern California Conference meet; both the soccer and football teams grabbed third place, and the latter was under consideration for the Little Rose Bowl; the baseball team tied for first place only to lose in the playoffs. In addition, the minor sports reached a peak of participation.

The college has been fortunate in having had a fine student government this year under the capable leadership of AS Presidents Bill Boldenweck and Al Kingston, Dr. Conlan added.

Woods Appoints Cabinet, Takes Over Council

By Don Ball

Appointment of next semester's cabinet officers was announced last week by the new President of the Associated Students, Dean Woods.

Chosen to watch over the AS funds as Finance Chairman is Joyce Weaver. Miss Weaver is familiar with the workings of the AS through her duties as a freshman member of Student Council.

Another former freshman member of council, Vic Hebert, has been selected by Woods to perform the duties of Parliamentarian.

Top AS card salesman this semester, Emory Lebonville, is to be the Card Sales Chairman next fall. The Information Service Chairman next semester will again be Paul Ortiz, who has held the post this semester.

Alumni Liaison Officer will be Phil Braverman, who sat on Student Council this semester as a sophomore member.

Next semester's AS secretaries will be Judy Wills and Georgia Dickason. Miss Wills will hold the position of Recording Secretary, while Miss Dickason will be Corresponding Secretary.

Established only this semester, the job of Campus Liaison Officer will fall to Bill Whitney.

Bill Roberts, recently returned from Navy duty, has been named Yell Leader.

Still to be filled by Woods are the offices of Publications Board Chairman, Athletic Commissioners, Publicity Chairman, Awards Commissioner and Police Chief.

Woods presided over his first council meeting Thursday. Additional funds were alloted to the Campus Police for expenditures incurred by the pistol team. $21.50 was given to the group to reimburse them for a trip to San Jose to compete in a shooting match with San Jose State College.

Joan Rettus received the Outstanding Service Award at the council dinner last Wednesday. Woods was also sworn in during the dinner, which was held at the Californian Hotel.

Draft Eligibles Must Report Before June 17

Students of I-A, I-S, or 2-S draft classifications finishing their first or second academic year here and wishing to complete college before induction are asked to report to Jack Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, in S130 before the end of the semester, Brady said last week.

Korean War veterans attending the college are to sign up their monthly report forms for June during finals weeks, June 13-17, according to Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of Veterans Affairs. He also said that veterans planning to attend another college in the fall, or summer school, should file transfer forms as soon as possible.

H&R Keeps Campus Facilities Open During Finals Week

Finals week schedules for the college cafeteria, Science Building snack bar, and fountain were released by the Hotel and Restaurant, Department yesterday.

The west campus cafeteria will remain open until Friday, June 17. Hours for the cafeteria will be from 7 to 10:15 a.m. and from 10:45 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily except on the last day of finals week, when it will remain open only until one o'clock.

In the basement of the Science Building, the snack bar is scheduled to remain open until the end of finals week, although it may be closed on the last two days.

The west campus fountain will close on Wednesday, June 15.

Immediately after the college closes its doors for the summer, the Hotel and Restaurant Department will begin to move from its present west campus location to its new home in the Student Union Building.

Much of the new equipment which the department will use in the operation of its new cafeteria has already arrived and is at present being installed.

When the new cafeteria opens in the fall semester, the schedules of operation will be the same as at present, although they may be adjusted if patronage increases or decreases. It has been estimated that there will be an increase in the use of the cafeteria due to the greater convenience of the new location. The department's move from the west campus will be part of an overall evacuation of the old grounds.

Library Hours In Finals Week Listed

Because of the annual Faculty Association luncheon in honor of college President Louis G. Conlan, the Cloud Hall library will be closed Thursday, June 16, from 12 noon to 3 p.m., according to Edward E. Sandys, dean of semiprofessional courses here.

The library will close for the summer vacation at 2 p.m., Friday, June 17.

Team Members Win Medals For Sharpshooting

By Bob Kauth

Winners of the inter-departmental campus pistol matches and members of the intercollegiate pistol team were honored June 6 at the annual Campus Police dinner held at the New Tivoli Restaurant.

Participants in the inter-departmental pistol tourney were given first and second place gold medal awards in the master, expert, sharp-shooter and marksmanship classes. A third place medal was also awarded in the marksmanship class because of the large number of entries.

Philip Moore, captain of the campus pistol team, received the first place medal in the master shot class, and second place was won by Duncan Snell. First and second place expert awards were given to Lee Traner and Lee Hargus, respectively. Richard Dunn received first and John Burns second place awards for the sharpshooters. In the marksmanship class Robert Dagitz, Rudy Hoffman and Don Baker were awarded with first, second and third place medals, in that order.

When San Jose State College challenged the campus police force to a .38 caliber pistol tourney, a five-man intercollegiate pistol team was selected by Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

On May 27, both teams proved their abilities at San Jose by shooting to a 1211 deadlock, but Fitzgerald won for the college when he shot out the checkmate with John Miller, pistol and criminology instructor at San Jose. Fitzgerald's total score was 254 and Miller's 219 out of a possible 300.

Moore, who is also the captain of the intercollegiate pistol team, led the campus team with a score of 265.

CAB, Council Pass Amendment As Dollard Cites Poor Attendance

Because of the poor attendance at the meetings of the Club Activities Board, an attendance amendment was passed by both CAB and Student Council, Ed Dollard, CAB chairman, stated last week.

The amendment requires every organization to have a representative at every meeting or an approved proxy. In the case of the absence of the CAB representative, any member of the organization may take his place at the approval of CAB.

Any organization failing to have a representative at three meetings during the semester will be sent a warning notice by the CAB chairman.

Lack of representation at five meetings will cause the organization to be placed on a probationary status for a period of 30 days during which time the organization relinquishes its right to vote in CAB.

If seven or more meetings are missed during the semester the organization's charter will be revoked, subject to the approval of CAB and the Dean of Student Activities.

Service Facilities Open During Recess

Several service facilities will be opened at the college during the summer recess. Although there will be no classes, the registrar's office, the counseling office, and the veterans' office, in S1344, will remain open.

Both offices will be open Monday through Friday. The hours will be 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the registrar's office and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. for the veterans' office through July 30.

The placement office will stay open until June 24. The library will be closed during the summer.

3 IRC Members Attend UN Conference June 20

Three foreign students from the college will participate in the United Nations Conference from Monday, June 20, to Friday, June 24.

Marie Louis Carl, Leonidas G. Koulos and Karima Mughannon, official representatives of the International Relations Club, are the students who will join the group discussion of common campus problems in the field of UN education.

In addition to visiting official sessions of the UN Conference, student delegates will attend UN film showings and special exhibits which are sponsored by the Specialized Agencies.

Michael Kosinski, Guardsman staff photographer and a photography major here, won first prize in the Herm Lenz amateur photo contest, conducted by the San Francisco Examiner.

Announcement of Kosinski's selection as the big winner in competition was made in the Sunday, June 5, Examiner. The first prize consists of over $200 worth of photographic equipment, including a Voigtlander Vito B35 mm camera and case, a Bewi exposure meter, a Viewlex slide projector, and a case of Sylvania flash bulbs.

Kosinski came to the college after spending 3½ years at Mexico City College studying the same subject. A confirmed camera enthusiast, Kosinski hopes to make his permanent home in San Francisco.

This Is Dead Week— You've Time To Cram For That Last Exam

No extracurricular activities have been scheduled for this week, introducing for the first time a Dead Week at the college.

When the social calendar was drawn up for this semester's social functions, including club meetings and rallies, the week before final examinations was purposely left blank to allow (in theory) time for students to study for the tests.

There will be no college hour this Friday, June 10.

Men And Women Associated Student Members Vie For AS Card Sale Honors; Advantages Are Offered

Sales of Associated Student cards have been "better than expected" during the first two weeks of the sale campaign, Emory Lebonville, card sales chairman, announced here this week.

The sales contest between the Associated Women and Associated Men Students which began this Monday will continue through Friday, October 14, with awards being given to the winning organization and also to the individual student selling most cards. During the contest period, cards may be purchased from any of the authorized AWS and AMS representatives, Lebonville said.

EMORY LEBONVILLE, Associated Student card sales chairman.

Among the many advantages presented to student card holders, Lebonville pointed out, are free or reduced admission to the college's football games, various dances, theatrical productions and other social activities, discounts at local theaters and stores, and the privilege of voting for Associated Student officers.

By purchasing a card, a student automatically becomes a member of the Associated Students and thereby helps to provide funds which are essential for the support of athletic teams and other extra-curricular activities.

Lebonville expressed hope that all students who have not yet purchased an AS card will do so in the near future so that a well-balanced activities program can be worked out to benefit all students.

Lebonville took individual honors in the Associated Student card sales contest between the men and women students last semester. He sold a total of 109 Associated Student cards. Lebonville was awarded with a trophy which was presented to him by Bob Johnson, president of the Associated Men Students here last semester.

Phi Beta Delta Dance This Friday

Phi Beta Delta fraternity will hold its annual Shipwreck Dance this Friday night in the west campus auditorium, according to Noel Vivion, president of the fraternity.

Abe Battat and his Moon Glows will play for the event, which will be held from 9 p.m. until midnight.

The entire student body is invited to attend, Vivion said, and tickets will be sold at the student bank and by members of the fraternity at $1.50 per couple. All are requested to dress shipwreck style, which may be middies, navy whites, or beachcomber trousers.

The auditorium will be decorated to resemble an island, with palm leaves, flowers, fishing nets, and even a shipwrecked boat.

New Leadership Major Announced

In order to guide students in developing responsible citizenship, thereby laying their foundations to lead more useful lives, the college has established a community leadership major, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of the Division of Instruction here.

Combined in this new major are several general college courses forming a curriculum which includes community recreation, political science, and home economics subjects.

Three courses of special interest to students active in Associated Student affairs are included in the Community Leadership curriculum. They are Club Activities Management, Assembly and Rally Leadership, and Student Government. Student Government enrollment is limited to students holding AS offices.

This program is designed to acquaint students with their cultural heritage and the environment in which they live.

Students planning to embark into such fields as teaching, physical education instruction, social welfare, and community leadership careers should be especially interested in this major.

Last year's recreational leadership major was revised this semester because, ". . . it tended to be too restrictive in the sense that the program was limited only to those students who were working toward that career," Luckmann explained.

Dean Lists Dates For College Hour

Meetings of college clubs and organizations will take place during the college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., Friday, September 30, Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities, announced yesterday.

Each club meeting will be held in the same room it was assigned to last semester.

Activities for future college hours are scheduled as follows: October 7, bonfire rally; October 14, Club Day; October 21, midterms, no college hour; October 27, homecoming rally; November 4, faculty-student coffee hour; November 11, holiday; November 18, rally; November 25, holiday; December 2, midterms, no college hour; December 9, rally, choir; December 16, club meetings; January 6, election rally; January 13, double college hour, faculty-soph game; January 20, no college hour, dead week.

Ralph Hillsman Named Dean

RALPH HILLSMAN, new assistant dean of student activities here, takes over post vacated a year ago when Dean Louis Batmale was promoted to supervision of semi-professional courses.

Former Ram Cage Mentor Captained First Championship Team Here, Coached 'Greatest' Quintet In 1950

By Don Ball

Twenty years after he captained the first organized and championship inter-collegiate basketball team here at the college, Ralph Hillsman last month was appointed assistant dean in charge of student activities by action of the Board of Education.

Hillsman succeeds Louis Batmale, now dean of Semi-Professional Courses here, who from 1949 to September, 1954, occupied Hillsman's new position.

After leaving the college, Hillsman transferred and later was graduated from the University of California. He then joined the faculty of Lassen Junior College where he coached the basketball, football and track teams.

In his first year at Lassen, 1939, he guided each team to conference championships.

Two years at Lassen were followed by four in the Navy stationed at St. Mary's Pre-Flight School.

Hillsman returned to the college, this time as the basketball coach, where he won the State Junior College Championship in his first season. Never in Hillsman's nine years of coaching here has he had a team finishing lower than third. The crowning glory came in 1950 when the Hillsman-coached Ram cagers went to Kansas to participate and nearly win the National Junior College title.

Looking at this season's basketball team, Hillsman commented, "I think we are very fortunate in getting Sid Phelan away from the high school circuit. I'm sure that he'll make the basketball picture look better than ever."

Hillsman's new post will find him advising the Associated Students in all their activities. He says that he is glad that he's "still working directly with the students — there are just more teams."

Hillsman's new office may be found on the first floor of the Science Building in Room 127.

Portables Open Here By Nov. 1

Because the lease has expired on the west campus, six portable building in pairs of three are now being constructed here, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, reported yesterday.

Construction will be completed in October. "Students can anticipate occupying and using these facilities before the first of November," Anderson announced. Each building will have an individual gas heating system.

One of the portable buildings will be built across from the northeastern corner of Cloud Hall, and it will house the music department of the college. General classes will be held in the building now being erected across from the southeastern corner of Cloud Hall.

The remaining structure at the northeastern corner of the George D. Smith Student Union Building will serve as the headquarters for student activities.

Veteran Benefit Deadline Is Today

All veterans who have not yet applied for their veteran benefits are urged to do so immediately, according to Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of veterans' affairs. The final date to file applications and receive full credit is today.

Applications can be made at the Veterans Assistance Office in Room 134 in the Science Building.

Major Attendance Regulations Are Strictly Enforced This Semester

Last year's major revisions of the college re-admission and attendance regulations will continue this semester on the same trend — that of stricter enforcement, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

Because of the high enrollment increase, the college's scholastic requirements have also been tightened and must be maintained by the students at the college.

Some of the students who were disqualified from the college for the first time have been reinstated on the recommendation of their counsellors. Second-time applicants were allowed to return only with the consent of Brady.

Regular attendance at every meeting of all classes for which the student is registered is required. Successful completion of college work depends upon the regularity of the student's attendance, regardless of any outstanding scholastic aptitudes he may show.

Students are allowed three unexcused absences and the equal number of late arrivals to a class. Those who abuse these privileges will be warned by the instructor that they face possible expulsion from class with a grade of "F" on record. After such action has been taken the student may no longer drop the course to avoid the failing mark.

Counsellors Waddington Blair and Howard Schoon have been appointed head counsellors and are to assist Brady with the division of student welfare functions. They replace Alva McMillan, who is now with the business education department.

"Students failing to maintain the necessary grade point average of .5 (a "C" average), will have their standing at the college jeopardized," Schoon warned.

For the convenience of the students the deadline to file petitions for adding courses or changing sections was extended from September 23 to September 26.

New Instructors Added To Faculty This Semester

Sixteen new instructors have been added to the faculty of City College this Fall semester.

The new instructors are Joseph E. Chapman, retired Navy captain, engineering; Geraid Cresci, formerly a member of the faculty at Lincoln High School, business; John S. Elworthy, Presidio Junior High, English.

Harold Friedman, Balboa High, business; Morris Grodsky, Benjamin Franklin Adult, chemistry; James McConnell, business; Sheldon Morton, Veterans Counselling Center, counsellor; Charles Ohman, San Benito Junior College, Hollister, business; J. Sidney Phelan, Washington High, physical education.

Edward Rogers, Balboa High, engineering; James B. Runner, San Francisco State College, life sciences; Wallace A. Sellman, Monroe Elementary, engineering; Everett Silvia, Polytechnic High, business.

Charles Stewart, Monterey Peninsula College, life sciences; Jesse Veal, John O'Connell, mathematics; and Irving Witt, San Francisco State College, social sciences.

Newly appointed instructors who were serving as long term substitutes last year are Margaret Cain, English and communications; James Gilmore, counsellor; Lene Johnson, physical education; John Mackey, English and communications; Dwight Straub, life sciences; and Warren White, English and communications.

Returning from leaves of absence are Margaret Ancker, Sidney Ancker, Flossita Badger, Mildred Barnard, Eleanor Blinn, Barbara Brackett, Miriam Escher, John Gaddy, Charles Lamp, Henry Leff, Eugene Mead, and Lester Tarnopol.

Campus Police Add 10 Members To Student Force

In a ceremony at the Hall of Justice, 10 new members for this semester's Campus Police force will be sworn in by the Chief of Police of San Francisco, Chief of Campus Police Bob Dagitz said last week.

The new officers are John Barrelier, John Boyle, Jack DuBois, Robert Gomez, Paul Lillis, Harry Majors, Ronald Rainville, Charles Reske, George Rodgers, and Wallace Stewart. Eleven men who served on last semester's Campus Police force will serve again this semester. The returning officers are James Anderson, John Burns, Dagitz, Lee Hargus, Harold Hockett, Peter Neilson, James Nelson, Ralph Pierotti, William Traner, Don Wilson, and William Wittman. Hargus is assistant chief of police.

These men have charge of directing traffic at Gates One and Two of the west campus parking lot, issuing citations to parking and traffic violators on campus, and keeping order at Associated Student activities such as dances, to which four officers are assigned.

Parking violators receiving citations are required by law to report to the San Francisco City Hall within 11 days to pay their fines. A $2 fine is charged for parking on the west campus without a permit, for parking in a white or green zone, and for parking on city, county, or state property. Violators are subject to a $5 fine for parking in either a red or yellow zone, double parking, and for parking by a fire hydrant.

Parking areas for students with permits are located south of the men's gymnasium and on the west campus. Faculty parking areas are behind Cloud Hall and south of the Student Union Building.

Campus Police pistol teams will compete again this semester.

Plans Underway For Frosh Ball

Site of the semi-annual Freshman Ball, to be held Saturday, October 8, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight, will be the Surf Club by Playland-at-the-Beach, according to Don Garrison, Freshman president.

Assisting Garrison are newly appointed officers Dee Noodlman, vice-president, and Louise von Emster, secretary.

To encourage a large number of students to attend, only one Associated Student card per couple will be required for admittance. Appropriate dress for the evening will be semi-formal.

Cost to students without AS cards is undetermined, as the Freshman budget has not yet been fully passed.

In the past a "cutest couple" contest has been the highlight of the dance, Garrison said, and he hopes this year will be no exception.

Everyone is urged to attend, Garrison stated. A large turnout of freshman students will make the dance a success, Garrison added.

AS Membership Obligations Don't End With Card Purchase

AT THE present time, there are some 2000 students on this campus who have expressed a desire to take part in student activities. The Associated Student card that each of them purchased gives them the right to do just that, but unfortunately many suppose that their privileges and obligations stop there.

The innumerable signs stressing the importance of membership in the AS paint an attractive picture, pointing out the various benefits and privileges of owning an AS card, but these benefits and privileges, when taken seriously, become obligations as well.

If interest and participation halts with the $5 expenditure, the money is virtually wasted. Certainly, it helps the entire student body and furthers student activities, but that is not enough.

Is it enough to know that you may attend dances and football games—and then never take advantage of the privilege? Is it enough to know that your money has helped the Associated Students and the student body in general—and never know just what your money went for? And is it enough to help pay for student activities—and then never participate in the events that you have helped pay for? The answer, of course, is emphatically no.

The college stages numerous dances, most of them sponsored by the AS, and this year's Ram football team, just as the rest of the college's athletic squads, promises to be top quality. Yet both of these activities suffer without student support, the support of the the students who paid for them. The Student Council, governing—and spending—body of the AS, is again an intelligent, diversified group, truly interested in the welfare of the college, but 14 leaders cannot govern nearly 6000 without interested followers to lend ideas and support.

Thus student activities do not consist of merely buying an AS card and forgetting it. You are cheating yourself and every other member of the student body if you do not buy an AS card, and then use it continually. Only in this way can student activities remain just that—active participation by students in student-sponsored events.

Hillsman 'An Equally Great Adviser'

IN A MOVE that we are sure will prove more than satisfactory to both students and administration, Ralph Hillsman, since 1946 the head basketball coach here, was recently elevated to the position of assistant dean in charge of student activities.

Hillman will have no easy time following Louis Batmale, who held the job until this year. Batmale was himself promoted a year ago, but held both jobs until Hillsman's appointment. Batmale was a popular and capable counsellor in student activities, and his promotion was greeted by the students with mixed emotions—happiness for him in his new job and sorrow at "losing" him to the higher administration.

In Hillsman, however, the administration has found someone who will be equally popular and equally adept, a difficult task in itself. We have had the pleasure of working with him before, and we speak quite sincerely when we say that, while we have "lost" a fine man and a good friend, we have found an equally great adviser.

We see nothing but success for student activities under the new dean, and we certainly speak for every member of the student body when we wish Ralph Hillsman every success and best wishes in his new job.

The Spectator — Clever Writers Win Friends, Minds, Money

By Don Ball

LUCRATIVE and promising are two adjectives which might be applied to a field wide open to the young man or woman who is at once both brash and convincing in manner. The field? Inspiration peddling; variously labeled as ways to think, live or ingratiate one's self with one's fellow man.

Recent years have seen a score of volumes on methods of holding the good thought flooding the market; the most successful of these topped the best-seller list for over two years.

Summary of the volumes boils down to a repetition of the vogue first gendered over 20 years ago by Emile Coue who extolled the virtues of the daily chant: "Day by day, in every way, I'm getting better and better and better."

Only change in this idea wrought by today's authors has been to add the invocation of the Almighty; oftimes mingling religion, albeit indiscriminately, with self-improvement often measured by money.

Although authors of these undoubtedly inspiring texts usually strongly advise the invocation of the Almighty in commercial ventures, they do not make themselves clear on their attitude toward people, such as the winner of a recent national beauty contest whose first words upon being crowned were, "Thank God for giving me the talent."

Seemingly, anyone with a modicum of intelligence and a maximum of perseverance could pen one of these volumes; the only ability needed being that of making 80,000 words do the work of 10.

To do this the prospective author may embroider upon his original theme by showing his readers that they need have no fear of immeasurable success, no reason for disliking money, and most of all, no qualms about asking for help from a supreme being in even the most mercenary of matters.

Rewards of a spiritual nature undoubtedly await the author of an inspirational epistle, for many receive a genuine aid to peace of mind from such a volume.

Find a new way to tell people that their worries are in their mind; mix well with brash assuredness in your presentation; add the convincing ways of an old time medicine man and the world is yours.

George D. Smith Student Union Serves Both Faculty And Students

College Growth Continues With New Addition

By Bob Kanth

Readily apparent this semester is the architectonic (definition, showing design) $700,000 addition to the facilities of the college, the George D. Smith Student Union Building.

This new headquarters of the Hotel and Restaurant Department has been so designated in honor of George D. Smith, general manager of the Hotel Mark Hopkins in San Francisco, in recognition of his 20 years of interest in and service to the college.

In 1935 Smith was appointed as the Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the then potential Hotel and Restaurant Department of the college. This department completed organization in 1936, and Smith continues to serve as the chairman of the department's advisory committee.

One of the principal activities executed in this new edifice is the serving of an estimated 2500 daily meals to student and faculty members of the college. This is accomplished by 135 Hotel and Restaurant Department students and a minimum number of civil service employees, under the supervision of faculty member John Dunn.

"To efficiently serve the students at a minimum expense while operating on a non-profit basis" is the paramount function of the cafeteria, according to Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Department. "With their support and co-operation, minimum prices can be maintained," he added.

Students are served in the spacious cafeteria which is easily discerned by the numerous and small but dubiously useful windows that are abundantly distributed about the complete northern wall. Here the meals are served on the "open-square" system.

Literally this means a square which is open. In practice it signifies that the customer (without standing in line), meanders about the inside of the square selecting whatever nourishment he desires. He then retires to devour his meal.

Unfortunately, before he reaches the seating facilities, he must pass by one of the four cash-collectors where (again unfortunately) he is required to pay a certain sum of money determined by the quantity and quality of his chosen meal.

Adjacent to the cafeteria the fountain and the Ramporium are sharing a capacious room. The finance office is operating from neighboring Rooms 106 and 107, and the newly fashioned faculty dining room is located in the southwestern corner of the edifice.

Basic facilities necessary for the efficient operation of the Hotel and Restaurant Department — kitchens, storerooms, offices and a classroom—complete the tour of another chapter in the growth and evolution of the college.

Hysteria Abates

Confusion Returns To Manuel's Environment After Revolt, Calm

The Plaza is quiet, a death-like stillness now reigns, the confusion and hysteria of the crowds are over at last. No more slogans are to be heard, no more speeches to be dramatically presented.

The revolution is a success; the tyrant has been ousted. The man who for a decade was law over my country is now banished, outlawed.

These are the thoughts which now pass through the lonely figure, sitting in solitude and forming a downcast shape, outlined by the ruins of the deserted Plaza, recent scene of a furious skirmish.

Manuel, the student, is alone, melancholy with his disillusions and sorrows. He is overcome by grief over the defeat that his compatriots have suffered.

He recollects how ten years ago, when he was still a youth, he was a staunch, zealous supporter of this man who is now defamed as a traitor to his country.

"Does this mean that I am also an infamous traitor?" he asks himself, almost weeping. "Where have we failed in our attempt to attain an ideal system of government. Our country is as economically stable as the other. But it is useless, this bloodshed has been in vain, we will never have a democracy here."

Suddenly the student rises; he must soon leave his country, never to return. The vacation is over. The semester will soon commence at the college in San Francisco, where he has been studying as a foreign student.

Killer Capture Reward Over That For Child

If you read the September 20 edition of a certain morning daily, the paper would have informed you that a three-day-old infant had been kidnapped from a Mount Zion Hospital nursery.

The article would have told you that a reward toward the baby's safe return had been posted by the hospital officials; the reward: $1000, just one-tenth the amount that the same paper informed was being offered for the apprehension of the killers of Serge Rubinstein, the late and unlimited international playboy and draft dodger.

Bugles in the Canyon . . . Workers in the Montgomery district with offices near the Hall of Justice have learned to expect around 4 p.m. the discordant squawking of a hard blown trumpet or bugle with which some free spirit has been cutting loose within the confines of a building near the corner of Montgomery and Clay Streets.

The anonymous bugler has been starting his mid-afternoon clarion call approximately the same time homeward bound Montgomery Streeters start filing out of nearby buildings, probably wondering if the U. S. Cavalry won't come charging down through the long shadows of the Montgomery Street canyon.

A triton is a sea god in Greek mythology, who is identified by a conch shell trumpet with which he roused or calmed the waves. In modern times the term has been used by zoologists to denote a genus of marine snails.

IT TOOK a member of sophomore council to figure out a way to beat the long registration lines. Person: Bob Frick. Method: reverse field of attack by proceeding amidst shouts of protest from irate students and instructors, directly to end of line. Result: Made all-time record for receiving registration card, and with no classes, yet.

NO MAN'S LAND, or the AWS Coketail party, was silently and effectively infiltrated by a male member of the student body. What could have been an embarrassing incident was equally silently and effectively curtailed by Mary Golding, dean of women, as she diplomatically steered the guest to a corner table, from which he contentedly joined the party.

YOU JUST CAN'T PLEASE 'EM. Before the more frequently visited portions of the college (fountain, cafeteria) were moved to the new Student Union building, the main complaints of the students were directed toward the mountain climbing bit that had to be done before reaching the Science Building. Well, now they've brought the eating spots up the hill, but gripes are the same. Latest consensus shows great student belief that the side approach to the learning spots is far steeper than the front approach. Recently overheard from conversation: "They ought to put in an elevator."

And as history repeats itself, the same voice can be heard in the cafeteria: "Bus your dishes," over cries of "Excelsior!"

"Soda pop" and other carbonated beverages got their start as medicines. "Pop" was introduced in the United States by a Philadelphia doctor who had carbonated water prepared as a medicine for his patients. Later fruit juice was added as a flavor.

Phelan Named New Court Boss As Former Mentor Hillsman Moves To Administrative Post

By Marlo Cassulo

Sid Phelan, rated one of the outstanding young coaches in San Francisco, has been named head basketball mentor here and will greet an almost entirely new team when cage practice begins on November 1.

The former Washington High School coach replaces Ralph Hillsman, who moves up to his new post as assistant dean in charge of student activities. In taking over the reins as the new basketball mentor, Phelan said: "I will have a big pair of shoes to fill." Last year's squad won 20 while it dropped 6 and wound up in third place in the Big Eight Conference under the likeable Hillsman.

Phelan coached at Napa Junior College for two years before handling the Washington High School chores for eight seasons. He was one of the most successful coaches in the Academic Athletic Association, San Francisco prep league.

In 1952 his 110, 120, 130 and varsity teams won the city championships in their divisions. The varsity played in the Tournament of Champions in Berkeley but lost to McClymonds in the final game.

Phelan was in the Navy five years before going to Washington. He is a graduate of College of Marin.

When it was announced that Hillsman would be made assistant dean, Phelan was picked to replace him as head coach by President Louis G. Conlan and the appointment was approved by the Board of Education. Phelan officially began his new job last week on September 20.

There is a possibility that only three men from last year's club will return. They are Doug Hom, Wally Papke and John Rudometkin.

Asked what kind of defense he will use, Phelan said, "Basically we will use a man for man defense." However, he made it clear that he will employ a zone defense on occasion. He also prefers the fast break type of offense. "We will run a lot," the new mentor said.

Three of his former Washington basketballers will be on the team. Wally Papke, Aldo DiPasqun, and Chew Jeong will rejoin their old coach.

Some of the others who are expected to turn out are Leroy Thomas and Walt Morgan from Mission, Al Mock from Lowell, Dan Curley of Sacred Heart, Rich Di Conti of St. Ignatius, and Reggie Jones of Polytechnic.

Reports have also indicated that Clarence Grider, All-American prep center from Lowell, who attended the college last semester, will turn out for his first year of college basketball.

Ram Cindermen To Compete In Cross Country

For the first time in its history the Big Eight Conference has organized a cross-country schedule, with City College expected to field as strong a team as any school in the conference. The team will work out on the not yet completed course, which will be a tour of almost three miles.

Stalwarts of the team include Henry Stroughter, a two year letterman in track and a member of the Northern California Track Champion Rams of 1955. Also returning from the track squad are Dennis Moorehead, Bill Tuison, Talbert Webb, and Harold Hill. They will form a nucleus around which the rest of the team will be built.

Such high school notables as Ray Batz, last year's San Francisco high school cross-country champ; Roy Buckman from Balboa; Lloyd Costello, Frank Chase and Manuel Stimpson of Poly; Bob Underwood from Lowell, and Myron Zimmerman of Washington will make City College a sure threat in the newly formed cross-country competition.

The schedule as now formed is as follows: October 8—Stockton at San Francisco; October 21—Sacramento at Sacramento; October 28—Modesto at San Francisco; November 18—Santa Rosa at San Francisco; November 2 and 3—Big Eight cross-country meet at Santa Rosa.

Key Intramural Sports Outlined

Such sports as badminton, basketball, football and tennis were outlined recently by director Alex Schwarz as the key activities in the new fall intramural program here.

There is a possibility that softball will also be played as a part of the program if the field is playable and conditions permit. Schwarz added that volleyball might also be included in the activities at a later date.

A complete schedule for this semester's intramural program has not been assembled yet due to the football coaching commitments of Schwarz, but the posting of the schedule will be announced in the near future.

An intramural league for all veterans and other students who do not include Physical Education in their programs will also be organized if there is sufficient interest expressed in this by that group.

Those interested in the intramural sports program are urged by Schwarz to sign up at the men's gymnasium for whatever sport they are interested in, and to form teams beforehand if possible.

Booters Prepare For League Opener

With three returning top performers of last year's soccer team and several promising newcomers, Coach Roy Diederichsen expects to field a strong team when the Rams travel to Santa Clara for their first league game on October 15.

The three returning veterans of last season's runner-up squad are Antonio Quiteno, who captured All-Conference honors with his effective performance at his inside left position; Ben Schweizer, captain and outstanding fullback; and Bob Palma, top scorer who also won All-Conference honors. Experienced players from local high schools and from many parts of the world promise to make it another successful season for the Rams.

In drawing a bye for the first week of league play, Diederichsen has gained a valuable extra week for practice games and drills which will help him to determine the strongest possible starting team.

Last season the University of San Francisco Dons edged the Rams 2-1 in the final play-off game to win the Northern California Inter-collegiate Conference championship for the sixth consecutive year. Fighting to take over the title will be six other teams which make up the league. They are City College, Stanford, California, San Francisco State, San Jose State and Santa Clara.

Football Movies For First Block SF Meet

Entertainment and refreshments will highlight the opening meeting of the Block SF society for the fall semester on October 7th in Cloud Hall, adviser Bill Fischer announced recently.

Football movies of either the 1955 Shrine East-West game or a recent San Francisco Forty Niner contest will be shown. The newly elected president of the Block SF, Dick Mannini, will preside over the meeting.

Other new fall semester officers in the organization are Willie Hudson, vice president; Rich Martucci, secretary-treasurer, and Kent Scovil, sergeant-at-arms.

Rams Rip Santa Ana, 55-7

College's Ground Game Beats Dons In Opener

City College's highly-rated Rams, surprising even their ardent supporters, unleased a fast and powerful running game to swamp weak Santa Ana, 55-7, in their season opener at Santa Ana on September 23.

The Rams netted 411 yards on the ground and the passing game, with quarterback Les Barros doing most of the chucking, added another 180 yards for the amazing net of 591 yards.

Coach Grover Klemmer's starting halfbacks, rated too small by many observers, showed enough speed and agility to offset any lack of weight. Mack Calhoun, 155 pound seatback, chalked up 124 yards to lead the San Francisans with a 12.4 average, while Al Chatman darted to 72 yards in only six carries. Fullback Shirlee McCormick added another 109 to give the starting running backs 303 yards gained.

The Rams were off to a fast start when, after holding the hosting Dons on the first series of the game, they opened the scoring. Barros, mixing his plays well, called on Chatman for the large chunks, 38 and 12 yarders, and after a penalty had set the Rams back to the Santa Ana ten, Calhoun broke over left tackle untouched for the ten and a score.

City College scored again in the first period when Calhoun scampered 47 yards to set up McCormick's eight-yard plunge. The drive was almost stalled by another penalty, one of many as the visitors were penalized 165 yards and the quick-whistling officials added another 96 yards against the Santa Anans.

Klemmer's charges scored another pair in the second quarter, with Barros throwing to Chatman for 47 yards and a marker and reserve fullback Gene Crummey going over center from the two. Santa Ana gained their only points in that period when, with their running game effectively halted by the Rams, they called on quarterback Tom Allen who hit halfback Chuck Swinden from 39 yards out.

With a 24-7 halftime lead, Klemmer substituted freely, but the reserves continued to run up yardage and points. McCormick went two yards for his second touchdown of the contest and Sandy Mainick plugged nine for another score.

In the fourth period, with the first string almost entirely out of the game, fullback Dick Mannini, who carried the ball only three times, scored twice, sweeping right end from the nine-yard line and then going 25 around the same flank. Guard Mike Dunne added the final TD when he intercepted a Tom Baldwin pass and returned it 25 yards to paydirt.

Defensively the Rams, led by Willie Hudson and Stan Keith, guards, and center Bill Canihan, were equally impressive, holding the Santa Ana eleven to a minus five yards netted on the ground.

The only apparent Ram weakness against the outweighed and undermanned Dons was in the kicking department. With Barros and Garlin Bluford doing the major share of the kicking, City College missed their first six conversion attempts. On the seventh try quarterback Doug Jones, from Roosevelt High School in Honolulu, finally split the uprights, kicking barefooted, to provide one of the high points, crowdwise, of the otherwise long-drawn-out and somewhat dull game.

LES BARROS, left, veteran quarterback for the Rams and an All-Conference selection at that position last year, is shown above on a handoff to ace fullback Shirlee McCormick. The hard-running Ram back was the club's leading ground gainer in 1954, and is expected to be a top threat again this year with his fierce running up the middle. The accurate tossing of Barros should make for a well-rounded attack.

Nineteen Returning Ram Veterans Bolster Squad As Cal Aggies Test Strength Of Klemmermen

With outstanding personnel and the possibility of bettering even last year's outstanding record, the Ram football squad will meet the California Agricultural School's Junior Varsity gridders this Friday at Davis in their second match of the new season. Game time is 2 p.m.

Nineteen lettermen have returned, most of them from last year's fine team that compiled seven wins against one tie and a single loss, a 14-12 heartbreaker to Santa Rosa that shattered Ram hopes of an undefeated season, the Big Eight championship, and a possible Junior Rose Bowl bid.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

ANY football club with 19 returning lettermen, including three All Conference selections, obviously must be called the team to beat in its league, and although a lot of pressure goes with this title, the City College eleven this season must assume that role.

There have been losses, naturally. Such performers as Ken Orzell, All-Conference tackle; Rudy Lopez, the halfback-veteran of last year's club; and Alex Groswird, an outstanding guard who is now first string at Oregon State, are all absent from the '55 picture.

Despite these detractions, there is still the advantage of having a wealth of experience to start with in the form of the lettermen, plus the incoming standouts from the high schools.

A look at the rest of the Big Eight helps to gauge the Rams' strength from what experience and depth the others have.

Stockton and West Contra Costa will each have strong contenders for Big Eight honors. The Mustangs lost quarterback Junior Reynosa and ace back Gene Campbell, but George Graham, who played on the 1952 championship Stockton club, looks like the man to fill Campbell's shoes.

The Comets have lost but two conference games in three years, and will be rugged again, but lack of depth in the line may hurt their chances.

Santa Rosa, Big Eight co-champ in 1954, finds itself without Don Bossert, one of the most devastating runners ever seen in these parts, who last year sparked the Bearcubs to numerous victories. The north bay eleven also lost their top passing combo, quarterback Del Mobley and rangy end Mel Powell.

Sacramento and Modesto each had an outstanding halfback last year, around whom the offense was built. Both men, Farrell Funston and Gene Petersen, are gone, and apparently the offensive power of these two teams will suffer for it. Improved depth in the line for both the Panthers and Pirates may offset lack of experience in the backfield.

Oakland and San Mateo are unknown quantities, the former having its first fling at football this year. Both the Thunderbirds and Bulldogs will depend largely upon untried players for most of the support in 1955.

The Rams opened the fall campaign against Santa Ana last Friday night in the southland, and will engage the Cal Aggie Junior Varsity at Davis this Friday afternoon. The Aggie contest is a step up in class for the college eleven, and a victory will probably boom even further the rising value of football stock here.

The interior line was also strengthened by newcomers. Tom Kiefer and Hap Gilbert at tackle and Dick Max and Ed Plutte at center have all looked outstanding. The guard spot, one of the outstanding strengths on the club according to observers, boasts not only the four lettermen but freshmen Charles Gilson, Jim Poppin and Skip Wallace, plus Mike Dunne, an outstanding guard who played some last year but missed a letter.

The outstanding backfield prospect to date among the newcomers seems to be Garlin Bluford, all-city back from Mission High School, whom Klemmer calls "as good offensively as any back on the squad." Johnny Panagakis, a long-tossing quarterback, also is highly rated by observers.

Despite the overall picture, Klemmer refuses to become overly optimistic. He points out the amount of luck needed to wrap up a good winning season, and reminds of the two single-point wins that the Rams eked out last year.

"The personnel is good," he admits, "but we are weak in some spots and will have to strengthen those spots before we go very far." Many bystanders seem to agree that the main weaknesses, on the surface, are a lack of depth at tackle, a key position, and the lack of weight at the halfbacks. The majority of Klemmer's running backs are of the scatback variety and although they are for the most part fast and shifty they lack beef.

The halfback situation was further weakened when Rudy Lopez, a speedy and powerful runner and the Rams' leading scorer last year, left the team and the college. Kent Scovil, a regular last year and heavily counted on this season, could add heft and power to the spot, but he is still recovering from badly damaged ribs suffered over the summer and will not be ready until nearly mid-season.

Undermanned Council Says Yes To Budgets; AS Card Discounts Under Scrutiny

Associated Student card sales and budget approvals were taken up by Student Council last week.

Totaling $305, four budgets were passed unanimously by the council members. A budget of $25 was allocated to the Dean of Women.

The Dean of Men received a budget of $30.40. An allocation of $150 was approved for the administration. For the Freshman Ball, a partial budget of $100 was allocated to serve as a down payment in renting the Surf Club.

DEAN WOODS, president of the Associated Students.

On September 15, at the first meeting of Student Council, Finance Committee Chairman Joyce Weaver presented a report which asked for a budget of $120 for the Social Committee. The budget was approved.

All budgets were required to be presented to the Finance Committee by September 26. Miss Weaver announced. They are then reviewed. Other members on the Finance Committee are Teokie Radillo, Lawrence Lowe and Barbara Polster.

Emory Lebonville, card sales chairman, said that the sale of AS cards was over the 2,000 mark. A question arose as to the validity of the discounts shown on the cards. Lebonville answered that the arrangements for the discounts were by word agreement. AS President Dean Woods said that the investments of the AS card holders would be protected and the complaint should be checked. The Fair Trade Law, which forbids discounts on certain articles, was cited by Lebonville.

Three vacancies for Freshman seats on Student Council had three nominations, but only candidate Dick Krammer was found eligible. Nominations were postponed to September 27.

Club Activities Board Chairman Earl Cabrinha announced that October 14 would be the CAB Day dance. The dance will be held in Building 2 with CAB Day activities slated for the women's gymnasium. Petitions for CAB Day are due by October 11, Cabrinha said.

Two vacancies in the AS president's cabinet have been created by resignations. Paul Ortiz resigned from the office of State Information Service Chairman which he also held last semester. Resigning from the office of Campus Affairs Coordinator was Bill Whitney.

Bonfire Rally Is Slated October 7

This semester's first rally, a bonfire, is scheduled Friday night, October 7, on the west campus, Tookie Radillo, Rally Committee chairman, announced yesterday.

Actual plans and time for the rally are tentative, including the possibility of a personal appearance by the Four Freshmen.

Further announced by Miss Radillo were the names of the members of the Rally Committee, which includes Susie Brady, Margie Brown, Al Chatman, Bill Cirimele, Diane Dawson, Lois Fishman, Kay Griffin, Ginny Hase, Susan Herrington, Willie Hudson, Lynn Johnson, Pat Kay, Carol Olson, Barbara Polster, Donna Puccinelli, Darlene Reitz, Sandy Sachs, Wilmette Tollefser, Louise von Emster, and Joyce Weaver.

Officers Elected, Fall Activities Planned By College Organizations

By Antoinette Mannina

BUSINESS meetings occupied most of the week as campus clubs planned rushing affairs, joints and dinners.

Alpha Kappa Rho's new sponsor, Morris Grodsky, was introduced at a business meeting last week. New officers are Bob Tucker, president; Don Terry, vice-president; Jim Scott, treasurer; Bill Anderson, secretary; Al Appleton, custodian; Bill Roberts, pledge master.

Delta Psi Omega, honor drama society, held a business meeting at Carole Waugh's home on Sunday. Officers are Joe Bavaresco, president; Carole Waugh, vice-president; Edwina Moquin, treasurer; Toni Mannina, secretary.

Zeta Phi Sigma's new officers are Dick Mannini, president; John Timossi, vice-president; Rich Martucci, secretary; Bob Robertson, treasurer; Kent Scovil, pledge master.

Kappa Phi held a meeting Monday night to discuss plans for rushing. The sorority's new officers are Jan DiGiovanni, president; Jean Vachon, vice-president; Sandy Martinsen, corresponding secretary; Peggy DeLoTorre, recording secretary; Roberta Singer, treasurer; Barbara Batmale, pledge mistress; Anne Canellos, sergeant-at-arms.

Zeta Chi sorority held a business meeting last week at home of sponsor, Ruth Inskipp. New officers are Martha Dill, president; Joyce Weaver, vice-president; Toni Mannina, treasurer; Corinne Jorgensen, recording secretary; Marlee Dumas, corresponding secretary; Tookie Radillo, pledge mistress; Diane Lundin, sergeant-at-arms.

Alpha Lambda Chi held a business meeting last Thursday at the home of vice-president Kay Griffin. Other officers are Rose Thurman, president; Sue Harrington, corresponding secretary; Darlene Reitz, pledge mistress; Dolores Stoffers, treasurer; Lois Fishman, recording secretary.

New officers of Beta Phi Beta are Tony Banacci, president; Bob Johnson, vice-president; Rich Safley, secretary; Bill Fisher, treasurer; Mario Cassulo, pledge master.

Theta Tau held a joint recently with Gamma Phi Ypsilon. Theme of the affair was School Daze. New officers are Peggy Alexander, president; Marion Chedder, vice-president; Allie Green, corresponding secretary; Neta Bailey, recording secretary; Pat Frodsham, treasurer; Joan Warner, pledge mistress.

New Delta Psi officers are Marilyn Euler, president; Lynn McKowan, vice-president; Dottie Dankworth, corresponding secretary; Sandy Koehler, pledge mistress; Denise Joseph, treasurer; Ellie Benner, parliamentarian; Steffie Rosenthal, alumnae liaison officer; Marilyn Johnson, assistant treasurer; Diane Scott, historian; Arlene Fox, sergeant-at-arms.

Phi Beta Delta held a business meeting last week to discuss plans for their Shipwreck Dance to be held Friday. New officers are Noel Vivion, president; Sid Bernstein, vice-president; Kirk McVean, recording secretary; Cliff Soward, corresponding secretary; Ron Hillman, treasurer; Rolf Jensen, pledge master; Bill Chizar, sergeant-at-arms; Ken Woodruff, historian; Dave Geheringer, custodian.

New officers of the Chinese Students' Club are Steve Chan, president; Marcelle Chou, vice-president; Shirley Quon, recording secretary; Mamie Lum, corresponding secretary. The first event will be the freshman reception on September 30.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon. Information may be submitted to The Guardsman office, S304.

Gone But Not Forgotten

THE WEST CAMPUS, now deserted except for parking and occasional classes in Building 1, is shown in its busier days. Until this semester the temporary buildings located there housed many classes and the majority of the student activities, but with the construction of Cloud Hall and the George D. Smith Student Union Building, the cheerful although somewhat hard-to-reach west campus reverts to the city, with a reservoir planned for its near future.

West Campus Evacuation Due By January 1 As Parking Plans Are Completed; AS Offices Move Too

The west campus of the college will be completely evacuated by January 1, 1956, according to Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management.

The music department will be transferred to portable sections now being built, behind Cloud Hall. Two buildings will be added for general classroom use, and the Associated Student office building will be placed next to the new Student Union building.

Between the men's gymnasium and Cloud Hall and between the field and the Student Union Building, parking areas will be paved, which will serve as facilities for all of the students. In the future, Hurley Village will be razed and the entire area will be used to care for the automobiles of students and faculty.

The Hello Dance was held last Friday in the west campus auditorium, and the Shipwreck Dance will be held there this Friday night. However, at the present, there are no other plans for its future use in student activities. The entire area will be converted into a reservoir. Plans are being formulated at the present, and the Department of Public Welfare is considering covering the reservoir for light recreation use.

First AWS Meet And Party Held

The Associated Women Students, presided over by President Barbara Batmale, held its first meeting of the fall semester on Tuesday, September 20, in the office of Mary Golding, dean of women.

Officers Kay Griffin, vice-president; Juanita Hall, recording secretary; Shelly Dolanos, corresponding secretary; Patty Harris, treasurer, and Marcell Chou, historian, have been at work throughout the summer planning the AWS Coketail Party, which took place on Sunday, September 18, in the new Student Union Building.

More than 200 women students attended the affair, a get-together with entertainment, presented under the chairmanship of Marilyn Sicotte and Darlene Rietz, whose committees decorated the cafeteria and sent the invitations.

The officers expressed their appreciation to the women who worked at the college during the three days of registration.

The next AWS affair will be a tea and fashion show on Thursday, December 8.

Plans are being made now, and President Batmale invited all interested women to come to the AWS office meetings, which are held in Dean Golding's office at 1 o'clock every Tuesday. Names of the chairmen and more information about the fashion show and other activities will be available there. Suggestions and help are always welcomed at any of the meetings, Miss Batmale said.

Guardsman Schedules 12 Issues This Semester

Members of the Publications Board for this semester and a tentative publication schedule for The Guardsman were announced here last week by Gail Alian Moss, board chairman.

The Publications Board will be made up of Dolores Stoffers, Managing Editor of The Guardsman; Dean Woods, president of the Associated Students; Lee Carol Lombard, AS vice-president; Joyce Weaver, chairman of the AS Finance Committee, and Moss. The board is responsible for all printed matter distributed on campus, with the exception of administrative material.

The Guardsman has tentatively planned 11 more issues this semester. Planned dates, according to Moss, are October 5, 19 and 26; November 2, 9, 16 and 23; December 7 and 14; and January 11 and 18.

Revised Serving Hours In Cafeteria Announced

Luncheon facility hours in the George D. Smith Student Union Building on college days were announced last week by Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Department here.

Breakfast and lunch respectively are served in the cafeteria from 7:30 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. and from 10:45 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

Fountain drinks, snacks, sandwiches and coffee are available at the fountain from 8:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Administration Sets Regulations For Building Use

Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management, expressed his views on building regulations today. He emphasized the point that students at the college should act as they would in their homes to benefit themselves and the college.

Anderson said that although there were not many set rules at the college, he expected the students to act in a well-mannered and orderly fashion. Among the set rules, smoking regulations were emphasized.

There is no smoking allowed in any building above the basement level, with the exception of the cafeteria, and all students were cautioned against throwing cigarette butts on the tile floors as they are damaged easily.

Anderson also said that students should not be in classrooms that have no instructors present. If students wish to reserve a classroom for group meetings, they should consult Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, for reservations.

Anderson also warned against vandalism and carelessness leading to fire and also said that such acts hurt the college and the students themselves. The main point, however, that he emphasized was that every student should respect the college and do nothing here that he wouldn't do in his own home.

CAB Petitions Due October 11

First meeting of the Club Activities Board saw the installation of new officers dominating the proceedings.

New officers are Earl Cabrinha, president; Kay Griffin, vice-president; William Chisum, corresponding secretary, and Barbara Mulehay, recording secretary. Ralph Hillsman, assistant dean in charge of student activities, is the faculty adviser for the CAB.

The meeting time of the CAB has been scheduled to be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 1 p.m. in Room C301, which is a conference room in Cloud Hall, Cabrinha announced.

All the petitions for participation in CAB Day are due on Tuesday, October 11, and the CAB Day and its dance will be held Friday, October 14.

Emphasizing the necessity for more active participation of the representatives, Cabrinha stated there will be no smooth coordination without close cooperation from the representatives.

Old Dogs Dislike New Tricks

Students Anti-Union, Bewildered By Definition Of Term 'Lounge'

By Marion Cheader

Above the clatter of dishes, the din of scraping chairs, and the whirr of racing cash registers, can be heard the sad lamentations of those students sometimes known as "second year men," concerning the new Student Union Building.

The basic words seems to be "I wish we were still in the west campus," and the fundamental cause seems to lie in the "unprogressive" minds of the men who planned the lovely structure which graces the southern section of our otherwise functional campus.

It is in part the words of the "fountainology" students complaining of lack of atmosphere, and the bookstore habituates yearning for the chance for a quick purchase.

It concerns the student standing in line for an hour in order to complete a bank transaction and the helplessness of the fountain worker attempting to improvise. And the fact that neither the proposed Placement Office nor the Associated Student offices are to be found there, enters into the picture, too.

Here the administration is in a dither, and justifiably so, when it is confronted with the cigarette butts smashed into the linoleum floor, the three-ring circus that symbolizes the noon-hour rush, the cluttered tables waiting to be cleared for re-occupancy, and when the worst rush is on, the lack of sufficient ventilation and lighting.

Unfortunately, many were under the impression that the Student Union Building and Lounge was being built for the comfort and use of the City-Collegian. Obviously the word "lounge" has been interpreted to mean something else. The trick is to find a spot in the new building where one can leisurely eat a meal, smoke a cigarette, or complete an English assignment.

But the best magic of all would be the solution of the problem, which evidently has students and administration alike, disturbed and unsure of the measures which must next be taken.

Whales do not spout water, contrary to popular belief. The moist air blown from the whale's lungs condenses into drops of moisture in the colder atmosphere, giving the appearance of a fountain of water.

Bonfire Rally Starts Big Weekend

DON GARRISON, president of the Freshman Class, heads plans for Saturday's Frosh Ball.

Zany Zaints Is Title For Friday Freshman Ball

Zany Zaints is the theme of the Freshman Ball to be held this Saturday, October 8, at the Surf Club on the Great Highway from 9 p.m. until midnight, according to Don Garrison, freshman president. Appropriate dress for the semi-annual affair is cocktail dresses for the women and dark suits for the men, he said.

One Associated Student card per couple will be required for admission. There will be a fee of $2.50 per couple for non-AS members.

The Freshman Class will stage a Freshman Queen contest, and the winner will be presented with a trophy by Tony Banacci, president of Beta Phi Beta fraternity. Included in the list of contestants are Betty Bone, Marlee Dumas, Sally Fuicks, Eleanor Gandert, Phyllis Manness, Sandy Martinsen and Barbara Muskat.

Charlie Sterri was chosen to provide the music for the affair by the class committee, consisting of Dee Noodlman, vice-president; Louise von Emster, secretary; Ken Woodruff, treasurer; Don Price, Sam Franzella, Gale Fletcher, Phil Gotfrid and Terry Chavez, according to Garrison.

All students are invited to attend, and Garrison extended a special invitation to the members of his class in the hopes that the new students would feel welcome to participate in all AS activities.

Snow Starts College Film Series Oct. 14

Opening film in the college film series is Snow, scheduled for college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., Friday, October 14, in S136, according to Madison Devlin, in charge of audio visual aids here.

Snow is the story of water and hydro-electric power and the part they play in the California economic system, Devlin said. The film also illustrates the problem met in keeping transmission lines open during blizzards and storms. It is produced by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

Graduation Petitions Due By October 14

Potential graduates are expected to file their graduation petitions not later than Friday, October 14, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

"These students should hasten in checking their graduation eligibility with the registrar's office so that if they are rejected a change of program will still be possible," Miss Learnard said.

Rally Committee To Distribute Guardsman

Al Moss, Chairman of the Publications Board, announced yesterday that the Rally Committee will handle distribution of The Guardsman.

Places in which the Rally Committee will distribute The Guardsman are the Silver Pole, science building, and the Ramporium.

Tentatively there are 10 more issues planned for this semester. The dates listed are October 19 and 26; November 2, 9, 16 and 23; December 7 and 14; and January 11 and 18.

34 Countries Are Represented Here By IRC Students

Students from 34 different countries are now attending the college, 42 on student visas and 59 on permanent residence visas, as their first step to education in the states.

Citizens of Austria, Canada, China, Costa Rica, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Fiji Islands, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Iran, Israel, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Jordan, Korea, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Philippine Islands, Poland, Russia, Scotland, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Syria, and Yugoslavia have been registered here at the college for the fall semester, 1955.

The International Relations Club, with the help of Joseph M. Jacobsen, faculty adviser, is composed of representatives from these countries and tries to foster better international relations within its ranks, so that eventually its members can return home with more understanding of other countries.

The club's officers are Karima Mughannon, president; Maurice Lemus, vice-president; Jeanette Maiabrade, corresponding secretary; Grace Cobb, recording secretary; Isaac Fluss, treasurer; and Mitsuya Ohno, historian. A club picnic to be held on Sunday, October 16, is one of the club's activities.

Membership is not limited to noncitizen students; any college student may join. Meetings are held every college hour in Room 256, Cloud Hall.

Sales In New Bookstore Better Than In Spring

Sales have increased 20 percent this semester in the new Ramporium, located in the student union building, as opposed to sales last semester in the old west campus store, Dick Main, manager, announced recently.

The hundreds of students now buying at the new store are spending an average of $30 each, Main added.

In addition to books, the Ramporium also sells any equipment necessary to the function of any class here.

Finance Office Rules Listed For Benefit Of Clubs

After expenditure requests have received the approval of the sponsor of any organization or association of the college, they must be submitted to the controller if reimbursement is expected, Dr. Oscar Anderson, controller of the student finance office, announced last week.

"An exception is made for purchases under two dollars," Anderson stated. "Only in such cases are students and sponsors permitted to make cash purchases and later, on the presentation of a signed bill, receive reimbursement through the finance office from the club's account.

"Every attempt is made to give 24-hour service on purchase orders and checks, but immediate service will only be given in extremely urgent cases. Clubs and organizations should plan their schedules carefully," he emphasized.

Requests for expenditures can be delivered to the controller through the finance office in the student union building during the regular banking hours, 9:45 to 11:10 a.m., and from 12:01 until 1:15 p.m.

Hey, Leif Sailed The Ocean Too!

Columbus sailed the ocean blue in 1492, and when he sighted land, this tickled Queen Isabella and King Ferd to death, not to mention Chris' seasick crew, 20 million history textbook publishers, the merchants of North Beach, and scores of students.

Thanks to Columbus, the Italian-Americans get to convert the Marina Beach into a Genoese port each October 12, and on that same date students on holiday get to convert the college into a ghost town—with no Guardsman that day either.

Well, Columbus, with his britches leaded down with gold and the like, charged off to discover more territory, and bring back more Indian lasses and other tourist souvenirs, but somehow these other historic occasions aren't celebrated.

Then there's Leif Erickson, who, it is said, discovered New England. He happened along about 500 years before Columbus. So how come we don't get another holiday on September 29? That's the least that can be done for the poor guy, especially since Chris stole his thunder. Guess October 12 will have to do until the Norwegian-Americans get on the ball.

Top Flight Entertainment, Music Feature Friday Night Pep Fest Near Archery Range On Campus

A bonfire rally, the first in several years, will inaugurate football season here this Friday night, October 7, at 7 p.m.

Location of the bonfire will be near the archery range, close, but not too close, to the gymnasiums.

Featured entertainers for the event will be the Hi-Lo's, one of the few male quartets to sing in tune consistently. They are scheduled to appear at 7:30 p.m. Also on the bill will be a pantomime, two soloists and several quartets made up from members of the faculty, and the A Cappella Choir.

Officially opening the football season, the rally will take place the night before the college's first league game, but following practice games with Santa Ana College and the California Agricultural College Junior Varsity. The first league game, against Stockton College's Mustangs, will be held at Kezar Stadium on the afternoon of October 8.

No seating arrangements for the rally are being made, necessitating informal dress, muddy clothes being the alternative. Students are advised to bring a blanket to the rally with them on which to sit. Approximate closing time for the rally is scheduled for 9:30 p.m.

Alumni Officers Named For Active Fall Semester

Because of the caliber of the new officers of the Alumni Association, an active year is expected, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here.

This year's agenda will be planned at a meeting to be held some time this month, Amori added.

New officers of the association are Bob Winegardner, chairman who graduated from the college in 1948 and who now is manager of the California Book Company. Ralph Vetterlein, former Associated Student president here and at the University of California, is vice-chairman. Vetterlein had a major hand in this year's Miss San Francisco Pageant.

Julie Hanan, 1954 graduate and a former Associated Women Student president and AS vice-president, is the new secretary. A model, Miss Hanan recently won the distinction of reaching the finals of the Miss San Francisco contest.

Treasurer is Florence Louis, who donates a $25 scholarship and AS membership each semester.

Gloria Dunn, a 1938 graduate, is historian of the Alumni Association. Mrs. Dunn is now on the college faculty in the women's physical education department.

AWS Will Discuss Tea, Fashion Show, Friday

All women students are encouraged to attend a general meeting of the Associated Women Students to be held this Friday during college hour in the office of Mary Golding, dean of women here, Barbara Batmale, AWS president, announced last week.

Women students holding Associated Student cards are automatically members of the AWS, Miss Batmale emphasized.

At the meeting definite plans for the AWS tea and fashion show to be held on Wednesday, December 7, will be discussed.

Three Weekend Activities Will Test Rebirth Of College Spirit

ONE of the most obvious reversals in form that we have ever seen here involves the sudden new-found spirit that has seemingly invaded the campus with the large class of incoming freshmen and has apparently spread to the majority of the student body in the short time that classes have been in session.

Unfortunately, one of the college's worst showings in recent years has been in the spirit department. With the largest enrollment of any two-year college in Northern California, an outstanding scholastic record and a continuous string of fine athletic teams, City College of San Francisco has been the envy of many other colleges and universities.

The rooting sections, rallies and other student activities, however, have been another story and were often found lacking in not only numbers but in enthusiasm. It has not been uncommon to find fewer than 200 rattling around in Kezar Stadium for a Ram home football game and, even worse, to find often fewer than 100 attending a rally on campus.

Now the picture seems to be changed, a change greatly for the better. The spirit displayed at the orientation rally, the huge crowd that packed the Hello Day dance, and the all-around enthusiasm displayed not only by the student leaders but by those of the entire student body, point to a generally fine semester activity-wise.

Perhaps the best time to test this apparent rebirth of college spirit would be this weekend. The rally and yell leaders, sharing in the enthusiasm to an extent not present even in those bodies last year, have helped plan a complete weekend of activities, with a Friday night bonfire rally, the Big Eight Conference football opener Saturday afternoon at Kezar, and the Freshman Ball that evening.

Each of these activities is worth participating in, not only for the show of spirit that is needed to get everything off to a good start but for plain simple fun, a break from the dull grind of classes.

The groups involved in planning the festivities have admitted that it is an "all-or-nothing" venture. If the activities are supported well in number and enthusiasm, it should get student activities for the semester off on the right foot. If any or all of these affairs suffer, then campus spirit, that one needed element, is in a deep hole from the very start.

The college has the best chance in recent years to make up that one deficit, the lack of spirit that alone has kept us from being a "complete" college. It is up to us to supply the spark, and you will find that college life is a great deal more fun when old-fashioned, yelling spirit is liberally included.

The Spectator — Two Years Too Late For Ring's Senior Citizen

By Don Ball

THE old man finally got there, but it was too late. After 20 years of battling, the man of 40 and possibly more years, was graciously allowed a try at that which had so long eluded him.

If 1955 had been 1953 it might have been a different story. Not only was Archie better able to stand the erosion of the rounds and punches two years ago, but the Rocky Marciano of two years ago was even more lacking than now in any boxing skill and less skilled in the arts of the elbow, the gouge and the butt.

Make no mistake, Today's Marciano is no stronger than he was two years ago—and strong he is. Few men in the history of boxing have been as blessed with Marciano's stamina, and it's a hard-headed fact that no one can take a punch like the Rock.

No one seems to remember when Arch wasn't banging on the door of the International Boxing Club (James D. Norris, President), begging for a title shot. First it was the light-heavyweight crown he sought. He finally garnered that one while still only a toddler of 36.

Then the real struggle began. Archie Moore, the consummate boxer and tactician, began the strategy which was to culminate in a shot at the heavyweight title.

The result was hardly a surprise to anyone. Granted, things looked up in Moore's corner in the second round when Marciano dropped for a four count; but once he pushed himself up from the canvas he was never headed.

One thing that definitely favored Marciano was the referee. His count for Marciano sounded like a funeral dirge, slowly and deliberately articulated, while his counts when Moore was on the deck sounded like an imitation of Mr. L. A. "Speed" Riggs, the noted tobacco auctioneer.

Curiously enough, one of the referee's blunders which aided Marciano was of perhaps greater benefit to Moore. Immediately upon Marciano's rise from the canvas the referee carefully wiped his gloves free of resin. While admittedly benefiting Marciano by giving him another two seconds rests, a pause which Moore never got, it is hard to find a member of the medical profession who whole-heartedly recommends resin as an optic rinse.

Cleverest bit from Moore came not before, but after the fight. Interviewed in his corner Moore was a great champion. He replied, "He's a great puncher." The question was put to him again, the announcer perhaps thinking Arch had misunderstood the query, but the old man who had just gotten off the deck for the last time that evening answered, "He's a great puncher."

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

MONEY is the root of dept.: It seems that even the Dean of Men must bow to the power of Joyce Weaver, finance chairman. When Edwin C. Browne submitted his request for a budget of $30.40, the finance committee and council questioned his reasons for the 40 cents.

Browne clarified that 30 cents of the figure was needed for paint for his truck, used often by the Associated Student officers. Fine, says Miss Weaver (in writing) but what about the ten cents? Dog food, answers Browne (also in writing) with following explanation:

"You asked that the amounts be itemized as nearly as possible, so in order that the committee will understand my request for dog food for ten cents, I might call to your attention that I could easily buy the more expensive dog food, but I feel the expensive type might incur my dog's participation in the remains of my uncle's horse, Charlie, who died in action, so I am getting a cheaper type dog food that does not include horse-meat."

Budget was passed without further ado; Buffy dines peasant style.

WE'LL GET THE VARMINTS YET: Emory Lebonville, AS card sales chairman, reports that he's relentlessly trailing a handful of wrong-doers who walked off with AS cards sans paying. "But," said the hunter, sneeringly, "won't do 'em any good; they only have the stubs."

So Lebonville continues his unending search, holding head and mumbling that somebody goofed, somebody goofed.

WORKMEN IN FRONT of the new Student Union Building were inadvertently responsible for stealing students from their usual haunts last week.

The morning hours found small groups gathered about a pickup truck parked on the hill. Some workmen made the mistake of tuning in the World Series, and consequently never had so many students underfoot in their lives.

All of which promoted anguished cries from many persons. Main question: "So if this is supposed to be a Student Union, why don't they broadcast in here? They could at least give us music."

'Egypt Still An Adventurous Country'

Mrs. Escher Ends Round-The-World Trip; Devoted Sabbatical Leave Year In Far And Near East, Europe

By Denny Delman

Miriam Escher, English instructor here, went to Honolulu more than a year ago, and from there around the world. Across the blue Pacific to Manila, in the Philippines, and on to Japan she traveled. Mrs. Escher had been granted sabbatical leave for the purpose of travel and the investigation of teaching English as a second language in foreign countries. In Japan she found that because of the war and American occupation, English was well known to the people and that it was being taught in some parts of the country.

Other traces of English being spoken in the East were found in Thailand and the British seaport of Victoria, commonly known as Hong Kong. Mrs. Escher discovered that in Thailand English is taught mainly by the Americans and the British.

She declared that some of the people teach English but, "When English is taught by the natives, it is hard to tell whether they are speaking it or their own language."

From Japan Mrs. Escher crossed the China Sea to Hong Kong, which she said reminded her of San Francisco. The next city was Bangkok, where Mrs. Escher made her "headquarters" for her Asian visit. She ventured into Indo-China and visited South Viet Nam where she saw the refugees evacuated from the Communist-held north.

MIRIAM ESCHER, faculty member, returns to college after world tour.

The sight of these people she described as pitiful. There were thousands of them entering Saigon every day. There was not enough food to go around. They were forced to beg, and children were tired and undernourished. The city could not take care of them.

Southwest of Viet Nam lies Cambodia, somewhat quaint in its ways but picturesque nonetheless. Here stand 60 square miles of eighth, ninth and tenth century temples and palaces, hidden until a hundred years ago, when they were discovered by a Frenchman. Mrs. Escher described the ruins as having been built of solid rock.

Leaving the Far East, Mrs. Escher journeyed to the Middle East through Ceylon to Madras on the Bay of Bengal, across India to Bombay on the Arabian Sea.

Traveling north and west through Kashmir, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia, the next stop was Iraq-Baghdad, but not for long. Baghdad is a harsh, sandy, desert city, which is anti-western. Mrs. Escher warned that this place was not for tourists.

The next part of the journey was through Syria and the city of Damascus, Israel, Jerusalem and other parts of the Holy Land. Then on to Egypt.

Land of the pharaohs, and home of the pyramid, Egypt is an adventurous country even today. While in Egypt, Mrs. Escher was able to visit the Museum in Cairo and see the tomb of King Tut buried in the Valley of the Kings.

From Egypt Mrs. Escher traveled north to Istanbul, then west to Greece and the city of Athens, where stands the magnificent Parthenon on the Acropolis, more beautiful than she had imagined.

A drive across Europe, a flight from Shannon Airport in Ireland, and an arrival at the International Airport in San Francisco ended the fourteen and one-half months of traveling for Mrs. Escher. Her comments of the journey emphasized one thing. She wishes she could return and see everything once more.

The average housewife travels nine to eleven miles, or the equivalent of 36 holes of golf during the course of her day's housework, according to a recent survey.

Mascot Stands Alone, Despondent On West Campus

Ram May Land Near Archery Field

By Bob Kauth

What is detaining the Redwood Ram? How and when is he leaving? And where is he going?

These are the questions that The Ram, the symbol of the college, is asking and being asked as he staunchly stands, despondent and alone, at the south entrance of the vacated west campus.

His back seems to be turned against the college. He may be contemplating boarding a trolley car to travel in search of some other institution of learning that will take more interest in his welfare and whereabouts.

Why so pensive and silent, Redwood Ram? (Could he for a moment think that he has been forgotten and is destined to remain forlorn and unsung on the west campus?)

No, The Ram has not been forgotten. Two fraternity presidents here, Ed Emig, Alpha Phi Omega, and Emory Lebonville, Alpha Sigma Delta, are working as co-chairmen of the Club Activities Board investigating committee.

This committee is attempting to solve a two-hundred dollar financial barrier which is the estimated cost for the relocation of the six-ton figure and base. The only two sources of sponsorship for this venture apparently are the Board of Education or the Associated Student fund.

Interest in the project has been taken by Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management. He has suggested that The Ram be resettled across from Cloud Hall near the center of the southernmost lip of the archery field.

For the mascot this would be a convenient site, because the eventual construction of a stadium on this concourse is anticipated by the college. It may even prevent spiritminded anti-Ram fans from splattering paint any further than The Ram and themselves while frolicking on a retaliation paint party.

The Ram was carved from a redwood tree stump by the axe of Dudley C. Carter, wood sculptor. Its original debut was made during the San Francisco World's Fair at Treasure Island in 1939-40, appearing there in one of the California handicraft exhibits.

At the conclusion of the fair the college architect, the late Timothy Pfleuger, presented The Ram to Archibald J. Cloud, now president emeritus of the college. It was to serve as the symbol of the college mascot.

For five years the gift was stored in the men's gymnasium because of the absence of a place considered appropriate for it. With the acquisition of the west campus, The Ram was placed at its present position on March 12, 1947, and was later painted red and white.

There it has faithfully guarded the campus for almost a decade.

THE COLLEGE'S REDWOOD RAMS sits in solitary contemplation on the deserted west campus, while plans to move him to a site, in which he will regain prominence, and perhaps escape vandals' wrath, proceed.

Phelan Impressed By Oakland And West Contra Costa; Finds 'More Advanced Hoopsters In College'

Head Basketball Coach Sid Phelan got some good news last week when he learned that Clarence Grider, former Lowell High All-City star, who registered here for his second semester, would join the basketball squad.

The tall and lanky Grider set a San Francisco prep league scoring record while at Lowell, and Phelan thinks that Grider will be a big help to the Rams, especially in the rebounding department.

In sizing up the conference race he looks to last year's winner, West Contra Costa, to be a big factor in the coming campaign. In fact, he thinks that they might repeat.

When asked what he thought of this year's campaign, he said, "West Contra Costa has Clyde Hardeman and J. D. Banks, and they might repeat." Hardeman and Banks both played on West Contra Costa's Big Eight title winner in the 1954-55 hoop season, and both captured all-Conference honors.

Oakland J. C. is another team that impresses him. The reason he likes Oakland's chances are due mainly to one player, "They have Willie Davis." Davis was a phenomenal high school star at Alameda and was supposedly headed for USF before he enrolled at Oakland.

What will be the difference, if any, between coaching a high school (he formerly coached Washington High) and college? To that question he answered, "There are more advanced basketball players in college."

Besides the varsity, he hopes to field a junior varsity club also. This is due to the fact that only a 12-man traveling squad is allowed by the conference, while the home team is allowed to suit up 15 men.

The practice schedule is as follows: December 2, Menlo, 3:30 p.m., here; December 3, USF Frosh, 6 p.m., Kezar, (preliminary to USF-USC game); December 7, Napa, 3:30 p.m., here; December 9, California Blues, 3:30 p.m., here; December 14, East Contra Costa, 8 p.m., there; December 16, California Frosh, 6:30 p.m., at U.C.; December 29, San Jose Junior College, 3:30 p.m., there; December 30, Marin, 3:30 p.m., here.

Volleyball Included In Co-ed Sports Program

Applications are now being taken from organizations interested in participating in co-ed intramural volleyball, according to the head of the co-ed sports program, Gloria Dunn.

Games will be held on Monday and Wednesday at noon.

All co-ed clubs and organizations and joint fraternities and sororities are eligible to participate.

"This is not a class," Mrs. Dunn emphasized, but "will give the men and women a chance to meet, play together and have fun."

Ram Booters Vie With Santa Clara On October 15th

Soccer play in the 1955 Ram schedule will commence on Saturday, October 15, when Coach Roy Diederichsen's college booters will travel to Santa Clara to test the kick of the Bronco squad.

The college team defeated their opponents last year, 6-1, but a far closer battle is expected this time around. Diederichsen has not yet formulated a starting lineup pending further practice, but he recently singled out veterans Bob Palma, Antonio Quiteno and Ben Schweizer as being particularly impressive.

Newcomers Mike Balibrira, Oscar Carrasquilla and Dick Musio have also shown to advantage. Although more than 20 men have turned out for the squad, the vital post of goal keeper has not yet been filled, mainly due to inexperience. Those interested in a tryout for that position should contact Diederichsen in the men's gymnasium.

The conference schedule has given the Rams a certain advantage, inasmuch as the two perennially strong clubs, University of San Francisco and University of California, do not play the college until late in the year.

The soccer schedule is as follows: October 15, at Santa Clara; October 22, San Francisco State at Balboa Park; October 29, San Jose State at Balboa Park; November 5, at Stanford; November 12, at California; November 19, USF at Balboa Park.

WAA Officers For Fall Semester Announced

Officers of the Women's Athletic Association for the fall semester were announced last week. They are Noreen Phillips, president; Carole Tanning, vice-president; Ann Hanley, secretary, and Donna Bowman, treasurer.

WAA officers and sport managers form the WAA council which meets each Friday during college hour.

Activities this semester include swimming at 2 p.m., on Tuesday and 2:30 p.m. on Thursday; co-ed volleyball on Thursday at 3 p.m.; co-ed archery at 1 p.m. on Tuesday and during college hour on Friday; co-ed tennis, also during college hour, and co-ed modern dancing on Friday at 2 p.m.

Coach Bill Fischer

High US Military Invitation Takes Fischer To Orient

By Joe Callas

In an effort to better the officiating of service football games in the Far East, Coach Bill Fischer, acting upon an invitation from high United States military officials in Japan, toured the cities of Tokyo and Yokohama and conducted a football officials' clinic.

Fischer, one of the Pacific Coast Conferences' top flight referees, was assisted by James Cain of Seattle, also a Pacific Coast football official. The purpose of the clinic was to train servicemen in the rules and mechanics of football officiating.

Military representatives from Guam, Formosa, Korea, and the Philippines were present in the two-week class. One week was spent in Tokyo drilling Air Force personnel, which numbered 75. The week after was spent with 150 Army, Navy and Marine Corps men in Yokohama.

To show their appreciation, the servicemen participating in the clinic showered Fischer and Cain with numerous oriental gifts.

Fischer was deeply impressed with the modernization of Tokyo, and the remarkable reconstruction that has occurred after the damage caused by the war. Japan's industrial recreation program surpasses that of the United States, Fischer revealed. Each industry has its own private lodge in the mountains or by the seashore.

The Japanese are a very strong family unit, which is a major cause for the low rate of delinquency in their country.

Fischer, who was invited to return to the Orient again next year, had nothing but praise for the Japanese people. He added that neither books nor stories could have given him a more thorough education of Japan, its peoples and its customs than did this trip.

To Err Is Human As 49ers Have Found

ONE of the most dangerous things any sports fan can do is to engage in the perilous practice of climbing out on limbs, and those who are presently predicting sad days for the 49ers are in for a rude shock.

Frankly, we think that the best time for a squad to find out that it is only human is very early in the season, and the 49ers have found that fact out at the earliest possible date. Since they were so obviously outplayed and outclassed by the Los Angeles team last Sunday, it is equally obvious that the 49ers have not yet "found" themselves this season.

Were it the old nemesis that beat the San Franciscans, lack of a sturdy defense, then the wailings might be justified, but the actual reason for the defeat lay in an inspired Ram defensive unit, which completely stymied any and all efforts of the 49er offensive platoon.

Since the 49er offense has been and still is the least of their worries, its lethargic performance can correctly be described as strictly an off-day, something that simply does not happen more than once or twice in a year to a club with the material that San Francisco has.

The 49er defense was extremely effective against the explosive Rams, and in truth the Bay City defenders yielded only one TD all afternoon. The scintillating southland forward wall and deep men scored the important safety which sent the Rams on their way to victory, and also set up two other touchdowns with key interceptions.

Further evidence to our contention that the 49ers' title chances are still excellent is found in the scores of the other National Football League opening games. The two other contenders, the Detroit Lions and the Chicago Bears, were both dumped by considerably weaker clubs than the Rams, which certainly should indicate a more desperate situation than some 49er fans imagine that their club is in.

The one thing that will beat a pro football club, besides injuries, is lack of depth. It is possession of that quality that makes us believe that it will be the Chicago, Detroit and San Francisco teams which will revive and come back into contention, while the Rams will falter and fall by the wayside somewhere along the way.

We are doing the same thing that we are criticizing in climbing out on a limb to foresee the rise and downfall of football teams, but we think a glance at past performances under similar conditions will bear us out.

Rams, Mustangs In Big Eight Opener

Conference Title Quest Begins With Highly Rated Stockton Looming As Top Contender

After completing their opening "exhibition" games, the Ram footballers will engage the strong Stockton Mustangs in the 1955 Big Eight and home opener at Kezar Stadium this Saturday. Kickoff will be at 2 p.m.

For the most part, the Mustangs will field a veteran starting eleven, but most of the experience is in the line, leaving an overabundance of inexperience in the backfield. Two star performers in 1954, quarterback Junior Reynosa and halfback Gene Campbell, have shifted to College of the Pacific, but several newcomers plus one veteran have shown well in pre-conference contests. Letterman George Graham looks to be the top running threat for the visitors, but newcomer Dick Nunes and letterman LeRoy Benitez have also appeared very strong in previous games.

After an opening loss to College of Sequoias, the Tangs leveled Fresno, with the aforementioned backs contributing the most to an impressive total of 230 yards gained rushing.

The Stockton defense is also gutty on occasion, as evidenced by the measly total of 19 yards rushing which Fresno accumulated. The Mustang line is obviously going to be very rough, and their past performance is indicative of the type of coaching they are getting from Don Campora, former outstanding tackle for COP, in addition to the San Francisco and Washington pro grid clubs.

Center Bob Long is improving steadily, and a good pivotman means trouble all along the wall, trouble in the form of guards Tom Mitchell and Don Gwaltney, and ends Dan Delfatti and Bill Jenkins.

Stockton is rated by observers as ranking with West Contra Costa, Santa Rosa and the Rams as title contenders, and a college win in this game will mark completion of an important step toward the heights which many now predict for them.

Since both clubs have shown a proven adeptness at deterring a running game, and since the main forte of these teams is running, either a tight defensive battle, or a surprising air duel may develop.

Following the weekend battle with Stockton, the Rams will meet the newly organized Oakland Thunderbirds on the other side of the bay Friday night, October 14.

Ragged Rams Still Strong Enough To Whip Aggies, 33-0

A talented but somewhat erratic Ram grid team overcame their raggedness to post an impressive 33-0 win over a weak Cal Aggie Junior Varsity eleven on September 30 at Davis.

Unused to and bothered by the 90 degree Davis heat, the City College blockers showed only spurts of top form, and the load was often put entirely on the ball carrier. Too, the Ram pass-receivers suffered from the high afternoon temperature, and although quarterbacks Les Barros, John Panagakis and Doug Jones were hitting their targets, the catchers weren't doing the catching.

The Rams racked up six points the first time they got the ball when, after holding the Aggies on the game-opening series of downs, they sent halfback Al Chatman 38 yards off right tackle for the touchdown. Stan Keith added the extra point.

With the limited substitution rule waived because of the heat and the comparative informality of the game, Coach Grover Klemmer used the entire traveling squad of 37 men, and the Rams were held to one more score in the first half, a four-yard plunge by Chatman after Mack Calhoun, the running star of the first half, had rambled 71 yards to set up the marker. Keith again converted to account for the 14-0 halftime margin.

On the opening kickoff of the second half, Chatman's open field brilliance and a fine, co-ordinated blocking effort accounted for another six-pointer. Chatman took the kick on his own 15, cut to the right sideline and raced 85 yards untouched for a touchdown.

The San Franciscans wore down their hosts with another pair of TDs in the last quarter as fullback Dick Mannini skirted right end twice for scores, once from the 12-yard line and again from 3 yards away. Garlin Bluford converted following the second marker.

With Klemmer substituting freely and using reserves most of the game, there were several outstanding performers in both the line and backfield. Calhoun ran up 91 yards in 5 tries, all in the first half, and returned an intercepted pass some 35 yards in the third period. Chatman, although carrying the ball from scrimmage only three times, racked up 42 yards and 3 touchdowns.

Although the line play and blocking in general was at times shoddy, there were standouts in the forward wall. Willie Hudson played his usual fine game at guard. Other top line performers were John Timossi, shifted from center to tackle this year; Tom Kiefer, who started in place of injured tackle Jack Derian; end Jim Ginella, who took a 30-yard toss from Jones in the last quarter and recovered a fumble on the 17-yard line to set up the last touchdown; and center Ed Plutte.—By Al Moss.

Block SF Society Ready For First Meet Friday

Movies of a recent San Francisco Forty Niner contest or the East-West Shrine game of 1955 will head the program for the initial meeting of the Block SF society for the fall semester, advisor Bill Fischer announced here recently.

Dick Mannini, newly elected president of the Block SF, will preside over the meeting which will take place in college hour Friday, October 7, in the men's gymnasium.

Sign-ups Being Taken For Intramural Sports

Applications for competition in the intramural sports program are being taken this week by Alex Schwarz, physical educational director.

Scheduling of games in the following sports, basketball, football, archery, bowling, tennis and badminton, will begin when enough teams are entered in competition. Students interested in these sports are urged to see Schwarz anytime this week in the men's gymnasium.

Activities Board Sets October 14 For Semi-Annual Club Day And Dance

Booths Highlight Daytime Events; Purpose Outlined

Club Activities Board Day has been set for Friday, October 14, during college hour with a dance programmed for that evening.

Purpose of the day, according to CAB President Earl Cabrinha, is to acquaint students with the purposes and activities of the various clubs on campus.

Admission to the dance is expected to be open to anyone who presents a valid registration card with either an Associated Student card or 50 cents. In addition, guest bids may be purchased in Dean Mary Golding's office for 50 cents.

Music for the dance will come from the band of Jimmy Diamond, who will be heard from 9 p.m. to midnight in the auditorium on the west campus.

Membership in the CAB is composed of one representative from each active campus organization. Their duties include the composition of each semester's social calendar.

Clubs and organizations desiring their charters recognized must submit their petitions by tomorrow, October 6. Also due on this date are petitions for participation in CAB Day.

EARL CABRINHA, president of the Club Activities Board.

College Hour Meetings Scheduled On October 7 For Campus Clubs, Associations And Organizations

Clubs and organizations are scheduled to meet this Friday, October 7, during college hour, according to the official calendar for college hours for the semester.

The college hour is inserted between 10 and 11 o'clock classes and starts at 10:30 a.m., running to 11:20 a.m. All morning classes are shortened 10 minutes each to provide for the college hour. Afternoon classes run on the regular schedule.

In S136, college movie series, Madison Devlin, and in S100, Faculty Association, John French.

Anita Gurrea Receives McGlade Scholarship

First recipient of the newly established John C. McGlade Scholarship is Anita Gurrea.

Honoring the memory of a former Assistant Superintendent of Schools, the McGlade Scholarship is perpetuated solely through private contributions.

Basis of Miss Gurrea's award was her outstanding high school record. She was graduated from Lowell High School.

Other recent winners of scholarships here include Louise von Emster and Loretta Yung. Miss von Emster received the Soroptimist Award. Miss Yung's award was provided by the Chinese Students Club.

Opening Night Set By Theater Group

The Importance of Being Earnest will be presented by the Little Theater group here, in Room S28, at 8 p.m. Friday night, October 28, and continue to run October 29, November 4 and 5. Director for Michael Griffin will be assisted by Joe Bavareseo and Richard Barulich, and Ed Burbridge will design the three sets required for the production.

"Everyone has a chance in the little theater," Griffin explained, as he named the parts portrayed in Oscar Wilde's drawing room comedy.

With Larry Coviello characterizing Jack Worthing, Bret Lawson as Algernon Moncrieff, Stephannie Koppe as Lady Bracknell, Karin DeVille as Cecily, Jeanne Graham as Gwendolyn, Louis Bamburger as Lane, King Harrington as the Rev. Chausible, Vivian Chinn as Miss Prism, and Herb Dirion as Merriman, the production boasts an all-freshman cast.

Napa Hosts Regional Meeting October 15

Napa Junior College will host the Northern California Regional Conference of California Junior College Student Government Association, Saturday, October 15, Dean Woods, Associated Student president here, announced last week.

Each semester the three regions of the state hold a conference prior to the state conference. The purposes of these regional conferences are: 1) to provide a means for member colleges to solve and discuss problems; 2) to promote better relationship between the colleges, and 3) to establish a statewide student organization to promote the best interests of the students.

Some 20 two-year colleges and 200 students are expected to attend this semester.

Organizational Signup Set For Oct. 14 CAB Day

By Antoinette Mannina

BUSINESS meetings occupied most of the week with plans for Club Day taking precedence over all other matters. CAB Day will be held on Friday, October 14, and students will be given an opportunity to sign up for campus clubs at this time.

Phi Beta Rho's new officers are Bobbie Leboff, president; Lois Mantel, vice-president; Mary Daley, recording secretary; Judy Wilson, corresponding secretary; Dottie Pfleiger, treasurer; Lee Carol Lombard, historian; Dana Christiansen, sergeant-at-arms. The sorority met every Tuesday during the summer and held a business meeting recently.

New officers of Gamma Phi Ypsilon are Don Baker, president; Jerry Roth, vice-president; Bob deMarta, secretary; Mike McGynness; Ron Ferraro, pledge master; Fred Muller, custodian; Tom Apoin, historian; George Feastrom, sergeant-at-arms; Al Coppin, brother-at-large.

Zeta Chi held a dinner last week at the home of Ruth Inskipp, the sorority sponsor. Installation of new officers was held along with the pinning of pledges. Guest of honor was Mary Golding, dean of women here.

The Chinese Students' Club meets every college hour in S311. Everyone is invited to attend the meetings.

Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity held a meeting recently for the purpose of electing new officers. Charles Smith was named president; Jewell Hart, vice-president; Harold Hill, treasurer; Jackie Young, secretary; Samuel Roberson, chaplain; Lawrence Lowe, parliamentarian.

The Drama Club will hold a meeting this Friday in S28 to discuss plans for CAB Day and for the proposed Variety Show. All students are invited to partiepate in the all-student production.

Alpha Kappa Rho held an informal interrogation Sunday at the home of Al Appleton.

The Newman Club holds meetings every Tuesday evening in St. Emydius Hall at Jules and deMontford Streets. Warren White is the club's new sponsor.

New officers of Alpha Sigma Delta are Emory Lebonville, president; Dick Kramer, vice-president; Juan Alcaldi, acting treasurer; Walt Martensen, pledge master; George Kaplanis, corresponding secretary.

Masonic Club members plan a bowling party tonight. Their first meeting was September 21.

Cloud Hall Library Employs Honor System; Classification And Location Of Books Told

One of the most modern college libraries in this country, with approximately 50,000 volumes, and subscriptions to virtually every published periodical, make the college's library one of America's finest. It is the only college library of comparable size in this area which employs the traditional "Honor System," wherein students are allowed access to the open bookshelves.

This open stack system applies to books which can be borrowed for two weeks, and are arranged by subject matter according to the Dewey Decimal System of Classification. Books numbered 000-400 are located on the first floor stack, while those numbered 700-900 are shelved on the second floor, in the main reading room.

On the south side of the library, separated by the loan desk, is the Reserve Reading Room where bound volumes of magazines, for library use only, are arranged by title and publication date.

Also located in this room is a listening machine and records, and a periodical room where all unbound current magazines and newspapers are available for library use.

In addition, there is one of the foremost reference rooms in the Bay Area, containing atlases, bibliographies, encyclopedias and yearbooks, as well as casebooks, college catalogs, pamphlets, a vocational booklet collection, and periodical indexes. All materials are expected to be returned on time, and failure to do so will envoke a fine of five cents per day. Students are asked to present their registration cards when checking out books.

Located throughout the library are bulletin boards and exhibit case displays featuring information about new books, as well as other subject matter of interest to students. At the present time there is a display promoting college spirit and built around a football theme.

Any questions regarding reference materials should be taken up with Irene Mensing, reference librarian. Miss Mensing is impressed by the number of students who use the library each day and by their silent industry. She feels that students are learning to study, and are beginning to utilize and appreciate the library facilities, which are open for the help, use, and study of all the college's students from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Attendance Improvement Seen As Result Of Stricter Regulations

Instructors at the college report that the students' attendance shows a noticeable improvement since the new regulation stringency, John J. Brady, co-ordinator Division of Student Welfare, stated here last week.

The facts will be conclusive during the week following Friday, October 7, the end of the first attendance period, when the records of all the students will be checked, according to Brady.

"Students who have been excessively absent without excuse-sickness," Brady said, "will have their registrations cancelled."

Grades are to be reviewed during the first mid-term period Friday, October 21, and unless extenuating circumstances prevail, students failing to uphold the "C" average will be disqualified from the college.

"Last semester," Brady declared, "152 students were permanently expelled from the college because of poor attendance and grades."

Any student failing in physical education by the first mid-term must take that class four times a week instead of the normal requirement by the state law.

JOHN J. BRADY, co-ordinator of Student Welfare.

Vacancies Still Plague Council

On the agenda for Student Council last week was the passing of four budgets, nomination of five students for three council vacancies, and the approval of two candidates for vacant cabinet positions.

The Executive Council's budget of $1045 was passed unanimously. Requesting $650, the Rally Committee received approval of their budget.

For the Freshman Class, a budget of $496, of which $100 was allocated on September 20, was passed by the council members. Asking for a budget of $245, Club Activities Board received $175 on the recommendation of Finance Committee Chairman Joyce Weaver.

Nominees for the vacant council positions are Norman Hobday, George Kaplanis, Dick Krammer, Mike Meyer, and Bob Varni.

Lawrence Lowe was sworn in by Associated Student President Dean Woods as Information Service Chairman. Taking over the office of Junior Chamber of Commerce Liaison Officer was George Kaplanis.

Other appointed presidential cabinet members are Alumni Liaison Officer Phil Braverman, Card Sales Chairman Emory Lebonville, Chief of Campus Police Bob Dagitz, Club Activities Board Chairman Earl Cabrinha, Men's Athletic Commissioner Ed Emig, Parliamentarian Vic Hebert, Publicity Committee Chairman Antoinette Mannina, Publications Board Chairman Gail Allan Moss, Rally Commissioner Tookie Radillo, Secretary to the AS Judy Wills, Women's Athletic Commissioner Norene Phillips, and Yell Leader Bill Roberts.

Card Sale Contest Will Be Extended

Students possessing the invalid portion of an Associated Student card can have the cards cleared through the finance office in the student union building with the payment of $5.00, Emory Lebonville, card sales chairman here, announced recently.

Invalid Associated Student cards bear the numbers 544, 584, 709, 874, 1171, 1186, 1466, 1639, 1640 and 2109. "These students are urged to renovate their cards as soon as possible," Lebonville said.

"Card sales have exceeded last fall up to the third week," Lebonville commented. The sales contest between the Associated Men and Women Students, which began September 26, will be extended another week to Friday, October 21.

Another advantage recently added for Associated Student card holders is a 20 per cent discount at the Launderette located at 1338 Ocean Avenue. A sign is planned, to be placed in the store window, stating the discount which card holders will receive.

Under the leadership of Barbara Batmale, the women students selling cards are Marcelle Chou, Kay Griffin, Juanita Hall, Norene Phillips and Sandy Steigerwald.

Bill Cirimele is directing the card sales for the Associated Men Students. Working along with him are Don Garrison, Ed Harrez, Lawrence Lowe, George Kaplanis and Gary Stluymuel.

Awards will be presented to the organization and to the individual selling the most Associated Student cards.

Training Certificates Due By Noon Today

All veterans must file a certification of training by noon today in the Veterans' Affairs Office, Room 134 in the science building, Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of veterans, announced last week.

Veterans attending the college under Public Law 550, Dunn further stated, would not normally receive benefits for more than 60 units, including those units acquired at other colleges or universities.

The only exceptions to this limitation are units taken to meet deficiencies for the Associate in Arts degree and those taken for entrance, or that can be transferred with full credit, to a four-year college.

All credits given for armed forces service, including hygiene and physical education, must be counted in this maximum, Dunn warned.

First Dance For Student Union Friday Night

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity will present a mid-term week dance, the Blue Book Blues, to be held in the George D. Smith Student Union Building this Friday night, October 21, from 9 p.m. until midnight.

Tickets, priced at $1.50, may be purchased at the student bank, at the door, or from Alpha Sigma Delta members, who are also giving away free blue books all this week. Music will be supplied by the band of Walt Tolleson.

Emory Lebonville, president of Alpha Sigma Delta, has expressed his pride in the decorations which are planned for this first dance in the new student union building, and committee members are hoping for a large turnout.

Highlighting the event will be the announcement of the queen of Alpha Sigma Delta. The women who are competing for this title are Lois Mantel, Phi Beta Rho; Tookie Radillo, Zeta Chi; Corrine Jorgenson, Zeta Chi; Ginny Hase, Rally Committee; Sandy Steigerwald, Theta Tau; and Carmen Arellano, Kappa Phi.

Voting for the queen will be by all members of the Associated Students, and will take place tomorrow and Friday. Booths to handle the voting will be placed at the Silver Pole, the cafeteria, and the student union building on the days of the election from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., according to Lebonville.

One vote may be cast for each AS card, and five votes may be cast for each ticket purchased, he added.

Pre-Registration Appointments To Start Monday

Counsellor appointments for spring semester programs may be applied for at the counselling office, S160; by students on Monday, October 24, according to Waddington Blair, counsellor here.

Priority in registration will be established by the order in which students apply for their appointments, he said.

Registration is to be based on the same numbering system inaugurated last semester. Upon making his counselling appointment, each student will be assigned a registration number.

If a student fails to keep his appointment, his counsellor will return the numbered program to the counselling office, and it will be necessary then for the student to make a new appointment and receive a later registration number.

At the time a student makes his appointment he will be given a white "proposed program" sheet indicating the date and hour of the appointment. The student may plan his future program on this sample sheet at his own discretion before the appointment date.

"By preparing this sheet in advance of the appointment date, more time will be available during the interview for a student and his counsellor to discuss other matters that may be of interest and concern to the student," Blair explained.

Homecoming Week October 24-28; Dance At Whitcomb Hotel Features Ray Hackett

Queen of Homecoming Week, October 24-28, will be announced at a special homecoming rally on Thursday, October 27, during college hour prior to the Ram-Modesto football encounter, according to Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Men Students here.

Selection of a Queen and her four runners-up court attendants was made here yesterday. Included on the judging staff were Dottie Hansen, mistress of ceremonies for the Dottie Hansen Teen Time television show; Don Pitts, former disc jockey and master of ceremonies for Don Pitts On The Air radio program; and Ralph Vetterlein, Associated Student president here in 1953 and at the University of California in 1954 and currently production manager of George Reproductions Company in San Francisco.

BILL CIRIMELE, Associated Men Student President and Homecoming chairman.

"A complete new outfit for the Homecoming Queen will be furnished by local shops and stores," Cirimele said. "She will be awarded a trophy which has been donated by Van Wormer and Rodrigues.

"The Campus Police force will provide the Queen and her court with a siren escort to the traditional Homecoming game," he added, and local business concerns will supply automobiles to transport each of the young ladies.

Homecoming Week will be concluded with the Homecoming dance at which the Queen is tentatively scheduled to receive the trophy and be officially crowned. The dance is presently planned to be held at the Crystal Room in the Whitcomb Hotel, which is located at 1231 Market Street. The music of Ray Hackett will be featured from 9 p.m. until midnight at the semi-formal affair.

"Admission to the dance, which will be sponsored by the Associated Students, will be $2.50 per couple for non-AS members," Cirimele announced. AS card holders and members of the college's Alumni Association will be charged $1.00 per couple. Tickets will be available at the door of the dance.

AMS Wins Card Sales Contest, 73-45, Over AWS

For the third consecutive semester, the Associated Men Students captured the semi-annual Associated Men versus Women Students Associated Student card sales contest. The men outsold the women by 28 cards, 73 to 45, Emory Lebonville, AS card sales chairman, announced yesterday.

Beginning in the fall of 1953, the contest has continued to act as a stimulus in upping the card sales to the point where they have topped all recent records.

Paced by Emily Hardy the first year, the AWS won easily over the AMS. The AMS recovered in 1954 and beat the AWS with Abe Virdeh and Lebonville capturing high honors in the fall and spring semesters respectively.

The victory of the AMS has broken the existing tie, leaving the AWS to say, "Wait until next year." Individual winners for this semester will not be disclosed until next week, Lebonville said.

Associated Student card sales have exceeded the 2,300 mark totaling more than $11,500. The goal set by Lebonville is 3,000 cards or $15,000.

Cards are still being sold for $5 at the AS office—S169, Dean Browne's office—S149, and the bank in the student union building.

Marston Avenue Parking Taboo

Parking on Marston Avenue is strictly taboo to all but residents of Balboa and Hurley Villages.

Violators will be cited and liable to a fine of $2, according to Campus Police Chief Fred Dagitz.

Also under close police scrutiny is the unpaved area immediately west of the new student union building. While the area is unpaved, those parking in this area will be issued warnings, but when the area is paved it will be added to the list of areas reserved for faculty parking.

Student parking is allowed on the west campus or in the area near the gymnasiums upon display of an Associated Student parking permit.

Parking on Phelan Avenue without a permit is allowed, providing all state laws are observed.

Inter-Sorority Council Here To Welcome Prospective Rushees At Tea This Sunday

With the first formal Inter-Sorority Council tea, to be held this Sunday, October 23, at Laurel Hall, semester sorority rushing will be in full swing.

Last semester's ISC and the new sorority officers combined their efforts to amend the rushing rules and compose a rushee's handbook.

Many of the new ISC rules were adapted from the University of California. All women students were invited to register in the office of the dean of women. Each was then invited to the ISC tea and the individual open houses.

The tea is sponsored jointly by the six sororities. Greeting the prospective pledges, each sorority will have its president and faculty adviser respectively in the line as follows:

Rose Thurmond and Carolyn Reideman will represent Alpha Lambda Chi; Marilyn Euler and Martha Scott, Delta Psi; Jan Digiovanni and Anka Paresich, Kappa Phi; Bobbie Le Boff and Evelyn Kerkoff, Phi Beta Rho; Peggy Alexander and Gertrude Norgard, Theta Tau; and Martha Dill and Ruth Inskipp, Zeta Chi.

Invitations to each organization's second affair will be sent to rushees. Zeta Chi features a Bohemian dinner; Theta Tau, a Luau; Phi Beta Rho, Italian; Kappa Phi, Chinese; Delta Psi, Italian, and Alpha Lambda Chi, French.

Dean Golding will receive and hold the invitations to pledge, and each prospective pledge is requested to report to Room S150.

The handbook states, "To be eligible for membership to any sorority, a woman student must have a grade point average of at least 1.0 and must carry at least 12 units."

During the week of November 9-16, silence is to be observed between rushees and sorority members, and the former are expected to respond to their invitations. Any rushee found violating this rule will be excluded from pledging and will not be allowed to rush in future semesters, regulations provide.

A neutral board has been formed, which consists of one woman from each sorority and acts in an advisory capacity for each rushee. Appointments with the board may be made through the dean of women's office.

Close observers declare that the college offers many activities in which students may participate. The six sororities were organized to enable their members to better serve their college and communities, while enjoying the intimacy of close friendship. The ISC continues to be more closely harmonized, and members believe shows promise of developing into a more contiguous and functional group.

Enrollment 770 Over Last Year; 6547 New High

Enrollment figures here, as of October 5, show that the Fall 1955 semester is the highest in the history of the college for total enrollment, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

The record total is 6,547, of which 5,251 are daytime students, and of which 1,296 attend class in the evening. This is an increase of 770 from the corresponding period in Fall 1954, and a jump of 460 over last semester's total of 6,087.

The highest previous enrollment was in the Fall 1947 semester, when an all daytime enrollment totaled 5,516. This semester's daytime figures nearly equal the total figures for 1947.

Daytime classes now handle 3,749 men and 1,502 women, as opposed to the evening class totals of 814 and 482, respectively. Thus, there are now a total of 4,563 men and 1,984 women attending the college.

An unusual aspect of the current enrollment figures is found in the semester breakdown. Of the day students, 1,857 are first semester students, only 743 are in their second semester, but 1,120 are attending classes for the third semester. This shows that more students who entered in Fall of 1954 are here than the students from Spring of 1955.

Although no accurate figures for the veteran enrollment are available at present, the total is expected to reach the 1,500 mark, according to Robin Dunn, assistant coordinator of veterans' affairs.

Workers Being Recruited For Jobs During Christmas Holidays, Look Forward To Largest Sales In Decade

Hundreds of workers are being recruited by business, industrial and governmental agencies for one of the largest Christmas season booms in the past ten years, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

While Christmas is still three months away, employers are starting their quest for competent workers of every description to be trained for a wide variety of jobs for the expected rush of buying. Leading the list of recruiters is the retail merchandising trade, Amori said, with department stores and specialty shops in the lead.

Experienced help is preferred, but applicants presenting a fresh look, good grooming with a flair for public contact work, such as sales, will be selected and trained by the employers. Women workers are needed more than males because of the type of sales involved. However, there will be a need for males in men's shops.

Post Office workers, mostly veterans, are not being recruited as yet, but Amori advised all veterans to register immediately at the placement office in S187 for consideration when the hiring gets under way. In addition, the railroads and trucking and transportation firms are also recruiting for workers.

Wages have advanced about ten cents per hour over last Christmas.

Attendance Being Strictly Enforced

A renewed warning to students concerning attendance regulations at the college came last week from John J. Brady, coordinator of the Division of Student Welfare here.

Students who have received a final notice (after having received a probationary warning notice) that they have accumulated more unexcused absences than are allowed in a course . . . "may not drop a course to avoid having the 'F' grade recorded," Brady said, stressing the point.

For complete information concerning attendance regulations, he urged students to consult pages 30 and 31 of the 1955-56 college bulletin.

Football Queen

BLONDE, BLUE-EYED Margie Morec added another title to her list when she was named the college's first Football Queen.—Guardsman photo by Bolthiori.

AS Selects First Football Queen, Margie Morec

Margie Morec, a tall blue-eyed blonde, has been chosen as the first Football Queen in the college's history.

The statuesque queen was selected by Dean Woods, Associated Student president; Bill Roberts, head Yell Leader, and Bill Cirimele, Associated Men Student president.

Football Queen is but the most recent title garnered by Miss Morec. In recent months she has been named Miss South San Francisco, Miss San Mateo County and a Maiden of California, in that order.

She was also Football Queen while a student at South San Francisco High School.

In addition to her chores as Football Queen, Miss Morec is Vice-President of the college Merchandising Club. Her ambition is to be a department store buyer. To this end she is currently employed by the Emporium.

College Hour Bows To Midterm Exams

Midterm examination week, the first of two this semester, necessitates the exclusion of college hour from the usual schedule this Friday, October 21.

Activities ordinarily held during college hour, including the college hour movie and the meetings of the various clubs and organizations on campus, will not be held until the following Friday, October 28.

Crowning of the Homecoming Queen is expected to highlight a college hour rally on Thursday, October 27.

Publication Board Lists Regulations

Regulations governing the distribution of printed matter other than official or recognized publications, and posters about the campus were announced yesterday by Gail Allan Moss, Publications Board chairman here.

All printed matter which is to be distributed on the campus must be submitted to the Publications Board chairman for approval before distribution, in accordance with the regulations which are as follows:

1. Any organization or campus group which intends to publish any material for distribution to any students of the college must have the master copy approved by the board chairman, and a copy of the distributed copy must be sent to him. If this rule is not followed, the publication will be cancelled by the board.

2. All posters which are to be put on campus must be approved by the chairman before posting.

Each Dollar, Penny Is Step Toward United Crusade Goal

WITH the United Crusade currently at the peak of its fund-raising drive, the pleas for contributions to this worthy cause are becoming more and more numerous. For the United Crusade to serve as it should, these pleas must be heeded and the goal must be reached.

The United Crusade combines 288 worthy charity groups, allowing the man on the street to contribute once and thus support all of these organizations in one fell swoop.

There is no question but that each of these groups deserves every cent that it can possibly raise. The only problem is how to raise enough so that each one may be served adequately. This problem will never be completely solved as long as one sick or needy person remains, but the more money that the United Crusade can collect, the closer will be the answer to the problem for each benefiting organization.

Any appeal for funds puts the average college student in a peculiar position. The majority of those attending a college or university are intelligent and learned enough to know that such a fund is vital, but, with some exceptions, are somewhat weak financially in their own right.

Today's college student is not as desperate as cartoons would have one believe, starving to death in a cold garret while studying all night, but financial problems are not rare among the group.

However, we would say that $1—an arbitrary figure—is not a princely sum, even to a college man or woman. Yet, if each student in attendance at day or evening classes at the college would contribute $1, the $6200 thus gathered would make a worthy contribution to the United Crusade. We realize that some are in a position to contribute more, perhaps some less. The idea is that each dollar, each penny, means something and is a step, albeit a small one, toward the goal.

Many of us are quite likely to pass off the United Crusade with the thought—"What good will my little bit do split 288 ways?" The answer, of course, is simple. Suppose every potential contributor thought that same thing? The fund would amount to nothing and none of the charities would be served.

The United Crusade covers every conceivable type of charitable and helpful organization for the Bay Area. Sooner or later, each one of us could need the services of one of these groups, a group that is now supported primarily through contributions to the United Crusade.

The old slogan of "United We Stand" holds true with the United Crusade. The "one-contribution-for-many" idea has lightened the load for both the contributor and the charitable groups involved. We strongly urge a contribution to this vitally important cause, the one cause that supports so many needy organizations.

The Spectator — Quarter Hour Breaks Become More Bearable

By Don Ball

GOOD things have been happening on television. Spectaculars have brought everything from a sobbing Judy Garland to a bullfight in Mexico City, right into the front rooms of America.

The past year has also seen color television become a reality as color programs began to be programmed regularly and color sets, at first priced out of the market, dropped down to ridiculously low prices within the reach of almost everyone. (Except of course those who were more interested in corporal pursuits, like for instance eating.)

This has been good. Sometimes, when the stars were right we were doubly blessed with SPECTACULARS in COLOR!!! But the real improvement has been neither polychromatic pictures nor extravaganzas of production—it has been the emergence of the lowly commercial, the boon to sales and bane to viewers, as a thing to be enjoyed rather than merely tolerated.

Granted, there are still some, most gently referred to as horrendous pigs: little men who exhale fetid vapors (actually it's halitosis) at the sound of a chime; chocolate-smeared hands that leap out to prove that the non-melting kind must taste better; women who show how much whiter one shirt is than the other, especially when the other one is blue and the myriad of demonstrators who prove, yes, actually prove, the merits of the product they are peddling with the aid of a confederate (usually hidden under the table to aid them in their hoax.)

Luckily, more and more sponsors are making their commercials, and therefore their product, more palatable.

The Bank of America and the Ford Motor Company have had a series of particularly noteworthy plugs. Ford pays approximately $5000 apiece to an agency which specializes exclusively in television commercials. For their $5000 Ford gets clever commercials that put the name of their product before the public and at the same time create an immeasurable amount of goodwill.

It might be noted that Ford has no control other than outright rejection over the composition of their plugs. The artists who design them insist that they be given an entirely free hand in the commercials' composition.

Wandering Tom-Tom Drum Trophy Is Audible

By Bob Kauth

Dum-de Dum Dum went the Tom-tom!

And then it went and went and went to—who knows where?

From the vicinity of San Mateo a distinct Dum-de Dum Dum atmospheric disturbance was heard and recently reported by undercover agents of the Bureau of Missing Drum-Beats from the college. This may indicate that the Tom-Tom, much coveted drum-trophy for the symbol of rivalry between San Mateo and City College, was apprehended by San Mateo.

Chief of the Campus Police, Bob Dagitz, was cross-examined by drum-beat agents, but—he doesn't know where the Tom-Tom is! All campus police officers are on the alert.

The deans were interrogated, but—they haven't heard any Dum-de Dum Dums. They did recall that on October 25, 1946, Sonny Lewis, assistant yell leader at San Mateo, offered the Chinese Tom-Tom to serve as a trophy for the winner of the annual Ram-Bulldog football game.

Like the Stanford Axe, the symbol of rivalry between the University of California and Stanford, the errant Tom-Tom has periodically played truant. Circumstantial evidence tends to prove that, at least on one occasion, this was because of abduction by . . . "gentlemen with a decidedly down-the-peninsula appearance."

Since the trophy's first appearance, it has been in the rooting section of City College all but three years. The game and the Tom-Tom were lost to San Mateo in 1949. There the drum remained through 1950 when heavy rains canceled the traditional big game.

Although the football encounter was won by the college in 1951, the Tom-Tom is reported to have been heard (Dum-de Dum Dum) and seen in the San Mateo rooting section in 1952. But for almost a decade the drum has faithfully turned up for the "big game" in one of the two colleges' rooting sections.

On the recommendation of Ralph Grannenberg, psychology instructor here who doesn't know where the Tom-Tom is, drum-beat agents solicited Joseph Dunninger, self-asserted and radio and T.V. renowned as the dubious master of parapsychology (Extrasensory Perception), for assistance.

With this convenient means of acquiring information, Dunninger was able to make some slightly unearthly prophecies. He concluded that on Saturday, November 5, at 2 p.m. in San Mateo the Rams and the Bulldogs will clash in a titanic struggle. He could clearly hear Dum-de Dum Dums from the Tom-Tom coming from one of the rooting sections.

Because of too much humidity and other environmental circumstances (dang smog), he was unable to discern or inspect any of the other numerous mental telepathic thought waves that are so freely distributed about the atmosphere. In a word: Dunninger doesn't know where the Tom-Tom is!

Dum Dum agents are still confident of recovering the erring trophy before big game time. They have requested that all Ram fans investigate undercover and be on the lookout for the Tom-Tom. It is colored red, white and blue, the colors of the two colleges.

Adherents who listen closely may hear Dum-de Dum Dums from the Tom-Tom. And if they do, it is advisable that they should see their psychoanalyst because they must be wicky-wacky (mentally off-beat)!

Shots At Random

By Dolores Stoffers

GRUMBLINGS about the Associated Student office connote distinct displeasure on behalf of Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, and several AS officers over the brief appearance of the Hi-Lo's at the recent Bonfire Rally.

The boys cut their performance down to 15 minutes, explaining that they were unaware that the rally was an outdoor one, whatever that has to do with the situation. However, AS President Dean Woods says they knew, and what's more they were paid to put on a show, which they almost did.

There's an old axiom in the newspaper world that says if a reporter wants to pick up his whole story, and possibly a couple more, he should be the first to arrive at an event and the last to leave.

It seems the editor-in-chief and the sports editor of The Guardsman tried to put this axiom to use during the football game between the college and Stockton at Kezar. Worked fine for a while, but the last part of the endeavor proved to hold difficulties. In their attempt to give some heads-up coverage, the lads took themselves a little too seriously, and found themselves really the last to leave—about two hours later than the gatekeeper did. The power of the press, in this instance, proved to be two lusty, forlorn howls for succor. Police department to the rescue, two more American journalists walked through the iron gates to freedom.

Look out below: Fears raised in the stoutest of hearts while riding in the sometimes unmanageable Science Building elevator were not quelled when an observant passenger happened to glance at the operating permit on its wall. As he neared the third floor (on the second try), he noticed that the frame-covered part of the permit, so that it read in part: (type) Hydraulic vert.-Horiz.-Plunge . . .

Last semester's most repeated word was progress, and the comparatively new Cloud Hall and the George Smith Student Union Building, then under construction, raised that spirit of progress to such a furor in every beating heart connected with the college, that someone decided to plant a young fir tree on the campus. The landscapers went through the greatest pains to make sure it would grow up straight with the college. It was pulled out last week. Significance?

Crazy US Roads OK

Bayshore Traffic Mild Compared To Europe's Jam

By Dolores Stoffers

We complain about the Bayshore, Waldo Pass and the glorious freeways, and call them A-1 death traps, but they're all kiddy-car tracks compared to Europe's byways and drivers thereon.

In Europe, every road, paved or dirt, city street, or any space capable of holding an auto serves as a highway, and there aren't many places that can't hold one of those midget chargers. In fact, about the only place they haven't tried to terrorize so far is the cow tracks in the upper regions of the Alps, but that's probably next on the list.

Picture all the cars on El Camino converted into bicycles, backed by a goodly number of small autos, all moving at top speed, and that's the typical European city's main street. Traffic cops? They don't count. It is highly probable that the average motorist doesn't even know what one is. Besides, who has the nerve to make futile gestures at a host of charging fronts?

In most cases, the European traffic cop seems to be a downtrodden little character who has been compelled to take his place among the common footmen who try to hold their own, and a uniformed body which merely adds color to the scene.

The Germans, however, have met the situation with their traditional staunchness, and have placed their police on precarious perches high above the threatening traffic, where they make futile gestures which resemble those of a prima ballerina performing Scheherazade.

France and Italy seem to be in a constant battle to cop the title of Country Having Worst Drivers. No one has lived until he rides in a Parisian taxi.

After a 70 MPH cruise down the Champs Eylsees, our taxi finds itself in a one-way circle on which almost every mode of transportation is found charging madly around the Arc de Triomphe. This wouldn't be so bad, if it weren't for the 12 boulevards of top speed traffic which converge into said circle. They are all driving at top speed due to a law of physics concerning freely moving objects gathering speed. In other words, most of the autos have few or no brakes.

Italian traffic takes on the aspect of a Mack Sennett comedy. Here we have the main street of Rome, and here we have bicycles, motorcycles, and scooters, all charging toward their goals like Don Quixote toward the windmills. What makes this scene so dreadful is the realization that these kids aren't necessarily trying to save time, but are actually testing (or showing to all, as the case may be) the maneuverability of their pint-sized autos. So they pass each other with the utmost carefree abandon, and when no lanes are open to passing, they use the sidewalks.

Night driving in France and Italy bears all the aspects of the daytime traffic, with one added factor: no headlights are used. This provides excellent sport for the veteran driver, but it is no field of endeavor for the novice. When a driver reaches an intersection (if he can see it), he blinks his lights a couple of times, and if another pair of beams crosses his at a right angle, the race is on.

Oh, the Bayshore may be wild, and the Skyline may drive fear into the staunchest of hearts, but they're nothing but perambulator walks in comparison with Europe's roads.

Drive For Unity, Spirit Keynote Of Early Times

A constant drive forward to overcome challenges and to maintain unity and spirit throughout difficult times is the prerequisite of progress and success.

Glances back at the history of the college show that it has more than fulfilled its side of the bargain.

A score of years ago, when the college was first authorized by the Board of Education, "itinerant" classes had to be held in educational buildings scattered throughout the city. The wandering students, 1500 of them, were naturally depressed by their somewhat "D.P." status.

As a result, college spirit languished.

As with sports, interest in college social activities was also swept downward with the low ebbing tide. A suggested method to encourage attendance at the Freshman Ball was the formation of a date bureau to be located in The Guardsman office; the applications were to be strictly confidential, satisfaction being guaranteed.

Jointly, the faculty and students withstood the maelstrom of those disruptive and hectic years, made worse by the harassments they were subjected to by other colleges. The reward came on April 25, 1937, when the late Mayor Angelo J. Rossi broke earth in Bushman Park.

Three years later the sun was shining on a large modern building, erected on that same spot, filled with students eager for learning. The "orphans" had found a home.

Ten years back normalcy was returning to the world as the dark, ominous curtain of war had been finally thrown open, letting the rays of freedom in.

Revival of the college spirit was phlegmatic; the goal of Associated Students leaders was to arouse it from dormancy.

We read how Bob Mills, the first president to be re-elected to office, collaborated with the administration to send the students teeming down to the rallies. Secret weapon? No, just the closing of the students' favorite habitats and places of rendezvous—library and cafeteria—on rally days.

For these efforts, have progress and success held true to the bargain? Have they bestowed their favors on this institution?

A pause for a look at the size of the present campus, at the role that the numerous academic, athletic and other activities play in the life of the myriad of students is all that is needed to come up with the answers.

Rams Topple Thunderbirds, 33-13

Grazing Rams Are Victims Of 24-6 Mustang Stampede

By Mike Berger

Stockton, the club that put an early season squelch on Ram hopes in 1954, did the same thing again in 1955, to the emphatic tune of 24-6 before some 3,000 fans at Kezar Stadium on October 8.

Not only did the inspired Mustangs put the college eleven out of immediate Junior Rose Bowl contention, but they also threw a king-sized wrench into the Rams' Big Eight title aspirations.

The old adage about football games being won and lost in the line was carried out to the hilt in this contest, as the visitors put a forward wall on the field that must have seemed yards thick to Ram ball carriers. The same City College team that had rolled up 681 yards rushing in two previous games was held to a net of 23 yards by the sensational Mustang line. The ineffectiveness of the Ram runners was multiplied in the second half as ace fullback Shirlee McCormick was forced out of action after re-injuring a shoulder.

While the Stockton linemen were bottling up the college ground attack, Ram quarterback Les Barros was having quite a time trying to find his receivers. The usually accurate tosser ended up by completing only two of 20 passes.

Big gun in the steady rushing offense that Stockton possessed was fullback Charley Haggard, who ripped and bulled his way for 111 yards net, nearly five times the amount of the whole Ram team. While Haggard took care of things up the middle, Jerry Marquis and Dick Nunes swept the flanks on numerous key plays.

The Rams scored first after recovering a Stockton fumble deep in the opposition's territory, with McCormick smashing 13 yards for the tally, but Stockton swept right back with the tying touchdown. Marquis capped a 54-yard drive with a six-yard end sweep for the points that deadlocked the game, 6-6, at the end of the first half.

Coach Don Hall's cohorts proved in the third quarter that their fine play of the first 30 minutes wasn't a fluke by marking up a pair of scores on long drives. The tie-breaker was chalked up by Haggard on a 35-yard burst through tackle, and soon after Stockton iced the game with a clutch fourth down plunge into the end zone by Marquis after three previous attempts from the one-foot line had failed. Scoring ended in the final quarter with Nunes counting from the one.

Campora Rates Big Eight Teams Over Some Four-Year Colleges

By Joe Callas

An interview with Stockton College line coach Don Campora following the Stockton-City College football game brought about some startling revelations about two-year college football.

Obviously jubilant over the hard fought upset victory over the Rams, Campora stated that "the brand of football played by junior colleges is on a par with many four-year collegiate teams." The Mustang coach singled out teams in the Far Western Conference such as Chico State and San Francisco State, as the teams he compares Big Eight Conference squads with. He also added that two-year college football undoubtedly surpasses that which is played in college freshmen leagues.

One of the small percentage of men to come up through the ranks of football, Campora played the grid sport at Stockton High School, Stockton College, College of Pacific, where he received All-American recognition in 1949, and professional football with the San Francisco 49ers and Washington Redskins.

When asked about the difference of play between college and pro football, the former 49er tackle revealed that the pros are more specialized in their positions and are geared to play against top teams week after week, where in college football there are soft touches that appear periodically on the schedules.

Concerning the Mustang victory over the Rams, Campora singled out guard Willie Hudson as being outstanding on the City College defense. He had particular praise for Stockton backs Charley Haggard and Dick Nunes.

Campora, in his first year of coaching with the Mustang squad, is no newcomer to the coaching profession. He has served as assistant grid coach at Arizona State College, and performed as a player-coach with the Calgary Stampeders of the Canadian Professional League before returning to his Alma Mater.

Ram Cross Country Runners Get Win As Foes Forfeit

City College's first cross-country team won its initial dual meet by default when the Stockton Mustangs failed to put in an appearance at the Balboa Park course on October 8.

Even though there was no meet, the harriers ran just to get used to the two-mile tour. In their first official timing, Lloyd Costello finished first in a time of 15.37, followed by Henry Stroughter in 15:39, and Bill Tillsen, third.

Since the course was new to the runners, these times are creditable. The run starts at the far end (by the firehouse) of the newly completed Balboa Park baseball diamonds, circles the field and continues past the Balboa soccer stadium to the tennis courts.

From here it runs completely around the bushes surrounding the soccer stadium, across the road by the police station and back to the southeast corner of the baseball field. This is a distance of one mile and is circled twice in order to complete the cycle.

The college's next meet is with the Sacramento Panthers this Friday, October 21, at Sacramento.

Ramblings — Rambler Is Hog-Tied By Stadium Turnkey

By Mike Berger

WHEN one is locked behind the sturdy gates of Kezar for an hour and a half, one has plenty of time to think over the game just concluded, in between the rantings of the Editor-in-Chief.

Over the grumblings of the other Kezar shut-ins, the surprising 24-6 score still stood out, and such a turnout was reminiscent of the 49ers, a team we have talked about before.

The Rams have won their "exhibitions," but have dropped the one that counted, and subsequently find themselves in a hole that only they can dig out of. Even the best of clubs will fall before inspired opponents, and this was certainly the case in the Stockton game.

After a larruping by Compton, the Mustangs rebounded strongly, and the college team will have to do likewise if it wishes to remain in title contention. The true worth of this year's Ram team will be told in the next couple of games, a couple of tilts that must be accredited to the win ledger or a promising season will have gone by the boards.

Stockton and West Contra Costa have now asserted themselves as the top contenders, but the Rams are far from out of it at this date. We all know what the Mustangs did to get off to a winning start, and the defending co-champs, the Comets, ground under the San Mateo club, 38-13, in their first conference action.

Our evening Kezar appraisals completed, we proceeded to dig our way out, amidst much clawing and cursing, directed to both the blankety-blank gatekeeper and the frisky Mustangs.

Soccermen Meet Gators Saturday

For the first home game of the season, the college's soccer team will host San Francisco State at Balboa Park Stadium this Saturday, October 22, at 10 a.m.

In the preliminary game, the junior varsities will battle it out beginning at 9 a.m.

Last year the Rams had little trouble defeating the Gators, 4-1. Coach Roy Diederichsen, however, pointed out that the State College booters have improved considerably and are expected to give the Rams strong competition.

Les Barros Sharp, Leads Easy Win Over Fast Oaks

By Al Moss

With quarterback Les Barros showing the way, the Rams, angered by their upset defeat at the hands of Stockton, took it out on a fast but out-manned Oakland eleven, 33-13, at Oakland's Bushrod Park on October 14.

Barros, finally showing the form that made him an all-league choice last year, personally accounted for 19 points and was one of the driving forces behind the City College win. He completed 7 of 14 passes and his daring signal-calling kept Oakland guessing.

The Rams opened the scoring in a hurry when, early in the first quarter, center Bill Canihan intercepted a Will Souza pass on the Thunderbird 13-yard line and packed it over. Stan Keith booted the extra point. Barros' quarterback sneak from the 1-yard line made the score 13-0 with only some ten minutes played.

Dick Mannini's interception of quarterback Souza's pass on the host's 8 set up a second period Ram score. Barros completely fooled the Oakland defense, sending Rudy Lopez into the line on successive plays and then, on fourth down, faking and flipping a short pass to a completely unguarded Rich Piazza in the end zone. Faking a placement formation, Barros again hit Piazza, again completely clear, for the extra point.

The Birds took the second half kickoff and marched directly to their first touchdown, as Souza passed to end Ron Dennis for 35 yards. A 15-yard penalty on the same play moved the ball to the Ram 1 yard marker and, after an offside penalty against the Oaks, Jim Melton skirted left end for six points.

After an exchange of kicks Al Chatman returned a punt some 35 yards for the Rams. A Barros pass to Don Wilson netted 20 and, on fourth down, the cool quarterback called the same play that had scored earlier, this time faking and passing to opposite end Van Parish for 3 yards and the TD. The final score came in the last quarter when Gene Crummey, filling in capably for injured fullback Shirlee McCormick, raced 28 yards around right end to sweep it. Garlin Bluford added the 33rd point.

The Thunderbirds scored their last six points on the last scrimmage play of a long fourth quarter when Bob Jenkins threw 20 yards to Don Gorman, then added the conversion.

Capital City Host To Do-Or-Die Rams In Comeback Drive

Still hoping to "pick up all the chips" in the form of the Big Eight Conference championship, the Rams play Sacramento at Hughes Stadium in Sacramento this Friday, October 21. Kickoff is set for 8:30 p.m.

Coach Grover Klemmer's squad defeated Coach Jack Mauger's Sacramento team last year by a score of 24 to 19.

Two big factors in the Sacramento outlook are Roosevelt Beatty and John Helms. The above mentioned citizens are both starting halfbacks, with Beatty being a speedster of some note. Numbered 23 and 44, respectively, they are expected to do a lot of ball carrying come Friday.

Running out of the "T" formation, the Sacramento club will be handled by quarterback Gomez Delgado.

Sacramento broke even in pre-season tilts. They defeated American River 27 to 9, but dropped a 12-0 contest to Santa Monica. If-Al Chatman, Mack Calhoun, Shirlee McCormick, Dick Mannini and Les Barros play up to their practice season play, the Rams will once again loom as contenders for the Big Eight title.

Klemmer indicated that the Sacramento forward wall may cause the Ram backs some trouble. Some of the statistics on the heights and weights are impressive: tackles Tom Oates (6-0, 248) and Dan Fowler (6-5, 230), and centers Ron Ohanesian (5-11, 220) and Guy Stowe (6-0, 200).

The heaviest men on the Ram squad are Tom Kiefer (6-2, 225) and Bert Mondino (6-4, 247).

After two weeks on the road against Oakland and Sacramento, the Rams return to their home base next Thursday, October 27, in the homecoming battle with Modesto. The following week will find the college team invading the peninsula to play San Mateo on Saturday, November 5.

Coed Dance Group Here Schedules Noon Mixers

Co-ed social dancing will be held in the women's gymnasium next Monday and Wednesday, October 24 and 26, Gloria Dunn, physical education instructor, announced recently. It will be called Noon Mixer and will be held between 12 noon and 1 p.m.

Miss Dunn announced that if students wish to, they may bring their favorite recordings.

On November 9, 1953, the United States Supreme Court upheld the famous 1922 ruling of Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Homes that professional baseball is a sport, not a business, and therefore not subject to federal antitrust laws.

All-Conference Palma Returns To Again Bolster Ram Soccer Squad

Robert Palma, last season's high scorer and All Conference center forward, is again sparking the college's soccer squad with his brilliant ball control and accurate passing. During the six games of the 1954 campaign, Palma scored 12 goals for the Rams which made him one of the top scorers of the league.

His agility, coupled with quick reactions and excellent dribbling ability, help him to take advantage of scoring opportunities and make him a menace to opposing fullbacks. Coach Roy Diederichsen classifies him as "one of the best and most cooperative players I have worked with."

Diederichsen is confident that Palma will continue for the rest of the season to be of great help in the Ram's quest for the title.

Palma has gained most of his soccer experience with some of the local Sunday League soccer teams including San Francisco AC and Mexico AC, and he plans to continue playing Sunday ball after the close of the regular college season.

A graduate of Balboa High School, Palma now is in his fourth semester here and is majoring in art. He plans to continue his commercial art studies at the University of California upon graduation from this college.

Midterm Week Upsets Round Of Club Activities

By Antoinette Mannina

MIDTERM week has upset the usual round of club activities. Business meetings took up most of last week to discuss forthcoming social activities, joints, rushing affairs and the ISC joint tea.

More than 100 members signed up at the first Newman Club meeting this semester. Officers elected at the meeting were Vasco Bigangiari, president; Rosemary Elb, vice-president; Anne Hanley, treasurer; Carolyn Barbera, recording secretary and CAB representative; Laura Petillo, corresponding secretary, and Al Raynal, sergeant-at-arms. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Mondays of the month at St. Emydius Hall at Jules and De Montford Streets. The next meeting will be on Monday, October 24.

Zeta Chi held a business meeting last week to discuss plans for rushing at the home of the sorority's sponsor, Ruth Inskipp.

Alpha Kappa Rho held a business meeting recently at the home of Bob Tucker.

Phi Beta Rho held a business meeting recently to discuss rushing plans. The sorority also held a joint recently with Beta Phi Beta fraternity at the home of Lee Carol Lombard.

Members of Delta Psi Omega attended a surprise birthday party last Saturday for Vice-President Carol Waugh.

Results of the recent Canterbury Club elections found Bill Chisum, coordinator of City and State Colleges; Art Handy, president; Ben Cook, vice-president; Mary Schulz, secretary, and Joan Finnerman, treasurer, elected.

Kappa Phi held a business meeting last Thursday at the home of Anne Canellos.

New officers of the Masonic Club are Wayne McFadden, president; James Webster, vice-president; Jeanne Cutchen, acting women's vice-president; Gil Halstead, treasurer; Lois Fishman, recording secretary; Barbara Polster, corresponding secretary; Pat Parsons, membership; Sonia Rees, parliamentarian; Metta Weddleton, social committee representative, and Barbara Polster, CAB representative.

New officers of the Horticulture Society are Gilbert Halstead, president; Ike Touscher, vice-president; William White, secretary, and George Joeston, treasurer.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 noon in The Guardsman office, Room 8304. Names must be typewritten to be acceptable.

Student Engineers Here Form Fellowship Club

Students of the engineering division are now forming a new organization, according to Paul Allen Penn, president. It is the objective of the club to create good fellowship in the division by providing an opportunity for the exchange of ideas among engineering students here, Penn said.

All members of the engineering division are eligible, and meetings are being held during college hours in S204. The organization is under the supervision of Wally Sellman, adviser.

Other elected officers of the infant organization are Stanley P. John, vice-president; John Renati, secretary-treasurer.

Other members of the organization to date are Joel Anderson, Michael Beddesen, David Brown, Arthur Carbon, Marion Jones, Robert Kennerknecht, Benton Lum, Robert Palasek, Henry Lenigieni and Richard Tom.

Frosh Ball Queen Chosen

Sandy Martinsen Wins Contest And Phi Beta Trophy

Sandy Martinsen was chosen Freshman Queen and presented with a trophy at the socially and financially successful semi-annual Freshman Ball, October 8.

"Miss Martinsen won in a tight competitive contest which included six other well qualified queen candidates," Don Garrison, class president, stated. Miss Martinsen is presently completing her second semester at the college, and she was sponsored in the contest by Kappa Phi sorority.

The trophy was presented to Miss Martinsen by Tony Panacci, president of Beta Phi Beta fraternity here, who provided the trophy, at 11 p.m. Included in the list of other contestants were Betty Bone, Marlee Dumas, Sally Fuicks, Eleanor Gandert, Phyllis Manness and Barbara Muskat.

Freshman class officers served as the judges for the contest. They are Garrison, Dee Noodlman, vice-president; Louise von Emster, secretary, and Ken Woodruff, treasurer.

"Approximately 1029 students attended the affair which was a very good turnout," Garrison declared. "Sponsored by the Associated Students and free to AS card holders, the dance was financially successful and received a paid admittance of $32.00 from non-AS members."

The Freshman Ball was held at the Surf Club from 9 p.m. until midnight. Charlie Stern and his band provided the music for the affair.

Qualified Students Asked To Help In Soph Week Plans

All qualified (satisfactory completion of 30 units of college work) and interested students are requested to contact Jane Lutt, Sophomore vice-president, or Johnson in the Associated Student office, Room 169 in the science building, as soon as possible.

"Highlight of Sophomore Week, January 9 through January 14, will be the Sophomore Ball," Johnson said, "which will be held on Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel. Prior to the dance, members of the Associated Students will elect a sophomore king and queen to reign at the ball."

Clubs, fraternities and sororities of the college may enter candidates for the king-queen contest by submitting a petition to Miss Lutt or Johnson before January 1, 1956.

Admission to the Sophomore Ball will be one Associated Student card per couple or $2.50 per couple for non-AS members. Tickets will be available at the student finance office located in the student union building, and at the door before entering the dance.

"Appropriate dress for the affair is presently scheduled to be semi-formal," Johnson stated. The band has not yet been decided upon.

The soph-prof basketball game is another attraction that will take place during Sophomore Week. Athletically inclined students who wish to participate in this event should consult Johnson.

Cafeteria Reinforced With New Coffee Urn To Help In Rush Period

With the re-inforcement advantages of another twin-6 (Coffee urn) to the dining facilities in the student union building and the continued and augmented cooperation of patrons, a reduction of the coffee prices to .08 (eight) cents per cup is anticipated, Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Department here, predicted last week.

One twin-6 is presently operating to full capacity in the cafeteria. The new twin-6 will replace the Cory-automatic which has been supplying the coffee for the fountain.

The Cory-automatic can produce a steady supply of coffee, but during the rush periods the coffee supply is exhausted. The prominent advantage offered by the twin-6 is that it is semi-automatic. This enables a maximum amount of coffee to be made at one time. Thus an adequate quantity of coffee will be available during the rush periods.

"Of course," Muntz said, "the prices are determined more by the cooperation received from the luncheon patrons than by the added facilities of the restaurant. The restaurant department is operating on a non-profit basis, and the prices are dependent upon the overhead savings."

It is hoped that in the near future, he added, the prices of coffee can be reduced to eight cents, although it does cost a considerable amount in hired help to bus the dishes and keep the tables cleared.

"To maintain low prices is one of the paramount objectives of the hotel department. The savings would rather be passed on to the patrons than be invested in extra employees," Muntz concluded.

Hi-Lo Performance Brings Complaints

Complaints about the use of unethical practices by the Hi-Lo's, featured entertainers at the bonfire rally here on October 7, by the attending Associated Students has resulted in protesting action, AS President Dean Woods announced last week.

Talking the majority of the time, the quartet sang four songs in a show that lasted an estimated 12 minutes, Woods said. They were scheduled to sing for 25 to 30 minutes.

In defense of their early departure from the rally, the Hi-Lo's gave several reasons. Tookie Radillo, rally commissioner, quoted one member as saying that it was because of a misunderstanding that they "didn't know it was going to be an outdoor rally."

50 Volunteer For AWS Semi-Annual Tea

Preparations for the Associated Women Student December tea and fashion show are underway and 50 women students have volunteered to work on committees, according to Barbara Batmale, AWS president here.

Committee heads include Juanita Hall, Shelly Bolinas, Tookie Radillo, Joyce Weaver, Jean Vachon, Marion Cheader, Kay Courtney, Noreen Phillips, Darlene Reitz, Louise von Emster, Barbara Polister, Dee Noodlman, Toni Mannina, Joan Nussaliem and Eleanor Peeder.

AS Finds Temporary Office Space

For approximately a decade, the Associated Students of City College occupied a pair of offices in the west campus, Building 2. With the evacuation of the temporary buildings, the necessity of finding a new spot became apparent, and so the AS moved into the science building, Room 129.

Behind the door opposite the Silver Pole, Dean Woods, AS president, and Lee Carol Lombard, vice-president, occupy two functional desks, keep an efficient filing cabinet, and an informative bulletin board.

"Currently, our facilities seem to be a little inadequate to serve those students planning the semester's activities," Miss Lombard commented. "However, with the growing enthusiasm in student government and the excellent cooperation of the AS officers, the limited space presents a minor problem."

The new student offices are being constructed to the east of the student union building. According to Dr. O. E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management, the portable building will be ready for occupancy before the end of the year. The facilities will include offices and a conference room, which will be available for use by all recognized campus organizations.

Debate Team To Meet Stanford

Phi Rho Pi, the college debate team, will attend a round-table discussion at Stanford University in November, according to Tom Dutcher, the faculty debate adviser here.

Subject of the debate will be Implementation of the Supreme Court Decision Forbidding Segregation in the Public Schools. Members of the team who will represent this college are Pat Mahoney, Peggy Powell, Klaus Arons, Vic Hebert, Willie Jones, Bob Arago and Charles Conn.

On Friday, November 4, the club will journey to Humboldt State, in Arcata, to enter the annual debate tournament.

Students interested in joining Phi Rho Pi may contact Dutcher in his office, Room C335B, Monday, Wednesday or Friday at 10 a.m.

"The only prerequisites to joining the club are that a student be earnest and willing," Dutcher said.

Wilde's Classic Comedy Opens Here October 28

Presentation of the first of four performances of Oscar Wilde's play, The Importance of Being Earnest, by the drama department here will be on Friday, October 28, at 8:30 p.m. in the little theater under the direction of Michael Griffin.

"One of Oscar Wilde's finest drawing room comedies, the production is a complete play on words and situations," Griffin said. "Because it is a classic, it should appeal to the more culturally-inclined students."

The drama tells the story of Jack Worthing, a country resident, who has found it necessary to use a fictional and troublesome friend named Ernest as an excuse whenever he goes into the city in search of feminine companionship. Simultaneously, Algernon Moncrieff, a friend of Worthing, uses the same excuse when he decides to leave the city and spend some time in the country.

As the story unfolds, Worthing and Moncrieff fall in love with two attractive young ladies who confess that they love each man only because he bears the name "Ernest." Earnestly this could lead to a very confusing conclusion.

Cast in the leading role is Larry Coviello who characterizes Jack Worthing. Brett Dawson portrays the part of Algernon Moncrieff. Other members of the cast are Stephanie Koppe as Lady Bracknell, Karen Douville as Cecily, Jeanne Graham as Gwendolyn, Louis Bamburger as Lane, King Harrington as the Rev. Chausuble, Vivian Chinn as Miss Prism, and John Macfarlene as Merriman.

Included on the production staff are Joe Bavaresco, Richard Barulich and Ed Burbridge.

Performances of the play will also be presented on October 29, November 4 and 5. Admission will be by Associated Student card to AS members, or $1.00 to non-AS members. Tickets will be available at the door.

Student Council, Fully Manned, Acts On 9 Budgets

Student Council, fully manned for the first time this semester, last week granted nine budgets, totaling $13,529, to college activities.

Football received the largest allocation with $4,668; following were The Guardsman, $3,120; Controller, $1,914; Associated Men Students, $1,008; Drama, $1,000; Publicity, $1,000; Soccer, $400; Women's Athletic Association, $224; and the Handbook supplement for the spring semester of 1955, $200.

The budgets for The Guardsman and drama were contested. Bob Bliss requested a breakdown of the allocation for The Guardsman. Bliss was satisfied when Al Moss, Guardsman editor-in-chief, explained that there were more copies of The Guardsman being printed this fall because of the rise in AS members. Moss added the fact that the price of paper was higher.

Discussion of the drama budget began when Lee Carol Lombard asked the reason for the increase from last semester's grant of $700 to the $1,000 recommended for the fall semester.

Joe Bavaresco, representing drama, said "there are a great many bills to be paid and more plays are being planned for this semester," and added, "the drama productions have always returned to the AS fund more than what had been granted." Drama requested $2,827 which was disapproved. Student Council then passed the recommended budget of $1,000.

Vacancies in the council were filled last week when three new members were sworn in by Dean Woods, AS president and chairman of the Student Council. The new members are George Kaplanis, Dick Kramer, and Bob Varni. The cabinet position of Election Commissioner was filled by Bill Chisum.

Administrative Policy On Grade Evaluation Given

Administrative policy on interpretation of grades was explained last week by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

The midterm grade is an evaluation of a student's performance through and including that given point in the semester. Students who receive an A in the first midterm and in the second receive a B cannot rationalize that the grade is between an A or a B, Luckmann said.

Since the grade is cumulative, the student has information that his grade in the course for the period elapsed is a B, or the grade received for the second midterm.

In the past there has been greater latitude provided for in the policy of interpreting midterm grades. Thus it was possible for instructors to treat the midterm periods as three segments of a course, with the result that the grades could be averaged in order to determine a student's current standing in the course.

With the policy above, there is only one grade interpretation and that is "Midterm grades are cumulative." They reflect a student's position in his class.

The relationship of the final examination to the other evaluated processes, such as quizzes, midterms, exercises, and specific assignments, including study and investigation (reports, term papers, and the like) is determined by each instructor.

Kaplanis Wins AS Card Sale Contest

George Kaplanis, a freshman member of the college's Student Council, won the individual Associated Student card sales contest by selling a total of 43, Emory Lebonville, AS card sales chairman, announced today.

Kaplanis' sales were only two under the entire total sold by the Associated Women Students. The Associated Men Students won the group contest over the AWS, 73-45. Juanita Hall finished behind—Kaplanis and topped the women with 15 cards sold.

The trophy for topping the sales contest, awarded each semester, will be presented to Kapianis during the Student Council meeting tomorrow, according to Lebonvilie, who won the trophy himself last semester by selling 109 cards.

Total sales as of last week were estimated at approximately 2,400, Lebonville added. This is close to 50 per cent of the total enrollment of day students, with about 5,200 attending day classes here this semester.

Parking Violators Cited Here By Campus Police

Parking citations have been issued at about the same rate as last semester, Bob Dagitz, chief of the Campus Police, announced last week.

Between 400 and 500 citations have been issued since the beginning of this semester. Most of the citations, according to Dagitz, have been given to students illegally parked in the faculty area, for blocking driveways, and parking without permits.

He also stated that after midterms the citations would drop to the rate of about 60 to 75 per week. The main cause for this is that students would be more familiar with parking regulations, which if not known, are on the bulletin board next to the faculty offices in Cloud Hall.

RAY HACKETT and his orchestra will supply the music for Friday's Homecoming dance.

Cooperation Key To Any Drop In Price Of Coffee

Contrary to current speculation, there is no immediate plan to reduce the price of coffee or any other item served in the cafeteria, according to Wendell Muntz, acting director of the hotel and restaurant division here.

In order to carry on operations, Muntz said, the student union must have an income at least as large as its expense. Lately it has become necessary to employ additional personnel in order to insure a clean, orderly cafeteria at all times, thereby increasing the cost of maintaining the building.

If the tables were left cleaner by those students who use them, if dishes were returned to the washing counter and papers were disposed of in the provided receptacles, Muntz declared that then possibly the price of coffee could be reduced, but until such time the price must remain at ten cents.

Muntz added that the future plans of the hotel and restaurant division include replacing the paper cups in which coffee is currently served with china cups and saucers. Also in the offing may be a discount on refills, but this once again depends on students keeping the entire student union building in cleaner shape than it has been in the past.

Ray Hackett Orchestra Furnishes Music For Whitcomb Hotel Dance To Wind Up Triple Decked Week

Homecoming activities begin tomorrow with an outdoor rally heralding the start of the annual celebration.

Surprise entertainment and the announcement of the Homecoming Queen and her court will highlight the rally which will lean heavily on the students here for the provision of talent. The rally will be held during Thursday's special college hour in the court between Cloud Hall and the science building.

That afternoon the Ram football team will meet the Modesto Pirates at 2:30 p.m. in Kezar Stadium. (See page 3 for pre-game details.)

The next evening, Friday, the Associated Men Students play host to student body and alumni at the Homecoming Dance in the Crystal Ballroom of the Whitcomb Hotel. Starting at 9 p.m., the music for the dance will be played by Ray Hackett's 12-piece society orchestra. Hackett's orchestra will feature a vocalist as an added attraction.

Sometime before midnight, when the dance ends, the Homecoming Queen will be introduced. She will be presented with a trophy and a bouquet of roses by the AMS president, Bill Cirimele.

One dollar per couple plus an Associated Student card, or presentation of $2.50 will admit each couple. Alumni Association members will also be honored. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Women wearing cocktail dresses and men in dark suits with ties will be dressed appropriately, according to Cirimele.

Location of the Whitcomb Hotel is on the south side of Market Street between Eighth and Ninth Streets.

Traditional rivalry between the college's football team and the team of another college is the purpose of Homecoming Week, Associated Student President Dean Woods said last week.

Since the Big Eight Conference was formed there has been no traditional rival. San Mateo, which at one time was the rival, has been considered as the choice for future homecoming games, Woods announced.

Although traditional games can be scheduled, no arrangements have been made with San Mateo. Woods said that sometime this semester a meeting would be held with San Mateo and efforts would be made to work out a plan where the football teams of both colleges would meet during future Homecoming Weeks.

Rally Tomorrow Highlights College Hour

Because of the homecoming rally, the college hour schedule will be in effect tomorrow instead of Friday.

This change will cause the regular movie, shown every Friday during ordinary circumstances, to be shown during the Thursday college hour, 10:40 a.m.

This week's film selection is Glass Centre of Corning, a film showing the processes of glass manufacture. The picture will last about 25 minutes and is in narrow-screen technicolor.

The film will be shown in Room 136 of the science building, according to Madison Devlin, instructor in charge of audio-visual aids.

Scholarships For Women Available

Two scholarships for women students of the college are available now, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced yesterday.

They are being offered by Florence Louis, an alumna of the college, and by the alumnae of Theta Tau sorority.

Miss Louis has given the scholarship each semester since she was graduated, in appreciation of her work here. Theta Tau's purse has been offered for several years now. Each is for $25.00 and an Associated Student card.

In order to be eligible, a woman student must have completed at least one semester of work here at the college. Awards are based primarily on scholastic achievement, then on need and leadership qualities, Dean Golding said.

Letters of application must be submitted to Miss Golding by Friday, November 4, at the latest; in order to be considered for this semester's awards.

MELANIE MEAD, this year's Homecoming Queen, and her court will be introduced at tomorrow's rally in the courtyard.

Melanie Mead Chosen Queen For Homecoming

Melanie Mead will be officially introduced as the Homecoming Queen tomorrow during the special college hour rally prior to the Ram-Modesto Homecoming football game that afternoon, Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Men Students here, revealed today.

The 19-year-old Miss Mead is a psychology major here and has been active in the Little Theater drama productions. A graduate of Washington High School, she was a contestant in the recent Miss San Francisco contest.

Miss Mead was selected by a judging committee from a list of 14 other candidates last Wednesday in Room 301 in Cloud Hall. She will reign over Homecoming Week's activities.

Four runner-up queen contestants will serve as the Queen's court attendants. They are Anne Canellos, Rosemary Collins, Pat Frodsham, and Joyce Worswick.

Police officers from the San Francisco Police Department will escort the Queen and her court in a motor-coach parade to the traditional Homecoming football game. Local business concerns will provide the automobiles to transport each of the young ladies.

Included in the list of other candidates who competed in the queen contest were Marlee Dumas, Vivian Foster, Allie Green, Juanita Hall, Phyllis Maness, Carol Olson, Berte Rieklefs, Mary Word and Gail Ziegler.

Judging the candidates were Dottie Hansen, mistress of ceremonies for the Dottie Hansen Teen Time television show; Don Pitts, former disc jockey and master of ceremonies for Don Pitts On The Air radio program; Jerry Flamm, journalist with the Call-Bulletin and former Guardsman staff member, and Ralph Vetterlein, Associated Student president here in 1953 and at the University of California in 1954 and current production manager of George Reproductions Company in San Francisco.

Cirimele and Lawrence Lowe, working together, were responsible for the contest's procedure.

Conference Defeats Card Resolution

By Al Moss

Four resolutions were passed and another defeated after bitter debate in the semi-annual regional conference of the Northern Section of the California Junior College Student Government Association held at Napa on October 15.

Seventeen two-year colleges from the northern part of the state were represented, with 230 student delegates and 23 faculty advisers.

The General Assembly, under the gavel of NSCJCSGA President Dawn Loberg, passed three of the resolutions with an almost routine vote. Miss Loberg replaced Dick Lowe, originally appointed regional president by the state leaders, who did not return to Napa College this semester.

Resolutions regarding agenda and methods of improving the conference were passed speedily, but two others met stiff opposition. One, first drafted by the Finance Workshop, advocated recommendation to all college supervising districts that member colleges be permitted to have cigarette vending machines on campus, as a source of revenue.

The main motion was passed with some discussion, but an amendment, suggesting similar recommendation concerning the use of cigarette advertising in college newspaper, was defeated. A motion advocating such a recommendation of cigarette advertising, proposed by Modesto, had been defeated earlier in the Publications Workshop.

The fifth resolution caused heated argument before being defeated. It proposed that all student body cards of the represented two-year colleges be honored equally by each member college at school functions. The San Francisco delegation, headed by Associated Student Vice-President Lee Carol Lombard and AMS President Bill Cirimele in the absence of Dean Woods, AS president, argued against the resolution, as did many of the other colleges attending.

Cirimele pointed out to the attending delegates that such an act would take a good source of revenue away from some colleges, and that many students would forsake their own activities to attend another college's functions if the price were the same.

A confusing series of amendments and secondary amendments had the conference somewhat disorganized, and when Cirimele, speaking for San Francisco, pointed out that such a resolution would technically give any student from any member college the right to vote in the elections of another member college, he received applause and the issue was obviously decided. Santa Rosa soon after moved to withdraw the motion from the floor, and the Assembly voted to do so.

Each of the resolutions passed at Napa, and those passed in the Central and Southern Section regional conferences, will go before the General Assembly of the state convention in Fresno next month for final action.

In other business, two state officers —Jim Ringer of Fresno, the CJCSGA president, and Lawrence Lowe of San Francisco, state information service chairman — were introduced to the delegates, and this college's Vic Hebert was elected regional parliamentarian.

Workshops were, besides Finance and Publications, Rallies and Assemblies, Student Body Secretaries, Student Clubs and Activities, Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, Athletics, Student Government and Improving the Conference.

Increase In Veteran Enrollment Reported

The number of veterans now enrolled in the college is about 1,520, including several women, according to Robin Dunn, assistant in charge of veterans affairs.

This indicates an increase in veterans' enrollment in comparison to last semester, which was 1,127.

Veterans now comprise approximately one-third of the total daytime enrollment here.

Library Allocated Funds For New Books

Each year the Board of Education allocates funds for the purchase of books, magazines and periodicals, according to Irene Mensing, library staff member.

News books purchased are The Shaping of Our Alphabet, Verdi, The Chisholm Trail, Wanted—An Asian Policy, The Time of Night, Venture Into Darkness, and The Hi-Fi Handbook. Other books, those in popular demand are Life Magazine's The Story of Man; C. S. Forester's The Good Shepherd; My Several Worlds, by Pearl Buck; Roy Chapman Andrews' Beyond Adventure, and Drew Pearson's Two Minutes to Midnight.

Realization Of Importance Is Urged For Student Government

ONE of the most criticized, and at the same time least known, functions of college activity is student government. Too many students know little or nothing of its existence, and others shrug off student leadership as silly, unnecessary, or at best something that has no effect on them.

Actually student government, as practiced here, is an important part of the college's life, a part that affects every student in one way or another.

City College is fortunate in having one of the finest student leadership groups in the state of California. This was made all too obvious at the recent Northern California Section of the California Junior College Student Government Assocation regional conference. There were other good examples, certainly, but a great many groups represented their colleges poorly. Many of the delegates were almost completely unversed in parliamentary procedure, were completely unprepared to contribute to the conference, and constantly turned to their faculty advisers for instructions on how to vote.

These delegates, and their associates who were not fortunate enough to attend the meeting, are not, for the most part, merely students playing politics. There are, as previously mentioned, individuals or groups who contribute nothing and thus gain nothing from their governmental activities.

They are, fortunately, in the minority. Most of those who do participate in student government functions are not only contributing a great deal to the entire student body, but are benefiting themselves. These able student administrators, and this college is fortunate in having many, are developing qualities of leadership, poise and business experience that will hold them in good stead in any profession they might choose.

Undoubtedly the primary reason for the fine showing that the college has continually made at this and previous similar conferences is the very system that is followed. A good faculty adviser to the student government group is important, but the finest contribution that such an adviser can make is to remain, to an extent, in the background, contributing when necessary but allowing the students to make their own decisions, do their own work, and thus develop the aforementioned important qualities for themselves.

The college administration has chosen well, and Ralph Hillsman, present dean of Student Activities, and his predecessors have each contributed to, rather than interfered in, student government activities here.

When a man is as helpful and as active as these men have been, the difference is hard to distinguish, but to those who are actively participating in student affairs, the importance of that difference, and the fact that it is student government in the true sense of the word, is obvious.

One look at an organization such as the CJCSGA, or at the college's student government in action, would dispel any "over-grown high school" notions. The importance of these activities and the ability of the students involved in them are a fine argument for the young people of today.

The Spectator — Jazz: The Music Of Ill Repute Goes Legit

By Dan Ball

LEONARD BERNSTEIN, a composer of serious modern music, appeared on a reputable television show recently.

The show was Omnibus, a rather knowledgeable program which treats such scholarly subjects as The Odessey by Homer and the "ideal" man of the renaissance.

Monsieur Bernstein spoke for approximately three quarters of an hour on the merits and technical construction of jazz.

Using the blues as a basic type of jazz, M. Bernstein described and played various rhythms, scales and lyric forms which are used in the blues, and in somewhat modified forms, all jazz music.

Taking time out from his discussion of the actual composition and/or improvisation of jazz, M. Bernstein had a word for those who criticize jazz as being crude and low. He pointed out that the "legend, a real b.....ness (this of course excludes such tunes as Learning the Blues and Blacksmith Blues) are written in lambic pentameter, a form used with varying degrees of success by W. Shakespeare, C. Marlowe and others.

M. Bernstein's liking for jazz was more than evident, his enthusiasm for his subject matter being readily communicated to the audience. Make no mistake — he has not been into the cooking sherry — serious student of music that he is, he realizes the value of jazz as an art.

As an art form, jazz, even more than drama, places an added emphasis on the performer, perhaps making the performer even more important than the writer. For jazz is an improvised thing, a spur of the moment art requiring a great creative ability over and above the technical mastery of an instrument. Greatest example of the unschooled improviser is perhaps Erroll Garner. Garner cannot, or so the stories go, read even a note of music.

Coupled with M. Bernstein's good words for jazz has been the recent appearance of a Protestant minister on one of the biggest quiz shows. This cleric has answered questions for several weeks on jazz.

He has been instrumental in bringing some of the country's most famous traditional jazz musicians to colleges in and around his parish.

That a minister should endorse jazz verbally is strange enough to most people, but he has compounded the felony by giving a sermon in his church entitled The Theology of Jazz. His view of the positive feeling on jazz this man must be considered almost as courageous as the martyrs of the Spanish inquisition.

With men commanding the respect that M. Bernstein and a Protestant minister do, openly extolling the virtues of jazz, there may be some hope of general recognition for the illegitimate child of modern music after all.

Marysville was so named by pioneers in honor of Mary Murphy Covilland, who had shown great kindness to the sick miners in the hustling camp.

Former Student Dran Seitz On Curran Stage In Musical Hit, Plain And Fancy

By Paul Girard

Currently appearing at the Curran Theater in the musical, Plain and Fancy, as Hilda Miller, is a former coed of the college, Dran Seitz.

Miss Seitz attended the college with her identical twin sister, Tani, during 1950. The Nordic twins appeared in the San Francisco Municipal Theater while attending this college and later San Francisco State College.

Dran, with her twin sister, make up an act that would make the Duncan sisters sit up and take notice. The twins garnered national attention when their pictures appeared on the cover of Life Magazine while they were playing the part of a pair of water sprites in the Broadway production of Ondine, with Audrey Hepburn. The part was specially written for them by S. N. Behrman and Josh Logan.

Theater-goers will remember Dran from her role of Mary Bellamy in the movie, I, The Jury. The part was a feature and gathered national attention.

At the age of 4, Dran played the part of Tweedle Dee in Alice in Wonderland. As the years rolled by, Dran eventually was graduated from the famous Pasadena Playhouse in Pasadena and made her way into television, movies and the legitimate theater. She has been on all the major television networks in New York appearing in Hollywood Merrigoround, with Irwin Allen, McMahan's Minstrels, Fun in the Sun, The Web, Rocky King, Dragnet, and others.

DRAN SEITZ, a former student here, is currently appearing at the Curran Theater in Plain and Fancy.

Roles in Ondine, Fanny, and Plain and Fancy have taken up Dran's time on Broadway since the 1954 season opened. The part of Claudette in Fanny was also especially written for Dran by Behrman and Logan.

Dran has owned and operated and also acted in her own stock companies. Her most successful company, she said, was the Washington Theater in Dobb's Ferry, New York.

She spent several season in stock appearing in an average of 15 productions each season. While she was on the Main Stage of the Pasadena Playhouse, Dran appeared in more than 20 productions ranging from Shakespeare to light comedy.

An example of some of the parts that Dran has appeared in besides the Broadway productions are The Young and Fair, as Dru Eldridge; The Tempest, as Miranda; Miss Julie, as Julie; Darkness at Noon, as Luba; The Father, as Bertha; Tartuffe, as Elmire, and in Playboy of the Western World, as Pegeen Mike.

Before last Saturday's matinee, which several students of the college attended, as guests of Tony Battista, publicity director for the show, Dran extended an invitation to her friends from the college to visit her backstage. Dran's most repeated remark was, "It's wonderful to be back in San Francisco—home."

Dragnet Out For Dum-De Dum Dum

Drum Bureau In Search Of Tom-Tom, Suspects Bulldogs

By Bob Kauth

Backsliders and skeptics apparently are questioning whether there is in reality a Bureau of Missing Drum-Beats here in search of the Tom-Tom, the traditional symbol of rivalry for the Ram-San Mateo Bulldog football game.

"Yes, it is true," the bureau secretly observed and reported, "that these heretics from the college were seen discreetly listening for Dum-de Dum Dums from the Tom-Tom in San Mateo last weekend. After patiently listening for quite some time, the majority of the doubters were converted and reassured when they heard the perceptible drumbeats."

Upon hearing the distinct Dum Dums, one of the ex-heretics is quoted to have confessed, "I thought all that propagandistic stuff about the deans and Dunninger not knowing where the Tom-Tom is, agents missing from the Drum-Beat Bureau and wicky-wacky adherents hearing Dum Dums was the figment of some Dum-de thump thump's imagination."

Identification of the bureau members is still puzzling. "Because of the local ungratefulness publicly displayed recently, the names of the chivalry are confidential," one of the drum-beat agents murmured. He further explained that the story behind this took place some time ago.

It appears that one of the music department's instructors unscrupulously detected that one of his outstanding musicians was a Dum Dum eavesdropper and an active knight-errant. The enlightened hearer was unfairly accused of having a . . . "tin ear" and hearing . . . "Dump-de thump thumps."

Of course, this is an inaccurate exaggeration? His ear is no more made from tin than anyone's. He earnestly denies even slightly hearing any thump thumps recently.

He was dropped from the music department, and the instructor suggested that the knight-errant enroll in a psychology course sometime in the near future.

After enrolling in and taking psychology for one week, it seems that the expelled agent can no longer comprehend the Dum-Dums. His usefulness as an agent has been impaired, and his condition is presently considered to be slightly pathetic.

And what has the group of right-minded Dums accomplished? It was reported yesterday that one of the feminine members of the chivalry has been able to smile her way into the Bulldog's Bastille. Using her womanly intuition and following her left ear, she audibly managed to locate from whence the Dum-de Dum Dums are coming.

The only further comments that the drum-beat Dums would release at this time were: "The Tom-Tom rightfully belongs in the college's rooting section this year. It is definitely located in a secret hiding place on the Bulldog's campus.

"Don't print this," the Big Boom (large spoke or almost a wheel) of the trusty listenees whispered, "but with Spook Day coming up, we are expecting some much needed assistance from certain unearthly beings but honorary agents—and some worldly results."

Homecoming Week

Activities Are Traditional College Events

By Maurice Paszkiewicz

Some college traditions come and go; these have only momentary appeal, dying off with the influx of new students. Yet others, because of their successful past and widespread significance, become permanently scheduled college events.

Such a one is the annual Homecoming Week tradition.

The first Homecoming here, in 1940, lasted one day and was highlighted by the unveiling of the statues behind the science building.

In May, 1947, Homecoming and Open House Week occurred simultaneously. Salient feature of the festivities was a Spring Variety Show, co-sponsored by the music and drama departments.

The beginning of the "big three" events which now prominently characterize Homecoming Week was organized the following year.

A Damon Runyon Memorial bonfire rally, featuring the parading of mock animal creations, was held.

Square dancing took place in the college's auditorium with Gene Mundy and his band providing the music for the hillbilly-costumed couples. The Homecoming Queen was crowned at the dance, and prizes awarded to the winners of a "shaggiest beards" contest.

Perhaps the most spectacular and triumphant of the Homecomings was the one staged here last year.

It marked the Homecoming of Lee Ann Meriwether, Miss America of 1955 and a former student here, who visited the college as a special guest.

Homecoming Queen Jann Palmer was crowned at a rally, sharing the spotlight with Cal Tjader and his combo. A dinner was held by the Alumni Association, honoring past Associated Student Presidents. President Emeritus of the college Dr. Archibald J. Cloud and President Louis G. Conlan were present.

Yes, Homecoming Week means precisely what it implies.

The Ram football team, after two games on opposition turf, is welcomed back to the college, and the week also holds a particular significance to the alumni who return to participate in the activities and social affairs sponsored by the Associated Men Students.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dolores Stoffers

ARTHUR MURRAY would have done a double take, had he attended the college's recent Club Day dance. It wasn't a new dance step that promoted the fancy footwork displayed there; it was actually the full can of floor wax dumped on the floor that caused the auditorium soiree to be interesting viewing from the sidelines.

Not only did a record number of terpsichorists bite the wax, but a few music students here report that waiting to class for the next few days was a hazardous undertaking.

DO IT YOURSELF: The University of Alabama's Crimson White recently warned students that in the interest of public health, the University hospital and the Alabama and American Medical Association wished to convey the following message to students: With the advent of "wonder" drugs and modern surgical techniques, an appendectomy has become a minor operation. But under no circumstances should a student attempt to remove his own appendix.

EVERYONE HAS HIS transportation problems, and new ones pop up every day. For instance, the person whose pleas grace the transportation section of the science building's bulletin board. To wit, "Lost—small bulldog, black and white—pet of small child." Real small.

CRIME MAY NOT PAY, but it got the pay-check, that is, of a co-ed here recently. Seems she cashed her check at the downtown Terminal Building set out for home, when, just like in the movies, someone mumbled to her to hand it over (which she did), stare straight ahead (which she did fixedly), don't move for five minutes (which she didn't for 10). And she's still mumbling curses at the police force, which usually patrols the area heavily.

Mack Calhoun's Expected Running, Unexpected Ball-Hawking Ability Pleasant Surprise For Ram Gridders

One of the pleasant surprises that the Ram football team has produced this season is the performance of Mack Calhoun, who this year stepped into a starting halfback role and has shown even more defensively than the coaching staff and observers expected.

Calhoun first joined the squad last year, a highly-rated scatback from Balboa who had racked up a fine rushing record in high school. With several good halfbacks gracing the Rams in 1954, the 5-8, 155-pound rusher saw little action.

With only Jim Frank lost by graduation, pre-season estimates saw the halfback slots as perhaps the Rams' strongest, and observers figured that Calhoun would again be limited to spot performances. The unexpected and temporary loss of Rudy Lopez and Kent Scovil moved Calhoun into a front-line job at the opening of actual practice.

An obvious lack of size should prove a handicap in a league that boasts several good 200 pound lines, but so far it has proved no stopper to the 155-pound Calhoun. In addition to his speed and shiftiness, expected attributes in a scatback, he has on several occasions hit and burst through the line like a 200-pound fullback.

Calhoun first showed his real running ability to college fans in this season's opener, when he romped to 124 yards in 10 carries by running around, over and through the Santa Ana line.

As good a rushing record as this is, it was almost expected. Few doubted that Calhoun, despite his lack of size, could run well if given the chance. What was in doubt was his ability to play defense, a chore that was not often required of him in high school and one which would really test his ability per pound.

If early season performances are any indication, Coach Grover Klemmer has no worries at one defensive deep back. Calhoun has been a ballhawk on pass defense, including one interception that he returned 35 yards, and his tackling has been nearly as sharp. At least twice he came up from the deep secondary to nail Stockton runners behind the scrimmage line and stave off possible further damage, as on both occasions the Mustangs were deep in City College territory.

The Rams have been strengthened recently with the late arrival of three outstanding halfbacks, but none of them will find an easy time winning a first-string berth. With Calhoun running the way he should, and playing defense better than even the most optimistic expected, it's going to be hard for anybody to dislodge him.

Rams Encounter Pirates

Title Contention At Stake When Rams, Modesto Meet On Kezar Turf In Annual Homecoming Tilt Thursday

By Joe Callas

Homecoming Day 1955 brings together the City College of San Francisco Rams and the Modesto Pirates in a "make or break" grid game for the two teams at Kezar Stadium tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. This is a must game for the Rams and the Pirates, as both have tasted the bitterness of defeat in Big Eight Conference play, and one more loss could knock either squad out of the running for the championship. Both teams have been beaten by Stockton College, the Rams 24-6, and the Pirates 26-20.

Coach Grover Klemmer's City College eleven came back into title contention last week by overwheiming Oakland, 33 to 13. The Ram offensive attack caught fire, as quarterback Les Barros consistently completed passes to ends Van Parish and Dick Piazza. The running of halfbacks Al Chatman and Mack Calhoun and fullback Gene Crummey showed the drive and spark that prevailed in the early season games.

The expected return of fullback Shirlee McCormick, who missed the Oakland tilt because of a shoulder injury, should bolster the Ram running attack.

Pirate Coach Stan Pavko has 14 returning lettermen on hand, and brings into Kezar a powerful club that dropped a heartbreaking six-point loss to Stockton. Modesto has defeated Santa Rosa 19-12, and Long Beach 13-0. Proverb Jacobs, mammoth Pirate tackle, heads the visitors' starting line that averages 208 pounds. Jacobs, a 6-4, 230-pounder from Oakland, was tabbed by Long Beach newsmen after that game as the "best two-year college lineman they had ever seen."

Playing opposite Jacobs in the Modesto line is Rich Del Rio, 225-pound tackle from Hayward. Jerry Patterson heads the group of guards, while center Bill Sweeney is back to face the Rams for his second year.

The Modestans will long remember the last minute passing exhibition staged by Barros last year as he brought the Rams from what seemed to be sure defeat into a 14-13 victory during the closing seconds of the game.

End Darwin McMill has performed brilliantly in the early season going and has been the recipient of many of Buccaneer quarterback Phil Petersen's passes. Petersen, who tallied twice against Stockton on runs of 15 and 2 yards, alternates between quarterback and left halfback. Also in Modesto's backfield are Carl Edling, Jim Johnson and Jerry Irons. Edling has proved to be the top runner on the Pirate squad so far, while Johnson ripped off a 76-yard scoring jaunt in the final quarter of the Santa Rosa game to upend the Bearcubs.

If tomorrow's game should take up where the 1954 tilt left off, it should be an exciting afternoon. When the final gun sounds, either Coach Klemmer or Coach Pavko will find his team elevated into top title contention.

The other will leave the lengthening shadows of Kezar Stadium as a 1955 also-ran.

The New York Yankees have finished out of the first division in the American League only once since 1917.

Soccermen Boot Broncs, 10-2, In League Opener

Opening the season with a convincing 10-2 victory over winless Santa Clara, the Ram soccer team showed speed and ball control as they romped over the defenseless Broncos at the loser's home field on October 15.

By virtue of the effortless win over Santa Clara, the Rams have established themselves as strong conference title favorites. They meet the twice defeated San Jose State squad at Balboa Park Stadium this Saturday, October 29, at 12 noon.

In the game with Santa Clara the Rams got off to a fast start by scoring five times in the first half of play. Inside left Antonio Quiteno scored three times, Bob Palma, center forward, tallied once and left wing Pastor Valle also connected with a well-placed shot to give the college a 5-0 lead. Shortly before the halftime whistle, Santa Clara's Rod Esquirel made good on a high 25-yard boot for the 5-1 half time score.

In the second half the Rams continued to rout the ineffective Bronco defense with short passes and individual dribbling. Quiteno tallied twice more to give him a total of five goals scored in one game, almost half the total number of his tallies during the entire 1954 campaign. Still not satisfied with the 7-1 margin, the Rams continued their attack. Inside right Woo Chung completed the rout with his three goals to make it 10-1.

A few minutes before the final gun, the Broncos scored their second goal when center forward Ron Alvaro literally used his head to complete the day's scoring at 10-2 in favor of the Rams.

The Ram defense, led by All-Conference center half Fito Molina and team captain Ben Schweizer, both veterans of last year's team, showed promise of becoming a tough one to crack.

Ram Harriers To Face Modestans

The Ram cross-country team faces a supposedly strong Modesto team tomorrow on the City College course.

Although the power of the Modesto team is virtually unknown, it is expected that they will field a strong representative.

The Pirates have always had an abundance of distance runners and there is no reason why they shouldn't have them again this season. Ram trackmen, however, like Lloyd Costello, Ray Batz, Henry Stroughter and Bill Tillson will test possible Buccaneer strength tomorrow afternoon.

Some of the men running for City College are just keeping in shape for the coming track season. The Rams will have many veterans returning in the spring, including Clint Redus, state high point winner and record breaker; Martin Morales, from Vallejo in the sprints and 440; Dennis Moorehead and Bill Tillson in the distances; and Jack Egan, conference weight champ, Fresno Relays champ, and state runner-up in the discus.

Although the 1954 World Series was only four games long, an all time record share of money for the players, $881,763, was established.

Block SF Decides On New Method Of Display

Importance of membership and a new method of wearing a letter were the topics of the October 7 Block SF meeting, held in Cloud Hall.

Membership in the society was emphasized throughout the meet. A method to boost enrollment in the Block SF was adopted with the decision to have one member from each sport sell cards to the organization.

Plans were also made for individuals in the Block SF to purchase special red and white sweaters, which have now been designated as the only way of wearing a block, according to Bill Fischer, director of the Block SF.

Men in the following sports are now selling cards: Sam Chicos, baseball; Norm King, basketball; Talbert Webb, track; Rich Martucci, football; Wayne McFadden, boxing; and Ben Schweizer, soccer.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

PERHAPS the most lucrative source of business for the medical profession in the United States will soon be a thing of the past.

The increased use of facial protective devices by the American football player may make the busted beak and dislodged molar as much a rarity in the game as the quick kick.

Whereas the suffering player of half a century ago could only depend upon a crude plastic and iron contraption for nose and mouth protection, the athlete of today can choose from dozens of styles of face masks, designed to keep his map in its original order.

Newest of these masks is the transparent plastic full-face model, which leaves only a small area between the bridge of the nose and the forehead and a sufficient opening for the mouth unprotected, areas carefully designed to be as unaccommodating as possible for even the smallest of fists.

This mask seems to be used more by the professional players, since the National Football League tends to have a slightly rougher way of going about its business than do its smaller brothers.

In the collegiate ranks, the face mask has evolved from the cumbersome equipment of the 1890's to the bird cage protectors of the 1930's, which made a player feel as though he were inside Sing Sing instead of a football helmet; to the solid, shatterproof plastic bars worn by most performers today.

Although the bird cages were the first big improvement in facial protection, they often became an added weapon on the field, due to their iron and hard rubber construction. In many instances, a firm hold on the cage of an opponent was as effective as a block or tackle.

Those days seem to be past, however, as the plastic bar style not only protects injuries but protects FROM injuries, while at the same time allowing plenty of room for vision. Several of the Ram football players wear this protector, and have already been saved needless trips to the dentist's chair or doctor's office because of it.

Some observers claim that at the rate this football protective equipment is increasing in use, it may not be long before the game will be played with each performer in a mobile plastic bubble. This may prevent a lot of injuries, but we hate to think of what will constitute an unnecessary roughness penalty in the football future.

Plastic Face Masks May Save Noses Too

Panther Fumbles Help Rams Romp To 45-6 Victory

By Al Moss

Sacramento's footballers proved the perfect hosts as they handed the visiting City College squad four touchdowns that paved the way for an easy Ram victory, 45-6, at Hughes Stadium on October 21.

The San Franciscans were obviously the superior team as they romped over the Panthers, but the Capitol City eleven made it that much easier by fumbling seven times and losing the football on five of those occasions. Four of the Ram scores came on direct marches after recovering fumbles.

Coach Grover Klemmer's charges took the lead from the first, just as they have in each of their games this year. Soon after the opening kickoff, they marched to a marker, with the actual score coming on a fake-and-pass from Les Barros as he hit end Ron Taylor from 1 yard out. Again in the first quarter, the Rams pounced on a bad pass by the Sacramento center and went 21 yards in 5 plays with Rudy Lopez skirting right end for the final 6 yards.

The visitors took advantage of another Panther fumble late in the second quarter when they recovered on the Sacramento 40 and in 6 plays went the distance, with Sandy Malnick leaping over from the 2.

City College scored early in the third quarter on a sustained drive. With Shirlee McCormick, normally a fullback, in the same backfield with hard-driving Dick Mannini, the Rams drove deep, lost the ball on a pass interception, then drove again, this time to paydirt. In the two long drives, McCormick, running at left halfback, bit off chunks of 26, 13, 12, 13 and 13 yards, the final romp for the score.

The next Ram score came easily when Sacramento fumbled on their own 15-yard line. The Klemmermen were penalized to the 20 and Al Chatman went the distance in one play. Garlin Bluford converted on both third period scores.

The final City College touchdowns came in the last period when, after still another Panther fumble, Bluford went off tackle for 5 yards for one touchdown, and quarterback John Panagakis passed to LeRoy Thomas for 41 and a six-pointer. Doug Jones, kicking barefooted, converted after Thomas' TD.

Sacramento took advantage of a little Ram generosity for their only score. With four minutes remaining in the game, a Panther punt was fumbled on the San Francisco 27 and, on the first play, halfback Cecil Helms went the distance.

WAA Holds Volleyball Playday Here Tomorrow

Members of the Women's Athletic Association will hold their first playday of the semester tomorrow afternoon, Noreen Phillips, WAA president, announced last week.

Volleyball will be played here with Balboa and Lincoln. Other playdays are November 1, badminton with Washington, Galileo, and Balboa; co-ed volleyball on November 5 at Oakland College; modern dance and volleyball on November 10 with Polytechnic and Mission.

New Horticulture Course Added To College Curricula

In keeping with the college's policy of constant revision in its semi-professional program to meet with the ever changing needs of industry, a new two-year course is now being offered called ornamental horticulture.

A series of meetings are now being held between Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses; Harry Nelson, instructor in charge of horticulture, and members of the floral industry, including Donald C. Perry, president of the Northern California Nurserymen's Association. The purpose of these meetings is to see that the new program is in line with industry's needs.

Ornamental horticulture entails the production, maintenance and sale of all plant materials having to do with the beautification of homes, industry, highways and parks. The course is designed to provide employment, after graduation, in an industry doing a 68 million dollar a year business in California alone.

This course should be of special interest to students who wish to make their permanent home in the Bay Area, Batmale said. The industry is centered in ten counties of this state, Alameda, San Mateo and San Francisco being the first three in that order.

Private industry offers positions in retail and wholesale selling, maintenance and production. There are also numerous civil service opportunities, among them nurserymen, tree surgeons, landscape architects, crop inspectors and pest control positions.

Batmale believes that men and women interested in outdoor living, pleasant working conditions in a well-paid industry which offers security and advancement, would do well to investigate the opportunities offered them in ornamental horticulture.

CICA Discusses Nursing Education

Problems of Nursing will be the main topic of discussion at the fall meeting of the California Junior College Association, which convened yesterday in Palo Alto, and will last through Friday, October 28.

The problems of gearing the programs of the two-year college and hospital-school in order to produce more substantial support and clearer understanding of the aims and methods of the hospital in nursing education, will especially be discussed tomorrow and Friday, when the Bay Area Hospital Schools for Nursing meet jointly with the association, Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator Division of Instructor here, reported. He remarked that this is a "very hot subject" at the moment.

Present at the joint meeting, which is being held at Rickey's in Palo Alto, will be Mildred F. Schwier, Margaret Bridgman, and Mildred Montag, representatives of the National League for Nursing.

Nov. 2 Last Day To Drop Course

Unlike previous semesters, the deadline for dropping courses here has been changed to next Wednesday, November 2, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

It had been previous practice to set the day after the second midterm examination week as the last day for dropping classes.

Those wishing to drop courses are advised to first get permission from the instructor, have the proper form filled out by their counsellor, and have the form signed by both the instructor and the counsellor. The final step is completed by receiving a drop card from the counsellor upon presentation of the signed form, and then taking the card to the registrar's office, room 121, science building.

Students whose number of unexcused absences reach or exceed the limit for a class will not be allowed to drop the course without having an F grade entered in the records.

The first automobile was placed in service about 1910. It was equipped with the Owen magnetic drive and a generator in a combined unit.

Sophisticated Comedy Opens Friday

The Importance Of Being Earnest, Oscar Wilde Three-Act Classic, Is First Little Theater Production

First in the series of four performances of The Importance of Being Earnest will be presented this Friday by the Little Theater at 8:30 p.m. Performances of the Oscar Wilde classic will also be held Saturday, October 29, on next Friday, November 4, and Saturday, November 5, according to Michael J. Griffin, drama director here.

Admission to the production is by Associated Student card. General admission is $1.00.

The all-freshman class in the sophisticated comedy includes Brett Dawson as Algernon Moncrieff, Louis Bamburger as Lane, Larry Coviello as John Worthing, Stephanie Koppe as Lady Bracknell, Jeanne Graham as Gwendolyn, Vivian Chinn as Miss Prism, Karen Douville as Cecily, King Harrington as Reverend Canon Chasuble, and Mel Rasmussen as Merriman.

The story concerns two Bunburyists who have invented fictional and troublesome friends. John Worthing, who lives in the country, finds it necessary to go to the city to look after Ernest, his brother. Algernon at the same time lives in the city and finds it necessary to go to the country to look after his sickly friend Bunbury.

Ed Burbridge is in the charge of set design for the period sets. Costumes are under the supervision of Rich Barulich.

Others on the production staff are Edwina Moquin, costume mistress; Berte Ricklefs, programs and props; Ethel Geary, stage manager; Lois Roberts, tickets, and Carole Waugh, social arranger.

Last Wednesday Lady Bracknell "presented" her daughter at a tea in the Little Theater. Members of the faculty and students were among those who attended the affair.

Harvard Reading Films Shown To College Students

The Harvard Reading Films are especially designed for those who want to increase their reading rate or for those who want to find out how well they read and how well they understand what they are reading.

The series is shown here every Friday in Room 246, Cloud Hall, during college hour. The films were previously shown in Room 245, but were moved to a larger room to accommodate the increasing audience, according to Grace Brown, series instructor.

Professor William Perry of Harvard University made up the films for Harvard students. Since then they have been obtained by various colleges. The films increase reading rate and comprehension. The way this is accomplished, Mrs. Brown stated, is by showing a slow film and then a lecture is given by her on the material.

A faster film is then shown and at the end of it questionnaires are handed out to everyone in the room. How many questions are answered correctly shows the student's reading comprehension.

The two different reading rate films are for the benefit of those who read slowly and those who read faster. Some students drop out on the second film. After the questionnaires have been completed, Mrs. Brown corrects the answers and explains them.

Attendance has been steady, she said, and the only "set back" occurred October 14, the day the club booths were out on the campus.

Anyone can come to these films, instructor or student, Mrs. Brown added. The series will run throughout the semester.

Plans For Sophomore Picnic Will Be Decided By Student Interest; Ball Climaxes Week Of January 9

Preparatory plans are currently underway for the attractions of Sophomore Week, January 9 through January 14, Bob Johnson Sophomore president here, recently revealed.

It was suggested by Jane Lutt, Sophomore vice-president, that a Sophomore picnic be scheduled. Student interest will determine whether or not the picnic will definitely be held, the officers decided.

"Applications from several dance bands to play at the Sophomore Ball have been received and considered," Johnson said, "but a definite band has not yet been selected."

The Sophomore Ball will be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Appropriate dress for the affair is presently scheduled to be semi-formal.

Prior to the dance, Associated Student members will elect a sophomore king and queen to reign at the ball. Clubs, fraternities and sororities may enter candidates for the king-queen contest by submitting a petition to Miss Lutt or Johnson before January 1, 1956.

Admission to the dance will be one Associated Student card per couple or $2.50 per couple for non-AS members.

Another attraction of Sophomore Week will be the soph-prof basketball game. "Information concerning the probable soph-prof line-ups and team tactics is confidential," Johnson said, "because of possible anti-student and anti-professor monetary seeking spies lurking about."

Qualified sophomore students (satisfactory completion of 30 units of college work) interested in helping lay plans for Sophomore Week are requested to consult Miss Lutt or Johnson in the Associated Student office, Room 169 in the science building, as soon as possible.

Marine Procurement Officer To Interview Students Tomorrow

A United States Marine Corps Officer Procurement team, headed by Captain W. J. Skvaril, will be on campus tomorrow and Friday between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., and will be located in the court between the science building and Cloud Hall.

The purpose of the visit is to disseminate information about the college officer-training program, which leads to a commission in the Marine Corps upon graduation from college.

This program includes two six-week periods at a Platoon Leader class at the Marine school, Quantico, Virginia. Upon completion of the course and graduation from college, the student will receive a commission of Second Lieutenant and will be assigned to active duty.

Criminology Majors Hear Coroner, Dope Agent On Crime Stops

In order to bring to the students of criminology knowledge of the important part different persons and agencies play in helping the law, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here, has arranged for some guest speakers to appear before the class.

One of the speakers will be Dr. Henry Turkel, coroner of the City of San Francisco, who will speak about the role of the coroner in helping criminologists. Another guest speaker will be Inspector Cosfer of the State Narcotics Division, who will also speak about his role in helping prevent crime. The third speaker will be Lou Jones, representative of the Fargo Law Enforcement Agency, who will speak on how private agencies help in preventing crime.

Club Cavalcade

Coke Parties, Business Meetings Highlight This Week's Activities

By Antoinette Mannina

HIGHLIGHTING the cavalcade this week are the sorority coketail parties and business meetings to plan for next week's dinners for the rushees.

First coketail parties were held last night with Theta Tau at 6:30 p.m., followed by Zeta Chi at 8 p.m. Others planned are Delta Psi and Phi Beta Rho for tonight, while Alpha Lambda Chi and Kappa Phi will hold open house tomorrow night.

New officers of the Drama Club are Stephanie Koppe, president; Kay Douville, vice-president; Beverly Bolling, secretary; Brett Dawson, treasurer.

The Newman Club held a meeting Monday evening to discuss plans for their forthcoming dance, Harvest Moon Hoedown, to be held Friday, November 4.

Members of Alpha Lambda Chi and Zeta Chi sororities modeled at a fashion show recently for Goodwill Industries.

New officers of the Hillel Foundation are Russel Annecston, president; Dave Noveshen, vice-president; Barbara Gock, secretary; Dorothy Goldman, treasurer; Harry Drabkin, CAB representative. A party will be held this Saturday at Drabkin's home. Future plans include a dinner dance sponsored by the Stanford Hillel at L'Omelette on Saturday, December 3.

Zeta Chi sorority will hold a business meeting next Tuesday to make plans for a Bohemian dinner for rushees on Thursday, November 3.

The newly organized Engineering Club met at the home of adviser Wallace Sellman last Saturday. New officers are Paul Allan Penn, president; Stanley John, vice-president; John Renati, secretary-treasurer. The club, which will meet Fridays during college hour in S204, is currently drafting a new constitution.

Everyone is invited to attend a fashion show and dance given by the Chinese Students Club this Saturday at the Victory Hall in Chinatown.

Delta Psi Omega held a business meeting Sunday at the home of Joyce Cody.

Theta Tau sorority held a slumber party-meeting recently at the home of Argie Laves. Plans for last night's open house and for this Sunday's Luau were discussed.

Ramporium Granted Membership In National Group

Full membership in the National Association of College Stores was granted recently to the Ramporium, the college bookstore here, Dick Main, manager, announced last week.

The association provides first hand information about new publications of textbooks, nationally used book supplies, and special subscription rates on any kind of magazine, Main explained.

Main also stated that the Ramporium has membership in the California Association of College Stores, of which Main himself is vice-president. The California Association of College Stores will have its convention for three days, from December 1 to 3, in San Francisco.

To furnish students with enough used books, early correspondence must be made at the end of the previous semester to the bookstores in the east, according to Main.

Council Approves 9 More Budgets

Nine budgets, totaling $4,222, were approved by Student Council last week in answer to needs, which included new equipment and traveling expenses, of college activities.

Allocated to the Campus Police was $400. The major part of this money is to be spent on new uniforms. Bob Dagitz, campus police chief, reported there are now 18 incomplete uniforms for 23 officers.

The Men's Glee Club requested $250, most of which is to be used to buy sweaters or vests in order to distinguish them when they represent the college in outside activities. The budget was passed.

A breakdown was asked for on the Phi Rho Pi budget by Lee Carol Lombard, Associated Student vice-president. Vic Hebert, vice-president of Phi Rho Pi, said that the debate society needed funds to finance trips to several tournaments and other debating events. Council then approved the grant.

Other budgets approved were for the A Cappella Choir, $425; Associated Women Students, $333; Basketball, $1,100; Intramural, $447; Physical Education department, $350; and the Sophomore Class, $552.

Under new business, discussion regarding the student union building was taken up by the council. Wayne McFadden said that complaints had been made about the jukebox. The price of a cup of coffee might be lowered to eight cents, Miss Lombard said, if the student union building is kept cleaner by those using it.

Dean Woods, AS president, appointed Freshman Class President Don Garrison as chairman of a committee to investigate admission procedure at college events. The committee is a result of complaints about forced uninvited entry into college affairs.

College Leaders To Establish San Mateo Tradition

Inter-School Rivalry May Become Highlight Of Ram Football Season

Homecoming week and its chain of recognized tradition has passed from the semester's view, but an unofficial tradition which sometimes overshadows all other activities here has loomed up with the approach of the football game between this college and San Mateo Saturday, November 5, at San Mateo.

In the past, the Ram-Bulldog games have been a trigger for numerous pregame pranks, and the San Mateans have been the prime suspects in a number of upsets about the campus.

Most obvious of all clues came early one morning in the past, when students found that their beloved Redwood Ram had been painted a brilliant blue. As a result, he received a new coat of red and white, but traces of blue remained.

The current quest for the Tom-Tom on behalf of the college has so far been this year's most distinct evidence of traditional rivalry with San Mateo.

Plans to schedule the Ram-Bulldog football games to take place during future Homecoming Weeks are anticipated, and discussions are expected this semester between student leaders of this college and of San Mateo.

If the meeting takes place, it will also attempt to establish traditional rivalry between the two colleges, as traditional rivalry between the college's football team and the team of another college is the main purpose of Homecoming Week, Dean Woods, Associated Student president, stated recently.

As the Rams meet San Mateo, hopes rise within the AS that all future contests between the two will be traditional.

Faculty Association To Host Students In Coffee Meeting During College Hour Friday

Coffee and refreshments will be served during the faculty-student coffee hour this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m.

Location of the gathering will be the snack bar in the George D. Smith Student Union Building, according to Jules Fraden, chairman of the faculty-student relations committee.

This will be the sixth consecutive meeting of this type, the purpose of which is to enable students and members of the faculty to meet outside of class on a strictly social basis.

All students are invited to attend, Fraden said.

The affair is sponsored by the Faculty Association, John French the president, George Hutchins, vice president, and Lucille McGovern, secretary.

Assisting Fraden on the student relations committee are faculty members John Fawcett, Mary Golding, Lene Johnson, James McConnell, Wendell Muntz, Valerie Phillips, Maurice Power, Martha Scott, Douglas Soule, Bill Richardson and Alva McMillan.

The first student-faculty coffee hour was held in the Spring semester of 1953 when it was inaugurated by Power, the then chairman of the Faculty Association faculty-student relations committee.

The refreshments, which will include free coffee and pastries of several types, is provided by the faculty's student-faculty committee.

CAB Committee Seeks To Improve Cafeteria Service

Describing the conditions in the student union building as under par, the cafeteria clean-up committee gave their report to the Club Activities Board in a meeting held last week.

Blaming part of the trouble on an undermanned cafeteria staff, the committee stated that there was a need for two-way cooperation between the staff and the students.

The report compared the service and prices of several restaurants in San Francisco with those of the college. The prices were found to be on a similar level, but the service in the student union building was not up to the standard of the other restaurants.

The solution, the committee announced, is that first the cafeteria staff be enlarged to meet the requirements of the large number of students eating there. When there is sufficient help, the report went on, the students should do their share in cleaning up.

Members of the CAB voiced their opinions on the problem. One member said the trouble was due to the habits of some students. The limited seating capacity of 474 was blamed as a source of traffic congestion. The CAB members were all in agreement on a plan for organized action. The plan called for enlisting the help of college activities in notifying their members to be careful of leaving debris in the cafeteria. Posters reminding students to be neat will be posted in the student union building. Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will furnish the posters.

Representing the college faculty, Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne disagreed with the cafeteria clean-up committee's report during the meeting. "Food is cheaper here," Browne said, and added, "the school board does not allow the cafeteria to make a profit." Browne gave his opinion on the question of cleanliness and stated that "no amount of rules can change human nature, and unless it is in your heart it won't work."

College Hour Movie Features California

Travel through California will be the theme of the picture shown this Friday in Room 136 in Cloud Hall, Madison Devlin, instructor in charge of audio-visual aids here, said last week.

The title of the picture is California, World in a Week. It takes the viewer on an extensive tour of the state, showing all the phases of its culture and industry.

On Friday, November 18, a new screen process called Filmorama will be shown. This new idea is on the order of Cinemascope, but can be used in small rooms.

Final Plans For AWS Show Friday

Final plans for the Associated Women Student tea and fashion show will be made this Friday, November 4, during college hour in Room S215, Barbara Batmale, AWS president, announced last week.

The entire fashion show will be centered around the theme, Holly Daze. Date set for the affair is Thursday, December 8.

Committee heads who will report on plans at the college hour meeting are Shelly Bolanos and Juanita Hall, invitations; Joyce Weaver, food; Jean Vachon and Marlon Cheader, decorations; Noreen Phillips, entertainment; Louise von Emster, registration; Darlene Rietz, hostesses; Marilyn Sicotte, programs; Barbara Polster, set-up; Joan Mussalem, clean-up; Dee Noodlman and Toni Mannina, publicity, and Eleanor Leeper, serving.

Election Petitions Accepted To Dec. 16

Petitions for candidacy for the Associated Student elections will be accepted from November 28 through December 16, according to Bill Chisum, election commissioner here.

The elections, which will determine the Associated Student officers for the Spring 1956 semester, will be held on January 11 and 12, Chisum said. An AS card entitles the holder to cast his ballot either at the Silver Pole or in the student union building.

Thousands Swamp Counsellors For Spring Programs

Last week was a busy one for counsellors here as 2,000 students made counselling appointments within the first two days of the week to plan their spring semester programs, according to Waddington Blair, counsellor here.

Although most counsellors have already been booked up to January with appointments, it is advisable for those students who have not yet made appointments to do so immediately, Blair said.

Priority in registration is counted from the day that a student applies for his appointment and not from the time of his actual counselling interview, Howard Schoon, also counsellor here, explained.

As of this week counsellors are beginning to interview students in helping to plan their future programs. These appointments will continue throughout the semester.

Eleven hundred seniors from different high schools throughout the city have been reached and informed by the counselling office here of entrance examination dates. These dates are Saturday, November 19, and Saturday, December 10, Schoon said.

IRC Sponsors Thirteen Countries In International Fair At Riordan

Representing 13 different countries, the annual presentation here of an International Fair will feature a program of dance and musical numbers to entertain an expected audience of 1,200 at Riordan High School auditorium, 175 Phelan Avenue, on Friday, November 18, at 8 p.m., according to Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser.

Those countries which will be represented at the fair include Arabia, Burma, Croatia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Japan, Latin America, Persia, Philippines, Russia, and Siam. The groups are mainly composed of members of the International Relations Club of the college, and they will bring their talents to represent their home lands.

Both the ancient and modern time dances and music of the countries throughout the world will be introduced at the event, and a few of the sport demonstrations, such as Japanese judo and Siamese boxing, will be performed before the audience on the same evening.

A contribution of $1 per person will be asked of the audience in order to provide funds for an International Scholarship at the college.

There also will be an exhibition of art goods of foreign countries, and a variety of food delicacies from the far-away lands will be offered to the public at reasonable price in Building 2 on the west campus.

"Good cooperation from the groups and the effort of each individual are the "keys" to a success," Jacobsen stressed. "With last year's experiences, we should hit it big again this year," he added.

Last year's International Fair was given for two nights, October 28 and 29, with a total number of 20 shows by eight groups, in the college auditorium, Building 1, on the west campus.

Harvest Moon Hoedown Chosen Theme For Annual Newman Club Dance Friday At St. Emydius Hall

Harvest Moon Hoedown was the theme chosen by the college Newman Club for its annual dance, which is being held this Friday night, November 4, from 9 p.m. to midnight at St. Emydius Hall, at Jules and deMontfort Streets, is the site of the affair. Lynn Leonard and his orchestra has been signed to provide the music for the evening. One dollar per couple is the admission fee required; tickets may be purchased either at the door or at the student bank.

"The hall will be decorated in accordance with the harvest theme. Women are requested to wear cottons and the men may wear levis or overalls, and plaid shirts. Straw hats will be appropriate," explained Rosemary Elb, the club's vice-president.

Carolyn Barbaro, recording secretary; Laura Portillo, corresponding secretary; and Don Giusti, treasurer, complete the list of officers. Marie Casey, Earl Cabrinha, Fred Lusari, Jack Ryan, Ed Schoestein, and other officers are included in the dance committee.

Warren White is faculty adviser to the club, which meets during college hours here and on the first and third Mondays of the month at St. Emydius Hall. Among the activities planned for the future are a First Friday mass on Friday, a college hour meeting Friday, November 18, and a Fall Communion Breakfast December 18 at the St. Emydius school cafeteria.

Little Theater Drama Concludes On Saturday

Final performances of The Importance of Being Earnest will be presented on Friday and Saturday nights in the Little Theater at 8:30 p.m. The production staff includes Edwina Moquin, Berte Ricklefs, Ethel Geary, Lois Roberts, Carole Waugh, and Ritch Barulich.

The three sets required for the production were designed and constructed under the direction of Ed Burbridge.

"Because the tickets have been selling rapidly, we might find ourselves turning people from the door," Michael Griffin, drama director, stated. Tickets are selling for $1.00; student admission is by Associated Student card.

Lost AS Cards May Be Replaced Here

Replacement of lost Associated Student cards may be made for one dollar at the student bank in the student union building, according to Emory Lebonville, AS card sales chairman here.

Four more invalid AS cards bearing the numbers 709, 874, 1639 and 1640 are left to be traced down. Students possessing these cards are urged to report to the finance office or to Lebonville personally, he said.

Plans for the forming of a five person committee to discuss and prepare next semester's card sales campaign are being made by the sales chairman.

A poll among the students may be taken later on during the semester to find out exactly what particular kinds of AS card discounts the majority here prefer, Lebonville announced.

Cards are still being sold for $5 at Dean Edwin C. Browne's office, S149; the AS office, S169; and the bank in the student union building. Lebonville urged students who have not purchased AS cards to do so.

Some Place Emphasis On Win Rather Than Sportsmanship

DURING the past few weeks, there have been, in the colleges and universities of the United States, increasing examples of athletic over-emphasis to the detriment of both the participating students and the institutions involved.

Several charges of "dirty football" on the inter-collegiate level have been thrown about, and in many cases no charges were necessary, it being apparent that the coaches and administrators involved placed winning above sportsmanship, the safety of their charges, and plain common sense.

Athletic recreation, whether inter-collegiate or intra-mural, is a vital part of a college education. Athletics, if taken for their true value, can play a great part in developing sportsmanship and leadership traits in students.

Unfortunately, inter-collegiate athletics, especially football, often become so important to a coach, and to the administration that pays his salary, that a consistent winning record is the only satisfying result.

No one likes to lose, but someone must. A well-balanced athlete must be taught to lose as well as he wins, and the "win any way you can, but win" philosophy destroys the basic purpose of athletics.

A Bay Area college coach recently stated the problem and the answer simply when he said: "When I have to purposely injure an opposing player to win a game, I'll hang up my gear and quit coaching."

The rash of injuries, and the circumstances in which they occur, is ridiculous. Football is a rough, hard game, and the will to win is natural and important. But when "get the other guy" becomes more important that winning fairly, then college football should be abolished.

This college has been fortunate in having a coaching staff and administration that considers winning only as important as it should be, and rates the teaching job each coach must do as the most important aspect of his chores.

A coach is, after all, a teacher. His most important job is, or should be, to teach to his players the importance of sportsmanship and the ability to lose as gracefully and as well as they win.

No man will meet with success in every venture he attempts, and athletics can be a training ground for future life, instilling in the player the basic values and ideals that will serve him in good stead in later life. Any coach who fails in this teaching job has no right to be coaching and should be dismissed for the good of everyone.

Andy Smith, the immortal University of California football coach, expressed the true ideal of football perfectly, and his words are now found on the Andy Smith Memorial bench in the California stadium: "It is far better to play the game fairly and lose, then to win at the sacrifice of an ideal."

Flossita Badger Returns From Hawaii

Music Instructor Plans To Write Book On Experiences In The Islands

Two years ago Flossita Badger, music instructor here, went to the University of Hawaii in an exchange teaching position between the Islands and America to act as head of the voice department there.

At the university she was to teach for one year but was then invited to stay throughout the summer which, it seems, lasted another year (not impossible in that island paradise), and finally through the next summer.

Upon her arrival, the entire music department from the university came down to the dock to greet her as she came off the Lurline. Afterwards she became acquainted with many persons of many nationalities, a somewhat easy accomplishment since the Islanders are extremely friendly.

One of Miss Badger's many responsibilities was as director of a 125 member chorus. She also directed a production for the civic light opera, Blossom Time by Sigmund Romberg. During her first year she did many concerts and two operas. One of these operas was at Christmas, Amahl and the Night Visitors, by Menotti, which was repeated the following Christmas. The other opera was Gianni Schizzi by Puccini.

Stage hits such as Teahouse of the August Moon, The King and I, The Caine Mutiny Court Martial and South Pacific were presented at the Community Theater in Honolulu. In two of the plays City College students had the leading roles, Dean Cyr in Teahouse of the August Moon, and Trevor Pendray in South Pacific. Pendray also appeared in Blossom Time, and is now president of the A Cappella Choir here.

Miss Badger said that Hawaii boasts of a very fine symphony orchestra directed by George Barata, former member of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Hawaii is an island where feasts and festivities are not uncommon and the university is no exception. Each October it holds an Aloha week. A king and queen are elected, and for one week there are plays, parades, and pageants, in which everyone participates dressed in his native costume. On May 1, there is a May day called Lei Day by the Hawaiians. The students hold a big celebration and put up booths and concessions of all types throughout the campus.

There are approximately 4,500 regular students attending the university where there exists a working democracy with much cooperation among the different nationalities. The campus, and the island of Hawaii as a whole, is a melting pot for the different peoples of the world.

At the summer session the population on the campus changes. Mainlanders come, some expressly to learn Hawaiian music and the hula.

In summary, Miss Badger stated that Hawaii has a curious effect on people. Attempting to analyze the island and what makes it what it is, she said that Hawaii is a combination of the beauty and magnificence of the scenic surroundings, the warmth and friendliness of the people and some intangible thing which seemingly "gets under the skin."

Sometime in the future Miss Badger is planning to write a book relating and describing her two years experience on the islands entitled "It Could Only Happen in Hawaii."

Shots At Random

By Dolores Stoffers

MUSIC lovers have long used the library's record room as a welcome retreat from the clamor of college life.

But last week the room's reputation of providing calm, uninterrupted listening was ruined. Two Mozart fans were listening to one of their favorite selections, when a bouncing, bright-eyed sprite time-stepped in and asked, "Got any mambo records?"

The Mozartians' rapturous countenances changed to those of shocked disbelief. "Lady," said one slowly removing his earphones, "did you say mambo?" This was the signal for both lovers of high-type music to cast menacing glares in the direction of the intruder. Believing that discretion is the better part of valor, the interloper beat a hasty retreat, muttering dazedly, "What did I say, hah? What?"

FROM CORNELL COLLEGE at Mount Vernon, Iowa, comes the bit about two firemen climbing in a third story window of the women's dormitory. This raised curiosity, as no fire was reported.

However, it turned out the smoke-eaters were innocent of any nefarious intent. It seems a couple of females had been locked out of their room and got a little panicky when they found there was no house mother on duty to get them in. They were due at a president's reception in formals which were locked securely behind the door. It remained for the firemen to enter the room through the window, and aid the distressed femmes.

Which just goes to show where the taxpayers' money goes, and where firemen wind up when there are no fires.

THE MARCH OF SCIENCE seemed to be headed toward the trash can during first midterms, as some science students filed one by one to form a growing circle around the white, gleaming, sanitary-looking receptacle.

They weren't collecting bacteria for cultures, in answer to queries of passers-by; just converted the site into a quickie coaching service for a test the following hour.

ONE STUDENT HERE has vowed never again to mention the word "car," at least to women. Seems he was lamenting the loss of his auto. Blew up my car last night, said he to a wide-eyed co-ed who in turn asked, "How big is it now?"

To Be Heard Or To Be Seen?

Parapsychology Students In Dark Over Tom-Tom Drum

To be heard or not to be heard, is not the question.

To be seen or not to be seen, is not the question.

At the Ram-Bulldog football game in San Mateo at 2 p.m. this Saturday, November 5, Dum-de Dum Dums will be heard by all (this includes the mentally on-beat) from the Tom-Tom, the meandering drum-trophy for the symbol of rival between the two colleges.

From which of the two rival c... leges' rooting sections t... will be coming is the q...

Painted red, white and ... ors of the two colleges, t... one and a half foot drum has a Ram's and a Bulldog's head painted on opposite sides.

Periodically the trophy has played truant, but for almost a decade it has faithfully appeared at "big game" time in one of the two college rooting sections.

Although the Tom-Tom encounter was won by this college in 1951, enlightened Bulldog hearers were able to locate the drum audibly by its Dum-de Dum Dums on the City College campus. Unknowingly, they retrieved the coveted Tom-Tom and presented it in the San Mateo rooting section the following year.

Until recently it was true that the wandering drum had been apprehended by San M... but now no more Dum-de Dum D... can be heard from San Mateo or ... here else.

Students of parapsychology (Extra-sensory Perception), the deans and campus police officers have not heard the Tom-Tom lately. Nor do they know in which rooting section it will appear.

Even the drum-beat agents are hemming and hawing and are mysteriously uncertain.

Rightfully, the Tom-Tom belongs in City College's rooting section, at least until the conclusion of the game this Saturday. "Rightfully or wrongfully, the Tom-Tom will appear," the agent whispered, "but who knows which?" (Walt Whitman knows.)

Or as one of the more culturally-inclined Dum agents originally and meekly suggested, "Anyone who hears Dum Dums or thump thumps now is a little off his rocking chair and ought to be put far away someplace."

Dum Dum agents are still dubiously confident that the chivalrous Tom-Tom will make its appearance in the college's rooting section during the traditional game.

They are hopefully anticipating that when the outcome of the encounter returns the drum to the college for another year, the Student Council will carefully hide it in a secret and inaudible place. This may prevent the enlightened Bulldog hearers from locating it by atmospheric disturbances and spiriting the Tom-Tom away in future years.

Expansion Praised

Returning Vets Are Pleased By College Change

By Joe Callas

In keeping with modern times, the city of San Francisco and the Board of Education have in the past few years spent great amounts of money for this college as well as for other educational establishments throughout the city.

Many former City College students have been pleasantly surprised with the tremendous face-lifting of the college. Cloud Hall and the George D. Smith Student Union Building have brought about a new atmosphere that seemed to be lacking during the days when classes were being held on the old west campus.

These former students, mostly veterans who have returned to continue their education, have commented on the new beauty of the campus, and many have gone so far as to say it is now actually a pleasure to attend classes.

Being a former student here and a veteran also, this writer has found such opinion of many former students to be quite true. There is no more dread of the long trek from a class on the west campus to the gymnasium and back again. That is but a small example of the disadvantage to the college and the students that has been erased with the modernization and beautification of the campus.

Returning students have found but a slight change of faculty personnel even in the athletic department, where many colleges have coaching changes perennially. These changes usually depend on the fortunes of the teams. The only major sport change has resulted in the elevation of successful cage mentor Ralph Hillsman to Dean of Student Activities.

The new City College of San Francisco has certainly earned its stamp of approval from former students who have returned to one of California's most rapidly expanding colleges.

Stars Shine From Where They Ain't

"Twinkle, twinkle little star; how I wonder where you are. According to the latest complaint, they have put you where you ain't."

Apparently there is more truth in this bit of poetic inspiration than there is verse, Louis Berman, astronomy instructor here, declared last week.

It seems that when a ray of starlight obliquely enters the atmosphere, the increasing density of the air continually bends the light ray as it descends earthward.

Therefore, the point from which the star seems to be shining is in reality above the true position of the star. This is not true for a star directly overhead because the star's light rays are perpendicular to the atmospheric layers.

Which all goes to prove that seeing is not believing. And anyone knows better than to take literally all that he reads.

Laymen's View Of The Week's Football Games

By Dan Ball

IN KEEPING with the Spectator's policy of variety, he goes way, in fact way too far, out on a limb and picks a few of this week's important football games:

Army vs. Yale. Army hasn't looked too sharp this year; but then who does when they get drubbed by Syracuse. Even so, they should be stronger than the simon-pure Yales. (See this month's issue of Holiday Magazine re the true-blue Ivy League athletic program.)

Unless the Army is struck down by a typhoid epidemic they ought to win by 12.

Michigan vs. Illinois. This could be an upset, but don't count on it. Illinois will be high for this one, but not that high. So you have to go with Michigan by seven.

Washington vs. California. They may not stop at hanging Pappy Waldorf in effigy after this one. Washington has looked good this season and might be in Pasadena on New Year's Day if something happens to UCLA. As long as Washington keeps their second team intact they should have no trouble with the Berkeley Bears. Washington by 14.

Stanford vs. USC. Coach Chuck Taylor's holler-guys from the farm have played the spoilers before this season, and they promise to give the Trojans a bad time. It shouldn't be bad enough, though, to stop the Trojans from scoring several more points than the Stanfords. In one that could be surprisingly close it goes to USC by six.

Texas A & M vs. SMU. Hurricane Texas should devastate the SMU team by 15 points.

49ers vs. Rams. Sports Editor Mike Berger once said that the 49er offense was entitled to two bad days this season. They've used up their quota this season, and even part of next season's allotment. With this in mind you have to go for the locals. In an upset with the 49ers by three.

Navy vs. Duke. Duke had its back broken when they were trounced by the underdog Pitt team. Navy, who was scored upon in only one of their first five games, should have little trouble with the Blue Devils. Navy by seven.

UCLA vs. COP. In the mismatch of the season the fourth ranked team in the nation faces unrated COP. Ronnie Knox and Sam Brown should completely baffle the COP's. It must be remembered though that the Tigers have been accused of dirty football more than once this season. UCLA over the ruffles by 18.

Other games of more than passing interest:

Colgate over Bucknell.
VMI over Lehigh.
Muhlenberg over Temple.
William and Mary over Wake Forest (If Mary is able to start).
Robert Hall Normal over Roos Theological Seminary by $1.98.
Davidson over Richmond.
Villanova over Florida State.

The name Placerville, originally known as "Hangtown," is derived from "plaza de oro," Spanish phrase meaning a place where gold is found.

Van Parish, Ram Pass Catcher, Combines Grid Talents With Unexcelled Track Swiftness

By Joe Callas

One of the greatest athletes in the history of City College of San Francisco sports has returned from Uncle Sam's army to haunt Ram opponents once again. The athlete, Van Parish, Ram end, is currently terrorizing opposing halfbacks with his adept pass catching.

Parish is not only known for his grid play, which brought him All-Conference mention in 1952, but is remembered throughout California as the top two-year track performer in the state in 1953.

The 6'1", 175-pound speedster also gained fame by becoming the top one-man scorer of the then Big Seven Conference Track and Field Championship meet. Besides capturing a first in the 100-yard dash, Parish tied the conference record in the 220 low hurdles with a 24.8. Later in the meet he ran second in the 220-yard dash. Undefeated in the 100-yard dash throughout the year, Parish hit his peak in the Sacramento meet as he captured the 100- and 220-yard dashes, and the 220-yard low hurdles.

In post season meets, the bespectacled former Commerce High School athlete led the Rams in the Modesto Relays by winning the century dash in 10.1. In the heralded Fresno Relays, Parish captured the 100 in the season's best time of 9.8.

Before enrolling at this college in the spring of 1952, Parish was the top end on Commerce's 1950 championship team, and gained prep fame by being the only gridder to be named on the 1951 San Francisco All-City offensive and defensive squads.

Although handicapped by an injured leg during the 1952 grid season, Parish emerged as the Rams' top receiver. The fleet veteran has shown in recent games that the army did not slow him down or affect his play in any way.

More hunters are killed by the guns of their companions than by members of other hunting parties.

VAN PARISH, star end for the Rams, has returned to the football team this season, and in addition to being a leading pass catcher, he promises to be a top threat on the track squad.

Footballers Win Third Straight; McCormick Star

By Mike Berger

Accelerating their drive for the Big Eight title, the Rams rolled over the Modesto Pirates, 34-6, before some 2,500 homecoming fans at Kezar Stadium on October 27.

Using both the long drive and the spectacular scoring play to good advantage, the college eleven dominated the game in all departments. A punting battle that lasted for most of the first quarter ended abruptly, as the Rams drove 58 yards in six plays to their first score.

Shirlee McCormick, playing at the halfback slot for the first time this year, blasted off tackle to count the initial touchdown with less than two minutes left in the period. City College led, 7-0, as quarterback Les Barros passed to Rich Piazza for the extra point.

The first time the Rams got their hands on the ball in the second quarter they scored, as halfback Al Chatman figured in two big plays that led to the touchdown. The swift back raced 21 yards around end to midfield, and two plays hence took a third down Barros pass over his shoulder at the Modesto 15 and sped to the score. Barros was dropped attempting to pass for the conversion, and the college lead stood at 13-0.

After an exchange of punts, the Rams counted another TD, with Barros capping a five play 37-yard advance with a quarterback sneak for the six points. Key play in the drive was a fine diving catch of a pass by LeRoy Thomas, who also scored the extra point on another toss from Barros. The half ended with the score at 20-0.

McCormick put the game beyond the reach of the inept Pirates as he powered the second half kickoff back 88 yards for a touchdown in the standout effort of the contest. Just for a change, Stan Keith kicked the point that made the score 27-0.

After the visitors moved for a first down, McCormick sent the Rams on their way as he intercepted an errant toss on the San Francisco 45 and was finally knocked off his pins at the Modesto 18. The next play saw Barros pitching and Piazza catching for the final Ram score of the afternoon. Keith booted the 34th point.

Weekly Grid Poll Favors Undefeated

By Mike Berger

ONE of the newer features of the Associated Collegiate Press is a weekly poll of the ten top football teams in the nation, taken through ballots mailed in by collegiate sports editors.

The first, (October 17) edition of same lists Michigan as top dog, followed by Maryland, Oklahoma, Navy, UCLA, Michigan State, Notre Dame, Duke, Auburn, and West Virginia in that order. This is a fairly representative poll, but it shows the same basic weakness that plagues all the other top ten lists.

We have always felt that a mere undefeated record is no reason for a listing in the top ten. The caliber of teams played is an equally important factor in the selection of the outstanding clubs.

One of the main arguments against the number one ranking of Maryland in 1953 was the fact that such pushovers as Washington and Lee, George Washington, Missouri, Georgia ('53 was a bad year for the Bulldogs), and North Carolina appeared on the Terrapins' schedule.

Notre Dame, which had met such highly rated teams as Oklahoma, Georgia Tech, Navy, Iowa, and USC, seemingly deserved the nod due to the much tougher overall competition, but Maryland won out in the vote mainly due to the large scores they ran up over some anemic opponents.

We have no bones to pick with Maryland, Oklahoma, or any other major college team that has what would be considered an easy schedule, but we do think that the squads that have to play top teams week after week deserve the higher rankings in the event the records of the contenders are identical or very close.

We would rate UCLA, for instance, over Oklahoma despite the fact that the Sooners are undefeated, as opposed to the 6-1 record of the Bruins. The toughest foe for the Oklahomans to date has been Pittsburgh, who was ground under, 26-14. The intersectional battles are behind the Sooners, and only the dull list of inept Big Seven foes remains, and the most rugged of these, Colorado, has already been defeated. The southlanders, on the other hand, have downed three top teams, and we still think that their lone loss to Maryland might have been reversed on a dry field.

* * *

Just for a change of pace, thought we'd pick a few wrong ones in the Saturday slate of games. Michigan should squeak by again and top Illinois; Washington, with roses in the air, will down Cal; USC should get by Stanford, but this is the best candidate for upset of the week; the powerful Texas Aggies will defeat SMU; Navy will sink the faltering Duke team; the Yales will beat the Army; and the Rams should roll over San Mateo in a vital Big Eight clash.

The Forty-Niners will finally put a ball game together to edge the injury-riddled Los Angeles Ram in the pro game of the week-end, and this is the way some other national crucials may end up: Colgate over Bucknell, Temple to upset Muhlenberg, Wake Forest over William and Mary (If Mary doesn't start), Richmond over Davidson, VMI over Lehigh, Florida State over Villanova, and UCLA over COP. (For the layman's view of these games, see page two.)

Rams Invade San Mateo; Tom-Tom Trophy In Balance As Inexperienced Bulldogs Face Powerful Offense

Fighting to stay in title contention, the City College of San Francisco Rams travel to San Mateo this Saturday, November 5, to play the Bulldogs at the San Mateo high school field. Kickoff is slated for 2:30 p.m.

The powerful Ram offensive came into its own against Sacramento, scoring almost at will while amassing a 45-6 victory. Aerial bombardments by quarterbacks Les Barros and John Panagakis drilled holes in the Capitol city defensive secondary, while Shirlee McCormick, Al Chatman, Rudy Lopez and Garlin Bluford ran through an outmatched Panther line.

San Mateo, unleashing a powerful offensive in their last outing against Stockton, showed a marked weakness on defense and allowed the Mustangs to outscore them, 33-25.

It will be a big weekend for the Bulldogs, who will be celebrating their Homecoming game. They will also try to regain the famous Tom-Tom Trophy, symbolic of Ram-Bulldog games, which has eluded them for the past few years.

Coach Jesse Freitas has but seven veterans who remember the 37-0 pasting handed them by the Rams last year. Of the returning vets, only one, guard Bill U'ren, is in the starting lineup. Freitas, in his first year at San Mateo, has had to start from scratch with his team, and along with line coach Vern Sterling has built a fine football machine at the peninsula school.

Heading the Bulldog attack is quarterback Manuel Escalera, whose passing has been brilliant throughout the season. The ground offense is headed by Dexter Mullen and Bud Murray. Mullen ran up a total of 100 yards plus in an early season winning effort against Orange Coast College, 20-6.

Sterling's line is headed by end Alan Bergstadt and tackle Bob Lotti. The inexperienced Bulldog forward wall has progressed to the point where it is ready to give Ram stalwarts Willie Hudson, Bill Canihan, and Van Parish a rough afternoon.

A high-scoring tilt is in the offing, and with the Tom-Tom at stake, fans should be in for four quarters of highly exciting football.

Soccermen Edge Spartans, 3-2, On Last Half Rally

By Walt Sigg

Overcoming a 2-0 deficit, the college's soccer team finally edged an upset inclined San Jose team 3-2 at Balboa Park Stadium last Saturday, October 29.

This third straight victory moved the Rams into a first place tie with the perennial champions from the University of San Francisco. Both teams have identical records of 3 wins and no losses.

In Saturday's game the San Jose Spartans, sensing an upset, gave the Rams a scare as they scored twice in the first quarter for a surprising 2-0 lead. Inside left Rodrigus and center forward Grosshans did the scoring honors for San Jose.

In the second quarter the Rams fought back desperately to close the gap and were successful when inside left Antonio Quiteno took a shot from 15 yards out which bounced off the goal post back to Quiteno, who blasted the ball into the net for the 2-1 half-time score.

In the second half the Rams looked like a different team as they completely outplayed the Spartans on both defense and offense. Fito Molina, the college's outstanding defensive center half, contributed to the comeback with his powerful and well placed kick from 25 yards out, which evened the score at 2-2. With only 15 minutes remaining to play, San Jose pulled back most of their men in the hope to settle for a tie. The Rams continued to press and tallied the winning goal ten minutes before the final gun when Bob Palma dribbled around a fullback and put the Rams ahead 3-2 with a placement from 10 yards out.

This Saturday, November 5, Coach Roy Diederichsen's Rams will travel to Palo Alto to meet the Stanford Indians for an important conference game which is scheduled to begin at 1 o'clock on the Bing Maloney field.

Conference Standings:

Phelan Greets 30 Cage Hopefuls

The practice session began yesterday for Ram cagers, with approximately 30 players reporting to Coach Sid Phelan.

Phelan will have a month to get his club ready for its first practice game against Menlo on December 2. That game will be played here at the men's gymnasium and will start at 2:30 p.m.

Led by Clarence Grider, former Lowell High All-American ace, the 30 men will be fighting for a place on the squad. A 15-man team will make up the varsity squad. The traveling team is allowed to carry only 12 men by conference rules.

Three of Phelan's former high school basketballers will also be on the team, Wally Papke, Aldo DiPasgun, and Chew Jeong will rejoin their old coach.

Also working out on the court are Leroy Thomas and Walt Morgan of Mission, Al Mock from Lowell, Dan Curley of Sacred Heart, Rich Di Conti from St. Ignatius, and Reggie Jones of Polytechnic.

With a practice schedule that will include eight games in 28 days, all in the month of December, the Rams will have five weeks of pre-season tilts before their opening game against Santa Rosa on January 11.

Joe DiMaggio, famous New York Yankee outfielder, set the major league record by hitting safely in 56 straight games in 1941 and then, after going hitless in a single game, hit in 25 more consecutive games.

JESSE FREITAS, left, San Mateo head coach and former 49er quarterback, and line coach Vern Sterling, All-American from Santa Clara.

Sweaters Official Block SF Attire

The Block SF Society adopted special red and white sweaters as their official garment, and a ticket drawing and bulletin board were also given approval at last week's meeting, according to Bill Fischer, sponsor.

From now on, letters won in sports can only be worn on the official sweater. This has been under consideration for some time, Fischer added.

On November 18, during college hour, a ticket drawing open to those holding Block SF membership cards will be held. Two winners will receive tickets to a major West Coast football game.

Last week's meeting also approved a bulletin board, to be placed in the men's gymnasium. All matters concerning coming events and other business of the society will be posted on this board, said Fischer.

Plutarch says that bread dipped in wine was a favorite breakfast in ancient times.

State Bows To Ram Booters, 3-0

The undefeated Ram soccer squad, under the tutelage of Roy Diederichsen, defeated San Francisco State, 3-0, for their second straight league victory on October 22.

The Ram-Gator contest began optimistically for the Rams as center forward Bob Palma elevated the Rams into a 2-0 first quarter lead with two well-placed shots of 8 and 15 yards. Not to be discouraged, the Gators fought back strongly, successfully staving off further scoring threats, and came up with several potential scoring drives which were spoiled by the excellent defensive work of goal keeper Dick Muzio and fullback Ben Schweizer.

For more than two and one-half quarters, the two teams were unable to alter the 2-0 score. The Rams broke the temporary scoring famine, as Woo Chung booted through the final tally to ice the contest, 3-0.

Stanford's Indians, who face the Rams this Saturday, pose a great problem to Diederichsen and his booters. The Indians edged the Gators in early season play and will be geared to knock the Rams from the ranks of the undefeated.

Rushing Affairs Highlight Week's Club Activities

By Antoinette Mannina

WITH midterm week a thing of the past, clubs have gone into a full swing of activities. Rushing affairs, dinners, joints, and business meetings fill this week's calendar.

Sorority pledges and sorority members will settle down to a week of "silence," starting next Wednesday, but can look forward to the many activities of Hell Week.

Phi Beta Rho sorority presented a spaghetti dinner for the rushees last night. The sorority also held a business meeting last week at the home of Lois Mantel to discuss plans for the dinner.

Zeta Chi held a business meeting last night to make final plans for its dinner at the Gangplank to be held tomorrow night.

Kappa Phi will hold a Chinese dinner at the Forest Hill Lodge tonight.

Newman Club members are busy this week making final preparations for their dance to be held on Friday night.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its first affair recently at the Golden West Y.M.C.A., followed by a short meeting. It was decided that the second affair would have an Hawaiian theme.

The new officers of Alpha Phi Omega, the college's service fraternity, are Ed Emig, president; Ken Henry, first vice-president; John Grist, second vice-president; Al Mowry, secretary; Mike Meyers, treasurer; Al Tanner, historian; John Watts, sergeant-at-arms.

The Christian Science organization of the college holds meetings on the first and third Thursdays and the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month at 3:15 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive.

Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity held a meeting last Tuesday to discuss plans for Pledge Week.

The Collegiate Christian Fellowship club will hold a question box meeting this Friday during college hour in C221.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity held a business meeting to discuss rushing activities as well as all activities for Hell Week.

Theta Tau sorority presented its traditional Luau last Sunday at the Stonestown Y.M.C.A., and a joint with Alpha Sigma Delta last night.

AGS Honor Society Has 125 Members; Bolanos President

Students who have received invitations to join Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide honor society here, should consult Don Jensen, adviser to the Omega chapter at the college, in his office, S160-E as soon as possible.

The society is composed of students who have maintained an average of 2.0 (B) in at least 30 grade points in the previous semester. Life membership is obtained in the society by maintaining an average of 2.3 in three out of four or four out of five semesters at the college, Jensen pointed out.

One of the activities of the society is coaching other students who are in need of scholastic prodding or help. At the present time there are approximately 125 members at the college, Jensen said.

Meetings of the society are held, when called, in Room 232, Cloud Hall. Shelly Bolanos is currently president of the local chapter of the society.

Members of the local chapter of the scholastic society are given the privilege of obtaining first hour registration numbers, thus avoiding crowds during registration here.

Students enrolled at the college who are gold seal bearers from high school are entitled to automatic associate membership in the society during their first semester at the college, Jensen declared.

In 1938 the society had its inception at the college. The only real requirement for AGS membership is scholarship grade point, and therefore this is one of the most select groups on campus, Jensen pointed out.

Today Is Last Day For Students To Drop Courses Without A Penalty

MARY JANE LEARNARD

Last day to drop courses this semester is today, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, warned students.

Anyone not officially dropping courses who wishes to do so will be faced with the alternative of receiving a final grade of F or attending classes in an effort to earn a passing grade. Absolutely no incompletes will be given to students who are guilty of non-attendance.

Students wishing to drop any courses must consult their counselors immediately in order to remove courses from their programs before the deadline.

Reason for the early deadline for dropping classes is that students in past semesters used the late date for dropping as a safety factor in case they were in danger of receiving a failing grade for excessive cuts.

Attendance Regulations Strictly Enforced; Decrease Of Unexcused Absentees Expected By Faculty

In an interview held here recently with John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, the following facts concerning attendance and academic regulations at the college were discussed.

On attendance: Actually, there are only two kinds of excused absences, those for medical reasons and those which are officially endorsed by the president of the college. All other types of absences from class are unexcused and counted as cuts.

A student is allowed as many unexcused absences from a class as times his class meets a week. "Tardies" also come under this regulation and may be regarded as cuts depending on the units of the course.

When a student has exceeded this privilege, he is sent a probationary warning note by his instructor. The student then must petition either to the Dean of Men or Women for a readmittance to class.

If he continues to accumulate unexcused absences, he will receive an "F" grade for the course and may not drop it to avoid having that grade recorded.

"This semester, 160 students have received failing grades in individual courses," Brady said. There have been quite a few cases where students unwittingly were registered for two different courses at the same hour of the day.

Commenting on this, Brady declared "it is up to the students themselves to check and know the courses in which they have been officially registered."

On academic regulations: As of today notices will be sent out to students whose grade point average has dropped below the .05 standard. Those students who were re-admitted under certain provisions or who have been re-admitted under certain provisions or who have received straight failing grades on their mid-term records may be dropped from the college.

Although the mid-term grades have not yet been checked, Brady expressed confidence that there will be a marked improvement.

"This is partly due to the tightening of the attendance regulations," he said.

CAB Plans Include Charity Dance And New Trophy Room

Tentative plans for future CAB activities include a charity dance and the provision of a trophy room for the combined use of all campus organizations, Earl Cabrinha, Club Activities Board chairman here, stated last Wednesday.

"Of course these plans are still in the beginning stages, but committees are working on the advancement of the projects," he said.

Members of the board are also concerned with transporting the Redwood Ram from the west campus to a new and more impressive site on the present campus. However, Cabrinha declared, the Ram, which belongs to the college and not the Associated Students, is posing quite a problem because of its weight.

In explaining the functions of the Club Activities Board, Cabrinha said, "The purpose of the CAB is to help the students in the various societies, clubs, and organizations help themselves by exchanging ideas and discussing ways and means of ironing out problems.

"Special emphasis is placed on improving student government and putting parliamentary procedure into effective use in the clubs. An organization lacking in parliamentary procedure is like throwing a lamb before a pack of lions—the results are a chaotic and dishevelled meeting."

He added that any organization unrepresented at the CAB meetings becomes an "off-campus" club and not entitled to the benefits offered by the board.

Cabrinha extended an invitation to all students interested in better student government to sit in at a meeting of the board, which meets every Tuesday at 1 p.m. in Room 301, Cloud Hall.

Debaters Travel To Arcata Nov. 4

Four members of Phi Rho Pi, the college's debate society, will travel to Arcata to participate in the Northern California Forensic Association tournament on this weekend, November 4 and 5.

Competing in the tournament will be Virgil Fox, Vic Heberl, Bob Lebert, and Pat Mahoney.

A round table discussion will be held Thursday, December 8, at Stanford University, on the recent Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in public schools.

Representing the college in the discussion will be Bob Arago, Klaus Arons, Phil Braverman, Allison Green, Willie Jones, Andy Skeara and Bill Whitney.

Three Students Volunteer To Make Plans For Soph-Week Activities; Further Applications Accepted

Three sophomore students have volunteered to help lay plans for the Sophomore Ball and Sophomore Week, January 9 through January 14, Bob Johnson, Sophomore president here, stated yesterday.

They are Wayne MacFadden, Student Council member who is now the Dance Committee chairman; Antoinette Mannina, Publicity Committee chairman, who has been put in charge of publicity for Sophomore Week; and Joyce Weaver, Finance chairman, who is responsible for receiving and recommending dance bids.

"Sophomore students who are interested in student activities are still needed to help with further planning," Johnson explained. Interested students are requested to consult Jane Lutt, Sophomore vice-president, or Johnson in the Associated Student office, Room 169 in the science building.

In another recent development it was detected that Alex Schwarz, assistant football coach here, will captain the professor basketball squad during the soph-prof basketball game, which will be held sometime during Sophomore Week. Johnson will serve as the captain for the sophomores.

Grover Klemmer, head football coach here, was overheard to have declared, "The sophs need not worry about the not-so-young old folk this semester; the profssors may even forfeit."

"The question that is brought to mind is whether or not he intended this ironical statement to be overheard," Johnson said. Last year the professors won the encounter by a convincing 19-12 score.

Several dance bands have submitted applications to play at the Sophomore Ball which will be held on Saturday, January 14, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Johnson said that tentative plans seem to indicate that Lyle Bardo and his ten-piece band may be chosen.

Associated Student members will elect a sophomore king and queen to reign at the dance. Clubs, fraternities and sororities of the college may enter candidates for the king-queen contest by submitting a petition to Miss Lutt or Johnson before January 1, 1956.

Admission to the semi-formal affair will be one AS card per couple or $2.50 per couple for non-AS card holders.

Council Approves Partial Band Fund, Asks Investigation

Requesting a budget of $508, Band and Orchestra received a $364 allocation cut from Student Council last week.

A partial grant of $194 was approved by the council. Several members contested the Band and Orchestra budget. Questioning the whereabouts of the musicians during college affairs, Rose Thurmond asked a representative of the band for the reason. In answer he stated, "I think you saw the band quite often lest semester" and added, "this semester we have played at a rally and a football game."

Dean Woods, Associated Student president, announced at the meeting that he had been informed by Meyer Cahn, band and orchestra instructor here, that "the band will be available for every home game and one road game."

Bob Bliss questioned an item on the budget calling for $130 as traveling expenses. He wanted to know where the trip was going to be. A band representative said the trip had been cancelled. The $130 was removed from the budget and the recommended grant of $424 was lowered to $294.

An expense of $100 to recondition a string bass was contested by Wayne McFadden. He asked, "Was it true that the band had a similiar amount allocated to them last semester for the same purpose?"

The band member stated, "Yes, but we have two string basses." Council passed the $194 partial budget and held back the $100 pending an investigation.

Former AS President Al Kingston Now Men's Representative At Cal

AL KINGSTON

Al Kingston, president of the Associated Students here for the 1955 spring semester, was recently selected to serve as Men's Representative-at-Large at the University of California, Joseph Amori, placement director here, revealed last week.

From a large field of 16 other applicants, Kingston was chosen as the best qualified candidate to replace Robert Hamilton who held this position prior to his election as the AS president of UC.

"As the Men's Representative-at-Large, he will serve on the AS Executive Board for one year," Amori said, "representing men's athletic organizations, fraternities and all other strictly male activities on the UC campus."

This position was originated by Ralph Vetterlein in 1954 while he was the AS president at UC. Vetterlein was the AS president here in 1953, and he is currently the production manager of George Reproductions Company in San Francisco.

New Posters For Student Union

New style posters to be displayed in the student union building are now available for forthcoming events, Toni Mannina, chairman of the Publicity Committee, announced last week. The posters, which are to be used for the first time at the college, will be placed inside the square glass bricks on the north wall of the building.

Credit goes to George Mullany, faculty adviser of the committee, who suggested the new idea for more effective advertising of college activities.

The posters have been designed and sized to slide right into the center of the glass squares and thus make an attractive and noticeable showing.

Other members of this semester's Publicity Committee are George Kapianis, Dee Noodlman, Robert Pasquin, Pat Briggs, Dick Moore, Nancy Hawkins and Mike Avila.

Alumni To Hold Meeting Monday

The next meeting of the Alumni Association will be held Monday, November 7, according to Bob Winegardner, president.

Activities for this semester are to be planned at this meeting. One activity which is already underway is an alumni bulletin to be edited by former Associated Student President Bill Boldenweck. Boldenweck was also Guardsman News Editor last spring.

A quest is now on for new committee members. Anyone who has attended the college one semester and left in good standing is eligible for membership.

Winegardner announced that the Association president has requested the names and addresses of eligible former students in an effort to increase the ranks of the Alumni Association.

Membership fees are two dollars for a year's membership, five dollars for five years, while a lifetime membership is ten dollars. Further information can be obtained from Winegardner at the California Book Store.

Scholarship Letter Deadline Is Friday

Deadline for submitting letters of application for the Florence Louis and Theta Tau scholarships is this Friday, November 4, according to Mary Golding, dean of women. Letters should be left in Dean Golding's office.

Other scholarships this semester are the Denman, the Chinese Students, and the McGlade scholarships.

Two Denman scholarship for women will be available, each of them worth $125.

One of the Chinese Student scholarships is for a woman and one is for a man. They are sponsored by the Chinese Student Club. One also will be given to an outstanding high school student who is coming here next semester.

The McGlade Scholarship Fund also furnishes a scholarship for a high school student who is coming here next semester. It amounts to $150.

College Coed To Reign As Queen Over Shrine Tilt

For the first time in the history of the Shrine East-West game, a queen will be selected to reign over the 30-year-old classic, with City College making the selection from among its own co-eds.

All queen contestants must be carrying no less than 12½ units. Those who have been here more than five semesters or who are credited with more than 60 units are ineligible.

A contestant must be a member of the Associated Students and must agree that if she should win she will be available for social and official duties from December 20 to January 1, including the Kickoff Dinner on the night of December 20 at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium.

It is expected that in addition to beauty, the queen candidate must have poise and speaking ability.

Applications for the contest may be obtained in the women's gymnasium, the Associated Student office, S169, Dean Golding's office, S150, and the telephone operator's booth near the Silver Pole. These applications must be filed along with a 5 by 7 inch photograph in Dean Golding's office no later than 12 noon, Friday, November 18.

First screening of the candidates will take place in the women's gymnasium Monday morning, November 21, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Possibilities for a Shrine Queen have been discussed and weighed for the past several years.

Finally this year a small delegation representing the college and including Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities; Joseph M. Jacobson, student counsellor, and Lee Ann Meriwether, 1955 Miss America, with the aid of Dr. A. J. Cloud, President Emeritus, met in conference with William Coffman, director of Shrine East-West football for 30 years and author of the book, American in the Rough, his own story. They secured the privilege of choosing the pageant queen.

Horticulturists To Decorate New SU

Flowers and plants from the floriculture section will landscape the area around the student union building in the near future, according to Harry Nelson, instructor in the floriculture division here.

All of the items used will have been grown on the campus and all work done by students enrolled in that course. It is expected that more than 800 plants will be used for this purpose, Nelson said.

The floriculture division, which will soon change its name to ornamental horticulture, grows just about everything that can be grown in its field. Although selling goes along with production and maintenance in learning this business, students do not sell anything grown on the campus.

Nelson said that San Francisco is second in the production of cut flowers in California with two million square feet under glass. The bay area as a whole is one of the most productive in the nation, and scores of nurseries are producing here.

Knowledge of floriculture not only leads to work in landscaping but also can be used in interior decorating. The field is wide and variable, and all of the aspects are taught at the college, Nelson said.

One of the important things in this field is that only a small capital is needed to start a business of one's own. Many graduates from here have done just that and are successfully operating not only in the United States but in Alaska and South America as well.

AGS Receives Many Applications

One hundred and seventy-four applications for membership in the Omega chapter of the state-wide honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, have been received by AGS adviser Don Jensen. Of the 174, 69 are applying for membership for the first time. The remaining applicants are applying for temporary membership for the second, third, or fourth semester.

"Life membership in the society is obtained by maintaining a 2.3 grade average in three out of four semesters," Jensen explained.

The society, composed of students who have maintained at least a B average in the previous semester, had its beginning at the college in 1938.

"Since scholarship is the only requirement for AGS membership, this is one of the most select societies on campus," Jensen declared, adding that academic assistance is offered by the AGS through its members to any student needing scholastic help.

Occasional social functions are sponsored by the AGS, but the main purpose of the organization is encouraging, rewarding, and recognizing scholarship among the students of the college.

Meetings, Jensen said, are held by call in Room 232, Cloud Hall.

Associated Student Elections

Two Party System Returns As AS Election Day Nears

Voters in the coming Associated Student elections may again have two parties from which to choose officers.

The almost traditional two-party system will prevail again here this semester as the reactivated United Students Association prepares to contest the AS elections, tentatively scheduled to take place on Wednesday, January 11, and Thursday, January 12, according to Mervin Slosberg, the club's faculty adviser.

The club's newly elected officers are James Halloran, president; Dale Allen, secretary; Don Tofte, treasurer, and Joseph Bocci, acting as Club Activities Board representative.

Reason for the foundation of the party was mainly to provide organized competition in student elections here.

A highlighting event in the history of the party's activities was when the USA, in 1952, sponsored a bi-partisan debate and general forum featuring guest speakers from the General Committee Bureau of the Democratic and Republican parties.

In the same year the party backed its president, Charles A. Osborne, as a candidate for AS presidency. The party lost the elections, winning only five council seats, and gradually dissolved.

The USA holds as its main purpose, that of building student interest in the political and social aspects of college life.

Party meetings are held in S255 during regular college hour, and all students interested in self-government are welcome to attend, Slosberg said.

Seven Student Leaders Here Named Fresno Conference Delegates; Game Tradition Plan Up For Consideration

As part of a plan to establish firm traditional rivalry among two-year colleges in the state, delegates from the college will attempt to introduce a resolution at the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference in Fresno beginning Thursday, November 17, Dean Woods, Associated Student president, announced last week.

The plan, which requires acceptance by the General Assembly of the 20th semi-annual CJGSGAC, will regulate the meeting of college teams so that specified sporting events may become traditional.

Woods, designer of the plan, said that with the support of the state conference he would introduce a proposal to the Big Eight Conference, meeting here December 9, where teams in this league will be able to choose a rival for traditional purposes. Dates for these games will be on a permanent basis, making possible events like Homecoming Week.

San Mateo and Santa Rosa colleges are being considered as traditional contenders.

Seven students from the college will attend the state conference which will be held at Fresno Junior College on November 17, 18, and 19. Delegates representing the college include Woods, AS vice-president Lee Carol Lombard, Associated Men Student President Bill Cirimele, Finance Chairman Joyce Weaver, and Don Ball, news editor of The Guardsman. Two students will go in the capacity of the offices they hold. Lawrence Love will attend as State Information Service Chairman, and Vic Hebert as the Northern Section Parliamentarian. Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, will accompany the students as faculty adviser.

Rally Is Cancelled By Veterans Day

Veterans Day this Friday will cancel the rally originally planned as well as the movie which is generally scheduled each week.

Formerly labeled Armistice Day, the day is set aside each year to commemorate the ending of World War I, also called "the big war."

Feeling that the veterans of the nation deserved recognition, Congress passed a resolution declaring November 11 as Veterans Day.

November 18 will be scheduled as the next college hour day, which will feature a pep rally for the Santa Rosa football game.

Pistol Tournament Plan Is Underway

Now being arranged between the Campus Police Force Pistol Team and that of San Jose State College is the establishment of planned tournaments and a competitive trophy.

This added competition, City College Police Chief Bob Dagitz explained, will serve to further the team and help them to gain more recognition.

Normally composed of five members, the squad is presently short one man, but the empty spot is expected to be filled soon. The present members are Dagitz, Lee Traner, John Burns, and Lee Hargus. Practice is held every Monday on the San Francisco Police Force Target Range.

Once a month the team participates in the Oakland target matches. When the National matches were held there last year, they gave a good account of themselves by receiving three awards for individual high scores.

The team has also been invited to participate in the San Mateo County Police matches this year.

There is also an inter-department match scheduled for the first week in January at the San Francisco Police Range, which will determine who are the best shots in the department.

West Campus To Be Evacuated By New Year's Day

Complete evacuation of the west campus by January 1, 1956 was announced last week by Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here.

Prompted mainly by an agreement with the Public Utilities Commission, clearance of the grounds, owned by the PUC, and of the buildings, all owned by the college, must be made.

Clearing and salvaging of all structures will be done by a contractor whose bid is accepted by the college.

Any rumors which have led to the belief that this area will be designated for automobile parking facilities are completely unfounded and entirely false, Anderson explained.

Two PUC reservoirs are to be constructed on the tract and will provide water for the Mission district. "The tops of the reservoirs will be closed off and paved," Anderson said, "but since they will be rather flimsy, no cars could possibly park on them."

A recreation center, including a tennis court, may later be set up on what has been the west campus.

Regarding additional parking space, always a major problem anywhere, Anderson revealed that tentative plans are being made for the paving of the slopes in back of Cloud Hall leading down to the playing fields near the gymnasiums. The Phelan and Judson areas may also be closed off to provide parking facilities near the new auditorium, soon to be erected there.

"Paving campus ground explicitly for parking lots is a highly expensive undertaking," Anderson said, "and any further decisions to do so would definitely rest with the Board of Education."

OSCAR ANDERSON, coordinator of Educational Management.

Guardsman Rated All-American By Associated Collegiate Press

The Guardsman last week received an All-American rating for its 23rd in 28 semesters of membership in the Associated Collegiate Press.

Correcting last semester's error in a news story reporting the same feat, the newspaper then received its 22nd top rating in 27 semesters rather than the 21 in 26 which was reported.

Receiving a total of 1710 points, this publication was one of seven two-year college weeklies to receive the award. It was the paper's fifth consecutive semester in the All-American class.

All publications are judged according to a strict scoring system which rates each phase of news-writing and printing, including news sources, balance between sources, treatment of copy, creativeness, news content, style of writing, leads, features, interviews, copy reading, editorials, sports coverage, page makeup, display, headlines and the mass head.

Totaling the scores of each phase, each college newspaper is rated as All-American, First, Second, Third, or Fourth Class.

Mel Axelrod, Don Ball, Mike Berger, James Hickey, Mary Jones, Bob Jones, Antoinette. Mannina, Mitsuya Ohno, and Joan Wilson were reporters.

Gary Alexander, Mario Cassulo, Denny Delman, Martha Goldsmith, Bob Kauth, Marion Paszkiewicz, Martha Rowley, Ralph Thomas, and Bobbie Williams were cub reporters.

John Gee, Harry Gorman, George Wong, Glenn Allen, William Hamilton, Arlette Brunson, Noaman Brunson, Robert Frick, Michael Kosinki, and Frank Stork were the photographers.

Council Audience Is Led Astray By Rumor Of Action

With rumors rampant that something big was going to happen, Student Council played to the largest audience of the semester last Thursday.

Unfortunately for the onlookers, nothing out of the ordinary came forth from the proceedings. The final budget was passed when the band was granted $294.

Some question about the band's request arose when it was pointed out that $100 of the total was requested in order to repair a string bass, Council member Wayne MacFadden asked if the band hadn't received a similar amount last semester for a bass repair. This provoked a great deal of discussion on whether the Associated Students or the college itself should pay for instrument maintenance.

This was answered when Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, stated that the amount of money granted by the college would not make it possible for the band to contract for the needed repairs.

When the vote was called for, the allocation was passed unanimously.

A great deal of speculation arose when Earl Cabrinha, the president of the Club Activities Board, reported that one of the member clubs of the CAB had missed five consecutive meetings. Cabrinha did not mention the club by name, but he intimated strong disciplinary action if an acceptable excuse was not forthcoming.

Some of the delegates to the recent convention of two-year colleges in Napa reported on the meetings and activities which took place. These reports were cut short when a motion made by council member George Kapianis became hopelessly embroiled in a tangle of parliamentary rulings.

AS Cards Offer Many Advantages

Associated Student cards may still be obtained at the AS office, S169; Dean Edwin C. Browne's office, S149, or the bank in the student union building.

Upon the purchase of a card, students are offered many advantages in the form of free or reduced admission to the college's football games, various dances, theatrical productions, and numerous other social activities, discounts at local theaters and the privilege of voting for Associated Student officers.

AS card sales have reached the 2,390 mark, amounting to $11,950, stated Emory Lebonville, AS card sales chairman. The goal set by Lebonville is 3,000 cards or $15,000.

Trend Proves Two-Year College Offers Solid Higher Education

PERHAPS the biggest trend in education, on a college level, in recent years has been the escape from the idea that the two-year college is a "glorified high school" and the bestowing of the deserved scholastic rating and general recognition such an institution deserves.

The two-year college is a young idea in itself, and for too many years after its inception it was considered as merely a stopping place, a substitute education for those who were neither bright nor studious enough to attend a four-year college or university. Now, finally, the man-on-the-street is coming to realize the importance of these colleges.

The original designation may have had a great deal to do with it. Junior college was the name given to these schools, and is still widely used, but the tendency is definitely away from it. This college was, until 1949, San Francisco Junior College. Another nearby example is in San Mateo, where San Mateo Junior College became College of San Mateo last year. There are numerous other examples, and the trend is a good one.

The two-year college is junior in no way. It is an institution designed to provide, free of charge, the first two years of a college education to anyone with enough ambition to desire a higher education.

Many of the nation's leading educators now realize that, in a majority of cases, the two-year college that provides university-parallel courses actually offers a better education for the first two years than even the leading universities. The four-year institutions tend to place their better instructors with upper-division classes, a natural move. This, with the fine caliber of the two-year college instructors, gives the latter a definite edge in preparing students for upper-division work.

The acceptance of and trend toward the two-year college was well stated recently by Dr. Claude Petty, the adviser to Eta Chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, the statewide two-year college honor society, as he spoke to a meeting of the 17 chapters in Northern California at San Mateo. Dr. Petty stated firmly that, according to many of today's leading educators, many universities will eventually drop all lower-division training, leaving the first years of college to the two-year institutions.

Unfortunately, there are still those who classify these schools as of minor importance, unnecessary and unwanted in the educational scheme. This group is growing smaller and less vociferous each year, thanks to the efforts of educators and citizens like Dr. Archibald Cloud, who pioneered this college as its first president, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, the present president, and others.

Educators Mourn Dr. Deutsch

The entire educational world was shocked and saddened recently by the death of Monroe E. Deutsch, vice-president and provost emeritus of the University of California, who passed away in San Francisco at the age of 76.

Dr. Deutsch was closely connected with City College of San Francisco, his last official function being as principal speaker at the dedication of Cloud Hall in spring of 1954. His official and unofficial aid to the college, from its inception in 1935 until the present time, was too great a contribution to be chronicled here.

We offer our condolences to his family and close friends. They have suffered a great loss. But condolences must also go to all those in the field of education, for it has lost a brilliant lecturer, a fine author, a wonderful administrator and a real friend—a truly great man.

The Spectator — Satirists Bob And Ray Bop One Man's Family

By Don Ball

TWO of the funniest men in the world have been cropping up all over the place on radio dials in recent weeks. The men: Robert Goulding and Raymond Elliot, better known as Bob and Ray.

These two pop up with amazing regularity on Monitor, the 40-hour-long NBC catch-all, and on their own new program on Mutual every Monday through Friday.

They have a big order to fill on their daily show as they have ousted Sergeant Preston of the Yukon and his dog King from the spot the good Mountie had occupied for years. With a conscientious consideration for those who had become devotees of the Yukon show, Bob and Ray made it their policy to allow all children over 21 to visit their new show.

This generous gesture is typical of Bob and Ray. In a desire to give their listeners the very best of entertainment, they have had their cast go all over the country to make remote broadcasts from places of interest and events of importance.

The astounding thing is—Bob and Ray do all of the voices on the remote broadcasts right from their New York studio. The number and variety of the show's characters give some indication of the talent of the two comedians.

One of the most jocular of the tricks in the Bob and Ray collection is their satire of the better known programs.

A recent take-off on One Feila's Family will serve as a typical example of the Bob and Ray brand of humor. An argument takes place between Mother and Father Butcher because Father felt that the light bill was exorbitant. It was $72. Mother was about to explain that their son Jack had left the light on all night in the basement and caused the large bill when Jack, who had been speeding up and down the driveway in his car, accidentally drove through the garage door. This understandably upset Father Butcher and the show ended as he told Mother that he got a headache if he talked to her for more than five minutes at a time.

It's awfully difficult to describe the Bob and Ray style; maybe it's better just to listen to them.

Rhetorical Questions Supply Reason Why More And More People Drive Sports Cars

By Bob O'Brien

What's with these people who buy sports cars? What's the matter with our cars, not good enough? Good question, friend, but not so easy to answer.

There are all sorts of reasons why Americans are buying sports cars. Some of them buy such cars just to race, some to run rallies and trials. Still another contingent will buy anything new that comes along, while others just like to drive.

Just as the buyers are different, so are the cars. They range from a two-thousand dollar MG to the 18 thousand dollar Ferrari. Despite a price difference of some 16 thousand dollars, both are true thoroughbreds.

Sports cars are not easy to describe in a few words. Ralph Stein once wrote, "Find a big, hairy, noisy, twin-cammed, supercharged engine and mount it in a light, whippy chassis. Transmit the drive through a thoroughly angry clutch that tries to snap your head off every time you engage it. Put in all straight-cut gears whose howling and grinding can be heard above the screaming roar of the exhaust. Supply a pair of seats fit for a midget with a very well padded behind. Paint this one Italian racing red. Burn it off in spots with a blowtorch. Then drive it through Italian villages at 90 miles per hour. Some fun, eh, Giovanni?"

Now, we must admit that the fire-breathing monster which Stein describes bears little resemblance to the MG you parked alongside this morning, but remember, they have this in common: They both were built for the sheer pleasure of driving.

Of course, if you get your kicks out of tooling around some two-ton, automatic dream car, we're wasting our typewriter ribbon. There must, however, be some who occasionally wonder what has happened to driving fun. It's been lost in Detroit's mad rush for 500 horsepower.

Let's dwell for a bit on driving for fun. A car doesn't have to be able to do 120 mph to derive pleasure from it. Given the proper road, one can be reduced to a grinning idiot in an 80 mph MG. The thrill of cornering a car, designed for precisely that purpose, cannot be described, only experienced.

Driving has rapidly become a lost art here, and the chap who claims he gets the feel of the road with power-steering is kidding himself. Automatic transmissions, coupled with the soft American front ends, are just not conducive to fast, safe driving.

So, if you find yourself bored behind the wheel of your Jet-o-matic Jewel, head for the nearest purveyor of sporting motor cars. Let yourself be seated in a car built with the grand sport of motoring in mind, constructed by men who are artisans, not mere laborers.

Be the car of your choice an Allard or Austin, MG or Morgan, or the product of any of a hundred makers, you will find built into your choice motoring pleasure that cannot be measured in dollars.

Hell Week

No Rest For Pledges As Rushing Concludes

To use an old fraternity phrase, "There is no rest for the pledges." For the past three and a half weeks and for the remaining two and a half weeks before second midterm examinations, approximately 30 per cent of the students at the college will find themselves involved in the semesterly dilemma known as "rushing."

The six grueling weeks started off with a bang on the Sunday immediately following the first midterm exams, when the six sororities presented the first Inter-Sorority Council Tea. Then the fun began:

All women students interested in rushing registered in Dean of Women Mary Golding's office and received invitations to the ISC tea and to cookie coketail parties. One rushee was reported to have said that this highly beneficial food constituted her evening meals for the week.

Simultaneously, the fraternity rushees were receiving invitations to and attending interrogations (first affairs). The individual fraternity members recommended their friends, and some collected names of prospective pledges on Club Activities Day.

The first dinner for the sorority rushees was presented on October 30, and each of the remaining five sororities held a dinner within the next nine days. A woman attending all of the second affairs made ham, spaghetti, pizza, smorgasbord, chicken pie, and chop suey, the major parts of her diet.

This span of nine days is characterized by dinners, parties, and dances for the men who are expected to be fraternity pledges and dwindling treasuries for the men who pledged last semester.

During the rush, there comes a welcome pause. For eight days, beginning today, sorority women are restricted from speaking to sorority rushees. Rushees are at this time expected to make up their minds as to which invitation they are going to accept. This is also the only convenient time to attempt catching up on the homework that will have been neglected before the official beginning of Hell Week, November 20.

During Hell Week, one may discover the prime examples of humility and belligerence by watching pledges and sorority and fraternity members, respectively. Pledges are expected to carry books, supply coffee, buss dishes, entertain, laugh, talk, smile, frown, or shut up. The sorority pledges suffer the humiliation of wearing the same outfit each of her pledge sisters is wearing and supplying refreshments for meetings and joints. The fraternity pledges find themselves being treated like sixth graders, posteriorly speaking, that is.

November 24 through the 27 may be considered "rest" for the neophytes.

College Selects Hurley Villagers

Contrary to popular belief, all the residents of Hurley Village are not students of this college.

Many of the villagers are in attendance at the Universities of California and San Francisco, San Francisco State, and other bay area colleges, Dorothy E. Anderson, controller, announced here last week.

The village, which at one time had 215 units, is under the jurisdiction of City College and is run by the Public Housing Authority. Its jurisdiction gives the college the right to select the people who are to make Hurley their home.

Veterans going to college are considered first in deciding who is to live in the housing units, and secondly other college students. At the present time there seems to be a long waiting list.

Although jurisdiction is held by this college, Anderson explained that no attempt is made to interfere with the home life of the villagers through the use of unnecessary rules.

Shots At Random

By Dolores Stoffers

THE Musicians' Union should maybe check into this one. When the shadows lengthen over the field, and the H&R department diplomatically shoos the customers out (as diplomatic as rounding up the herd with snapping bull whips and gutteral shouts of "Aw right, geet along"), said customers usually flee into the snack bar.

Invariably, someone starts plunking out a tune on the old upright there. In this case, it was a duet rendered be Lee Carol Lombard, Associated Student vice-president, and company. As the strains of Chop Sticks floated haltingly through the air, a kind soul, given to philanthropy, tacked on the piano a sign: "Please help these girls. Music is their only means of support."

A blinding shower of pennies answered the plea, and the girls are still counting to see if the union wage scale was met.

• • •

SPEAKING OF THE H&R division they finally lowered the price of coffee a smashing two cents, but they seem to be attempting to make up the difference with service . . . from the students. Frequenters of the cafeteria report that it's impossible to drink a full cup of coffee without finishing it while walking up to the bus-ing area.

All of which proves the old axiom: If you are looking for a helping hand, you will find none better than the one at the end of your arm.

• • •

SWEET REVENGE glowed in the eyes of a student here who daily whips to college in his beloved MG, and who is pestered daily also by a driver in a Hudson who tries to prove the superiority of his auto while swishing around the curves. So last week they were in a do-or-die-battle, chins down, faces grim, each determined to settle the deal for good. Came into a curve Hudson gaining, winning, smacked dump truck broadside, lost.

Campus Force Up

Parking Space As Easily Attained As Outer Space

To the average student here, endowed with some imagination, the mere mention of the word space may sweep his mind into futuristic thoughts. One but has to add the adjective parking before the same word to awake this student into a state of bitter realism.

Finding a parking place for one's car on the campus, or anywhere else, is not an easy task. Both faculty members and students here ardently agree to this now obvious fact:

The problem will be somewhat lessened by next spring, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here, when the slopes that lead downward from the student union building to the playing fields are to be paved.

Although the faculty members just received a newly reserved area behind the student union building, they also have parking troubles. Rather hard to believe?

There are approximately 250 faculty members, not including the various clerks and maintenance men who work here. Students with physical handicaps may also park in the reserved area.

A few car-owning students have also been cutting in on faculty territory; this problem, however, will be remedied.

Last week 11 more campus policemen were sworn in. Equipped with tag books and pencils, these patrolmen will be busily issuing tickets to the momentary violators of restricted grounds, Fred E. Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here, warned.

This would somewhat relieve the parking tensions that the faculty members are currently undergoing. But, of course, under certain conditions, such as overtime parking on the green zones and falling to have special parking permits conspicuously placed on their vehicles, these seemingly privileged ones may also find their windshields adorned with little white sheets bearing sardonic bearings.

From this fate, no one escapes.

The highest and lowest points in the United States lie in California—Mt. Whitney, 14,490 feet and Salton Sea, below sea level.

Ram Eleven Crushes Bulldogs, 38-0, Meets Comets In Friday Night Test

Hudson, Calhoun, McCormick Lead Standout Play

By Mike Berger

An explosive college eleven leveled the San Mateo Bulldogs, 38-0, at the end of three periods, and then coasted home the rest of the way to their most impressive Big Eight win of the year last Saturday afternoon in the peninsula city.

Almost overshadowing the great offensive display by the Rams was their outstanding work on defense, as the locals were held to a total net gain of 85 yards. The college team, on the other hand, rolled for a total of 441 yards on the ground and through the air.

Just as they have in all games this year, the Rams scored first after Gene Crummey's 25-yard pass interception-run to the San Mateo 12. Lee Barros threw to Rich Piazza for the opening touchdown and City College led, 7-0, when Garlin Buford booted the conversion. That lead stood at the end of one quarter.

The sturdy college defensive play was largely responsible for the second TD of the afternoon. Bert Mondino smashed through to block an attempted punt by Al Bergstedt, and Skip Wallace recovered on the CSM 42. From there, the Rams traveled the necessary yardage to paydirt in seven plays, Barros sneaking over from the one for the clincher. The conversion was missed, and the score was 13-0.

Perhaps the one series of plays that was truly representative of the superiority of City College in this game was a drive of 72 yards in five plays for the final score of the first half.

After a fumble recovery on the San Mateo 42, the Rams were penalized on successive plays back to their own 28. On the second and 30 play, Barros tossed to LeRoy Thomas, who carried to midfield for a 22-yard gain. With third and 15 to go, Shirlee McCormick smashed to the 43, but that still left a gap of nine yards on last down. McCormick carried again as the Rams gambled. With alternate power bursts and fine footwork he not only got the first down but the touchdown as well on a brilliant 43-yard run. The point after, was wide again, but the Rams were pulling away at the half, 19-0.

Rudy Lopez equalled McCormick's running efforts by opening the third period with a dazzling 85-yard kickoff return for the TD which made it 25-0. Lopez came right back after the ensuing kickoff with a leaping pass interception on the Ram 26, and the team drove from there 74 yards in 11 plays to score again. It was Barros to Piazza once more for the six points and a 32-0 count after Stan Keith's conversion. The final marker came on a 43-yard shot off tackle by Mack Calhoun, who was the standout runner in the final half.

The story was told in the line, as Willie Hudson, Keith, Wallace, Bill Canihan and Tom Kiefer completely bottled up the Bulldogs. Garlin Buford played a fine game on defense, as did McCormick, Calhoun, Crummey and Thomas on the attack. In a game filled with standouts, Hudson once more turned in excellent play on both sides.

Local Gridders Travel To East Bay To Engage West Contra Costa In Major Big Eight Battle Of Week

Once beaten City College of San Francisco's grid team takes to the road for the second consecutive week to meet West Contra Costa this Friday night at the Richmond High School Field.

The 8 p.m. kickoff pits the two Big Eight Conference pre-season favorites who, ironically, have been beaten by the Stockton College Mustangs. In their Stockton encounter, the Comets led the Mustangs 6-0 at halftime, but a second half rally by Stockton defeated the East Bay foe, 25-13.

Conference winners in 1953, the Comets retained their championship by tying Santa Rosa for the crown last year. Coach Jack Danilovich, one of the more successful conference mentors, has lost but six games since 1952, has done a tremendous job with a team that boasts only nine veterans. These nine men were on the Comet squad that suffered its lone defeat at the hands of the Rams last year, 24-13.

Lack of experienced gridders has not hurt the offense of the blue and grey clad Comets. In the Santa Rosa contest, the East Bay club rolled to 246 yards rushing while their aerial attack grossed a stunning 265 yards on nine completed passes. The offensive total was 511 yards.

Although the inexperience did not harm the offense, the defense suffered greatly as Santa Rosa gained an overwhelming 374 yards rushing against a sieve-like West Contra Costa forward wall that has but three veterans, center Gus Williams and ends Gus Dyson and Mose Jefferson.

In a winning 31-14 battle with Chaffey Junior College, the Richmond team was led by fullback Les Shephard, who rolled up 134 yards on the ground, and halfback Bob Ross, who followed Shephard with 95 yards net rushing. Veteran quarterback Bob Pringle, one of the league's better tossers, completed passes consistently to help the Comets roll up 341 yards in this game.

Coach Grover Klemmer's Rams, still considered by many as the strongest team in the Conference, could find the weak Comet line to their liking. Paced by running backs Shirlee McCormick, Rudy Lopez and Dick Mannini, San Francisco boasts a powerful running attack that is hard to stop, and coupled with the passing arm of quarterback Les Barros, opponents have not been able to concentrate on any one phase of the Ram attack. To illustrate the power of the Ram backfield, reserve backs Al Chatman and Mack Calhoun could possibly be in the starting lineup of any other team in the conference.

The Rams have built a forward wall that is second to none in the league. They stopped a strong Modesto offense cold, as the Pirates could not move against the tough Ram line, paced by linebackers Willie Hudson and Bill Canihan, end Ron Taylor and inner linemen Stan Keith, Tom Kiefer and Jack Derian.

Second place is at stake in this contest, and with the hope that loop-leading Stockton may be upset in their remaining games, the Ram-Comet contest should be hard fought and interesting.

Modesto Thinclads Defeat Rams In Cross Country Run

By Ray MacIntyre

City College's fall thinclads divided a doubleheader cross-country meet during the half-time period of the college football game with Modesto at Kezar Stadium on October 27.

The Pirates from the valley recorded a near perfect score of 18 as they thumped West Contra Costa (48 points), and the Rams (36 points).

Modesto was led by Ray Hale and Don Cowles, who took 1-2 in the event. Hale was last year's state high school mile champ with a time of 4:20, while Cowles was the leading distance runner for the Pirates in their Big Eight track season. Henry Stroughter was the only Ram to break up the Modesto dominancy, with a close third place. West Contra Costa fielded a game team, but they were apparently not in the peak of condition.

Although it was actually the first league competition the Rams saw, they have compiled a 4-1 record. The reason for this is that Stockton, Sacramento, and Oakland have lost to the Rams by default, not being able to field a sufficient number of men to hold a meet.

Block SF Meets Friday To Approve Sweaters

Next meeting of the Block SF Society, to be held in the men's gymnasium, is scheduled for Friday, November 18, Bill Fischer, faculty adviser, said yesterday.

The business aspect will mainly regard final approval of the adoption of official sweaters and the sale of membership cards in the organization. Sale of the cards has continued at a good rate, and the members hope for 100 per cent participation, said Fischer.

The result of a drawing of card numbers will be announced at the meeting. Two winners will receive tickets for a major west coast football game. Membership cards are needed to participate.

Discussion of the possibility of the Block SF entering candidates for election next semester will also be undertaken. Fischer said that the idea has been working for some time, and a poll of the society will help to determine their course.

Co-ed Volleyball Team Ready For Challengers

Having recently organized their co-ed volleyball team, the Tuesday and Thursday community leadership class is now ready to issue a challenge to any co-ed volleyball team to games on Mondays at 12 noon.

"These classes are new and experimental. Whether or not they are kept will depend a great deal on the support the students put behind these noon co-ed activities," Gloria Dunn, director of co-ed activities said. "We do hope we have good response to the intramural co-ed program," she added.

The New York Yankees won more games while finishing second in 1954 than in any of their six pennant winning seasons from 1949-1955.

Canihan Proves Valuable Performer In Ram Line

By Joe Callas

Had Long Beach newsmen been in Kezar Stadium on October 27 to witness the grid battle between the Modesto Pirates and the Rams, they might have been astonished to see Bill Canihan, an unheralded, highly underrated center from San Francisco, push Proverb Jacobs, mammoth Pirate lineman, all over the stadium turf, despite the fact that Canihan was outweighed by 50 pounds.

Jacobs, called the "greatest junior college lineman they had ever seen" by the southern newsmen, actually did not have a chance against the Rams' tough pivotman. Canihan completely outcharged the Pirate defensive middle guard on each play, and was a major factor in the powerful Ram offensive.

Besides his outstanding offensive work, the former Polytechnic High School gridder was equally effective on defense. His speed and agility give him the perfect attributes of a linebacker. On two consecutive plays against Modesto, Canihan raced from his right linebacker spot to bring down a Pirate halfback on a pitchout, and on another play nailed an opposing end after he received a pass on the left sideline.

The Ram center not only excels on the gridiron, but is an excellent trackman, having performed in both the high and low hurdles on the 1954 and 1955 Ram squads. In his junior and senior years at Polytechnic, he was one of the five best prep varsity hurdlers in the city.

Canihan was an All-City center in his senior year for the Parrot grid team. In his two varsity seasons at that school he did not play in a game which was lost by Poly.

The personal highlight of Canihan's football career came this season when he intercepted an Oakland pass and raced into the Thunderbird end zone for the first touchdown he had ever scored.

His sparkling all around play, not only in the Modesto tilt but throughout the season, rates Canihan as a strong candidate for the All-Conference center spot.

A dentistry student, Canihan hopes to enter the University of California. Should he do so, he would bolster the grid fortunes of the Bears, and make football coach Lynn "Pappy" Waldorf a happier man.

Ram Booters' Title Hopes In Balance As Strong California Team Looms Threat To Locals

Determined to remain in top contention for the title, Coach Roy Diederichsen's Rams will invade California Bear territory this Saturday, November 12, at 10 a.m. for a Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference tilt.

The Bears have a 3-won 1-loss record and must win this one to keep alive their title hopes. Center forward Pablo Dibos and inside left Bud Camillo are the top offensive men of the California squad, who are expected to give the Ram defense strong competition.

Recent additions to the Ram squad have strengthened the defense and made it difficult to crack. Robert Hidalgo at left halfback and Pete Klein in the goalkeeper spot are the promising newcomers.

In comparing past performances of both teams, the Rams appear to have a slight edge going into Saturday's game. Nevertheless, a close, hard-fought contest is expected.

The University of San Francisco Dons are currently leading the league with a 4-0 record. With such players as Joe Njoku-Obi and Joe Ignoffo sparking the offense of the Dons, the Rams will have to go all out to dethrone the champions when the two teams meet Saturday, November 19.

Emig, MAC, To Organize Fall Sports Activities

Ed Emig, Men's Athletic Commissioner here, stated recently that the inter-organizational program of basketball and bowling will soon be put into effect. Some of the organizations already have teams and are playing on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Emig declared, "It is our job to get the ball rolling." He has appointed Wayne MacFadden and Emory LeBonville to help him coordinate campus sports, assist the coaches, and represent the individual student activities at the Student Council.

This semester, Emig has represented this college at the Northern California Regional Conference, taking polls on student and faculty opinions, and attempting to build a larger interest in the major sports.

Presently, Emig is working with the varsity coaches, discussing whether or not to retain the present system of allotting the same amount of money for insurance to all varsity teams.

It is apparent, Emig pointed out, that members of the football team are more prone to injuries than some of the other varsity teams. Some of the universities give a plan of full coverage for disablement of athletes.

The college is trying to work out such a plan for future use. If the plan is adopted it may bring up the problem of which teams should receive more money depending upon rate of injuries.

The last professional football team to abandon the single wing style of play was the Pittsburgh Steelers, who switched to the T formation in 1951.

RAMBLINGS

By Mike Berger

TWO weeks ago we mentioned, with tongue in cheek, that the increased use of protective devices in football would soon make the use of a plastic bubble by each player standard procedure, but maybe we weren't far from wrong.

An article in the current issue of Sport magazine, entitled Confessions Of A Dirty Football Player, paints as ugly and yet as realistic a view of pro football as we have seen. The author, an anonymous eight-year veteran of the NFL, should know what he's talking about, and why every quarterback in the league hasn't gotten himself a surplus plastic bubble is beyond us.

As the author states, the game of pro football is fast becoming a bloodletting battle instead of a sport. In the old days, when the fan interest and the money were pretty small, it was a live and let live proposition, and aside from the usual number of broken noses and bones, there was no great amount of wholesale injury lists such as there are today. When the game caught on with the public, however, the tide turned the other way, and now everything is strictly for keeps.

A commoh practice, and a rather old one, mentioned in the article, is a cute little trick known as "opening the gates," which usually means the gates of hell for the poor guy it happens to. When a $10,000 per annum player doesn't get interference from the $4,000 per year linemen, he isn't worth a plugged nickel, and he feels worse. We don't know how much of this is going on, but the author has some definite ideas.

Perhaps one of the greatest mistakes the pro rules committee made was letting a ball carrier get up and run if he wasn't tackled securely. We have always felt that unless the runner stumbles in an open field, or the like, that the same rules that exist in collegiate football should apply in this case. Hugh McElhenny might never have had his shoulder separated, and countless others may have been spared injury if this dangerous trend hadn't been started. The fact that the rule has been strengthened still hasn't stopped the piling on that still prevails.

Ever since the record number of disabled players in 1954, the NFL officials have seemed to be quite a bit stricter on the secret elbowing, gouging, and punching in the pileups and lineplay, as evidenced by the large number of players who have been tossed out of games this season. There is still, however, too much back turning on the part of the officials.

Football is by nature a rough game, but it is a game to be played clean rough, not dirty rough. Pro football has become the zenith of appeal to the spectator, but we like to feel that the fans come out to see football, not boxing and wrestling.

Scholarship Applications Now Available

Three more scholarships for women students and one for a man student are now available, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here. The deadline for applications has been set for Monday, November 28.

Competition for the two Denman scholarships is open to women graduates of San Francisco public high schools who have completed at least 15 units of work here, with a "B" average or better. The two awards being made this semester are for $125 each. Outstanding scholarship is the prime requisite, but leadership in the community and need are also important factors.

These scholarships have been awarded to college students here since 1939. The Denman scholarships are in honor of the late James Denman, early San Francisco educator, and are given by his son and daughter, Judge William Denman and Mrs. Mary Cheatham.

Students interested in applying this semester must plan on attending the college during the spring semester also. Letters of application, addressed to Miss Golding, should show a picture of the student's ambitions, needs, and college, high school and community activities.

The other two scholarships, each for $50, will be presented by the Chinese Club to an outstanding woman and an outstanding man student. These are also based on scholarship, activities and need, and the applicant must be at least a second semester student.

Ramporium Purchases Books Up To Jan. 6

Books will be re-purchased by the Ramporium up to and including the last day for filing petitions for leave of absence, which is January 6, only if the store needs the books or will need them in the near future, according to Dick Main, manager.

In order to sell books a change of program or leave of absence form are needed. These may be obtained from the registrar.

Little Theatre Opens Second Play Nov. 18

Suds In Your Eye, Jack Kirkland's comedy adapted from the book by Mary Lasswell, is scheduled to appear as the second production of the drama department for the fall semester. The first performance is at 8:30 p.m., Friday, November 18, in the college's Little Theater and the second, third, and fourth showings on November 19, 25, and 26, respectively.

The cast of characters includes Mel Rasmussen as Chinatown; Peggy Powell, Mrs. Feely; Warren Smith, Mr. Fitzgerald; Edwina Moquin, Mrs. Tinkham; Gail Speigleman, Conchita; Nofie McClanahan, Reynolds; Bev Bowling, Mrs. Rasmussen; Lois Roberts, Kate Logan; Edward Moran, Mr. Wilson; Ben Roberts, Danny Feeley; Carole Waugh, Mrs. Rasmussen's daughter; and Berte Ricklefs, June.

Michael Griffin, drama director, said there were a few good openings left. Anyone wishing to try out for a special character part may do so by consulting him in Room S28.

Sorority Women Rushees Start Week Of Silence

Sorority members and rushees start a week of "silence" today, while the fraternities plan for next week's pledge activities.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity held its second affair last Friday at the American Legion Hall.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its second affair recently at the home of President Bob Tucker.

Zeta Chi sorority held their second affair last Thursday at The Gangplank. The sorority will meet jointly with Alpha Kappa Rho tonight.

Delta Psi sorority held a coketail party last week at the home of Ellie Benner. The sorority held their second affair, a Chuck Wagon Feed, last night.

The Masonic Club had a Halloween party recently at the home of its sponsor, George Hutchinson. A social is planned for tonight at the Wawona Club House.

Delta Psi Omega will hold a business meeting Sunday at the home of Joyce Cody.

The Christian Science organization holds testimonial meetings on the first and third Thursdays and the second and fourth Wednesdays of every month at 3:15 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive.

A Cappella Choir Plans 21st Christmas Concert

Performance of the A Cappella Choir's 21st annual Christmas concert is scheduled for Thursday, December 15. The location of the concert has not yet been definitely announced, but several places are under consideration including Riordan High School and the Scottish Rite Auditorium.

Other choir presentations on the calendar in the near future include concerts at the Emporium, slated for the first week in December, and one on December 14 at the Century Club.

Officers for the choir this semester include Trevor Pendray, president; Louise von Emster, concert manager, and Ed Williams, property manager.

Placement Program Accelerated As Christmas Season Brings Heavy Demands For Seasonal Employees

Increased enrollment, coupled with rising employer demands in the Bay Area, have accelerated the City College placement program, according to Joseph A. Amori, director of placement.

No specific industry or area of business has dominated the picture, the demand for workers of all kinds has been generalized. Sales and clerical work utilized the greatest number of people. These workers have been placed in transportation, retail sales, petroleum outlets, insurance and finance.

Wages are about 10 per cent higher than last year, according to Amori, the greatest increase being found in the highly unionized areas, such as grocery chains, service stations and the trades. Because of the dearth of stenographers, that field is very lucrative for young women with the necessary skill. Wages range from $1.50 per hour up to $1.75 per hour. Monthly rates range from $275 to $300.

Several members of the June 1955 graduation class who received certificates of proficiency in secretarial training have been placed at the $300 per month figure, Amori said. The demand for typists, stenographers, accountants, and office machine operators continues at a brisk pace and according to all reports, it will continue for several years to come.

Employers have built up huge inventories for the expected Christmas rush. In addition, personnel staffs to handle the large crowds, to serve them and to wrap their purchases, have been recruited since early October and are now being trained on a part time basis, Amori added. Monday night and Saturday classes are the training pattern set up by most of San Francisco's large stores. The San Francisco Post Office Department has already hired thousands of City College veterans and a small number of non-veterans for carrier and truck driving assignments.

All students desiring to work for the Christmas season should apply immediately at the Placement Office, Room 188, Science Building, Amori concluded.

Married Couple Cast As Lovers

Cast in the roles of the young lovers in the college's Little Theater production of Suds In Your Eye are Lois and Ben Roberts. The two, husband and wife in real life, portray the roles of Kate and Danny, respectively, in the Jack Kirkland farce.

The couple, in their early twenties, have been married for five and a half years and are parents of two boys, Jay, aged one, and Harold, aged two.

They claim Mission High School not only as their Alma Mater but also as the place where they met in 1950 when the two were seniors. After a short courtship, the two became Mr. and Mrs. Roberts on July 7, 1950.

After serving in the army, Roberts decided to further his education and enrolled at the college as a Radio Broadcasting major. Mrs. Roberts, aspiring toward a possible career in the theater, is majoring in drama.

Ironically enough, Michael Griffin, director of the comedy, was unaware that they were husband and wife when he cast them in the roles, which might prove that this attractive young couple were made for each other.

Laurentio Bellfleur, architect responsible for the majority of difficulties in construction of the leaning tower of Pizza, was deported to Devil's Island, where he died of Vincent's Angina.

Council Approves Fall Semester $24,000 Budget

Totaling $24,000, the Fall 1955 Associated Student budget was approved last week by Student Council.

The money will be used to finance AS activities. According to a report given by Finance Chairman Joyce Weaver, the source of income for the budget will be obtained through card sales, the bookstore, drama productions, vending machines, and athletics.

Grants from the budget will be made as follows:

Alumni Plan Bulletin; New Members Sought

The first Alumni Association meeting this semester was held last Monday, November 7.

Among activities planned for this Fall is an alumni bulletin, to be issued under the direction of Bill Boldenweck, former Associated Student president and Guardsman news editor.

Foremost among the plans of the association is a drive for new members. Any student who left this college in good standing after one semester is eligible for membership. Names and addresses of those interested may be submitted to Bob Winegardner, Alumni president, at the California Book Company.

Music, Acts To Feature IRC Riordan Show

Catchy musical numbers and acts from all over the world will be presented on Friday night, November 18, in the Riordan High School auditorium, by talented foreign students, members of the International Relations Club here, Karima Mughannam, from Jordan, president of the club, announced recently.

Also to be housed for one night only in the auditorium at 175 Phelan Avenue will be displays of art and the exotic food delicacies typical of each country, which will be sold by colorfully-costumed students, who will explain the history or customs of their country in either their own language or English, whichever is preferred.

Admission to this second annual show will be $1.00, and all proceeds are to go to the International Scholarship Fund of the college.

Countries represented by the students from all corners of the earth who are presenting entertainment as done in their home lands are the Philippines, Japan, Burma, Austria, Persia, Greece, Russia, the Scandinavian countries, Jamaica, Germany, Spain, Croatia and the Latin American countries. There will be an exhibition of authentic Siamese boxing, with no holds barred.

Remo Rebizzo will act as master of ceremonies for the hour-and-a-half show. More than 100 of the foreign students at the college are participating, and all are "enthusiastically working to make this show another success," according to Joseph Jacobsen, sponsor of the International Relations Club.

Experience in entertaining has been shown by the performers in various exhibitions of their acts for Masonic and other clubs in San Francisco, Jacobsen reported, adding that their personalities have endeared them as a favorite form of talent-display and pageantry.

Cafeteria Staff Asks Cooperation

In order to promote smoother operation of the student union cafeteria, students are asked to cooperate more fully with the cafeteria staff while using the facilities of the cafeteria, Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant department, said recently.

Students are decidedly lax in carrying their trays and dishes to the cleanup window after use. Strangely enough, Muntz reported, women students are the worst offenders in this respect. Also, there is much unnecessary spillage of beverages which could be reduced. Chairs, too, are left pulled out, thereby causing a blockade of the aisles and congestion of traffic. Papers and other foreign matter are being carelessly deposited on the floor.

At present, four members of the cafeteria staff spend a total of 22 hours a day just keeping it clean. This amount of time could be drastically reduced with the help of the students.

"All we're asking is that the students just go half way with us," Muntz commented. "We will be more than glad to do our share," he added.

Symphony Forum Tickets Available

The 1955-56 season of the San Francisco Symphony Forum will commence Thursday, November 24, Thanksgiving Day, at 8:30 p.m. in the War Memorial Opera House.

Tickets, now on sale at the bank in the student union building, will not be obtainable here after Friday, November 11.

Prices for the season tickets are as follows:

Orchestra (for two front rows and first four side rows)—$9.

Balcony (sides)—$9.

Balcony and Balcony Circle—$17.

Orchestra, Grand Tier, and Dress Circle—$22.

The first of the 18 Thursday night performances will feature Enrique Jorda conducting the symphony orchestra in Schumann's Symphony No. 3 and Beethoven's Fidelio Overture.

Yerba Buena island was named in the early days by the Hupa Indians for the good herb found there which they used as perfume.

Johnson Seeks Chairman For Soph-Week Picnic

Sophomore class officers are scouting about in search of an interested sophomore student who would like to serve as picnic chairman, Bob Johnson, Sophomore president here, revealed last week.

"If any more student requests are received and a picnic chairman can be found," Johnson said, "a Sophomore Picnic will be held sometime during Sophomore Week, January 9 through January 14."

Another sophomore student, Brian Gilbert, has volunteered to serve as the chairman of the soph-prof basketball committee. The soph-prof basketball game is another traditional highlight of Sophomore Week.

Gilbert will suggest possible sophomore team tactics and line-ups for the retaliation game against the professors. Johnson recommended that an extensive investigation be made of the sophomores' 19-12 humiliating defeat last year.

Joyce Weaver, dance bid chairman, and Antoinette Mannina, Sophomore Week publicity chairman, are presently contemplating making the dance bids for the Sophomore Ball by hand. "Sophomore students who would like to assist with the making of the dance bids and a host and hostess are still needed," Johnson said.

Qualified students who are interested in helping with these activities are requested to consult Jane Lutt, Sophomore vice-president, or Johnson as soon as possible in the Associated Student office, which is located in Room 169 in the science building.

Wayne MacFadden, dance committee chairman, and Johnson are currently reviewing several applications from dance bands to play at the Sophomore Ball. Tentative plans seem to indicate that Lyle Bardo and his ten-piece band may be chosen.

The Sophomore Ball will be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, January 14, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. Admission to the semi-formal affair will be one Associated Student card per couple or $2.50 for non-AS members.

Prior to the dance, AS members will elect a sophomore king and queen to reign at the ball. Clubs, fraternities and sororities may enter candidates for the king-queen contest by submitting a petition to Miss Lutt or Johnson before January 1, 1956.

Dance tickets will be available at the student finance office which is located in Rooms 106 and 107 in the student union building, and at the door before entering the dance.

JANE LUTT, Sophomore Class vice-president.

Ram-Menlo Game Would Decide Bay Grid Supremacy

TWO of the finest two-year college football teams in the state this year are within shooting distance of each other, and the stage could be set for what might prove to be a more exciting post-season tilt than any of the "bowl" games. The teams are City College and Menlo, and the game, if possibly arranged, would renew the rivalry in a big way.

For some reason, the contest between the two strong teams was discontinued this year. A post-season game would correct this oversight, and could prove which of the two is the better team this year, a question that has been debated since the football season began.

The rivalry began in 1949 when Menlo and the Rams both played in the old Northern California Junior College Conference. The San Franciscans edged the Oaks, 20-14, in the conference opener that year.

Thus the rivalry is not only becoming an historical one, but it is a convenient one geographically. If Menlo were still competing in the same league as the Rams, the game might easily become as much of a traditional as the City College-San Mateo tilt now is.

Past scores indicate the hard-fought games that have characterized the series. Last year the Rams came back from a 19-6 half-time deficit to win 20-19 over the hosting Oaks, who went on to win the Coast Conference title. In 1953 Menlo booted a field goal in the final minute of play to eke out a 9-6 victory.

The geographic convenience offers another arguing point in favor of the meeting. The cost to the teams would be negligible, merely that of chartering buses to transport them to the game site. There certainly should be no difficulty raising the $40 or so necessary, in view of what the game would offer.

This would not necessarily be a meeting of champions, but merely of two exceptionally strong and well-coached teams. The Rams, by virtue of their loss to Stockton, will need a real break to get even a share of the Big Eight title, but they have averaged nearly 35 points a game and, going on past form, should get through the remainder of the season in equally fine style.

Menlo, on the other hand, is a strong favorite to capture laurels in the five-team Coast Conference. So far unbeaten, the Oaks of Coach Bo Molenda have only a tie with Hartnell against them.

There are, of course, minor drawbacks. It is possible that one or both of the colleges will not want to extend their seasons the needed week. Yet a bowl bid, a prize sought by both teams this season, would make the schedule longer yet, and certainly neither would object to that.

Too, there is the remote possibility that either or both of the squads will still receive bids to other post-season games. The chance is remote. After the Rams' loss to Stockton and Menlo's tie with Hartnell, neither of the teams is being seriously considered for any of the two-year college bowl games.

The biggest problem would be a stadium to play in. The ideal place, considering the relatively big crowd such a game would draw, would be Kezar Stadium, but the professional San Francisco 49ers could have legitimate objections to a Saturday game. If Kezar was unavailable, a suitable field would have to be found somewhere. It would be difficult, but not impossible.

So what about it, Coaches Klemmer and Molenda? Is the suggestion worth your consideration, and are you willing to put your fine seasonal records on the block against probably the toughest competition of the year for each of you.

Applications For Shrine Queen Due Here Friday

Applications for the honor of being queen of the Shrine East-West game, an honor limited to City College students, are due in Dean Mary Golding's office, S150, by 12 noon this Friday, November 18.

Applications are obtainable in the women's gymnasium, the Associated Student office, S169; the Dean of Women's office, S150; and the telephone operator's booth also in the science building. A 5 by 7 photograph of the contestant should accompany the application.

Being queen of the Shrine classic was described last week as a fabulous experience for the woman student fortunate enough to capture the crown.

Her first social function will be the official crowning at the Coronation Ball at the Marine Memorial Club on Friday night, December 9. The entire 11th floor has been reserved for the affair, and Jack Fina and his orchestra will furnish the music.

In addition to the ball, the queen and her four attendants will attend the Kickoff Dinner, December 20, at the Civic Auditorium, and during the week of December 25-31 will visit the Shrine Hospital with players of the East-West teams. She will make several nationally televised appearances in the course of her reign, and at the game, December 31, will hold a place of honor.

The queen and her court will be presented with a wardrobe appropriate for each appearance. There will also be a Buick, courtesy of the General Motors Corporation, at the disposal of the queen. Similar transportation will be provided for the four attendants.

Queen contestants are expected to hold an Associated Student card and should be carrying at least 12½ units this semester. Those who have been here more than five semesters or who are carrying more than 60 units of work are ineligible.

First screening of the candidates will be next Monday morning, November 21, at 9 a.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Judging will be done by three faculty members and three students. Final judgment will be made by a special committee including Bill Coffman, director of Shrine East-West football for the past 30 years.

'World Culture 1A' Is Theme Of IRC International Fair At Riordan This Friday; Dancing, Music Featured

Dancing and music of the world will be featured by the college International Relations Club this Friday, November 18, at 8 p.m., in the Riordan High School auditorium, 175 Phelan Avenue, Karima Mughannam, president of the club here, announced recently.

This annual presentation of the show is called the International Fair, for it is given by students from all corners of the earth to seek a better establishment of cooperation and understanding among the nations in the world. Newly added to their aims is that of raising a fund for an International Scholarship by collecting a contribution of $1 from each member of the audience.

"World Culture 1A is our theme for the show," Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser, explained. "This course is designed as an introductory exposure to the cultures of representative countries. No one is expected to become an expert in this field as a result of this course, but he is expected to develop a greater appreciation of the cultural ties among peoples of the different lands," he added.

Those countries which will be represented at the show include Arabia, Burma, Croatia, Greece, Jamaica, Japan, Latin America, Persia, Philippines, Russia, Scandinavia, Scotland, and Spain. More than 100 students have been devoting their time and talents to represent their home lands.

One event on the show will be from Croatia with one of the most typical of all the Croatian dances, Domez. Following this will be Spanish village dances, and the rest of the countries will follow with representative numbers. The entire show will run for an hour and a half.

In addition to the show, there also will be an exhibition of art goods of foreign lands, and a variety of food delicacies from the far-away countries will be offered to the public at a reasonable price in the Riordan High School cafeteria.

On the second night of the show, Saturday, November 19, at the student union building in the college, there will be an International Ball. Admission fee will be 50 cents with Associated Student card and 75 cents without for each person.

A Cappella Choir Starts Auditions

A Cappella Choir members for the 1956 spring semester are being auditioned this week, according to Flossita Badger, director of the choir.

All interested and musically inclined students are invited to consult Miss Badger in her office, which is located in building 1 on the west campus, sometime this week. The only tangible requirement for A Cappella Choir members is the desire and ability to sing, she said.

"Prospective choir members will be given an appointment for auditioning," Miss Badger said. A full schedule of concert performances during the 1956 spring semester has already been made. The A Cappella Choir is a two unit course and meets regularly on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11 a. m. until 1 p.m.

Preparatory plans are currently underway for the choir's 21st annual Christmas concert which will be presented Thursday, December 15. The 48-member choir, the college band, directed by Meyer M. Cahn, and the Men's Glee Club, directed by Robert Morton, will all participate in the traditional Yuletide program.

Feature of the event will be the choir's presentation of a scene from the one-act television opera, Amahl And The Night Visitors, by Menotti. This opera was especially written for television and has been presented every year since 1951 over NBC television during the Christmas season.

The A Cappella Choir has also scheduled concerts to be given at the Emporium early in December and at the Century Club on December 14.

Drama Club Quits CAB As 'Suds' Opens Here

Kirkland's Comedy Adaptation Starts Friday In Little Theater

Suds In Your Eyes, Jack Kirkland's adaptation of Mary Lasswell's comedy novel, opens this Friday, November 18, at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater. The other three showings will be on November 19, 25, and 26, according to Michael J. Griffin, drama director.

The cast includes Mel Rasmussen as Chinatown, Larry Coviello as the buyer, Peggy Powell as Mrs. Feeley, Harry Borress as Mr. Fitzgerald, Edwina Moquin as Miss Tinkham, Gail Spiegelman as Conchita, Nofie McClanahan as Mr. Reynolds, Bev Bolling as Mrs. Rasmussen, Lois Roberts at Kate Logan, Ed Moran as Mr. Wilson, Coviello as Mac, Ben Roberts as Danny Feeley, Carole Waugh as Mrs. Rasmussen's daughter, and Berte Ricklefs as June.

The story mainly concerns Mrs. Feeley, who owns a junkyard in San Diego and is having a terrible time collecting enough money to pay her taxes. She keeps what money she has in a wooden Indian on the edge of the junkyard. When this is stolen and when Mrs. Feeley, Mrs. Rasmussen and Miss Tinkham are charged with assault and battery by Mr. Fitzgerald, the tax collector, things really get funny.

Members of the production staff are King Harrington, stage manager; Antoinette Mannina, public relations; Ritch Barulich, wardrobe consultant; Miss Moquin, wardrobe mistress; Karen Douville, program; Kay Kinsey, tickets; Miss Waugh, Greenroom; Louis Bamberger and Miss Ricklefs, properties; Ed Burbridge, Stan Willie, Don Judge and Ron From, set construction.

Spokesmen Ask Right To Resign

Headed by Karen Douville and Ritch Barulich, members of the Drama Club swept into the November 8 meeting of the Club-Activities Board and stated the wish of the club to resign immediately from the CAB.

On being recognized by the board, Miss Douville, vice-president of the Drama Club said, "I would like to request, without prejudice, permission for the club to resign from the CAB."

Minutes before the Drama Club delegation made its entrance at the CAB meeting, the board had been debating the question of putting the Drama Club "off campus."

The club had been on probation for failure to send a representative to the CAB on seven previous meeting days. Disciplinary action was in progress against the club.

Ritch Barulich, spokesman for the organization, said, "The club is being disbanded as an organization because of personal problems that have caused the club to suffer. We hope to reorganize next semester or at some later date."

The board granted the Drama Club the right to resign. However, CAB Chairman Earl Cabrinha questioned the right of the Drama Club officers to withdraw membership from the CAB without first consulting the members of the club.

Holidays Upset College Hour Schedules; Five Remain For Semester

Because of conflicting holidays, there are only five more college hours scheduled this semester for college activities, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here.

The effectiveness of club meetings on this Friday's college hour may be limited by Hell Week affairs, Earl Cabrinha, Club Activities Board chairman, said.

There will be no college hours on November 25 and December 2 because of the Thanksgiving holidays and mid-term examinations occurring during those weeks.

There will be a rally on December 9 and regular club meetings on the following Friday, December 16.

For the month of January, there will be an election rally on Friday, January 6, and a double college hour for the Soph-Prof game to take place on Friday, January 13.

Thoughtless, Vicious, 'Spirit' Puts Tradition On Probation

ONE of the most thoughtless and vicious acts of so-called "school spirit" that has ever occurred here, or on any campus, has caused one of the college's traditional football games to be placed on a probationary basis and has degraded the college and its students in general.

In what they must have considered a "college-type prank," someone set off a bonfire that had been planned for San Mateo's homecoming celebration. That in itself is of minor importance, and is almost to be expected in a rivalry as old and heated as the City College-San Mateo tiff.

What is not expected and cannot be condoned is the accompanying incident. A San Mateo student guarding the bonfire was badly beaten and wound up in the hospital. On the same evening, a City College student was injured by a flying bottle and three of his classmates were arrested in San Mateo.

Perhaps we are too old-fashioned, but violence is not our idea of fun. Brutality does nothing to raise college spirit, and certainly does not make for good relations between colleges. Pranks and raids to stimulate spirit, while sometimes of a slightly childish nature, are a natural part of college life and undoubtedly do add something to the event. Violence and destruction are neither funny nor necessary, and have no part in such extra-curricular activities.

If it was City College students who beat the bonfire guard, and if it was San Mateo students who painted the statues behind the science building, necessitating an expensive paint-removal job, then the offenders should be weeded out and suspended from college. They certainly add nothing to student activities with their idea of "fun."

Unfortunately, there are a small group of "students" here, just as there are anywhere, who think, like pre-nursery school children, that it is great fun to destroy. These hoodlums think, quite mistakenly, that they are tough, tough enough for three or four of them to put one student in the hospital. Actually, they are lacking mentally or morally, or both.

It is obvious that these people care nothing about their own reputations or that of the college. They are merely thoughtless, cruel children and it is the college's misfortune to harbor them. The best thing for all concerned would be the expulsion of these immature brats as soon as they are found out.

We must apologize, on behalf of the great majority of City College students, for the few involved in these violent and unfortunate incidents. We're sure that the mature, intelligent people at San Mateo feel the same way about their few immature and unwanted charges. Only when such people are eliminated from the college scene will these activities and rivalries be carried on in the friendly spirit of mischievous competition that should be a highlight of college life.

Weekend Commander

Placement Director Amori Heads Largest Air Reserve Training Unit

Extensive counselling and recruiting of officers and enlisted personnel for the United States Naval Air Reserve is performed at the college by Joseph Amori, a Commander in the Naval Air Reserve and placement director here.

Commander Amori became one of the pioneers in the United States Air Transport Service when it was first organized on February 1, 1942. This was to become the largest passenger and cargo air transport service in the world, with routes stretching from the continental limits of the United States to the Aleutians, Europe, the Orient, South and Central America and wherever any type of American troop personnel were stationed.

In 1946 he organized the first Air Reserve Transport Unit and served as its Administration and Personnel Officer. On December 2, 1949, Air Wing Staff 87 was organized by Commander Amori and added to the Naval Reserve Training Command.

Currently he is serving as the Executive Officer, Chief of Staff for the administration of personnel and Public Information Officer for Air Wing Staff 87. It is now the largest Air Reserve Training Unit in the country.

Many of the college's faculty members are included among its officer personnel. Some of the department heads are Lieutenant Commanders Kenneth Thuesen, Harry Tripp, Arlin Timberlake and Wallace Seliman.

Approximately 50 students from the college are members of Air Wing Staff 87. Many of them are active student leaders, including Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Men Students; Bob Frick, member of the Student Council; Phil Gaal, past president of the Inter-Fraternity Council; Al Kingston, Associated Student president here for the 1955 spring semester; and many others.

Many of the members of the United States Navy presently on active duty were recruited and counselled by Commander Amori while they were attending the college. He is largely responsible for stimulating student interest in the reserve program.

Students desiring to participate in or receive information concerning Annapolis, the Naval Air Cadets, the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps or the Naval Air Reserve are invited to interview Commander Amori in the placement office which is located in Room 188 in the science building.

Politics

Domination Of Elections By IFC May Cease

By Denny Delman

Domination of student elections here by the Inter-Fraternity Council as a party for nearly a decade appears to be at an end.

Student voters are finally becoming weary of the tactics of the IFC whose candidates lately won posts only in the uncontested offices. Students are voting for the independent candidates, who are rarely puppets doing the bidding of those manipulating the strings.

Several years ago students interested in better government formed a second party hopefully expecting the practice of clean politics.

Those students organized the Student League, which lasted four semesters and succeeding in winning only one election. A year later the party allowed itself to be pushed around by the IFC and its entire structure collapsed.

In another effort to obtain better student government, the Allied Students, which was listed as the Affiliated Students on the ballot, came into existence in 1950, headed by Randy Street. An IFC landslide for two consecutive semesters squelched another attempt to end their dynasty which, by this time, had a very strong foothold on the campus.

In 1951 the Student League made a comeback and won the election by a landslide but dissolved for the second and final time. The following election found the IFC winning in a clean sweep, principally because there was no opposition. It was impossible to find students who would contest the offices.

Spring 1953 saw the founding of the United Students Association, sponsored by Mervin Slosberg, political science instructor here. Only in its first semester was the USA able to make any noticeable showing against the political machine of the IFC when it captured five council seats and the Associated Men Student presidency. The USA has since then failed to obtain any elective office.

Lately, the trend has been toward the independent candidates who while having lost out in elections as a whole, have succeeded in capturing the top offices of President, Vice-President, and AMS and AWS heads.

This semester the USA is trying a comeback, but whether the comeback is successful or whether it will meet the same fate of four years back will be up to the candidates and the platform put forth.

Unless party politics is greatly revised, the present trend toward independent candidates will ruin all chances of a party victory in future elections, and the two-party system, which is almost a tradition here, will be destroyed.

Former Student In Hollywood Creative Arts

Willie Ito, a 1954 graduate of the college, has entered the creative arts field in Hollywood after completing a two-year commercial art course here. While at the college Ito did custom sketches for The Guardsman, the student handbook, and for Forum Magazine.

Upon graduation, the 20-year-old artist bypassed all minor art assignments and stepped immediately into the creative art department at Walt Disney Studios, where he did many of the drawings for Lady And The Tramp.

While employed at the Disney Studio Ito held the position of Assistant Artist in the Creative Art Department and did all the sketches for the Italian Cafe sequence of the picture.

With the completion of the picture, Ito was immediately hired by Warner Brothers Studio to work in the animation department. Along with his work there Ito is also producing commercials for a national television distribution center.

With the presentation of his portfolio, consisting of his illustrations, Ito received a night scholarship at Chouard School of Art in Los Angeles. This is the first time a night scholarship has been granted to anyone.

In addition to his work in Hollywood, Ito is doing the illustrations for Handbook For Instrumental Performers, written by Meyer Cahn, music instructor here.

In an interview with Cahn, the young artist expressed the hope that he would return to San Francisco very soon. Ito hopes to start his own television art business here soon.

The Spectator — A Short Treatise On Some Abnormal Events

By Don Ball

SOME of the strangest and unusual incidents — the ones with no logical explanation — crop up occasionally to baffle even the most astute of minds.

These strange phenomena constantly appear in print. They have been the subject of newspaper and magazine articles and even entire books. It is difficult to deny that at least some of these things have actually happened, for many of them are documented as to date, place and circumstances; many have been reported by reliable witnesses.

The strange fall of Ralph Smalley is an interesting case in point. On the morning of April 14, Smalley was washing the windows of a large Manhattan skyscraper when his retaining harness broke. Smalley plunged 35 stories and lived to tell about it.

He told the people on the 34th floor, the 33rd floor, the 32nd floor, and so on to the sidewalk.

Young Harry Walkers' strange ability presents another unreal reality. At the age of only three years, Harry Walker could carry a full-grown man on his back. These feats would undoubtedly have been nearly impossible if Harry Walker had not been a horse.

Every region of the world has its strange tales contributing to the folklore of the area.

Mention the name of Dabney Narsho in the far north, and immediately the oldtimers will begin spinning one of the strangest legends of all time. Narsho, the son of a missionary and his Eskimo wife, was lost in the Alaskan woods when only five years old. He was found by a mother grizzly bear, and luckily, the bear's strong maternal instinct caused her to take the boy into her brood, where he was raised as if he were a bear cub. By the time he was 21, Narsho had developed into a big, powerful physical specimen. Just before he reached his 22nd birthday he was eaten by the father bear. Bears don't like children; they were just fattening Narsho up all that time.

Ireland, the land of leprechauns and fairy rings, makes its contribution to the supernatural. In the 15th century a poor, young farmer's daughter was accused of heresy. When given a chance to retract her statements of heretical content she refused and was condemned to death. The girl was tied to a stake and faggots were placed at her feet. The faggots were lit and the flames leapt high in the air—but when the fire subsided the girl was gone, and in her place was a small grey pile of ashes.

To learn more of these mysterious happenings, those interested in the subject might read "False Witness" by Harvey Matusow. Matusow is well known as a result of his very popular series of television appearances, not to mention his revolutionary invention of the stringless yo-yo.

On Tattoos As Beauty Marks

A Progress Report On A Previously Ignored Facet Of Milady's Fashion Compiled For The Benefit Of All

The Chief always says warm days are productive days for the alert reporter.

Yesterday we were being alert while dozing in the coffee shop. It was a warm day.

Out of the corner of one eye we chanced to see a shapely feminine arm. It belonged to one of the college's better known lovelies. It's hard to say just what drew our attention to this particular limb—possibly the dainty inscription tattooed on the upper part: "Welcome American Legion, 1952."

"This is no ordinary, run of the coffee shop, girl," we alertly thought.

Picking ourselves up from our seat, we casually strolled toward her table, our alert mind working all the while on how to strike up a conversation. As we neared this tattooed Ava Gardner, we thought of the perfect opening remark.

"Hi, there, where did you get the keen tattoo?"

She responded to this cunning maneuver with grunt.

"What are ya, writin' a book?"

It was obvious she was as clever as she was comely. Remembering what The Chief said about getting an interview, we took a new tack.

"Please, we didn't mean to offend you, Miss; it's just that we're trying to keep abreast of the ever-changing fashion picture at the college."

We knew from the expression on her face that she was impressed. Now that she knew that we were members of the Fourth Estate, her whole attitude changed. She was more than cooperative, but we couldn't take notes with someone so heavy on the lap.

"Howdya like to see more?" she inquired and stepped her bubble gum for emphasis. Before we had a chance to answer, she turned and offered her other arm for inspection. Sure enough, there, fetchingly inscribed in red and blue, were the words "Harley Davidson" and underneath, "Better Death Than Dishonor."

Now it was our turn to be impressed, for she was obviously a real style setter. The group of female hangers-on in the cafeteria drooled with envy. For our part, we could see the handwriting on the wall. Soon the entire distaff side of the college would be rushing to the tattoo shops.

The subject was growing weary of the limelight and signified her intention to leave by dropping her gum in our crew cut. We alertly caught the hint and helped her into her sleeveless motorcycle jacket as she prepared to take her leave.

"See ya in the funnies, jerk," she said in farewell.

There, we thought, goes a natural leader, head and shoulders above the mob. But then, how many girls are six foot six inches tall?

Through the great windows we saw her leap astride her mount, a Harley "Seventy-Four," and roar out of the parking lot. The campus policeman never had a chance.

Shots At Random

By Dolores Stoffers

THOUSANDS of dollars were spent building the college on a hill which commanded an extensive view of a portion of the city. Thousands more were spent on additional buildings, and the view remained. But the college has finally caught onto the core of the whole idea of progress.

Increased enrollment necessitated more classroom and office space, so we got it; in the form of portable buildings which look as though their doors should maybe have crescent moons carved on them, and naturally they were placed in front of the only windows of the student union building that provided a view of the city.

Don't worry, though, Dr. O. E. Anderson says they won't be eyesores for long. They're going to be painted the same color as the other buildings here, the broken windows will be replaced with new ones, and if there happen to be crescent moons carved on the doors even those will probably be smoothed out.

• • •

AFTERTHOUGHT: A student recently screeched his car (or what was left of it) into the parking lot here, and pasted across the area where the rear bumper once rode was the familiar mass-produced sign, "Speed Kills."

• • •

MANY STUDENTS complain about the hike up the hill to the front doors of the science building, but it took only one person to express the complaints aptly.

Late one recent afternoon, a student, adorned in full mountain climbing regalia including mountain pick, staff, and knapsack, was observed preparing to scale the peaks of Hill 29.

Offense, Defense Combine To Overcome Contra Costa, 31-13; Barros Directs Rams In Win

By Mike Berger

Offense and defense coordinated their efforts perfectly for the Rams Friday night, as the college eleven downed a fading West Contra Costa team, 31-13, at Richmond High School stadium.

The attacking force for City College belted the Comet defense for a net of 466 yards rushing and passing, while the defenders once more came through with a fine game in holding the blue and white to only 76 yards net total.

After running the opening kickoff back 24 yards, the Rams moved 76 yards in 11 plays to score. Dick Mannini started the drive with a 20-yarder around end, and quarterback Les Barros, who played his finest game of the year, tossed to Ron Taylor for the final five yards and the score. The conversion was missed, and the college led, 6-0.

Defensive play, which didn't allow the Comets a single first down until the third quarter, figured in the second Ram score. Rich Piazza blocked an attempted punt and recovered the ball on the West Contra Costa six-yard line. After Barros lost 15 trying to pass, Rudy Lopez swept right end for 21 yards to the one, and then carried the hide over on the next play. After another unsuccessful conversion attempt, the score remained 12-0 at the end of one period. The Rams threatened but couldn't score in the second quarter, and the 12-0 count stood at the half.

Barros directed the team to another TD early in the third period, climaxing the move with his second payoff pitch, a 15-yard toss to Piazza, who lateraled to Shiriee McCormick, who in turn carried it over. Barros tried to run for the extra point, but just missed, and the 18-0 lead stood, but not for long.

Halfback LeRoy McNear took the ensuing kickoff and streaked 85 yards right up the middle to put the Comets on the scoreboard, 18-7, when his team passed for the conversion.

The defense squelched any hopes of a Comet comeback when standout guard Willie Hudson recovered a fumble on the Contra Costa 29. After two plays lost two yards, Barros threw long to Sandy Malnick for 31 yards and the third-TD pass of the tilt and a 24-6 margin.

West Contra Costa quarterback Bob Pringle passed for the final Richmond score in the fourth period when he lobbed one 45 yards to Bob Ross for the touchdown to make the score 24-13.

The Rams asserted themselves immediately, as they drove 79 yards in nine plays with the following kickoff. Barros sneaked one yard for the TD, and Mack Calhoun ran the conversion over for the final score.

The Rams' win, their fifth straight, clinched second place in the Big Eight, but Stockton retained the lead with a 52-0 rout of Sacramento.

Strong Comeback By Ram Booters Tops Indians, 4-3

Staging a thrilling last-minute comeback, the college's soccer team overcame a seemingly insurmountable lead by scoring three goals in the waning minutes of play to edge the stunned Stanford Indians, 4-3, at Palo Alto on November 5.

Knowing that they had to defeat the Rams to stay in title contention, the Indians immediately began to press hard to harass the favored visitors. In the first quarter, Bill Wren, Stanford's center-forward, put the Indians ahead with the all-important first goal.

Shortly before halftime, Antonio Quiteno, the college's inside-left and leading scorer, evened the score at 1-1 with a 20-yard penalty kick.

Beginning the second half, the inspired Indians began beating the Rams to the ball and continued to penetrate the Ram defense with dangerous scoring drives which culminated in two more goals for a 3-1 Stanford lead.

With only 11 minutes remaining to play and the game apparently decided in Stanford's favor, the Rams suddenly caught fire.

Quiteno scored twice in a brilliant display of dribbling and shooting. With the score tied at 3-3 and only one minute and 40 seconds left in the game, the college's left wing, Pepe Carrillo, dribbled around a tiring Stanford fullback and placed a 15-yard kick high into the right hand corner of the Indian goal, past the vainly stretching goal-keeper, to put the Rams ahead to stay at 4-3.

Although hampered by an injured ankle, Quiteno played his best game of the season as he ignited the Rams' comeback with his three tallies. Outstanding from the defensive angle were goalie Pete Klein and All-American center-half Fito Molina.

This victory was the Rams' fourth straight and demonstrated that Coach Roy Diederichsen's charges are able to turn an apparently hopeless situation to their own favor.

Ram Cross Country Runners Meet Cubs

The college's cross-country runners travel to Santa Rosa this Friday to meet the highly touted Bearcubs in a Big Eight contest scheduled to start at 3:30 p.m.

It will be the Rams' last test before the Big Eight Conference meet the following Saturday, again at Santa Rosa. This is when all eight colleges in the conference gather together and run their five best men, making a total of 40 competitors. This is the meet that determines the true champion of the league.

Santa Rosa has defeated Modesto, who in turn defeated the Rams, so the Ram team should be in for a tough afternoon of running. Hal Kuha, last year's conference distance running champ, leads the Bearcubs into the trek.

Block SF Meet Delayed

Next meeting of the Block SF, scheduled for this Friday during college hour, has been postponed until a later date, according to Bill Fischer, Block SF adviser.

A pep rally for the Santa Rosa football game has been scheduled for the same time, and this caused the postponement. The next Block SF meeting will discuss the question of whether the organization will support a candidate in the January Associated Student elections.

Rugged Line Play By Hudson, Keith Qualifies Them For All-League Spots

Two of the outstanding linemen of this year's Ram eleven have been guards Willie Hudson and Stan Keith, and both have drawn considerable praise from opponents and opposing coaches. Hudson and Keith were honored by Ram coaches by being named game co-captains in the traditional San Mateo tilt.

Hudson, a 6-0, 190-pounder, is a graduate of Polytechnic High School, where he was rated as one of the greatest linebackers in San Francisco prep history, and was the top lineman and an All-City performer on the 1952 Parrot championship team.

The Ram guard has played tremendously throughout the season against all opponents, and has been singled out by opposing coaches as the man who ruined their offense.

In his second year for the Rams, Hudson has completely eclipsed his freshman season performance here, when he was a first string All-Conference guard.

Keith, the other San Francisco guard, is also a 6-0, 190-pounder, who along with Hudson forms the nucleus of the locals' great line. A graduate of Washington High School, Keith was a highly rated All-City lineman in 1953, and is now in his second year with the Rams.

He has also been outstanding this season, and is a top candidate for all-conference honors. Keith's aggressiveness is shown in the fact that he has broken through opponents' lines to block many punts during the Ram 1954 season.

Line Coach Roy Burkhead has found his guard spot to be no problem, as this spot is one of the strongest points of the team. Both Hudson and Keith fit in perfectly to the Ram style of offense that calls for exceptionally strong blocking guards, especially in forming a protective cup for the passer. When the Big Eight Conference All-Star team is chosen at the end of the season, it will be hard to keep this aggressive pair off the squad.

Ramblings

By Mike Berger

JUST about the best squelch on the cynics who belittle Big Eight football, or any two-year college football, was given last week in The Examiner by means of a series of articles on the rising value of the two-year college.

It seems that the main reason for the decline of the sport over in Berkeley is due to the fact that the cousins from the south are getting the pick of the crop of two-year college athletes. Such standouts as Sam Brown, Doug Peters, Ronnie Loudd, Hardiman Cureton, C. R. Roberts and Credell Green have added immeasurably to the strength of UCLA, USC, and Washington. It's probably safe to say that the Bruins would not be appearing in the Rose Bowl in 1936 were it not for transfer students Brown, Peters, Cureton and Loudd.

Those who bemoan two-year college football are usually those who haven't taken the trouble to see a game, and have merely gotten into the habit of knocking the gridiron sport since high school days—usually losing high school days.

Two-year college football has not only taken a position of major importance in relation to the major college game, but it has enabled countless players to make up scholastic deficiencies while they were getting the valuable football experience which cannot be equalled by freshman competition.

We'd advise all football fans to take a look at the editorial on page one concerning a possible post-season match between the Rams and the Menlo College Club. Such a game, as pointed out in the editorial, would not only be of financial benefit to all concerned, but would be a great attraction and deciding point for just which of the two northern state powers is the superior, and, consequently, which should receive the higher national rankings. These two-year college rankings are of more than passing importance, because invariably the teams selected for bowl bids are those which have received the most favorable publicity and which usually are in the top five nationally ranked squads.

We told you that we'd pick a few wrong ones in the last issue, and we really came through to the tune of eight correct and six wrong. Still can't figure out how Lehigh could beat the VMI boys so convincingly, but for the accurate picks as to whom probably won't beat whom this Saturday, see the special box on this page.

The modern T formation was first used in the college ranks in a 1940 game between Stanford and USF.

Rams, Bearcubs Meet In League Finale At Kezar

By Joe Callas

Santa Rosa's gridders invade Kezar Stadium to meet the college eleven this Friday in the final conference tilt of the season. Kickoff is set for 2 p.m.

The Bearcubs, last year's conference co-champions, will enter the contest with a 4-2-2 seasonal record. Two weeks ago, league-leading Stockton squeaked out a 13-12 victory over Santa Rosa. If it hadn't been for place kicking ineptness that has plagued the Bearcubs all season, the Mustangs would have been toppled from their high perch.

On the other hand, the Rams proved once again that they are one of Northern California's top two-year squads as they ran roughshod over San Mateo, 38-0. End Dick Piazza had one of his best days as he caught two of Les Barros' passes for touchdowns, and the defensive team held the supposedly offensive-minded Bulldogs scoreless.

Coach Bill Archer brings to San Francisco a high-powered offense that ran up an amazing rushing total of 384 yards against West Contra Costa in their 32-32 deadlock with the Comets. Leading the running attack is fullback Ken Uselton, who ran for 138 yards net against the East Bay club. Uselton is also one of the Bearcubs' leading scorers. The other running star, Charles Brooks, has, along with the Santa Rosa fullback, been one of the top offensive scorers and rushers.

Santa Rosa's passing has been ineffective so far, but this can be attributed to the fact that quarterback Gary Modrell has been playing with a bad throwing hand that is full of stitches. Modrell was the second string All-Conference quarterback behind Barros last season.

The Bearcub line showed its power in yielding but two touchdowns to a good Stockton team. Led by center Dick Jacobsen and tackle George Sumner, the Cub line will try to stop the vaunted Ram attack that rolled up 244 points in its first seven games.

All of San Francisco's backs have turned in an outstanding job this season, and it would be virtually impossible to pick out any single standout runner. The Ram line, which has been responsible for the high powered offense, is led by Stan Keith, Willie Hudson, Bill Canihan, Jack Derian, and Tom Kiefer. These same Ram lineman have limited opponents to a meager 56 point total in the first seven games.

The other major conference tilt is at Stockton, where Oakland meets the league-leading Mustangs. A combination of Ram and Thunderbird victories would mean a top place tie between the Mustangs and Rams.

Soccer Squad Drops First Contest Of Season To Underdog California, 2-0; Meets USF In Saturday Balboa Tilt

By Walt Sigg

Unable to contain the University of California's spirited attack, the college's soccer team was handed its first defeat in five starts, October 12, at Edwards Field in Berkeley.

This Saturday, October 19, the Rams will host the first place University of San Francisco Dons in Balboa Park Stadium at 10 a.m.

Last year the Rams were the only team to defeat the Dons during regular league play, but the Dons came back to beat the Rams twice in the playoffs to win the title for the seventh consecutive year.

The Rams must win Saturday's game to keep pace with the Dons, who are currently leading the league with a 5-0 record and seem to be on their way to another title, unless the Rams can upset the favored Dons.

The tentative starting lineup for Saturday's game will be: Pete Klein, goal; Rene Enriquez, right fullback; Ben Schweizer, left fullback; Mike Balibrera, right halfback; Fito Molina, center halfback; Robert Hidalgo, left halfback; Walter Sigg, right wing; Woo Chung, inside right; Robert Palma, center forward; Antonia Quiteno, inside left; and Pepe Carrillo, left wing.

Playing well below par, the Ram offense was rendered helpless in last Saturday's game as the Bear defense completely bottled up the college's offense to win the game 2-0.

Neither team was able to score during the first 40 minutes, due to the effective defensive efforts of both teams. About two minutes before halftime, Joe Muscat, former Ram, broke the deadlock with a 15-yard boot to put the Bears ahead 1-0.

After the intermission the Rams were frustrated in their attempts to break through the Bear defense. With 15 minutes remaining, center forward Camille Salazar iced the game with a 5-yarder for the 2-0 final score.

Standings after five weeks of play:

Team	Games W	L	Goals F	A
USF	5	0	27	8
CCSF	4	1	20	9
California	3	1	10	4
Stanford	3	2	13	14
San Fran. State	1	4	10	15
San Jose State	0	4	8	22
Santa Clara	0	5	9	37

Familiarization Of Officer Qualifications In Student Constitution Asked By Chisum

Importance of familiarization with qualifications, powers, and duties of the student offices by prospective candidates was emphasized by Bill Chisum, Election Committee chairman, here last week.

As set forth in the Constitution of the Associated Students, Article 2 section A, The president shall have completed at least 45 units of work, shall preside at all meetings of the association and be chairman of the Student Council and ex-officio member of all other committees and councils.

He shall have the power, with the consent of the Student Council and the advice of the dean of Student Activities, to dismiss from office or take disciplinary action regarding a cabinet officer or council member. Dismissal of a council member, however, requires a two-thirds concurring vote of Student Council.

The vice-president must have completed at least 30 units of study prior to his term of office, assumes the duties of the president during his absence, and acts as chairman of the Social Committee, is a member of the President's Cabinet, and a voting member of the Student Council.

The president of the Sophomore Class should have completed at least 45 units of study and not more than 60 prior to his term of office. He becomes a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, represents his class and presents its business to these bodies and to the Student Council, and appoints such other class officers as are necessary with the approval of the Student Council.

The president of the Freshman Class is eligible if he has completed under 30 units of work prior to his term of office. He is a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, and represents his class and presents its business to these bodies and the Student Council. He has the power to appoint such other class officers as are necessary with the approval of the Student Council.

The President of the Associated Men Students must have completed at least 30 units of work prior to taking office. He is a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee, and represents the AMS and presents its business to these bodies and the Student Council. He may appoint other officers of the AMS with the approval of the Student Council.

The President of the Associated Women Students should have completed at least 30 units of work prior to taking office. Like the President of the AMS, she is to be a member of the President's Cabinet and the Social Committee. She is obligated to represent the AWS and present its business to these bodies and to the Student Council. She also appoints the other officers of the AWS with the approval of the Student Council.

Petitions of candidacy for the 20 elective offices will be accepted by Chisum between November 28 and December 16.

Council Encourages Entry Into Shrine Queen Competition

Requesting immediate action, Dean Woods, Associated Student president, asked Student Council members in a meeting last week to do all in their power to obtain a representative number of applicants for queen of the Shrine East-West game.

At the time of the meeting, two applications for the contest had been received. A total of 200 women students of the college can enter.

Discussion began on the matter when Woods told the council members of an apparent reluctance to file applications on the part of possible candidates.

Putting the responsibility up to the Student Council, Lee Carol Lombard, AS vice-president, said, "It is council's job to promote a little interest." She asked women council members to enter.

Sensationalism and grandeur in advertising of the contest was one of the answers to the problem offered by Woods.

Benefits to be given to the queen and the four princesses were cited by Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, as incentives for the candidates.

A misunderstanding by women students of the college is the main cause of the problem, Lawrence Lowe, State Information Service chairman, told the council. He stated, "The women think they will be competing against other colleges in the area."

Norene Phillips, Women's Athletic Commissioner, announced that in a meeting of the Associated Women Students, Mary Golding, dean of women, had said that previous winners of a queen contest should be ineligible for a similar contest at a future date. Miss Golding is responsible for the approval of the applications.

The eligibility of women students at the college for the title of queen of the Shrine East-West game is not affected by former titles, Woods said and added "past titles have no bearing in this contest."

Three H&R Students, Adviser Win Trip

Three students of the hotel and restaurant department, Jack Hendrickson, Bob Schofield, and Fred Choy, together with Wendell Muntz, acting chairman of the department, left November 6 to attend the annual California State Hotel Convention in Coronado.

During the three-day trip, the students were given an opportunity to visit and observe the operation of many different hotels.

ONE OF TWO PORTABLE BUNGALOWS that will be used by the student government, shown above being moved on campus last week, will be located next to the student union building with the other building, shown in the rear, to be used for the Associated Student office. Four additional bungalows will be located in back of Claud Hall, and should be in use by the end of this semester. One of the above buildings will be used as a meeting place for such campus groups as the Student Council, the President's Cabinet, and the Club Activities Board. The structures will be numbered from one to six, and the surrounding areas landscaped by members of the floriculture section here. It is planned that the new bungalows, in addition to the student union building, will be landscaped in the near future, with more than 800 plants being used.—Guardsman photo by Bill Hamilton.

Tom-Tom Drum To Be Painted, Redecorated

Because the Rams leveled the Bulldogs with a 38-0 final score, the Tom-Tom trophy has been returned here and will be repainted and decorated, according to Bill Cirimele, president of the Associated Men Students here.

The meandering drum-trophy, which is the symbol of rivalry for the two colleges, was heard and seen in City College's rooting section during the traditional Tom-Tom tilt. It is the local counterpart of the Stanford Axe, symbol of rivalry between Stanford and the University of California.

Since its first appearance during the fall semester in 1946, the much coveted drum-trophy has been won by City College all but two years. The game and the Tom-Tom were lost to San Mateo in 1949, and there it remained through 1950 when heavy rains cancelled the big game.

Film-O-Rama Color Show Here Friday

Film-O-Rama, a wide screen 16-millimeter counterpart of Cinemascope, will be presented during this Friday's college hour in Room S136, according to Madison Devlin, instructor of audio-visual aids here.

Scenic San Francisco is the subject of the film, a color presentation in the college film series. It will be demonstrated by Tullio Pellegrini, Pacific Coast Technical Representative of the Photographic Society of America.

In addition to the feature, two other color films, Eye To Eye, a study in extreme close range movie photography which won a prize at the Cannes Film Festival, and Sun Valley, another award winner, will be presented.

AWS Confers At Davis

Three women from the college represented the Associated Women Students at the Northern California AWS conference in Davis on November 12.

Barbara Batmale, president of the AWS here, headed the delegation and acted as chairman of a discussion group. Marilyn Euler and Patty Harris completed the student delegation, and were accompanied by adviser Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Club Cavalcade: Men's Hell Week Hits Midway Mark

By Antoinette Mannina

AS the sorority members and rushees struggle through their last day of "silence," the fraternity pledges have reached the midway mark of men's pledge week. This week's round of joints and business meetings will continue on the upswing as women's pledge week approaches.
